A $10 Fire May Cost You $10,000

Have you ever stopped to consider that even a very small film fire in your projection booth may cause a panic and ruin the reputation of your theatre? Perhaps you never have. Few theatre owners do until after the fire happens, and then it is too late.

Have you theatre owners who have spent thousands upon thousands of dollars for beautiful theatres, beautiful decorations and furnishings, given the proper amount of thought to

The Protection of Your Patrons and Investment

If not, you have overlooked the most important detail of your entire institution, as one small fire may put you out of business forever. Every dollar spent for fire prevention equipment in your theatre is well spent. More thought should be given to enclosed rewind cabinets and switches, fire-proof film tanks, fire extinguishers, etc., than to beautiful furnishings.

90% of Film Fires Start in the Projection Machine

This is a fact that cannot be denied, statistics prove it, therefore the most practical fire prevention device that can be purchased should be used on every projection machine, and—that's exactly what we have in the ABOVE is the four column press book advertisement that you can get, in cut or mat form, at your exchange.

The press ads on Paramount Pictures are as fine as the pictures themselves. They are used by the biggest theatres in the country.

Every exhibitor, no matter how small his house, has the services of a staff of advertising experts—without charge. A staff so large that no theatre in the world could afford it, you get for nothing.

Three Capacity Weeks on Broadway at the Rivoli, Rialto and Broadway

by Jack Boyle
directed by Alan Crosland

Scheduled for one week at the Rivoli, this vivid, thrilling melodrama was so enthusiastically received that, after packing the house there it moved down to the Rialto and there repeated its success. Then another record-breaking week at the Broadway. "A Nick Carter story in a Tiffany setting" one paper called it. It's the most vital, engrossing, mystifying, tense and fascinating photoplay ever filmed. It's to the screen what "The Bat" is to the stage.

> "We are not going to tell you a thing about the story. It's too good to tamper with," says Harriette Underhill, in the New York Tribune.

We'll tell you, however, that it is Jack Boyle's greatest "Boston Blackie" story faultlessly acted by a cast of stars. wonderfully produced, with the greatest fight ever staged and filled with action from the first reel to the final fadeout.

"We want to stand right up on our hind legs and tell the world that "The Face in the Fog" is one of the finest crook pictures ever produced. We fail to recall a more dramatic series of scenes. We have never looked at more artistic night photography than that presented in the almost two reels of action in a dense fog."

Powerful Drama — Baffling Gorgeous Settings — Tremendous

SURE-FIRE stuff, Mr. Showman—EVERY BIT OF IT! Because it whips home a story as vitally human as life itself. Because it shows the thrilling experiences of a beautitul wife who betrays for her husband—who cheats for him—who connives for him—who preys upon the man she loves and who goes to the last desperate limits under the domination of her husband's greater will!

Because, too, it reveals in bewildering and gorgeous array innumerable scenes of revelry amid the wine sauced, diamond-studded palaces of pleasure where men and women count not the toll they pay. Because it is GREAT FOR THE WOMEN—GREAT FOR THE MEN—GREAT FOR THE BOX-OFFICE!

In all truth, Mr. Exhibitor, you've seldom seen a greater dyed-in-the-wool showman's proposition than

"THE BROADWAY MADONNA"

THE WOMAN

A J.L. Frothingham Production

Directed by
EDWARD SLOMAN

Written by
Wm. V. Mong

Here is a human picture. A great many first run accounts have given it exploitation that it deserves and done a bigger gross with it than with "Humoresque." Our British distributors chose it as "the number two release" out of twenty six productions in hand with which to open the British market.

"The Woman He Loved" is a picture with a definite production standard behind it. In drama and pathos; in comedy and emotion it is one of the best pictures of the season. When it smashed over in New York three weeks ago it did the best business of any picture playing in its first week.

It has the J. L. Frothingham quality and the Edward Sloman standard of direction. It is romance, comedy, pathos and melodrama all rolled into one and William V. Mong and Marcia Manon have roles that audiences are certain to like.

HE LOVED

What the Critics Say About "The Woman He Loved"

The Film Daily: The theme of "The Woman He Loved" is satisfactory stuff with happy and pathetic moments so distributed as to maintain interest. It is essentially a human interest drama. In our opinion it is not a big picture, but a pleasing one and it will prove satisfactory entertainment.

Motion Picture News: Heart interest story based on family separation. Much sentiment and character study here. Play it up for heart interest . . . it will go like a house afire.

Trade Review: An entertaining story with an appeal that will be fairly general. Excellent types; good comedy situations and at times revealing a real sympathetic appeal. Will prove a worth while attraction in houses where "Humoresque" and "The Sign of the Rose" have found favor.

Moving Picture World: William Mong, considered by many to be among the foremost character actors on the screen draws a fine characterization in this picture. He wins immediate sympathy for the man he portrays.

American
RELEASING CORPORATION
In Canada: Canadian Releasing Corporation, Limited

You can make this another "Humoresque" with some driving. A story built on the idea of making certain human appeal, which it has in no small degree.

Reeland Reviews: A good, clean picture that tells a heart story; has a nice love interest, plenty of smiles and is very well made in every detail. Plenty of humor and real pathos—not over done and one that will interest every type of audience.

We beg also to report that Pete Harrison, of Harrison's Reporst, and Fred Shader, of Variety, did not equally share the feelings of the other enthusiastic reviews. With a quorum present they are out-voted.

The picture possesses appeal to the intellect as well as entertainment value. Clara Kimball Young gives a dramatic performance as the idealistic Russian woman, injecting much feeling into the part . . . the gowns worn are strikingly beautiful. The picture starts off with a punch and maintains a good rate of speed in development of plot, despite the necessity for elaborate characterization.

Weekly Film Review—

Clara Kimball Young is very beautiful as the Russian refugee and later as the faith healer. . . . The picture is beautifully and painstakingly produced.

She had the showgirl's instinct to capture a millionaire, and yacht trips to South America didn't interest her unless there was wedding cake for breakfast.

But because she was out of a job she accepted an offer to dance in the tropics.

Too late, she learned the part of her "act" was to break the heart of a young land owner.

The girl who tried to fool others succeeded only in fooling herself.

For the victim of her wiles appeared at midnight and took by main strength the love which was rightfully his.

One man sought to learn about women from books.—The other man got his lesson from life.—Whose was the better method?

"It has been repeatedly demonstrated in picture land that the heroine who is 'up against it,' so to speak, through no fault of her own, can command the sympathies of nine out of ten people who witness her struggles against unkind fate. And Nola, the girl who weds a man who takes an awful long time to realize that she is really worthy of his name, obtains sympathy in large and generous measure. So does the self-sacrificing friend whose efforts finally bring husband and wife together in a happy climax. 'Lonesome Corners' is skilfully directed, presented by a clever cast of players and affords pleasing entertainment.''—Exhibitors Trade Review.

"Skin Deep" Is Good Crook Film

Many Thrills Include Escape From Prison in An Aeroplane

Milton Sills, Marcia Manon and Florence Vidor Do Good Work

A crook story done in a new way with new thrillers makes "Skin Deep" at the Strand good entertainment. The director has introduced a novel escape from prison via airplane which is well done. At the beginning of the picture one fears it is to be just another war film, but it is merely an effective prologue in which Bud Doyle, crook, "does his bit." In fact, fighting for humanity convinces him that he wants "to go straight," but his wife and some underworld associates believe he will do less harm safely tucked away, so a frame-up is arranged which ends with Bud being sentenced to five years' imprisonment. As he is needed for just one more job his gang stages an escape.

While Bud is clinging to a rope ladder suspended from the airplane, which is flying low, he crashes into some trees and falls to the ground. A doctor who is much interested in veterans of the great war picks him up and through plastic surgery gives the once ugly Bud a handsome countenance. There is a speedy reformation helped along by a pretty nurse, and romance is hinted when Doyle ships the faithless Mrs. Doyle towards Reno. Milton Sills completely disguises himself as Bud up to the time of the operation and not even his most ardent admirers will recognize him. He does good work as Doyle and is ably assisted by Florence Vidor, Marcia Manon, Winter Hall, and a dozen others.

Perfecting the "Picture-Play."

In "The Eternal Flame," with Norma Talmadge in the role of the beautiful and subtle Balzac character, the Duchesse de Langeais, now showing in Columbia, the devotees and patrons of the screen-drama, may see with what tremendous strides the silent stage is being perfected in its great field of art.

Two distinct achievements in this production strike us as being of such value and significance to the art of the stage as to deserve particular consideration. They command unreserved wonder, admiration and approval.

These are: The picturization —the "photography"—which is almost certainly the finest, most alluring, and most nearly perfect that has yet been seen in this section of the country; and the exceedingly effective portrayal of a difficult character by Miss Talmadge.

The "picture" has been so greatly improved as to give now an absolutely convincing impression of nature and life. There is a roundness of "definition," attained by better lenses or better focusing, and the actors seem alive and not like the marionettes that are too often pulled hither and thither on the screen. There is so vivid a representation of life as to satisfy perfectly the demands and the curiosity of the spectator. This quality and delight is in addition to the improved brilliance and beauty of the "composition," the fineness of the completed work.

As to the acting of Miss Talmadge, it would be almost impossible to assess it in terms of praise. When she played the leading character in "Smilin' Through," she easily made it apparent that she was more effective even than the superb Jane Cowl, who had recently been seen in the same character on the "spoken" stage. Of course, Miss Talmadge was reinforced by the limitless accessory art of the screen—its facile power to portray dream and vision as interpretation of the acts, thoughts, or purposes of the character, to add a hundredfold to the impression and suggestiveness of the scene and story. But as the "Duchesse de Langeais" Miss Talmadge rose to still greater and more ethereal heights of art, into "an ampler ether, a diviner air." Her beauty was transformed for the perfect interpretation and representation of character, and not utilized as sheer loveliness. And in finesse and subtlety, in perception and the swift certitude of "registration" of emotion, she has now reached a station far beyond anything she had previously attained—and she had gone far and to great heights.

Such a screen-drama makes one feel sure of the magnificent and enduring triumph of the motion-drama or photoplay. It will, even in developing in its present field, soon become of far greater value and charm than the spoken stage, because of its ability to give us such an infinity of riches in comparison to the poverty of the spoken drama.

It is gratifying to see so fine an actress as Norma Talmadge as one of the rarest prophetesses of the new art, as one of the most alluring priestesses of its altars.

Adapted by Frances Marion from Honore de Balzac's "La Duchesse de Langeais."

Personally directed and supervised by Frank Lloyd.

Make It a Big Week

WHILE the great question is tossed back and forth—of whether the producer or the public is responsible for picture standards—the National Board of Review goes steadily and intelligently ahead in its uplifting effort to make the better picture theatre an integral part of the better community life.

Its latest proposition is a MOTION PICTURE BOOK WEEK, nation-wide in scope. And the idea seems so good and practical from every standpoint and so much effective work has been done that we are glad to bring the entire matter prominently to the attention of the exhibitor in this issue. (Pages 2297-2311.)

The date is November 12th to 18th.

* * *

Four years ago the leading book publishers of the country inaugurated a Children's Book Week. Book stores and libraries and schools and women's clubs were brought together to the end of popularizing with children the best and most suitable books for them.

This year the campaign has been extended, to include all young people of school-going age; and a considerable sum of money is being spent in general publicity.

* * *

Many of these books have been filmed and the National Board of Review proposes that this established and successful book-week be now tied up to the Motion Picture theatre; that the theatre be brought in now as the book store has been; that both agencies, each helping the other's activity, serve the common purpose of bringing good books and good pictures and the young people and the community forces together.

* * *

It is the industry's answer to the hue and cry of: "Why are not more good books put into pictures?"

And the answer—to the public is: "Do you realize how many good books have been put into pictures?"

It is an educational campaign to all those people in every community who are not readily and regularly reached by the average theatre's publicity; to all those who are luke-warm or opposed to the picture theatre's activity; to the schools, churches, women's and civic groups in general, all of whom must and surely will be made to realize that the motion picture theatre is an established local institution in line, and prominently so, with their own best efforts and interests.

It deserves—without argument—the warm support of exhibitor, producer and distributor.

* * *

The National Board of Review has done a lot of work.

A list of over 100 pictures—new and current, available from leading distributors, with artistic, dramatic, educative and cultural values—has been sent broadcast to theatres, libraries, book sellers, newspapers, magazines, etc.; 30,000 in all. The booklet gives excellent exploitation suggestions.

Letters have been sent to:—

103 Chairmen, Presidents and national officials of the General Federation of Women's Clubs
287 Committee Chairmen of the State Federation of Women's Clubs
3461 Presidents of Women's Clubs
2951 School Superintendents

Handsome one-sheet posters have been prepared for lobby display and for bookstores, etc., and are available at the film exchanges everywhere.

* * *

We give details of the whole plan in this issue. And we will gladly give further assistance, as desired, by wire or letter.

The ground work is all laid. Nothing remains but the immediate, definite action of the exhibitor. And we sincerely hope this will be general.

Let's make it a big week!

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THAT music can be perfectly synchronized with a picture has been proved a score of times. One of the neatest examples of perfect synchronization is offered in the story of how Beethoven was inspired to write The Moonlight Sonata. This little Prizma expresses artistically and with much feeling the sentiment and romance and pathos of the master who colored a blind girl's fancy with his exquisite music. He pauses to listen while walking in the woods. Some one is playing one of his melodies from a nearby house. He would discover who interprets him so beautifully. So he chances upon a blind girl at the piano. The sentiment of the situation is enough to inspire him. And as he improvises the Moonlight Sonata the strains of the lovely theme float out into the auditorium.

Every master of music has his life colored by some flash of sentiment. It may be real; it may be fictional, but these stories have endured. Prizma giving us "The Moonlight Sonata" may well turn to Handel, who, when a boy, creeped downstairs to play upon the harpsichord. There is the romance connected with Schumann. There is the story how Schubert was moved to compose his Serenade or his Ave Maria or his Unfinished Symphony. What about the drama of Napoleon's retreat from Moscow which inspired Chopin to write his Military Polonaise? We could name other great musicians whose lives have been colored by a sentimental gesture.

These stories whether true or not lend a glamour. It is easy to believe that any great contribution to the arts has been inspired through romance or sentiment. Prizma might well introduce us to other composers. Any excerpts from the Wagnerian dramas or the beautiful Liebestraum of Liszt's would bring enchantment to any audience.

* * *

IT must look like old times to Tom Meighan, Gertrude Quinlan, Laurence Wheat and Frederick Burton to be together again. This quartette of thespians appeared in the original stage production of George Ade's play, "The College Widow." Now Miss Quinlan and the Messrs. Wheat and Burton are supporting Meighan in "Back Home and Broke," written, we may add, by Mr. Ade.

* * *

LOIS WEBER, who is one of the few directors of her sex, is in New York on business. She will return to the Coast within a few days.

* * *

THE little group of wilful scoffers who are ever ready to pounce upon the camera and scratch its eyes out may chuckle when they discover that out in Los Angeles, the center of the sixth industry and the eighth art, there is soon to be established the National College of Baseball. The first term opens January 10th. This gives the critical group a chance to come to the plate armed with a new brand of brickbats, and the picture people may well hide behind their new masks and chest protectors and shin guards when they hear such taunts as "Gee, they don't take pictures very seriously, out there where they make 'em."

* * *

C. W. DEIBEL of the Liberty theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, believes in doing a "Sarazen" when business is slack. He has entered a golf tournament. Mr. Deibel states that the par of his Youngstown course is 71 and that he averages 80. Evidently when the theatre business is poor the quality of the golf game improves.

FRED QUIMBY is in New York after an extended trip through the capital cities of Europe.

* * *

JAMES YOUNG stepped into the speaker's rostrum at Columbia University recently and delivered three lectures before the class studying motion picture technique. The subjects of the director's lectures were: Commercialism a Necessity to the Promotion of Artistic Development, The Mechanics of Pictorial Dramatic Construction, and The Technique of Motion Picture Acting in Relation to Stage Interpretations. Which reminds us that several of our institutes of learning have taken up the subject of Photoplay Technique.

* * *

JUST as soon as Jesse Lasky reaches New York he will go into immediate conference with Adolph Zukor and other executives of Famous Players to discuss the Paramount schedule for the coming winter at both the Eastern and the West Coast studios.

* * *

LUCY FOX sailed the other day for Italy, where she will be engaged for three months in picture production.

* * *

ELLIS PAXSON OBERHOLTZER, who for six years has been a member of the Pennsylvania Board of Censors, has written a book entitled "The Morals of the Movie," which treats of the moving pictures from the standpoint of the censor. A lot of the boys will be deeply interested in what the doctor has to say—and what defense he has to offer for censorship.

* * *

ALL the producers are saying it: Each day in every way my pictures are getting better and better. The patron won't believe it unless the producer repeats the expression twenty times before going to bed. This instils Faith and Faith makes better pictures. Isn't it all simple?

* * *

HARRY CHARNAS of Cincinnati, Cleveland, Detroit and Pittsburg was a visitor at the New York offices of Principal Pictures this week. Another visitor who sent in his card was Herman Rifkin of Boston.

* * *

SCREEN players who are taking flyers upon the stage, in the legitimate or in vaudeville, and who are more than making good include James Kirkwood, who gives a finished performance of a minister in "The Fool," Enid Markey, Belle Bennett, Marc MacDermott, Francis X. Bushman, Robert Warwick, Mildred Harris, May Collins, Doris Kenyon, Faire Binney, George MacQuarrie and Wilfred Lytell. Crane Wilbur is busy writing plays and having them accepted, while Thomas Fallon, who has contributed a number of scenarios, is represented with a Broadway play, "The Last Warning."

SAYS Bill Brady to Bill Fox: "I saw a reel of Monte Cristo last night and it carried me back to my childhood days." "How's that?" says Fox. "Why," says Brady, "I played Caderousse in the original James O'Neil production of 'Monte Cristo.'"

WOULD you know that nine million people attended Los Angeles theatres in August, paying a tax for the period of $211,000. This looks like a criterion of PLEASANT DAYS.

Missouri Exhibitor Body Holds Convention

Sydney Cohen and U. S. Senator Reed Address Exhibitors; State May Have Two Units

MARKED by the presence of Sydney S. Cohen, United States Senator James A. Reed and a host of other state and nationally known men too numerous to mention, the third annual convention of the M. P. T. O. Missouri at Excelsior Springs, October 18 and 19, stands as a new standard for conventions in the "Show Me" state.

The third day's program was moved up and included in the second day, making the convention a two-day instead of a three-day affair, as originally had been planned. Aside from the constructive addresses by President Michael J. O'Toole, chairman of the Public Service Department, and A. J. Moeller, general manager of the national organization, both in open and closed sessions, the most important development of the convention was the denunciation of censorship by Senator Reed; the death blow dealt blue laws and screen shackling by Mayor Frank Cromwell of Kansas City, and Dr. Burris A. Jenkins, also of Kansas City, one of the most widely known and influential ministers in Missouri; and the proposal to divide Missouri into two exhibitor organizations, segregating the Eastern and Western parts, with St. Louis and Kansas City as the key points of their respective districts. President Cohen and his party left immediately after the morning session of the convention Thursday on a special trip to St. Louis to take up the matter of segregation with the St. Louis exhibitors' organization.

Charles Sears of Nevada, Mo., was elected to his third term as president of the M. P. T. O. M., while Lawrence Goldman was re-elected secretary. For once there was little "resolving" and more stress laid upon concentrated action, especially during the morning session of Thursday, which was a closed meeting.

The address of Senator Reed, followed by talks by Mayor Cromwell and the Rev. Jenkins, left a wide path of freedom from censorship open to Missouri exhibitors. A roaring response was given all three speakers.

An instructive outline on the music tax question was given by A. J. Moeller, general manager of the M. P. T. O. A., on the afternoon of the first day. Exhibitors were told of the work being done by the national organization to combat the tax, and it was learned that no exhibitors of Missouri were paying the tax.

The banquet on Wednesday evening was an elaborate affair. Speakers at the banquet included Mayor Cromwell of Kansas City, who condemned censorship and asserted that he might even become an exhibitor himself after the expiration of his term stating that the screen could depend upon him for support; Mrs. Henry N. Ess of Kansas City, a civic leader, who lauded the wonderful possibilities of the screen; Father H. Dalton of Kansas City, who praised the industry; I. W. Rogers of Poplar Bluff, Mo., who pictured pioneer days of the exhibitors, and a concluding address, which was cut short by the late hour, by President Cohen.

The splendid co-operation between the exchanges and exhibitors in the Kansas City territory was praised by President Cohen, who reserved his most important talk to exhibitors for the closed session the morning of the final day. It was during this session that Mr. Cohen was greeted with a little surprise. The day before he had been asked to leave the room, after which an appeal was made by President Sears that each exhibitor sign a contract for Movie Chats and that a 100 per cent list of names be presented Mr. Cohen the following day as a surprise. The pleasure that beamed in the face of the national president when told that virtually every exhibitor present would run Movie Chats was as broad as the Atlantic.

Mr. Cohen's talk during the closed session concerned principally aggressive tactics by producers.

"It has been suggested to me that there be an 'Exhibitors' Week.' My God, I think it's time we have one," said Mr. Cohen. "Virtually all the producers have their weeks. We are not backed by the years of organization that makes national fraternal orders strong, but we can progress to that point. When an exchange man comes to you, quoting you 'facts, figures and favors,' don't think for a minute that he does not know what you are paying for your pictures at other exchanges. All pictures are 'super-productions' or 'world beaters,' if we would believe the producer. The only difference between the large producers and the small independent producer is the size of their respective publicity departments.

"Only by the co-operation and support of each other can we hope to combat those forces which would put us out of business. Exchange men have a tact of 'selling' us to each other. We are patted on the back, told what fine fellows we are, and asked what is the matter with our competitor; why he is showing the kind of pictures he is, and so on. Whenever you have a personal problem, no matter how small, write to national headquarters and obtain the aid to which you are entitled."

The golf tournament, the finale of a perfect program, was won by James Watson of the Benton theatre, Kansas City, with a medal score of 40. Other results:

Second prize, won by Charles Sears, Nevada, Mo. (41); third prize, won by Harry Graham, Kansas City (43); blind bogey prize, won by P. E. Kirk, Omaha, Neb.; "booby" prize, won by Harry Taylor, Kansas City.

A few of the events that regrettably did not materialize at the convention was the arrival of Will Hays, Governor Arthur M. Hyde of Missouri, Senator Selden P. Spencer, who was to have acted as toastmaster, and the staging of a baseball game between exhibitors and exchange men.

The following officers were elected:

President, Charles Sears, Nevada, Mo.; first vice-president, C. U. Fille, St. Joseph, Mo.; second vice-president, T. C. Goodnight, Warrensburg, Mo.; third vice-president, J. B. Pratt, Fulton, Mo.; secretary, Lawrence E. Goldman, Kansas City; treasurer, Archie Josephson, Kansas City.

Executive board: J. I. Wright, Bevier, Mo.; J. E. Hays, Moberly, Mo.; J. E. Courtier, Gallatin, Mo.; Thomas Clark, Maryville, Mo.; David Harding, Kansas City; Jack Roth, Kansas City; C. W. Hunt, Higginsville, Mo.; S. E. Wilhout, Springfield, Mo,; Harry Pruitt, Centralia, Mo.; Robert Stemple, St. Charles, Mo.; I. W. Rogers, Popular Bluff, Mo.; A. C. Norwine, Bonne Terre, Mo.; O. W. McCutcheon, St. Charles, Mo.; Ben Levy, Joplin, Mo.; C. E. Fayant, Lebanon, Mo.

Only two committees were appointed, one on resolutions and the other on finance, the nominating committee having been rendered void following a move to nominate candidates from the floor. The committees:

Resolutions—Jack Roth, Kansas City; H. J. Nash, St. Louis; T. C. Goodnight, Warrensburg; D. J. Michaels, Kirksville, Mo.; H. T. Hill, Bramer, Mo.

Finance—I. W. Rogers, Popular Bluff, Mo.; Joseph Mogler, St. Louis, Mo.; C. W. Hunt, Higginsville, Mo.; J. E. Courtier, Gallatin, Mo., and A. M. Eisner, Kansas City, Mo.

Resolutions were adopted condemning suggestive or salacious advertising, thanking the national executives of the M. P. T. O. of A. for their work in behalf of the exhibitors, disapproving of the Hoy system and endorsing the joint agreement and trade rules adopted by the Film Board of Trade of Kansas City and the state exhibitor organization, and petitioning producers distributing pictures in Missouri not to enter into contracts allowing more than four weeks' protection on any production.

$733,749.375.70 Spent on Amusements Last Year

THE sum of $733,749,375.70 was spent during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1922, on amusements coming under tax provisions. This figure indicates a decrease of $160,000,000 from the receipts of the previous year. The total spent includes receipts for other amusement enterprises as well as motion-picture theatres. The figures are part of the tax collection data prepared for the report of the Internal Revenue Department.

Department of Agriculture Issues List of Films

Department circular No. 233, recently issued by the United States Department of Agriculture, contains a complete list of the motion picture films prepared by that department, and includes many new features.

These films, which are produced and distributed by the department, are intended primarily for the use of its extension and field workers as well as officially cooperating institutions. Films not in use may be borrowed by others, through extension workers or cooperating institutions or by direct application to the department. The borrower is required to pay transportation. Duly authorized individuals or organizations may buy prints of the films from a commercial manufacturer at approximately the cost of manufacture.

New England Theatres, Inc., Sells Arctic House

New England Theatres, Inc., formerly known as Black New England Theatres, Inc., has sold the Palace Theatre, Arctic, R. I., to Henry McMahon. The house was built by Black & Spitz, and was later taken over by Black New England Theatres, Inc. It was opened in October, 1921, and has followed a straight picture policy, with three changes a week.

Golf Tourney Proves Great Success

Tom Moore Wins Honors by Toss of Coin After Tieing With Deibel on Gross Score

THE third semi-annual golf tournament of the Motion Picture Industry was held at the Soundview Golf Club, Great Neck, L. I., on Thursday, October 19th.

The golf association championship, which was decided at the Spring tournament, was held by Tom Moore, well known theatre man of Washington, D. C. The whole golf committee was anxious to have someone come to the Fall tournament and contest the championship laurels with Tom. The black horse came in the form of C. W. Deibel, Liberty theatre, Youngstown, Ohio. The battle was hard fought but the championship crown was not awarded, as both contestants tied with the low score of 83. Upon a toss of a coin, which was called by Deibel, Tom Moore again walked off with the first prize. It was the hope of the committee that both contestants come to the Spring tournament and that one of them comes off victorious.

In the fight for the net prize there was no one even close to Earl W. Hammons of the Educational Film Company. No tossing of coins was necessary, as Hammons' lead over his nearest competitor was a full five strokes.

The ten best gross scores were:

| | |
|---|---|
| Tom Moore | 83 |
| C. W. Deibel | 83 |
| Worthington Butts | 89 |
| E. K. Gillett | 89 |
| J. J. O'Brien | 90 |
| A. Hedley | 90 |
| Harley Knoles | 92 |
| Jack Noble | 93 |
| Geo. C. Wilson | 93 |
| Elmer Pearson | 94 |

The ten best net scores were:

| | |
|---|---|
| E. W. Hammons | 101-32-69 |
| Ray Morrissey | 104-30-74 |
| E. M. Saunders | 102-25-77 |
| Milton Bloomberg | 106-27-79 |
| Henry King | 104-25-79 |
| H. D. Campbell | 99-20-79 |
| F. A. Beach | 113-33-80 |
| Benj. F. Howell | 113-33-80 |
| W. O'Hagan Hurst | 110-30-80 |
| Bobby North | 114-33-81 |

Approximately 120 members of the association were present during the day or for the banquet at night. Approximately 100 actually played golf, so that the entire affair was a great success.

The next tournament is scheduled for some time early in the Spring, the time and course to be announced later.

It is the hope of the committee in charge of the tournament that before the next meeting a regular motion picture golf association will be formed. Tentative plans have been outlined and the annual dues set at $25.00, which will include two or perhaps three tournaments during 1923. The formation of the association will take time, and in the meantime the present committee will remain in charge.

This year there were no less than thirty theatre men represented. Next year we want this number increased to at least fifty, and we hope that someone will put in an appearance capable of beating the Deibel-Moore combination.

Late Wire Briefs from Coast

JESSE LASKY left for the east last Monday. He stated the purpose of the trip was to induce Adolph Zukor and S. R. Kent to select Los Angeles as the place for the annual Paramount convention in November.

The first Hampton Del Ruth production titled "The Marriage Chance" was previewed by the local press at Grauman's Theatre at midnight Friday night. The cast includes Milton Sills, Irene Rich, Henry Walthall, Tully Marshall, Mitchell Lewis, Laura Lavernie and Joseph Swickard.

Charles Maigne is writing the continuity for Maurice Tourneur's "Isle of Dead Ships."

Jackie Coogan's subject titled "Fiddle And I" has been re-titled "Daddy." Eddie Cline has been engaged to direct Jackie's next titled "Toby Tyler."

Larry Trimble is in Canada to purchase dogs for the next Murfin Trimble subject.

There is a persistent rumor that Abraham Lehr will vacate his position at Goldwyn's.

Charles Christie will arrive from a trip to the eastern exchanges next Sunpday.

Larry Semon's next comedy has been renamed "The Agent." It has all the atmosphere of the Mexican border. Semon is now making "The Storekeeper."

Lila Leslie and Mathilde Brundage have been added to the cast of the third Jess Robbins Comedy featuring Edward Horton for Vitagraph.

Russian Museum Seeking American Industrials

The Chamber of Commerce of the Northwestern District of Russia is planning the establishment of a Commercial Museum in which the motion picture industry is to have representation. Pointing out the advantages to be gained by American manufacturing and business interests through a display abroad of films in which American methods of manufacture, agriculture, transportation, milling, etc., are shown, the Chamber of Commerce requests a supply of such films from such American companies as may own films of this type and may be willing to offer them free of charge or at very reduced rates. The National Motion Picture League, of 2173 Broadway, New York, extends the courtesy of its reviewing board and publicity service to all producers owning films of the above description.

Burns Freed on Stolen Film Charge

William E. Burns, who was held by the Grand Jury in July on five indictments alleging that he was the receiver of certain stolen picture films, among the most prominent of which were "Theodora," "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and "My Boy," and who was held under $15,000 bail for trial, was released on his own recognizance by Judge Nott in Part 6, General Sessions.

Robert Spear of No. 220 West Forty-second street, New York City, the attorney for William E. Burns, moved that the indictments be dismissed.

Assistant District Attorney James Wallace stated to the court that he did not have sufficient evidence to try the defendant, and on his recommendation Burns was released.

Newspapers Greatly Exaggerate Wallace Reid's Illness

NEWSPAPER stories picturing Wallace Reid as having suffered a stroke of paralysis, with rumors that he was near death, have been greatly exaggerated, according to a wire to THE NEWS from the coast.

According to reliable information, Reid has been suffering from serious eye trouble, caused by the strain of working under the big lights, and when he failed to recover promptly, he was given a four weeks' leave of absence from the Famous Players-Lasky studio, which he and his wife (Dorothy Davenport) are spending in the mountains.

Meanwhile, Jack Holt has been assigned to Reid's role in "Nobody's Money."

It will be remembered that other players have, from time to time, suffered from this same difficulty, one of them, Muriel Ostriche, having been forced to retire for a time because of partial blindness from this cause.

Missouri May Have Two Exhibitor Branches

Missouri will have two branches of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of America if plans under consideration mature.

One branch would have headquarters in St Louis and include everything east of Jefferson City, Mo., and possibly Southern Illinois from Springfield southward to the Ohio River.

The other branch wtih headquarters in Kansas City would have jurisdiction over Western Missouri and perhaps Eastern Kansas.

Whether Southern Illinois would come under control of St. Louis and Eastern Kansas of Kansas City would depend almost entirely upon the exhibitors' organizations of those states.

Sydney S. Cohen, national president, addressed a meeting of St. Louis exhibitors at Knights of Columbus Hall Thursday, October 19, when the subject of a division of the Missouri organization came up for consideration. Cohen asserted that he would probably issue a franchise for the St. Louis organization upon his return to Washington.

The division of Missouri into two distinct associations, but each affiliated with the national organization, is believed to be for the best interest of the exhibitors of the state. At present the Missouri association has headquarters in Kansas City.

Legal Phraseology Against Contract Acceptance

The prolonged failure of the T. O. C. C. to accept the uniform contract drawn by the members of the Hays organization is, according to Secretary S. A. Moross, of the theatre men's organization, attributable to too much confusing legal phraseology.

According to Secretary Moross, many of the phrases of the contract are so long and involved that the meaning is open to more than one construction.

It is understood that committees representing the Hays organization and the T. O. C. C. will meet again shortly and make another effort to arrive at a uniform contract which will be acceptable to both sides.

Notable Changes in Russian Cinema Policy

Famine, Free Trade and Absence of Resources Given as Reasons for New Conditions

A NOTABLE change is taking place in the cinema policy of the Soviet government. It is due to three factors, the famine, the change from a protection to a free trade policy, and absence of resources. The first has set up a good deal of disorganization, especially in the villages where education and propaganda have entirely ceased for the present.

The famine has affected an area considerably larger than Great Britain and promises to go much further. For when I was in the worst districts this July it was already spreading to Siberia and the Ukraine.

Throughout this vast area one meets with nothing but deserted or half deserted villages, in which a great many of the huts have been partly destroyed in the terrible struggle for life. Thatched roofs and the skins with which doors are padded for warmth have been torn off and eaten. Doors and window frames and other woodwork have been removed for fuel.

The schools and clubs which since the revolution have formed centers for the great outburst of singing, dancing, music, theatricals and cinematography which marked the two or three years before the famine, are now converted into hospitals for starving and orphaned children. Besides this, many teachers who were instrumental in promoting this commendable activity among the peasants have died, disappeared or emigrated to distant parts.

No wonder the heads of the education department who were responsible for setting up this village organization speak dismally of the immense disorganization caused by the famine and the partial destruction of their plans for destroying illiteracy.

Further disintegration has been caused by the free trade policy, with its tending, as already shown, towards the decontrol of the cinemas. Lack of financial resources is having the effect of ruling out subsidies. As the Soviet government finds they can no longer subsidize nationalized places of amusement they are either closing them down or handing them over to soviets or letting them to private persons.

The cinema policy as originally conceived by the head of the educational department, under whose direction and control all places and forms of entertainment in Soviet Russia ultimately fall, aimed to extend the idea of public instruction to the drama, music, dancing, singing and cinema exhibitions. With this aim it took over the whole of the theatres, drama, opera, cinema and others, joined them to the educational machinery and banished private initiative, hoping thereby to make them an effective instrument for the propaganda of communism. The policy then was to provide the masses with cheap entertainment made up of educational, agitational items.

Thus the cinema became exclusively a mass instrument with a specific aim. It assumed there was only one class of cinema goer in Soviet Russia, the illiterate worker and peasant and soldier. The artistic educated people were dead, banished or were negligible. In short, the cinema was not to be regulated by the intelligence of the public, but by the doctrines and theories of the Commissariat of public education.

Authority Discusses Industry After Investigation

THIS is the second of a series of three stories written by Huntley Carter for Motion Picture News. They are of interest to everyone connected with the industry as they give an intimate insight into motion picture conditions in Russia.

Mr. Carter writes authoritatively on the subject as he has been well within Russia twice in the past two years. He has just returned from the second visit.

The last of the series will be printed in next week's issue.

It must be said that this mass instruction was carried out most systematically. Government films dealing with political, hygienic, scientific and current events were made and shown to the widest audience of workers and peasants. Special subjects were chosen for each of these two classes, and while the workers were instructed in up-to-date industrial methods by films, some of them specially prepared in Germany according to Soviet instructions, the peasants were specially educated in the latest agricultural methods. Visitors, too, found instruction or were supposed to do, in home-made monumental films illustrating the counter-revolutions and usually prepared for the special benefit of delegates.

Another feature of this mass instruction was that all seats were free. Tickets were handed over to the local Soviets who in turn distributed them to the workers. In this and other ways Russia, it was quite clear, was building up and developing a cinema world of its own, which differed entirely from that of other parts of Europe and America.

One of the first things I did in re-entering Moscow this summer was to go straight to the All-Russia Photo-Kino department with a bundle of questions. I wished to find out what changes, if any, had taken place in the organization in the world I have just described. The A. R. P. K. D. is one of the departments of the art section of the educational department, the others being theatrical, musical and literature departments. Its work is to supervise the whole of the immense activity set up by making the cinema an instrument of mass instruction.

The first important change was, I found, contained in the proposal to reorganize this celebrated All-Russia Photo-Kino department from top to bottom. The Soviet government, it seems, is going to make the cinema industry as a paying proposition and to develop it on financial lines. The A. R. P. K. D. is to be reorganized accordingly as the center of this new financial industry, and with a view of attracting Russian and foreign capital for developing cinema production which has been cramped throughout by the absence of films, and for exploiting cinemas. This is the main difference between the system of 1920-21 and the present one, namely the recognition of the need of attracting capital for the purpose of extending the cinema trade.

The second important point is that the All-Russia Kino-Picture production is to continue to exist and will work much on the old lines. The department will continue to take pictures of political, scientific, historical, social and topical interest, all designed to assist in the educational building up of the Soviet republic. Indeed it is exceedingly active in this direction at the present moment, for Moscow is simply smothered with frames containing photo exhibits. Every imaginable subject of immediate and public interest, from the trial of the socialists to a display of gymnastics by the comrades, and indeed, nothing is left undone to make good photography catch the eye and touch the intelligence where there happens to be any.

This brought me to the third point, namely, the facilities for making pictures, and on inquiry I was told that Russia has several excellent studios at Petrograd, Moscow, Odessa, Talta, Kiev, Charkoff and elsewhere.

So I was not surprised to hear that the Soviet Government hoped before long to be in a position to export. It hopes also to import films. But these must be of a special character suitable for illustrating the latest industrial methods in more progressive countries, and drawn from the great centers of industry which are making history. For instance, Krupps in Germany and the great technical "shops" in America.

This proposal to control foreign imports led, of course, to the question of the continuation of home control. The following facts came out: the state organ of the government still controls the production and exhibition by private firms with a view to preventing anything of a counter-revolutionary character getting on the market. At the All-Russia Photo-Kino Department is an editor of productions, and a commission to whom the checking and estimation of new films are entrusted. Moreover, the old pre-war films have to be passed by the commission before being exhibited to the public.

Girls' Club Organized by Crandall Service

One of the most important outgrowths of the successful functioning of the newly established Public Service and Educational Department of the Crandall theatres in Washington, D. C., has been the organization of the Capital Athletic Club by Mrs. Harriet Hawley Locher, director of the Crandall public relations bureau. The club is composed of High School girls who have won championships or honorable mention by their prowess at sports—swimming, tennis, basketball, diving, etc.

Under the laws governing the public schools of the District of Columbia it is not permissible for any sort of propaganda, sanitary or not, to be carried into the High Schools or graded schools. The Crandall Public Service and Educational Department, therefore, cannot operate in official cooperation with the school authorities in furthering its work. It can, however—and has—organized the school leaders in feminine sports into a club that carries word of the Crandall work directly to the school enrollments.

Censorship War Waged in Massachusetts

Camp of the Anti's Growing in Numbers Daily; Newspapers of State Present a Solid Front

MASSACHUSETTS as a whole seems to be "coming across" in the fight against state censorship of motion pictures. Each day brings to light and adds more forces to the anti-censorship camp. The newspapers almost to 100 per cent extent are fighting the proposal to again infringe on the rights of the public. Scores of men, prominent in the public life of the state, have publicly declared their hostility to the measure. What does it mean? It means that the people have awakened to the fact that they have got to put heart and soul into the fight in order to win out on election day, November 7.

Too much cannot be said for the work of the Committee of Massachusetts Citizens Against State Censorship, which, ably headed by Brig. Gen. Charles H. Cole, has overlooked no loophole from which a telling shot might be fired. Not a statement is issued by B. Preston Clark, chairman of the committee that is supporting censorship, but that Gen. Cole openly challenges him to publicly prove his statements.

Recently Clark placed an advertisement on the front page of most Boston newspapers, in which he alleged that some score of ladies' aid and charitable societies were members of his committee. Gen. Cole replied in a similar ad the next day headed, "A Thunderous 'NO.'" Quotation from this is not amiss:

"A thunderous no will be the answer of one and a half million voters in resentment of the claim of B. Preston Clark that he will 'deliver them' for censorship and one-man dictation of what they shall see and read.

"A thunderous no will be the emphatic answer of the other two and a half million people who think as they do. The advertisement of B. Preston Clark claims 'crated delivery' of religious societies, civic organizations, educators, business organizations, etc.

"Preposterous! Freedom of thought and action are not yet in the hands of B. Preston Clark for 'delivery.'

"Ninety-two per cent of the daily and weekly press of Massachusetts are fighting censorship. They can't all be wrong. The leaders in the fight against one man political control, Mr. Clark, are the People—undelivered."

The leading dailies of Boston and many other cities have run lead editorials, couched in no uncertain language.

The Boston Herald said: "The wrong sort of remedy is sought. Existing laws, easily enforced, are sufficient to meet the trouble. A political censorship is too full of possibilities of abuse for political, partisan, religious, personal, and even corrupt ends that are fairly certain sooner or later to be taken advantage of.

"The Pennsylvania standard reverts to those early days of Victorian times when to say 'leg' was an obscenity. One had to speak of the limbs of a piano. Hardly the remotest implication of sex or maternity is permitted. The words, 'It's a boy,' had to be stricken from the 'Four Horsemen.' We have yet to hear from the advocates of the proposed law why a political censorship here in Massachusetts would be free from serious danger of abuse."

The Lawrence Telegram: "The good people who are advocating passage should occasionally stop and ask themselves into whose hands they are going to commit the enforcement of all these government paternalistic schemes."

The Boston Post: 'The Post advises the defeat of the present bill this year on the ground that the leading producers of films, under the general direction of Will H. Hays, are making a real effort to reform themselves. The theory of public censorship is contrary to the basic idea of freedom of expression, so essential in a republic."

The Lowell Courier-Citizen: "The government stands in loco parentis—often with a suspicious accent on the 'loco.' By the time no one thinks for himself about anything, and by the time everyone is forcibly fenced off from every manner of sin, no doubt this will be a model country. But is it good sense? Let's be done with censorship. If that is the only thing that can save us, we aren't worth saving. If the only way we can escape from sin is to be shut up in cells, life isn't worth having."

After stating as its first objection to censorship the fact that there is already adequate law to cover the case, the Springfield Union says: "The people themselves should have the responsibility and the privilege of selecting their own newspapers, their books and their pictures. Somebody sitting in Boston cannot be safely trusted to do it for them. Such censorship not only fails to cultivate a desire for better htings, but it frequently leads to all sorts of absurdities. The state censor in Pennsylvania ordered that a part of a film showing a woman making baby clothes should be stricken out. He perhaps felt it his duty to make as many people as possible believe that babies are brought to households by storks."

The Boston American has discovered a "joker" in the bill, which states "it shall be unlawful for any person to exhibit or display PUBLICLY motion picture films that have not been inspected and approved by the censor." The paper calls attention to the fact that nothing is said about pictures shown privately, and calls that fact another move favoring the wealthy, who will be able, in their private theatres, to show films, no matter how obscene or indecent.

Other highlights in the fight during the last week have been a showing of films at all Boston theatres and most others throughout the state. These films show prominent men speaking, and then quote them against censorship. Among the men quoted were President Harding, Secretary of State Hughes, former Vice-President Fairbanks, Judge Lindsay, and many others. Again Miss Alice Verda of Lynn will tour the state organizing anti-censorship clubs among foreign residents in the state. Newspapers are carrying pointed cartoons. Dwight W. Tryon, member of the National Board of Censorship, said that the state censor would either be a grafter or a crank; the Rev. Fred W. Adams, in his Sunday evening sermon at Trinity Tabernacle, Lawrence, said that the remedy for bad literature and bad movies was leadership and not censorship, adding that he would vote no and not trust children to political censors' whims.

Kansas Censors Adopt Drastic Ruling

A POLICY adopted by the Kansas State Censorship Board this week is of grave concern to Kansas City exchanges, as well as producers whose product is distributed in the Sunflower state.

Hereafter, according to Dwight Thatcher Harris, chairman of the censorship board, one and two reel comedies will not be "cut," but the entire film will be condemned by the board. The action was taken as a result of complaints from exhibitors that films from which scenes were cut were unsatisfactory to audiences.

The ruling affects only the shorter productions whose length does not permit revision. Dramas and comedies longer than two reels will be cut as heretofore.

Ten Companies Incorporate for N. Y. Business

Ten companies incorporated and entered the motion picture business, or some one of its allied industries, in New York state during the past week, the papers filed with the secretary of state at Albany showing the following capitalization and directors:

Page-Cape Producing Co., Inc., $25,000. Meyer Klein, Alex Werner, H. E. Diamond, New York City; Novel Film Company of America, $100,000, Eugene Roder, Henry Halmos, G. F. Cowen, New York; Inkwell Distributing Corporation, $15,000. H. S. Bareford, J. H. Hazen, Abel Cary Thomas, New York City; Steadylite Motion Picture Machine Corporation, $1,000,000. A. P. Anderson, John Bramwell, L. C. Gunn, New York City; Claremont Laboratories, Inc., $375,000. W. E. Greene, L. J. Rosett, Frederic Gage, New York; Gee Kay Amusement Corporation, $25,000, M. C. Ryan, Barbara McCracken, Mary E. Hanley, New York City; Renown Pictures, Inc., $500, G. S. Wittson, Joseph M. Edelson, Blanche Bunderoff, New York; Carpenter-Goldman Laboratories, Inc., $100,000, A. W. Carpenter, F. L. Goldman, E. E. Free, New York; Annalena Realty Corporation, $10,000, B. W. Kapp, Lena Kapp, Anna Gleicher, New York City; Grotto Land, Inc., $10,000, David Kraus, Teresa Goldberg, Jerome Harris, New York City.

Alfred Weiss Now Heads Artclass Corp.

Alfred Weise, formerly an executive with Goldwyn, has acquired a considerable interest in the Artclass Pictures Corporation, and has been elected president and general manager of the latter concern.

The Weiss Brothers, to whom Alfred Weiss is not related, continue with the Artclass Corporation in the following capacities: Louis Weiss, vice-president; Max Weiss, secretary; Adolph Weiss, treasurer.

Alfred Weiss expects in the near future to announce production and distribution plans.

Goldwyn Announces New District Managers

GOLDWYN announces the resignation of Cecil E. Maberry, effective October 28 and the appointment of George A. Hickey and Felix Mendelssohn as District Managers.

Mr. Hickey, formerly manager of the branch exchange in Buffalo, has been appointed District Manager with supervision over the Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis exchanges. His headquarters will be in Chicago.

Felix Mendelssohn, formerly manager of the Philadelphia exchange, has been made District Manager supervising the territory embraced in the Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh exchanges. He will make his headquarters at the Philadelphia exchange.

Five Fox Releases Are Due October 29

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces five pictures for the week of Oct. 29.

Heading the list is the special production, "Who Are My Parents?" the story by the anonymous "Mr. X," which after its extended fall engagement at the Lyric Theatre, New York, will be released to exhibitors throughout the country.

"Who Are My Parents?" A jury of twenty went carefully over a list of submitted titles and selected this as most appropriate.

"Tom Mix in Arabia" is also released on Oct. 29.

Clyde Cook will be seen in his latest special two-reel comedy, "High and Dry." The Sunshine Comedy for the week is "The Haunted House." "Cold Turkey" is the title of the new "Mutt and Jeff" release, which will be made available Oct. 29.

Weight Will Direct Next Arliss Picture

Harmon Weight, who directed the last George Arliss picture, "The Man Who Played God," has been engaged to direct the fourth Arliss picture to be produced by Distinctive Pictures Corporation, which is to be put into production about the middle of November.

The title is "Tatterley," from the novel of that name by Tom Gallon, the English novelist. It may be made in Chicago, rather than New York, due to the fact that Mr. Arliss's stage play, "The Green Goddess," is scoring such a pronounced success that he may not be able to leave the Windy City.

Forrest Halsey, who wrote the continuity for "The Man Who Played God," has been engaged to write the scenario for "Tatterley."

Cosmopolitan to Picture Kyne Story

E. H. Griffith, recently engaged as director by Cosmopolitan Productions, will have as his first picture "The Go Getter," upon which he will begin work next week. "The Go Getter," one of the most popular of Peter B. Kyne's stories, will be made from the scenario of Doty Hobart.

Seena Owen, who did such good work in "The Face in the Fog," "Sisters" and other Cosmopolitan pictures, and T. Roy Barnes will be featured.

A couple of scenes from the Burr-Whitman Bennett production, "Secrets of Paris"

Vignola Is Preparing for Tour of World

Robert G. Vignola is preparing for a world-wide tour on which he will start November 21st, aboard the Cunarder "Laconia." His itinerary will take him first to Cuba and then to the West Coast via the Panama Canal. From San Francisco Mr. Vignola will sail for the Hawaiian Islands and later visit many cities of historic interest in the Philippines, China and Japan. Subsequently he will tour British India, reaching Naples via the Suez Canal and Port Said.

It is understood that one of Mr. Vignola's purposes in making this round-the-globe tour is to gather data for future screen productions. He has just completed work on "Adam and Eva," starring Marion Davies, and is now busy cutting this production.

Japan Houses Will Show Paramount Product

Cable reports received by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, from Tom D. Cochrane, general manager of Paramount's offices in Japan, report the signing of contracts for first runs in a leading theatre in each of the five largest cities, Tokyo, Osaka, Kyoto, Kobe and Yokohama.

Under these arrangements some of the recent Paramount successes, such as "Blood and Sand," "Saturday Night," "The Valley of Silent Men," "Her Gilded Cage," will be shown shortly in these first-run houses.

New Manager Named for Progress Pictures

J. H. Marks, formerly of Metro's Washington exchange, has been installed as manager of Progress Pictures, Inc., of Washington, D. C.

Mr. Marks, a film man of long standing, is thoroughly familiar with the territory and boasts many strong friends in the district. A great success is therefore confidently predicted for him.

"To Have and to Hold" Released Oct. 29

GEORGE FITZMAURICE'S production of Mary Johnston's novel, "To Have and To Hold," with Betty Compson and Bert Lytell, is announced by Paramount as its release for October 29.

The story is of the early days of Virginia, at the time of King James.

Bert Lytell is said to prove the ideal Captain Ralph Percy, while Theodore Kosloff, as Lord Carnal, allows no phase of villainy to be left untried in his efforts to force himself into the favor of the beautiful Lady Jocelyn Leigh. In addition to Kosloff, Raymond Hatton as King James, W. J. Ferguson in a comedy character role and Walter Long as a pirate chieftain, lead in the support.

The costumes, Paramount says, are historically correct in every detail.

Special Press Showing of "Oliver Twist"

Jackie Coogan's production of Charles Dickens "Oliver Twist" will be shown the New York press Friday, October 27th. Arrangements have been made whereby the screening will take place at Wurlitzer Hall. A luncheon at the Knickerbocker Grill will precede the showing. This is the first screening of the Dickens classic since Sol Lesser arrived with the print several weeks ago.

"Oliver Twist" will open at the Mark Strand theatre Sunday, October 29th. The general release date is scheduled for November 20th, according to Associated First National Pictures.

One of the features of the press showing at Wurlitzer Hall will be the screening prior to the Coogan "Oliver Twist" of an ancient film of the Dickens story made many years ago by Nat Goodwin.

Ben Grimm Returning From London

Ben H. Grimm, who left the Universal in New York last March to organize the publicity and advertising departments of the European Motion Picture Company, Ltd., Universal's British distributors, is soon to return to New York.

Grimm went to England with Edwin J. Smith, better known in America as "Eddie" Smith, who organized the European company and who already has established a distributing system, including seven branches, throughout England, Scotland and Wales. Grimm's return to the States is in accordance with the wishes of Carl Laemmle.

Before leaving for America Grimm will make a quick tour of European centers.

Warners Are Planning Next Production

Following the completion of the screen version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel, "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost, S. L. and Jack Warner, at the Warner Brothers' west coast studios, have begun preparations for active work on "Little Church Around the Corner," an original story written by Olga Printzlau, based on the stage play of the same name by Marion Russell.

E. Mason Hopper has been engaged to direct the picture.

Views of Sid Grauman's New Hollywood Theatre

Located in Hollywood, this theatre is one of the most striking and distinctive in the country, the architecture being in the Egyptian style throughout, down to the smallest detail.

British Producer Brings Historical Print

CECIL M. HEPWORTH, pioneer British film producer, arrived in this country Tuesday on the Majestic, bringing with him a print of "Through Three Reigns," a picture which is probably the only one of its kind in existence. It is a chronicle of the principal events of the past twenty-three years, during the reigns of Victoria, King Edward and King George, and is probably the first time that a motion picture camera has been used as a historian.

The negatives, some of which were taken as far back as 1894, have been carefully preserved in the store house of the Hepworth studios at Walton-on-Thames, just outside of London.

Mr. Hepworth's visit this time will be but a flying one, and he will confer with Burr Nickle, head of the Burr Nickle Productions of Los Angeles, regarding distribution plans for the Hepworth Pictures at the same time probably arranging for the distribution of "Through Three Reigns."

Masonic Order Contracts for Doug's Picture

The Shadukiam Grotto, a Mystic order of Masons, through negotiations with Dennis O'Brien, have closed contracts whereby they will show "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Orpheum Theatre, in Detroit, starting Nov. 5, for an extended engagement.

N. C. Chapman, secretary of the Shadukiam Grotto, came to New York especially to procure "Robin Hood" for the initial attraction under their auspices in Detroit for the purpose of raising funds to be applied to their Seven-Million-Dollar Campaign for the building of the new Masonic Temple, which is planned to be the world's greatest structure of its kind.

Mabel Julienne Scott in Big Role

Mabel Julienne Scott, starred by Universal as "Fanny Herself" in "No Woman Knows" has been given the big role in "The Power of a Lie," which George Archainbaud is directing at Universal City.

June Elvidge and David Torrence, now playing in "Forsaking All Others" which Emile Chautard is directing, will finish their roles in time to begin work on "The Power of a Lie."

John Gilbert Elevated to Stardom by Fox

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week at the offices of the Fox Film Corporation that a new contract has been signed by John Gilbert, the star in Fox releases.

Under his new contract, Mr. Gilbert will immediately begin work on two additional Fox special productions, the first of which will be a picturization of the immortal "St. Elmo." His next production, after that, will show him in a romantic role, as the Fox directors think he is at his best in portraying young, romantic characters.

In addition to playing for the films in California, Mr. Gilbert has also acquired considerable fame as a scenario writer and as a director. He has written more than thirty scenarios in the past five years and has directed two pictures for other companies, but under the new contract, he will hereafter act exclusively as a star for the Fox Film Corporation.

New Association to Book Big Specials

The Associated Booking Corporation, an organization composed of about one hundred exhibitors of Greater New York, intends showing more of the pretentious pictures in neighborhood houses.

The members, with a total of about 350 booking days, want to fill open dates with big productions. Heretofore it has been almost impossible for neighborhood houses to show the bigger pictures. In future the organization will continue to book program pictures, but by collective buying they expect to get big independent pictures for their theatres.

The picture, it is said, will be booked through the Associated office in New York City and will be paid for in a lump sum. The distributor will receive individual contracts from exhibitors.

Lee Ochs is president of the Associated Booking Corporation.

More Fox Educationals Due Nov. 26

Second Six Will Offer Diversified Subjects That Promise Good Entertaiment

THE second six Fox Educational Entertainments will be released November 26th.

"Old Spain," with its glamor and sunshine, its charm and romance, is portrayed in one reel. The historic points of interest, exclusive shots of the King and Queen, a realistic bullfight and the country's most beautiful women are included. Among the last named is filmed the girl who won the national beauty prize.

"Pekin Ducks," a half-reel about strange fowl in familiar settings, was taken on the largest duck farm in the world. For photographic detail and special color effects, these scenes furnish unusual diversion.

"Bits of Europe" comprise a swift visit lasting just fourteen minutes, covering the strikingly unusual sights of London, Berlin, Monte Carlo, Venice and Versailles.

"Camphor," a half-reel throwing new light on its various uses, is uniquely presented. Most of the camphor of the world comes from the island of Formosa in the China Sea. A great number of the inhabitants are savages of the most ferocious sort, being known as "head hunters." This picture, by the way, is the first one taken in Formosa.

"Bird Life" is a reel of camera studies where feathers fly at the unaccustomed disturbance of the photographer's intrusion. Embodied in this film is the official picture of the National Audubon Societies for the protection of wild birds and animals. This part of the reel was photographed by Herbert K. Job, a noted authority on the subject.

The sixth is "The Runaway Dog." It has no people in its cast, yet it is said to hold the spectator's interest closely from beginning to end.

N. Y. Critics Have Praise for "Skin Deep"

Motion picture critics of the New York newspapers had high praise for "Skin Deep," a Thomas H. Ince special production released through First National, which is being shown at the Strand theatre this week. Following are some of the comments:

Robert E. Sherwood in the Herald—It is a succession of fierce thrills presented as a continuous story. Milton Sills plays the leading role in this boisterous melodrama and succeeds in making a real character of the oppressed Bud.

Don Allen in the Evening World—The picture has a real movie theme. Its story is ideally picturesque.

Evening Mail—It is a good story, well told and well played.

Evening Journal—"Skin Deep," the principal attraction at the Strand theatre this week, is another one of those crook plays in which scenes of the underworld furnish the background for an hour of uninterrupted thrills.

Evening Sun—Exceptionally entertaining melodrama.

World—Mr. Sills is tremendously real as the thug and Miss Vidor's work as the nurse is commendable.

Scenes from the Warner Brothers production "The Beautiful and Damned," with Marie Prevost.

Colleen Moore and John Bowers in scenes from "Affinities," Ward Lascelle's comedy released through W. W. Hodkinson.

Promotions Announced by United Artists

Hiram Abrams, President of the United Artists' Corporation, announces the following promotions in his organization:

C. E. Smith, formerly sales manager of the Chicago Exchange, T. Y. Henry, recently sales manager of the Kansas City Exchange, and Joseph K. Burger, were made assistant general sales managers with headquarters at the home office, New York City; and also that R. K. Evans, formerly sales manager of the Cleveland Exchange, was appointed General Manager of all the United Artists' exchanges in Canada, with headquarters at Toronto.

E. J. Eichenlaub was appointed sales manager of the Chicago Exchange; Maurice Safier was appointed sales manager of the Cleveland Exchange, and F. B. MacCracken was appointed sales manager of the Kansas City Exchange.

Natural Color Comedy Made by Artcolor Process

C. Lang Cobb, general sales manager for the Color Cinema Company, producing Artcolor pictures, has returned from a trip covering key cities and working with branch managers of the American Releasing Company, which will handle the Artcolor films.

The first release is "Making Hubby Like It," a one-reel comedy.

Mr. Cobb announces the selling and booking of numerous theatre circuits and territorial first runs, including all of the Famous Players theatres in New England, the William P. Gray circuit in Maine and New Hampshire, the Empire Theatres, Inc., and others.

Cast Selected for "The Drivin' Fool"

Robt. T. Thornby, who is directing the special production of "The Drivin' Fool," featuring Wally Van, has completed his cast for the picture, work on which has been started. Arrangements were recently made by E. D. Newman, head of the Regent Pictures Company, to produce "The Drivin' Fool" at the Christie studios.

Appearing with Van are Patsy Ruth Miller, Alec Francis, Wilton Taylor and Ramsey Wallace.

Schulberg Will Produce "Mothers-in-Law"

"Mothers-in-Law" is the title of a story written by Agnes Christine Johnston and Frank Dazey, which B. P. Schulberg has purchased for production.

The story is now being prepared in script form, and will go in production as soon as the present cycle is completed. These are: "Are You a Failure?" and "The Hero," which Tom Forman and Gasnier are directing respectively.

Tarkington Will Write Meighan Story

Booth Tarkington signed a contract with Jesse L. Lasky this week to write an original story which Thomas Meighan will put into production in the near future. Not only will Mr. Tarkington write the story but he also will collaborate closely with scenario writers and the director in its production, which probably will be at the Long Island studio.

Johnny Hines Starts on Third Feature

With the premiere showing of "Sure-Fire Flint" a thing of the past, Johnny Hines has already plunged into production on his third feature comedy-drama for his producer, C. C. Burr. The latest Hines vehicle, temporarily titled "Luck," was written by Jackson Gregory.

The made cast already engaged includes Edmund Breese, Charlie Murray, J. Barney Sherry and Joe King.

Revier Changes Title of F. B. O. Picture

THE Harry Revier society drama which was announced recently as a Film Booking Offices of America release under the title of "The Black Domino" will be known as "The Broadway Madonna."

This is a story of New York and of a beautiful woman, good at heart, who is completely dominated by the superior will of an unscrupulous husband. Her own weakness leads her to a downfall. This role is interpreted by Dorothy Revier. The second big feminine role is played by Juanita Hansen. The remainder of the cast includes Jack Connelly in the leading masculine role, Harry Van Meter, Eugene Burr and Lee Willard.

"The Broadway Madonna" is the current release of the Film Booking Offices of America. Prints are now in all exchanges, as are the many advertising accessories issued by the F. B. O. advertising and publicity department.

Scenes showing some of the historical depictions included in "The Rescue of Lot," one of the "Sacred Films" current offering.

Universal Completes "The Scarlet Car"

"The Scarlet Car," a Universal picture adapted from the stories of that name written by Richard Harding Davis, has been completed at Universal City. Herbert Rawlinson is the star.

It is said to present an unusual combination of satisfactory elements; story by the internationally famed author, continuity by George Randolph Chester, directed by Stuart Paton, supporting cast including Barbara Bedford, Una Trevelyn, Josef Swickard, Niek de Ruiz, Lillian Langdon, Harry Carter, and other popular film players.

Equity Production Starts Run on Coast

"What's Wrong with the Women?" Daniel Carson Goodman's production for Equity Pictures, began its run at the Mission theatre, Los Angeles, this week. It will occupy the Mission screen for at least four weeks. This booking is probably the biggest yet received by the Goodman production, and is one of the largest runs ever accorded an independent production in that territory.

Associated Executive on Western Trip

Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, is now in Topeka, Kan., where he went in connection with business interests which he has there and in a number of other cities in the neighborhood. On the way west he spent one day at each of the Associated Exhibitors' branch offices in Chicago and Kansas City, and on the return trip he expects to pass two days in St. Louis.

Mr. Crawford plans to be back in New York about Nov. 1.

"Leopardess" Scenes Being Made in Florida

Alice Brady and Henry Kolker, her director, have gone to Florida with a company of players to make the South Sea Island scenes for Miss Brady's latest Paramount picture, "The Leopardess," which is taken from a novel by Katherin Newlin Burt.

The cast for this picture includes such well-known players as Montagu Love, Edward Langford, Charles Kent, George Beranger, and Marguerite Forrest.

Director Kolker's technical staff for this picture includes Arthur Cozine, location manager; Al Hall, assistant director, and Gilbert Warrenton, cameraman.

Lichtman Concludes Big Foreign Deal

Rudolph Vacek has purchased the entire first year's list of Al Lichtman releases for distribution in Austria, Hungary, Czecho Slavia Jugo Slavia, Poland, Roumania, Greece and Turkey. The transaction was closed personally by Al Lichtman.

Vacek will handle the following releases: "Rich Man's Wives," "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "Are You A Failure?" "The Hero," "Mothers-in-Law," and others to be announced.

Young Beauty Signed by Universal

Lucille Ricksen, sixteen-year-old screen beauty, whose work in emotional roles has been compared by critics with that of much more mature actresses, has been signed by Universal for an indefinite period.

Her first featured effort at Universal City probably will be in "Wolves of Society," a serial of social adventure which Robert Hill will direct. The role will be a second lead in support of the star, who has not yet been definitely chosen.

Frank Borzage to Direct Fanny Hurst Story

The next picture to be directed by Frank Borzage for Cosmopolitan Productions will be "The Nth Commandment," a picturization of the Fannie Hurst story of the same name.

Borzage will begin work on this new feature within the next week. It will be filmed in California, where Borzage recently finished work on "The Pride of Palomar," Cosmopolitan's picturization of Peter B. Kyne's story, now being prepared for release.

Priscilla Dean's Latest in Editorial Stage

"WHITE TIGER," Priscilla Dean's latest Universal-Jewel production, has at last reached the editorial stage, according to word from Universal City. For many months Tod Browning, the director, has worked without stint to make this film Miss Dean's greatest picture. Browning himself wrote the story.

"White Tiger" will present Miss Dean in one of her beloved crook roles. Around her will be seen an exceptionally strong cast. Matt Moore plays the sympathetic masculine role opposite the star. Ray Griffith plays an important role. In addition, Wallace Beery takes a role of dual aspect.

It is expected the production will reach the screen early in 1923.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

Manslaughter—

One of the really big pictures of the year. Business was as good as expected. (Middle West.)

Although third week of run business held up very well. (East.)

Pink Gods—

Very good attendance. Mediocre satisfaction. (West.)

Picture not up to highest standard. Business only fair. (East.)

The Face in the Fog—

Fair picture; fair business. (East.)

Nice People—

Nice program picture with exceptional cast. Wallace Reid draws for us. He sure did this time. (Middle West.)

The Ghost Breaker—

Not considered one of Wallace Reid's good pictures. Business not what was expected. (East.)

Failed to get over here; Reid's popularity only value. (West.)

The Old Homestead—

They seldom make them any better; one of the best character plays of the year. Drew big houses for ten days. (Middle West.)

A good week's attendance and satisfied patrons with this one. (Middle West.)

Good picture. Went over big on two weeks' run. (Middle West.)

On the High Seas—

Proved very attractive feature and won many compliments. Good attendance. (Middle West.)

The Cowboy and the Lady—

Old style play in new style clothes, making fairly good entertainment. Fair business. (Middle West.)

The Young Diana—

Our people don't care much for Marion Davies nor the stories she plays in, therefore, business not extra.

FIRST NATIONAL

The Eternal Flame—

Very good picture. So good that we are holding it over a second week. Our patrons are strong for Norma Talmadge and they were unanimous in liking her in this picture. (Middle West.)

Every seat filled at every performance for a week. Every inch of standing room loaded on opening day and most every evening. (East.)

Good, but not a great picture, but Norma Talmadge's name makes it a good drawing card. Played to excellent business. (Middle West.)

East Is West—

Did good business and had general appeal. Fay Bainter's play of local interest here as she was in stock company here for years. Even her warm friends were satisfied with Constance Talmadge in the role which had seemed would be so unfitting for her. (Middle West.)

Constance Talmadge's finest picture; pulled big houses and had to be held three days over one week. (Middle West.)

A lot of atmosphere but very little business; picture is all right, but did not excite our public in the least. (Middle West.)

Homespun Folks—

Fair picture; has plenty of heart appeal, but no particular attraction. Held up one week. (Middle West.)

Heroes and Husbands—

Usual Katherine MacDonald play. Business fair; patrons were of varied opinions. (Middle West.)

Cannot complain; did good business. (West.)

Kindred of the Dust—

Fair picture; fair business. (East.)

Everyone liked it although business was not extra good. The average attendance at this theatre has been running pretty high, however; a well played picture with plenty of emotional appeal.

Domestic Relations—

Despite strong opposition, this one drew well for a week's run. (Middle West.)

Smudge—

Charles Ray well liked here; did good business. (West.)

Skin Deep—

One of the best ever turned out by Ince. Drew excellently throughout the week. (Middle West.)

Milton Sills is fine in this one. Business good. (Middle West.)

The Masquerader—

Second run. Business not so good because of previous showing. (East.) )

The Frozen North—

One of Buster Keaton's best; popular with audience and a hit although only incidental to showing of "The Face in the Fog."

UNIVERSAL

Under Two Flags—

Did not go well here, at all. (West.)

Good picture; business just as good. (Middle West.)

The Long Chance—

Thrilling with plenty of pretty scenery and a love story to make it palatable. Good stuff of its kind; only average business. (Middle West.)

The Kick Back—

Has a real kick to it. Harry Carey is popular here. Nice receipts (Middle West.)

Human Hearts—

Business just good. Picture pleased some and some it didn't. Not as good as we expected. (Middle West.)

METRO

The Five Dollar Baby—

Very light entertainment, but box office records totaled to satisfactory figure. (East.)

Fascination—

Put on for second run. This one came close to making a record for this house. (East.)

Forget-Me-Not—

Has real heart appeal and was well received. Profitable week. (Middle West.)

The Prisoner of Zenda—

Really a big picture with fine acting and story. Best week we have had in some time. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Orphans of the Storm—

Back for second run apparently has lost none of its popularity. Many came to see it a second time. Good attendance. (Middle West.)

ASSO. EXH. AND PATHE

Nanook of the North—

People were slow to come in but when they finally heard about the picture, business was rushing. This should surely be played up ahead of time as not a northwest story, of the usual kind. Teachers brought their classes down and it was generally approved. Business fine last three days. (Middle West.)

Grandma's Boy—

This one already has done two weeks of record business and is starting on a third week. (Middle West.)

Up in the Air About Mary—

Mediocre comedy drama. Patrons were not very well pleased and neither was the management when they figured receipts.

F. B. O.

If I Were Queen—

Average picture and box office attraction. (Middle West.)

My Dad—

Failed to impress my audience. Just another "northwestern." (West.)

Business was not so good. Reason? No one seems to have any; thought the star was well liked and the picture certainly looks all right, but it didn't seem to draw. Perhaps too many snow pictures recently. (Middle West.)

In the Name of the Law—

Not a great picture by a long shot, but business was good. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Remembrance—

Picture pleased the audience, drew better than usual business. (Middle West.)

Not a very great picture; not as good as "The Old Nest," but patrons expressed appreciation of good parts. (Middle West.)

The Sin Flood—

Made high class appeal. Business fair. (East.)

SELZNICK

Love Is an Awful Thing—

Very clever comedy drama; patrons pleased; business very good. (Middle West.)

Jammed houses. Opened to biggest Monday of the season with one exception, which was "Orphans of the Storm." Business kept right up, all week. (Middle West.)

FOX

Nero—

Fine picture that received wonderful newspaper notices, but held up only two weeks. People want to be amused rather than educated. (Middle West.)

Monte Cristo—

Business excellent, despite previous run of month at a leading house. (East.)

Young Now Directs Warner Exploitation

LON YOUNG has been appointed Director of Advertising and Publicity for the Warner Brothers, succeeding Eddie Bonns who resigned to accept the post of Director of Exploitation for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

Young has been with the Warner organization for the past two years. He has handled special publicity for "Why Girls Leave Home," "Your Best Friend," and "School Days."

Young, assisted by Lou Marangella, is preparing a campaign for the forthcoming Warner productions, "The Beautiful and Damned," "Little Heroes of the Street," "Brass," "Main Street," and "Little Church Around the Corner."

"Lon," as he is more familiarly known, was an exhibitor for several years and later handled exploitation campaigns for Fox and Selznick.

Cast Is Selected for Niblo Production

Preliminary casting of the Fred Niblo production on the screen of "The Famous Mrs. Fair," James Forbes's stage success, has been accomplished, according to a telegram received this week at the home offices of Metro Pictures Corporation, which will distribute the photoplay.

Myrtle Stedman will be seen as Nancy Fair, Huntley Gordon as Jeffrey Fair, Marguerite de LaMotte as Sylvia, Cullen Landis as Alan, Ward Crane as Gilette, and Carmel Myers as Angy Brice. The actress to play Peggy is yet to be chosen.

First work on the picture will begin next week.

Male Quartette to Introduce Metro Special

In connection with the forthcoming first run presentations of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" throughout the United States and Canada, a novel idea will be worked out by several exhibitors. Four male singers, known as the Quincy Adams Sawyer Quartette, will be used to introduce the picture to the public.

This quartette in each instance will wear the costumes of four of the leading characters in the film version. A small melodian will be used for the purpose of accompanying the singers. A special song called, "Quincy Adams Sawyer," has been written by William J. McKenna, author of the world-famous song, "Has Anybody Here Seen Kelly?" and other international hits.

W. A. Seiter to Direct Next Warner Picture

William A. Seiter, who recently completed the Warner Brothers' screen version of F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel, "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost, has been engaged by Sam and Jack Warner to direct "The Little Church Around the Corner." Previous announcements had it that E. Mason Hopper was to direct the picture.

Production of the feature was started last week. Prominent members of the cast include Kenneth Harlan, Hobart Bosworth, Bessie Love, Cyril Chadwick, Marguerite Seddon, Walter Long, Alec Francis and Winter Hall.

Two scenes from "Shadows," a Preferred Pictures production to be released through the Al. Lichtman Corporation

Eddie Bonns Transfers to Goldwyn Staff

A NOTABLE addition to the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation home office staff was made this week in the appointment of "Eddie" Bonns as Director of Exploitation. Mr. Bonns last week announced his resignation as Director of Advertising and Publicity for Warner Brothers, with whom he was associated for the past two years.

The news of "Eddie's" new affiliation came somewhat as a surprise to the many friends he has in the industry, although it was rumored that sooner or later he would join the man who started him in the business—Jimmy Grainger.

It is recognized that in securing the assistance of Mr. Bonns, Goldwyn has added to its executive forces a member whose experience of the motion picture field and whose wide knowledge of exhibitor sentiment and needs pre-eminently fit him for the position he has taken over.

Mexican Ban on Paramount and Metro to Be Lifted

The embargo which has been enforced by Mexican authorities against the Paramount and Metro product is about to be lifted, according to word from Mexico City. Vernon T. Woodle, representing the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has been in Mexico City for several weeks negotiating for the termination of the embargo. The papers providing for the admission of the Paramount and the Metro pictures will be signed at once by President Obregon and Mr. Woodle, it is reported.

New Bray Screen Magazine Via State Rights

J. R. Bray, president of the Bray Studios, announces that his organization has undertaken the production of a new screen magazine which will be released on the state rights market.

"Glimpses of the Moon" in Preparation

PARAMOUNT is now completing its preparations for the production of "The Glimpses of the Moon," the novel by Edith Wharton. Alan Dwan will direct and Bebe Daniels will play the leading feminine role.

Mr. Dwan has been in New York for some time formulating his plans for the picture. Edfrid Bingham has been at work on the scenario for many weeks and has just about completed his task. Nita Naldi has already been chosen for one of the leading roles and with the arrival of Miss Daniels from the coast this week an announcement of the complete cast may be expected.

Miss Daniels will have the role of Susy Branch, the social parasite who contracts a marriage with Nick Lansing under an agreement that a divorce may follow in case either party decides he may better himself socially or financially elsewhere.

Cecil Maberry Resigns as Goldwyn Executive

Cecil Maberry has resigned as vice-president of Goldwyn Pictures in charge of distribution in the Central West, and will sever his connection with Goldwyn this week.

Mr. Maberry became associated with Goldwyn Pictures five years ago as manager of the St. Louis exchange, and since then has held important positions with the organization, including that of Chicago manager. When he became vice-president of Goldwyn he made his headquarters, for some time, in New York, and later reorganized the west coast territory, and recently returned to Chicago, which he made his temporary headquarters.

While he has not made any announcement as to his future connections, it is rumored that he may become interested in an important chain of theatres and with Chicago as his permanent address.

Radio Fans Listen In on Griffith Opening

When D. W. Griffith presented his newest photoplay feature, "One Exciting Night," for the first time at the Apollo theatre, New York, Monday evening, October 23d, thousands of radio fans are reported to have "listened in." Arrangements had been completed with the Bell Telephone broadcasting station by which a broadcasting apparatus had been installed on the stage of the Apollo, so that radio fans could hear Mr. Griffith's speech, the orchestra and applause.

The new film was shown in eleven reels.

New French Firm to Handle Goldwyn Distribution

Some time ago Goldwyn Pictures Corporation closed a contract with "The Societe Des Films Erka" whereby that company distributes the Goldwyn Pictures in France. Films Erka has been in existence only a little over one year, but in that short time it has become one of the most important companies among the French motion picture organizations.

It was founded in June, 1921, and complete charge of its management was given to two young and talented brothers—Messrs. Jacques and Lazare Edelsten.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

On the Goldwyn Lot

Hugo and Mabel Ballin have arrived to produce "Vanity Fair." Production will start within two weeks.

Marshall Neilan has purchased "The Rear Car," which was produced in Los Angeles with Richard Bennett. It will be made following "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

Violet Clark is writing the continuity for "Six Days," an Elinor Glyn story.

Goldwyn has purchased the screen rights to a short story by Gerald Beaumont which appeared in the December, 1921, issue of the Red Book magazine, called "The Gambling Chaplain." It was later dramatized by George Broadhurst and produced in New York with Macklyn Arbuckle as the gambling chaplain.

Warner Brothers Items

The cutting and titling of Wesley Barry's last picture, "Little Heroes of the Street," which Harry Hapf produced, directed by William Beaudino, has been completed and an informal preview will take place this week. This is "Freckles" Barry's last picture before going on the Ohpheum circuit.

Cleo Ridgley, who is appearing in "The Beautiful and Damned," which William A. Seiter is directing, hopes to leave soon with her husband, James Horne, for Rome, Italy, where Mr. Horne will direct a picture.

Monte Blue left last week for the Warner Brothers' coast studios to play a prominent role in the Harry Hapf picture, "Brass," adapted by Julian Josephson from the Charles G. Norris novel of the same name.

A. Warner, who has been here for the last few weeks going over next year's production schedule with his brothers J. L. and S. L. Warner, at the Warner Bros.' Studio, will leave within the week for New York.

Homer Scott, the man who photographed "Molly-O" and "Suzanna" for Mack Sennett has been procured by Warner Brothers to Film their forthcoming production of "The Little Church Around the Corner." E. P. Dupar, who has been with Warner organization for some time will also turn the crank on this production.

E. Mason Hopper has returned from a short vacation in the mountains and expects to start work immediately upon "The Little Church Around the Corner." An all star cast has been assembled.

At Universal City

"Alias Sebastino," an original story by Raymond Schrock, scenario editor, is to be the next for Edward Gibson. Edward Sedgwick will direct with Louise Lorraine opposite the star. The cast will include Carmen Phillips, Sydney DeGrey, Frank Leigh, Jack Crand, Burton Law, Earl Silvera and Tom O'Brien. It is the story of an Irish doughboy who becomes a Spanish bandit.

William Slavens McNutt's story, "His Good Name," has been purchased. It is being scenarized by Frank Beresford for all-star production.

"The White Tiger" is finished, and Tod Browning will shortly begin "Drifting," adapted by Lucien Hubbard from the John Colton and Owen Davis play. The setting is laid in China.

Frank Mayo productions recently made, which have been retitled, include: "The Hot Head" named "The Flaming Hour;" "The Summons" changed to "The First Degree."

George Bronson Howard has written a series of detective stories to be directed by Duke Worne, starring Roy Stewart. The supporting cast will include Lucille Ricksen, Fontaine LaRue, Jack Perrin and Hayden Stevenson. They are to be titled "The Further Exploits of Yorke Norrey."

A. P. Younger has completed the scenario for "The Abysmal Brute," a Jack London story, which is to be an all-star subject, directed by Hobart Henley.

Perley Poore Sheehan and Edward T. Lowe, jr., have completed the continuity for "The Hunchback of Notre Dame," to star Lon Chaney. Irving Thalberg is now interviewing directors.

"Up the Ladder," which ran on the New York stage last season, has been purchased for Virginia Valli. A. P. Younger is writing a continuity from the Owen Davis play, and production will start in about three week.

Herbert Rawlinson is to be starred in "Castle Craneycrow," by George Barr McCutchean. Continuity will be by Edward T. Lowe, jr., and direction by Jack Conway.

Universal has purchased a number of airplanes and will establish a flying field supervised by Eddie Curtis, army and commercial pilot. The planes will first be used in "Around the World in Eight Days," the serial starring William Desmond, to be filmed under the direction of Reeves Eason. This serial company goes to Oxnord, Cal., shortly for stay of two weeks to film African and Asiatic desert scenes.

Edward Laemmle has been definitely assigned to direct "Trail Blazers," an historical chapter play starring Art Acord.

Around Metro Studios

The cast for "Noise in Newboro," under the direction of Harry Beaumont, starring Viola Dana, includes David Butler, Eva Novak, Betty Francisco, Allan Forest, Alfred Allen and Joan Standing.

Irving Willatt and "All the Brothers Were Valiant" Company, are spending the week at Balboa Beach on exteriors.

Hunt Stromberg has completed the editing of "Glad Rags," starring Bull Montana.

Laurette Taylor leaves for New York Tuesday.

The Sawyer-Lubin production, "Your Friend and Mine," is in the stage of casting.

King Vidor has been engaged by Harry Garson to direct "The Woman of Bronze," next Clara Kimball Young production, which is now being cast. Garson has completed editing "An Old Sweetheart of Mine," and will leave for New York in ten days.

With Paramount Units

Paul Powell has begun producing Byron Morgan's story retitled, "Racing Hearts," from a continuity by Will M. Ritchey, starring Agnes Ayres. The supporting cast employs Richard Dix, Theodore Roberts, Robert Cain, J. Farrel McDonald and Warren Rogers.

As yet there is no title for the new Cecil DeMille production, Chicago Board of Trade subject. However, the cast includes Milton Sills, Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nillson and Pauline Garon. A ton of confetti was used by director DeMille in the ball room scenes.

"Paths of Glory," William DeMille production, has been retitled, "The World's Applause," which is now being filmed with Lewis Stone, Bebe Daniels, Kathlyn Williams, Harrison Ford, Wanda Hawley, Brandon Hurst, Clarence Burton, Mayme Kelso and James Neill in the cast.

George Fitzmaurice will next make the Nile River house boat scenes for "Bella Donna."

Production has been commenced by director Wallace Worsley on "Nobody's Money," starring Jack Holt.

The Argentine Republic annual festival battle of flowers was reenacted for the Sam Woods production of "My American Wife." Thousands of fashionably dressed players took part in this battle laid in Buenos Aires.

What was titled "Sacrifice," the Mary Miles Minter starring vehicle, has been retitled "Drums of Destiny."

George Fawcett, famous character actor, has a new role. It is that of Admiral Farragut in the world's largest group statue in bronze which is being made by Gutzon Borglum as a war memorial for Military Park, Newark, N. J.

Mary Miles Minter's next Paramount picture, based on an original story by Hector Turnbull, adapted by Percy Heath, and as yet untitled, was scheduled to start on October 23rd. This has meant only a few days' rest for the star, following the closing of her last production, "Drums of Destiny." Philip Rosen, who recently completed the direction of "The Young Rajah," Rodolph Valentino's latest, has been chosen to direct. The cast, which is almost completed, includes Jean DeBriac, prominent French actor, who has the leading man's part, Cleo Ridgely, Willard Louis, Kalla Pasha, Lillian Leighton, Adolphe Menjou, the DeBriac twins, Leo White, Lucien Littlefield and Nadeen Paul.

R-C Production Notes

Harry Berman is here going over future productions.

Harry Carey and company are spending a week in the Mojave desert making exteriors for "The Canyon of Fools." Val Paul is directing.

In production are: "The Remittance Woman" starring Ethel Clayton, under the direction of Wesley Ruggles. "The False Alarm," Carter DeHaven comedy under the direction of Henry Lehrman.

Mal St. Clair is preparing to produce the second of the "Fighting Blood" series.

"Captain Fly-By-Night," starring Johnnie Walker, under the direction of W. K. Howard, has been completed.

Here and There

Russell Productions have completed three subjects at the Premium Pictures studio at Beaverton, Ore., all starring George Larkin and directed by William Craft. The titles are: "The Flash," a newspaper yarn; "The Firebrand," a lumber story; and "The Clean-Up," a crook melodrama. Ruth Stonehouse is leading woman, with Lura Anson, Frank Bhitson, Al Ferguson and Carl Silvera included in the cast. Continuities have been done by George Hively.

The Mack Sennett scenario department has been reorganized by John Grey, with Bernard McConville, Rest Taylor and Mel Brown as members. McConville is writing the continuity for a finished story for Phyllis Haver's first starring vehicle.

Herman Seidl, conductor of the Mission theatre orchestra, Los Angeles, is preparing a musical score and orchestration for "Suzanna."

Lou Anger, general manager for Joseph Schenck productions, has wired M. C. Levee of the United Studios that Constance and Norma

"The OLD HOMESTEAD"
Denman Thompson's Play
THE greatest of all emotion dramas—the play that has drawn laughs and tears from a million American hearts—at last given a production worthy of its story. With the screen's greatest character actor, Theodore Roberts, in the role he was born for—"Uncle Josh."
You'll laugh at the antics of "Happy Jack" and the lover rivals, "Seth" and "Si." You'll cry at the burning partings and the heartaches of lovely "Ann." You'll thrill as the gigantic cyclone sweeps a whole town away—a climax never before approached on the screen.
Paramount has done to that old favorite what Griffith did to "Way Down East." Enlarged it, made it a heart-warming human love story and staged a cyclone scene that will take your breath away

Majestic
TODAY, AND FOR 5 DAYS "Remembrance" Starts 2 — 4 — 6 — 8 and 10 O'clock REGULAR PRICES
While his wife and family frolicked in society poor old Pop Grout struggled to pay their bills. His only offense was undying love for home and the happy family circle of yester year. And one fine day his wife and children realized that the heart of their grand old man was worth all the gilded pleasures of the fickle world. The story of Pop is one of the greatest human pictures ever filmed.

'Top O' the Morning" Title Is Used to Advantage

Seattle, Wash.—Several clever tie-ups with the title of "Top o' the Morning" were put over by Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre.

The first few days of the showing, 4,000 residents of Seattle opened their back doors in the morning to get their milk and found folded over the top of their milk bottles small cards which bore a cut-out of the figure of Gladys Walton and the words "Top of the Morning to You from the Columbia Theatre." The reverse side of the card bore some advertising for the dairy, but made a play upon the words "Top of the Morning."

Manager Case also used a number of telephone calls to interest fans in the picture. A family was called on the phone and when the head of the family answered the operator, after giving a cheery "Top of the Morning," told a little about the picture. This system of phone calls is said by its originators to be so diplomatically and cleverly handled that it "sells" an entire family in a great majority of cases.

A mailing list of several thousand names was also used by the Columbia to good advantage. Early mail deliveries carried into many homes letters announcing "It's 'Top of the Morning to You' at the Columbia Theatre." Other items on the Columbia program were also mentioned.

Reproduction of scene from "Manslaughter" with wax dummies in lobby of Imperial theatre, Asheville, N. C., arranged by Manager John B. Carroll

Actor's Monocle and Case Used in "Masquerader" Tie-Up

DES MOINES, Iowa — The Des Moines theatre used Guy Bates Post's brief case and monocle, used in "The Masquerader," to exploit the run of the picture at that house. The articles in question were sent from Los Angeles, with autographed cards written by Post, certifying to their genuineness.

They were used in a window display tie up of a book store that featured the photoplay edition of "The Masquerader."

Mr. Post hereby demonstrates that a star does not have to be feminine to attract interest in the article used in connection with the daily routine. The original gowns worn by Norma Talmadge now have a rival.

Pay-As-You-Leave Stunt Used on "Sonny" at Anniston

Anniston, Ala.—"Sonny" was the first picture of the Noble theatre's "Birthday Month" which Mr. Smart advertised as the "Greatest Month of Pictures Ever Shown in Anniston." To get this idea across he used special one-sheets and cards, got out 1,000 booklets covering the attractions, and took extra newspaper space, including a half page ad to start the month.

To be sure to get the month started off right, Mr. Smart took the "Pay-As-You-Exit" angle on this particular picture. This was emphasized on the screen for two weeks in advance. The picture was run on Monday, opening day, at usual prices. But on Tuesday no money was accepted at the box office until after the patron had seen the picture. Here is what he told them on a large card in the center of the lobby:

We want everyone to see "SONNY." So walk in, see the picture, and pay what you wish as you come out. If you do not wish to pay anything see it as our guest. But—BE SURE TO SEE IT.

Mr. Smart is satisfied that the effect was good and that he won new friends for his theatre.

Red is Keynote of Campaign on "The Eternal Flame"

Duluth, Minn.—Taking red, the color of flame, as his keynote, Manager F. P. Schwie, of the Garrick theatre, put over an unusual campaign on "The Eternal Flame."

The lobby of the theatre was decorated in red. Underneath the marquee a red flannel draping stretched from the outermost point to down at the top of the box office. Lights under, around and on top of the marquee had been dipped in red. The electric light sign was red. A row of red lights was strung from the theatre for a half block to Superior street, Duluth's Broadway, pointing the path to "The Eternal Flame."

From the top of the building opposite the theatre two flood lights turned their red haze on the entrance, bathing it in a red light. Railroad flares were burned on the edge of the marquee and from the roof.

Manager Schwie used a simple but effective prologue.

The curtains parted on a dark stage. Lights came up slowly, flooding the set with red and orange bordered with purple. The entire stage was hung with red velvet. Through an arrangement of red lights and an electric fan, and strips of red silk, the effect of quivering flames was reproduced. Two girls in Grecian costume did a classic dance named, for the occasion, "The Dance of the Flame."

Window tie-up with book store on "When Knighthood Was in Flower" in connection with its showing at the Criterion theatre, New York City

The Victor theatre, McKeesport, Pa., arranged this attractive lobby on "The Eternal Flame," draping the under side of the marquee with bunting, building a cut-out over the box-office, and using plenty of stills

Newspapers and Dairies Assist "Curse of Drink" Campaign

Paterson, N. J.—Ample co-operation from dairy companies and the local newspapers was obtained by the U. S. Photoplay theatre for the showing of "The Curse of Drink."

The comedy treatment of the feature in the teaser one and twenty-four sheet played true to form. This paper shows a baby asleep, with an empty bottle of milk in her lap. The title underneath is "The Curse of Drink." The two sizes of paper with this teaser on it made tie-ups with milk companies an easy matter. The delivery wagons of dairy distributors carried one-sheet posters during the week of the showing and two days previous, and were willing to do it free because of the attraction value of the poster as entertainment.

The newspapers fell in line with contests. One of them carried a series of four teaser cartoons, each one in a humorous vein, with no wording explaining the meaning. It was up to the readers to guess what caption fitted the cartoon. In each case the correct answer was "The Curse of Drink." One drawing showed a fat man at a water fountain hit by the sudden spurt of the water high in his face. Another showed a mother forcing castor oil down a protesting baby's mouth, a third showed a busy one-arm lunch diner drinking soup to the tune of music. The response from readers who were after free tickets to the picture at the U. S. Photoplay was large.

An improvised locomotive set on a Ford truck, looking strikingly like the real thing, and illustrating the train runaway scene in the picture, was used at a police parade.

Display on "Manslaughter" in a vacant store window arranged in connection with the showing at Grauman's Rialto theatre, Los Angeles

Attractive Lobby Arranged on "Flesh and Blood"

ATLANTA, Ga.—Manager G. M. Phillips of the Strand theatre arranged a lobby display on "Flesh and Blood" which was in harmony with the atmosphere of the picture.

The back and side walls of the lobby were inclosed with beaver board covered with wall paper of a Chinese design. On one side was a hand-painted impressionistic Chinese scene and special still frames were worked out in Chinese designs. In the center of the lobby stood an office desk with telephone, ink stand, etc. Behind this were two cut-outs, one seated at the desk and the other standing and forcing him to sign a paper. These cut-outs were made from the 6-sheet. Across the front of the lobby was a large banner with title and name of star. Half of the banner had a background of flesh color and half a background of red, carrying out the idea of the title.

Hook-Up with Dairy Is Made on "The Curse of Drink"

Newburgh, N. Y.—An effective campaign was put back of "The Curse of Drink" when that picture played Cohen's Opera House recently.

The title suggested a tie-up with the largest local dairy distributor. The consumption of milk as the cure for "the curse of drink" was urged. The Puritas Dairy Company was willing to take advantage of the publicity that the phrase, "The Curse of Drink," was getting during the run of the picture, and took large space in the local papers with an ad in the shape of a milk bottle. The public was called on to see "The Curse of Drink," and a one-reel educational on the value of milk. By exhibiting this educational the mutual benefit of the tie-up was evident to both parties.

The comedy treatment described in the press-book on "The Curse of Drink" proved practical, when the local papers published a number of the teaser cartoon cuts free of charge, merely for their entertainment value. The series of four cartoons was used in rotation—one showing the baby asleep over a bottle of milk, another a blustering man at a water fountain, which squirted too high; the third with a mother forcing castor oil down a crying child's mouth and a fourth a fat diner at a one-arm lunch drinking soup too loud for the ear drums of his neighbors.

Laugh Day Prescriptions Used on "Grandma's Boy"

San Francisco, Cal.—The managers of the New Fillmore and New Mission theatres, both of the Kahn & Greenfield circuit, liked Arthur S. Kane's suggestion of a National Laugh day so well that when "Grandma's Boy" played the two houses, cards as follows were sent out, with explanatory letters, to a selected list:

National Laugh Day. Prescription. Take (1) nice girl on your arm. Take (2) nice seats at the New Fillmore theatre. Shake well the wrinkles from your brow. Cure guaranteed with one dose if taken on the opening day of Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy."

Then followed the play dates and the manager's signature.

Comedy Exploitation Stunt Put Over On "Just Dogs"

Cleveland, Ohio.—Lou Thompson, short product manager of the local Universal exchange, put over an amusing stunt on "Just Dogs," which could easily be adapted by theatre managers who go in for short subject exploitation.

He bought a couple of pounds of frankfurters and several dozen tags. Cutting the frankfurters in pairs he fastened a tag to them on which was written "'JUST DOGS'—It's a Century." These were wrapped up and sent to the big exhibitors, who the Cleveland exchange wanted to prepare for the arrival of this all-animal comedy.

Tie-up on 30-inch candle and Norma pearls window display arranged by Metropolitan theatre, Atlanta

Lobby display arranged by the management of the Hippodrome theatre, Corbin, Ky., on "The Lotus Eater."

Takes Advantage of Burglary to Exploit Picture

Spartanburg, S. C.—The local police declined to tie up with "In the Name of the Law," but Manager Charles H. Amos put over an effective campaign in spite of the handicap.

Fate played into his hand in that for three days before the picture opened, yeggs cracked a merchant's safe and got away with quite a bit of cash. This was not announced generally until the afternoon paper of the next day. That night Mr. Amos took advantage of the occurrence by placing the scare heralds headed, "BANDITS ROB BANK" under the doors of 2,000 homes and business houses. At first glance people thought the yeggs had paid another visit to their town. So the heralds got undue attention.

The city wouldn't allow the "policeman" cut-outs on the streets, so Mr. Amos mounted two on Ford cars and had them parade the streets, parking as long as possible in the busy sections.

Masked Minuet Is Prolog to "The Masquerader"

LAFAYETTE, Ind.—An artistic prolog was presented by Manager Herbert Johnson of the Luna theatre in connection with the showing of "The Masquerader." Six masked couples in Colonial costume danced the minuet.

Fiery Cauldron Is Ballyhoo on "The Eternal Flame"

LA CROSSE, Wis.—The Rivoli theatre, with the co-operation of W. H. Laurance, Minneapolis exploitation man, arranged a striking street ballyhoo on "The Eternal Flame."

A flat wagon draped in black and red, drawn by two coal black horses with red blankets, carrying white letters on the side of each, "The Eternal Flame" drove through the streets of the city. The driver was dressed in red monk costume. In the center of the wagon was placed a large iron kettle, which was also covered with red. Standing behind it was a man made up as the regulation Father Time, long beard, scythe, and as this equipage drove through the streets he every so often threw into the iron kettle, in which charcoal was smouldering, red fire.

Trumpeteer Ballyhoos "Fools First" in Lexington

Lexington, Ky.—Gabriel and his trumpet had nothing on the street ballyhoo artist who paraded the streets of Lexington to exploit "Fools First" at the Ada Meade theatre.

The effectiveness of the stunt lay in the make-up of the ballyhoo artists. He was dressed like an old patriarch with a flowing white beard and long locks. He might have been taken for an evangelist who had come out of his hermitage to preach a new doctrine. He had a new doctrine, all right. It was painted on his back. "Ada Meade Today. Marshall Neilan's Fools First."

Music Week Gets Retail Tie-Up on "The Eternal Flame"

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y.—The Strand theatre, which has been open but a little more than a month, put over an energetic tie-up on "The Eternal Flame," by inaugurating a Music Week to coincide with the showing of the film.

As a result of this step the theatre was able to get tremendous retail merchant co-operation in which the song "The Eternal Flame" was featured. All the music stores, department stores and stationery stores handling sheet music gave displays. The Metropolitan five and ten cent store featured the song for 10 days.

In the theatre lobby an effective display was made of the three foot candle against a glazed glass background. The candle stood against a 30 inch, paper mache butterfly whose enfolding wings were ready to drop around the candle when it burned out. The stand told its own story and was readily understood.

Elaborate display front of "Orphans of the Storm" arranged by Manager S. A. Buchanan of the Allen theatre, Edmonton, Alta., Canada

Elaborate lobby treatment used by Manager Gus Carlson, of Sobelman & Rowe's Blue Mouse theatre, Minneapolis, on "Broadway Rose." Large quantities of roses were used.

Fashion Show at Reno Tied-Up with "Her Gilded Cage"

Reno, Nev.—A fall fashion show in connection with Gloria Swanson in "A Gilded Cage," proved one of the biggest events ever put on in a motion picture house in this city.

The event, arranged by Frank Costello, manager of the Majestic theatre, proved a novel and successful one. Some three weeks before the show, Costello visited the managers of the leading stores carrying women's ready-to-wear clothing and asked them to designate a group of young ladies to show off their fall styles at the Majestic theater and he would train them to make the affair effective. The ladies were drilled in fancy steps and children, who wore play dresses and party gowns, were taught fancy dances.

Fall decorations adorned the theater and the costly gowns, street dresses and cloaks were shown to good advantage under a special lighting system installed for the occasion. The fashion show was a complete production from prologue to finale.

Merchants who took part in the affair, announced the day following that many people called at their stores to see certain gowns, suits, cloaks or shoes which were worn by the models.

A previous attempt to hold a fashion show in this city failed, but when the theater idea was advanced, the merchants all entered into it and are already talking of a more extended affair of the same kind for spring.

Angel Drink Served in Lobby on "The Curse of Drink"

JERSEY CITY, N. J.—Publicity Director Gallagher of the Haring and Blumenthal circuit arranged two strong tie-ups on "The Curse of Drink," which was shown simultaneously at several of their houses, including the Roosevelt and Tivoli.

Gallagher arranged with the local dairy company to display on all of their milk delivery wagons the teaser one-sheet, showing a baby asleep in a chair with an empty milk bottle in its lap. In return for this he permitted the dairy company to distribute free in his lobby, a chocolate malted milk preparation called "Angel Drink." In the Tivoli theatre, Jersey City, he built a reproduction of an old-fashioned bar and along side of that, established the Angel Drink stand. At the Roosevelt theatre, West Hoboken, there was no room to establish both the bar and Angel Drink stand, so Gallagher had some old-fashioned bar-room signs painted, and mounted them on an easel, which he displayed alongside the Angel Drink stand.

The other tie-up was effected with the local newspaper and took the form of a cartoon contest, using the teaser cartoons furnished.

"Hurricane's Gal" Given Free Showing to 2,000 Sailors

San Francisco, Cal.—Manager I. E. Phelps, Tivoli theatre, made a tie-up with the United States Navy when "Hurricane's Gal" was shown at that motion picture house. He induced the Commander of Mare Island to allow 2,000 sailors of the U. S. S. "Boston" to parade up Market street to the Tivoli where they viewed that picture.

The Commander, himself, road on horseback at the head of the parade together with a column of San Francisco mounted police. A film was made of the parade and Manager Phelps was shown congratulating the Commander. The Tivoli was decorated with American flags and all the signals and designs of the Navy, together with two field pieces and a gatling gun. This gave an atmosphere that the Commander desired and he not only thanked the management for creating this atmosphere but for allowing the sailors to view the picture. Crowds were attracted the day of the parade.

"Remembrance" Campaign Bucks Virginia State Fair

Richmond, Va.—Having the Virginia State Fair as opposition, Manager Jack R. ReVille of the Broadway theatre, and Saul Silver, Goldwynner, put on an unusually intensive campaign on "Remembrance."

The house advertising was timed to coincide with the Goldwyn national advertising campaign so that fine displays appeared in the Richmond papers every day just before and during the showing. A special publicity stunt was pulled to break into the ultra conservative—so far as pictures are concerned—News-Leader. Mr. ReVille and Mr. Silver arranged to give a private screening of "Remembrance" at the home of Mrs. Ward, the News-Leader's critic, who has been very active in Richmond in the cleaner, better films campaign. She broke the paper's rule and ran her very favorable review on Monday, which served as a valuable advance story.

Ten thousand cards were distributed as follows: 2,000 hung on telephones, automobiles and doorknobs; 1,000 distributed from a booth at the State Fair; 2,000 (with 5,000 of another "Remembrance" card) were distributed from house to house, the rest were dropped from an airplane over the State Fair. A double-page advertising tie-up was worked with the Times-Dispatch. A thousand bookmarks were distributed in two book-stores and at the high school. The town was extensively billed, Mr. ReVille ordering extra posters from the Washington exchange in order to make a good showing.

Prolog to "Broadway Rose," as presented at New's theatre, Baltimore, and which included a dance and a vocal solo

Window tie-up with electric company made by McVicker's theatre, Chicago, on "The Old Homestead," from which both theatre and sto got good value.

'Catch the Crook" Scheme Used on "Name of the Law"

Terre Haute, Ind.—A tie-up arranged by the American theatre with the Terre Haute Tribune on "In the Name of the Law" resulted in front page publicity for six days and a considerable amount of word of mouth advertising.

The Tribune offered a reward of one hundred dollars to anyone who would identify a wandering "crook" by placing a hand on his shoulder and saying, "You are the crook of 'In the Name of the Law.'"

The competition was open to anyone. In announcing the man-hunt the Tribune carried a front page story and printed a picture of the man fully masked. A detailed schedule was printed showing where the "crook" would be at various hours of the day. It was possible to secure a double page co-operative ad on the picture with the "In the Name of the Law" ad surrounded by those of the different stores in which the fugitive was scheduled to appear during the day.

Each day a different photograph of the masked man and a signed article by him ran on the front page. The daily story explained his experiences of the day before and expressed the hope that he would be "captured" during the forthcoming day. Meanwhile the phrase, "The crook of 'In the Name of the Law'" was on the tongues of all the citizens, and the theatre benefited accordingly. During the entire week either a page or a double page ad was carried daily with the page carrying the masthead: "Catch the crook 'In the Name of the Law' in these stores."

Window link-up with motorcycle store on "Speed," made by the Philadelphia Pathe exchange

Summons Brings Added Boost to "The Fast Mail"

BALTIMORE, Md.—Exploitation for "The Fast Mail," at the New theatre, one of the Whitehurst chain, was given an unexpected boost when Louis A. DeHoff, booking director for the Whitehurst theatres, was summoned by the city as a consequence of failing to obtain a permit for advertising signs which were spread over downtown corners.

The signs were a replica of the familiar railroad crossing warnings, bearing in addition to the precautionary warning to "Stop, Look and Listen" the information that "The Fast Mail" was being shown at the New. Under the Minor Privilege law here all such signs must first be granted a permit, and this, according to city officials, Mr. DeHoff neglected to procure. The signs were ordered down, and the matter got into the papers, which naturally drew additional notice to the signs before they were removed.

Use of Mailing List to Announce Coming of "Monte Cristo"

St. Louis, Mo.—Harry Greenman, manager of the William Fox Liberty theatre, mailed out thousands of personal letters urging attendance at the Liberty to witness "Monte Cristo."

Bunting and Lanterns Used for "Dictator" Lobby

Huntsville, Ala.—Manager C. A. Cru tried to create the gay, romantic atmosphe of South America for his lobby display "The Dictator." Japanese lanterns we hung over all lights in the lobby and pos on each side of the lobby were wrapped wi red and white bunting.

Red and white bunting was also hung festoons across the front of the lobby. Cre paper streamers, red and white, were hur from the lights.

Along the sidewalk in front of the theat were a number of small orange trees wit green fruit on them.

Wallace Reid's name in cut-out beave board letters was hung in front of the lobb

Manager Hugo Plath, of the Queen theatre, Abilene, Texas, used the "border sign" idea to good advantage in his lobby display on "Over the Border," as shown here.

Costume Ball Gets Space For "Monte Cristo"

Topeka, Kans.—The management of the Isis theatre recently staged an effective campaign in conjunction with the showing of "Monte Cristo."

Having marshalled the backing of the local papers, announcements were made in large display advertisements that on the Saturday night preceding the opening of the run a costume ball would be held in one of the city's largest and most popular dance halls, and that cash prizes of various denominations would be awarded to the dancers attired in the regalia of the period of the Count of Monte Cristo.

For an entire week portraits of the characters in the production were printed in the papers, the purpose of which was to clearly outline the dress of the Napoleonic era, that the contestant dancers might benefit by the suggestions. The best known orchestra in the state was engaged for the ball, and long before the night of the affair letters began pouring into the offices of the management requesting tickets.

On the evening of the ball 900 persons crowded the floor.

"Music Mirror" Novelty Given Baltimore Showing

BALTIMORE, Md.—Presentation at the Parkway theatre of "The Music Mirror," a novelty then given its first showing outside of Atlantic City, last week brought House Manager Jefferson praise from patrons and favorable notices in the musical columns of the city's papers. The novelty consists of a perfectly synchronized film running with reproducing piano accompaniment by a Russian pianist.

The film and piano naturally must accord perfectly in time and as a special concession the state censor board permitted Mr. Jefferson to attach the censor stamp to the end of the film instead of at the beginning as usually required, in order not to interfere with the timing.

Women and Children Appealed to On "Timothy's Quest"

Los Angeles, Cal.—The management of Miller's theatre conducted an intensive campaign, with a special appeal to women and children on "Timothy's Quest."

Besides liberal use of the stories provided in the press sheet, all of which were reprinted without alteration, ads in all the newspapers were changed daily. One day a special appeal was made to parents; the succeeding ad was an appeal to teachers, and on Friday the appeal was to the children themselves. This was supplemented by distributing 50,000 cards to the children of the public schools, offering five prizes for the best essays of not more than 200 words on "Timothy's Quest."

In addition a direct-by-mail campaign was conducted. This included an original letter to every school principal and another to every woman's club, telling them in entertaining fashion about the picture. Free use was made in these letters of press sheet material, and in personal solicitation among the women's clubs an arrangement was made whereby the club selling 10,000 tickets for the engagement received 25 per cent of the proceeds.

Throughout this campaign Miller's theatre enjoyed the co-operation of Wm. H. Jenner, resident manager of American Releasing Corporation.

Dog Race Staged As Stunt For "The Silent Call"

Independence, Kans.—Manager J. C. Kreuse of the Quality theatre staged a dog race on "The Silent Call" that was inexpensive but accomplished the desired result.

Kreuse organized the race and got the contestants together a day in advance to pin signs on the dogs' back advertising the picture.

Then he revealed a streak of genius by having the boys and dogs go around Independence, ostensibly to find more contestants for the race. The dogs had the "Silent Call" signs on their backs and it was house to house advertising for the picture, the entire city being canvassed as thoroughly as if a new edition of the encyclopedia had just come off the press.

Twenty-five teams started in the race and all of them finished while some 5,000 people lined the sidewalk and watched the performance.

Street ballyhoo, consisting of large compo board book, with man inside, used on "The Masquerader" by the Strand theatre, Pasadena, Cal.

Effective use of cut-outs in lobby of the Rialto theatre, San Antonio, Texas, for "One Clear Call"

Puzzle Ads Are Used as Stunt on "Prisoner of Zenda"

Lawrence, Mass.—Puzzles were used in the newspaper campaign on "The Prisoner of Zenda" to good effect.

The advertisements were for Lawrence merchants and for the Palace theatre. The puzzles consisted of jumbles of letters whose proper arrangement would spell the names of prominent motion picture stars.

The Sunday Sun, the paper carrying this co-operative advertising, gave every aid to the stunt by announcing it in its news columns, on the front page.

The details of the stunt, outlined both in the news story and in the advertisement itself was as follows: In addition to the regular advertisement of the Palace theatre, twenty others of well known merchants were printed, each enclosed in a box. At the bottom of each of these was the name of a popular motion picture player, cleverly concealed by disarranging the letters. To the first person who assembled the letters in such a manner as to reveal the hidden name of the star in each case, was awarded a season pass to the Palace theatre. The writers of the next fifty correct answers received two complimentary passes to see "The Prisoner of Zenda." All answers were sent to the editor of the Sunday Sun.

Barn Dance Arranged as Stunt on "The Old Homestead"

NEW LONDON, Conn.—An "Old Homestead Barn Dance" has been arranged to take place at Plant hall the night before "The Old Homestead" opens at the Crown theatre.

The Crown is offering prizes to guests most nearly resembling Theodore Roberts. Although the run of "The Old Homestead" is still several weeks off, Russell B. Moon, Paramount exploiteer, has placed a three-sheet cut-out of Theodore Roberts as Uncle Josh in the lobby of the Crown where it serves a model for the costumes.

The half-sheet cards tacked around the lamp posts are made up from electros sold through the press-sheet. The promoters of the dance sewed up nearly every merchant in town for co-operative windows.

Rigs Up Blacksmith Shop for "The Fighting Streak"

SUMTER, S. C.—Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre prepared an effective lobby display that appealed to the Saturday crowds on "The Fighting Streak."

In the center of the lobby a blacksmith shop was rigged up with anvil, bellows, tools and other accessories. A cut-out of Mix with tongs, horseshoe and hammer in his hands stood by the side of the anvil. The fire box of the bellows was filled with coke and had a red light concealed below. This cast a red glow over the coke that was very realistic.

On one side of the lobby stood a cut-out of Mix in his usual Western clothes. On the other side was a cut-out of him in boiled shirt and dress suit.

Handkerchiefs Imprinted for "Grandma's Boy" Stunt

ST. LOUIS, Mo.—Reeves Espy, publicity man for Skouras Brothers, used a unique method of advertising the showing of "Grandma's Boy" at the Skouras houses recently. He purchased 5,000 ladies' handkerchiefs on which he had printed: "Bring this with you when you see Grandma's Boy at the New Grand Central Theatre. You will laugh until you cry."

Auto Identification Stunt Is Tied Up With "Trouble"

Springfield, Ill.—W. W. Watts, manager of the Princess theatre, tied up with the State Journal with great success on a stunt in connection with the showing of "Trouble."

A memory contest was staged, in which the young star made an appeal through the newspaper for people to help him identify a number of automobiles shown on the page.

To those who sent in the right answers to the cars and to the other questions asked, tickets were given to the Princess theatre as prizes. The contest was a success, many hundreds of replies being received. The automobile men whose cars were listed in the advertisements state that they were besieged with inquiries, and they too were well pleased with results.

Manager Puts Personal Okeh on "Manslaughter"

Columbia, S. C.—Manager C. W. Irvin of the Imperial theatre, in his advance advertising of "Manslaughter" personally endorsed it as one of the two best pictures shown in the Imperial since the first of the year.

After seeing the picture on opening morning he carried an ad in both papers, reading: "CORRECTION — We have endorsed 'Manslaughter' as one of the two best pictures shown at the Imperial since January 1st.

"We now wish to retract that statement and say that it is THE best."

Display arranged in the New York exchange of Goldwyn on "Remembrance" and other pictures for the present season

Flowers and trellis-work were used to good advantage in arranging this lobby on "Smilin' Through" at the Capitol theatre, Reading, Pa.

Semon's "Golf" Is Easy for Exploitation Men

Centralia, Ill.—The almost universal popularity of the games makes Larry Semon's comedy, "Golf," excellent material for exploitation stunts.

Window displays in sporting goods stores and department stores where golf equipment is sold have been largely used in attracting the public to this Vitagraph release.

In Centralia, Ill., an enterprising exhibitor sent printed tickets to the clubs, bearing the announcement that "this ticket and forty cents entitles the bearer to one lesson in golf."

Huge painting of Norma Talmadge, done by Gordon Bennett for the Strand theatre, Omaha, Nebr., of which Harry Watts is manager, to exploit "The Eternal Flame"

Dumb Ballyhoo on "Valley of Silent Men"

ROCK ISLAND, Ill.—The old silent ballyhoo was resurrected by the Spencer Square theatre on "The Valley of Silent Men," which the theatre exploited by a ballyhoo carrying cards down his front and back.

In meeting the ballyhoo face to face the pedestrian was greeted with:

I cannot talk to you. Please do not ask me why.

After he passed and you naturally turned around you read:

I am from "The Valley of Silent Men."

Dance Prologue for "Queen of the Moulin Rouge"

San Francisco, Cal.—The Casino, which for years had been the home of musical comedy, opened recently with "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," as a picture house. It was presented with an elaborate prologue.

Two attractive settings reproduced the Moulin Rouge in the Parisian Montmarte section and twenty girls, under the direction of Anita Peters Wright, interpreted the dancing scenes from the picture. Additional features were Apache dances as they really are in Paris. For this number George Cole, European master of the dance, was obtained as supervisor.

Manager Gets Self Arrested as Exploitation Stunt

Dublin, Ga.—Manager R. H. Hightower of the Crystal theatre gained some real newspaper publicity recently in exploiting "Moonshine," a comedy. Hightower has an automobile known locally as the "Hank of tire, seat of rag and bag of bolts." On this stripped down chassis he placed a can prominently labeled "Moonshine."

He then drove wildly about town, and saw to it that the motorcycle policeman was notified. After a wild chase, he permitted himself to be captured in the busiest part of the downtown section, when it developed that the can contained the films for "Moonshine."

Makes Use of Storm Warnings on "The Storm"

Wilmington, N. C.—Two weeks in advance of his showing of "The Storm," Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, had regulation storm warning flags displayed in front of the theatre. He also took advantage of the fact that the government bureau was displaying the storm warning and all newspaper weather reports warned of an approaching storm. Stellings used small black teaser ads scattered throughout the paper that "'The Storm' Is Coming," together with a little descriptive matter.

Mailing cards were also sent out to a selected list the day before opening, and his campaign got him money against the first circus of the season.

Simple and inexpensive street ballyhoo used by the Majestic theatre, Jacksan, Mich., on "The Storm"

Even in Havana, Cuba, they are commencing to use exploitation. The above is a display arranged by the Fausto theatre, controlled by the Carribean Film Company, on "Forbidden Fruit."

Clergy Tied Up With "Man Who Played God"

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Through the fact that the church interiors in "The Man Who Played God" were photographed in a prominent Brooklyn church, Managing Director Edward L. Hyman, of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre, was able to make a strong exploitation tie-up on the picture.

Five clergymen were interested in the "Help Others" angle of the picture, and gave talks in the leading schools on this topic. During the course of their talks they touched upon a contest being conducted by the Mark Strand and the Brooklyn Eagle, in connection with "The Man Who Played God" for the best essay on how others might be helped in a practical way. Fifty dollars and fifteen passes constituted the prizes.

This angle also resulted in a permanent "Help Others" column in the Eagle.

It also happened that the play date of the picture coincided with Safety Week, and strong tie-ups were made with the parade.

The New Garrick theatre, Duluth, carried out the "flame" idea strongly in arranging this front on "The Eternal Flame." The cloth draped under the marquee is red, and large numbers of red lights were kept playing on and through it

Teaser Ad Hooked Up to Street Ballyhoo on "Masquerader"

SPRINGFIELD, Ill.—Harry Thornton, manager of the Princess theatre, worked the street hallyhoo on "The Masquerader" from two angles. He inserted a teaser ad in the papers:

"If you should see a tall, dark man of aristocratic bearing in a Prince Albert coat and top hat, please notify Harry Thornton (address)"

A man dressed to fit this description was employed to give out heralds on "The Masquerader." The double dodge served to keep people on the lookout for the herald distributor and caused them to read what he gave them. Dozens of people called Manager Thornton up which gave him a chance to tell them of the coming of "The Masquerader."

Seven-Foot Book Ballyhoo on "The Masquerader"

Pasadena, Cal.—The manager of the Strand theatre created a novel street ballyhoo for "The Masquerader," in the form of a huge compo board reproduction of the cover of the book, "The Masquerader." It was almost seven feet tall. There was castors underneath so that the man inside, who propelled it, could cover a lot of ground. Two peep holes at the back gave him the necessary vision to show where he was going; but the pilot himself was concealed entirely so that, at first glance, the ballyhoo had every appearance of an inanimate book moving along by itself.

Strong American Legion Tie-Up Made On "Skin Deep"

Cleveland, Ohio.—"Skin Deep" was officially adopted by the American Legion when it played Loew's Park theatre. Prompt and effective action by the manager of the theatre brought the Legion members to an advance showing, where the theme of regeneration and its tribute to overseas soldiers met with such a response that the Legion voluntarily got behind the picture.

They called every night an American Legion night at the Park while "Skin Deep" was playing, and had bands and parades from the different Posts for various evenings.

In front of American Legion headquarters a huge sign was painted that drew special attention to the showing of "Skin Deep" and gave the Legion's endorsement to the picture. Located on a prominent highway where scores of automobiles passed every hour it was invaluable advertising for the picture.

"Wonders of the Sea"

J. E. Williamson—4500 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

A MOST unusual picture is this "Wonders of the Sea"—a picture peculiarly fascinating because of its revelation of life on the ocean bed—a picture certain in its appeal because of its entertainment and educational values. J. E. Williamson, the producer, is thoroughly familiar with his subject matter, being a pioneer with submarine photography. Here he takes us to the Bahamas and by means of a submarine chamber photographs the floor of the sea which is said to be forty feet below the surface.

One looks on in amazement at the marvelous array of pictures which include the fish and plant life of the submerged gardens of the Bahamas. One striking feature reveals a girl swimming among the sea flowers and coral growths. Other views present an old wreck which according to a subtitle is said to be near the original Treasure Island. "Wonders of the Sea" is fantastic and thrilling. When Mr. Williamson and another man go beneath in diving suits to explore the depth, the spectator is overwhelmed with suspense.

There is drama taking place down there when the producer spears the deadly moray, while the other diver has a narrow escape from an octopus. Seeing this vicious moray squirm on the end of the lance is enough to send shivers up and down the spine. Then the waters become suddenly dark and muddy—which is explained by the fact that the octopus has caught one of the men by the foot and the cloudy substance is camouflage thrown off to blind his victim. And the producer who seems to know what he is talking about states in a subtitle that wherever an octopus is, his enemy the shark is not far away.

The producer wears the regulation diving suit while his companion gets his oxygen from compressed air. The climax is a thriller. It shows a shark taking some bait and after a bit of flirtation with it finally gets caught on the hook. When he is dragged to the surface, one gets a huge close-up of this demon of the deep who has endeavored to chew up the boat. This scene disproves the theory that sharks turn over on their backs when they attack. The photography is wonderfully clear. In all a picture which is vastly entertaining and worthy of feature position on any program.

Classification—Impressions of the ocean depths around the Bahamas. Series of marvelous pictures, deep-sea diving, shots of fish and plant life, etc.

Production Highlights — Marvelous photography. The divers. The spearing of the moray, the exploration of the ocean bed. The striking shots of the girl swimmer. The shark episode and the thrilling close-up when the vicious monster tries to chew up the boat.

Exploitation Angles—It is our suggestion that you play this as a feature. The picture suggests many ideas for a lobby display such as diving apparatus, etc. It also suggests some speaker with a knowledge of plants and fishes for a prologue. It also suggests a newspaper tie-up with stills, etc., and stories about the vicious barracuda. Perhaps you remember reading of how a girl swimmer was attacked by one of them and lost her life.

Drawing Power—Good for any house anywhere. Word of mouth advertising will get the crowds.

Scene from "Don't Write Letters" Metro release, starring Gareth Hughes.

"Wildcat Jordan"

Goldstone-State Rights—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THEY are giving Richard Talmadge enough work to do these days. His screen life seems to be just one stunt after another. "Wildcat Jordan" eclipses the young star's other pictures in point of thrilling stunts. Here he is kept on the move throughout to the tune of exceptionally fast action. Call it an acrobatic film if you will. Call it a stunt picture. If you can get more suspense from watching an agile performer turn somersaults than you can in watching some orthodox hero rescue a girl from a villain then by all means go and see this actor who formerly doubled for Doug.

The hero is sent to the city by his father to close a land deal with an unscrupulous real estate broker. The latter has knowledge that the land contains oil but he is not spreading this information. So when the youth arrives the villain sees to it that he will have a lively time. The hero is introduced to a society girl. And to keep up the entertainment the youth is initiated into the Aztecs. This calls for much hokum concerning ghosts and goblins. Finally the hero gets the real "tip off" concerning the land shark.

The picture doesn't carry much plot. What is exposed is obvious throughout. But the star keeps you interested. In fact he is the only excuse for the production. You get more suspense in watching him flirt with danger than you do in the development of the plot. It should provide adequate entertainment for any spectator who does not demand big sets and big stars. Talmadge at that is much more sincere—much more in earnest than a half a dozen we could name who are masquerading as Mansfields of the screen. He certainly doesn't employ any doubles. The picture didn't cost much money to produce. It contains a fair amount of exteriors and the atmosphere is creditable. You'll probably not notice these when Talmadge gets busy at his work.

The Cast

Dick Jordan.....Richard Talmadge
Sylvia Grant.....Eugenia Gilbert
Roger Gale.....Harry Von Meter
Billy Talbot.....Jack Waltmeyer

Directed by Al Santell. Photographed by Harry Fowler. Technical direction by Leon Metzetti.

The Story—A father sends his son to the city to close a land deal. The land shark attempts to make it difficult for him, since he has knowledge that the property contains oil. The youth is initiated into the Aztecs and rescues the girl and frustrates the plans of the villain.

Classification—Stunt picture carrying familiar plot, romance and plenty of adventure.

Production Highlights—The stunts executed by Richard Talmadge. The fast moving action.

Exploitation Angles—We would suggest that you feature the star as the best stunt actor on the screen, no work being too hazardous for him.

"The Impossible Mrs. Bellew"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THOSE who are enlisted among Gloria Swanson's following will doubtless remark that "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew" is typical of the star's other releases. Why not? Isn't she bedecked in bizarre costumes? Isn't she permitted to display herself against a lavish background? And Gloria Swanson's individuality of dress and deportment is about the only asset contained in this picture. The characters are so many marionettes who are guided through a triangle, which involves a self-sacrificing wife who keeps silent for the sake of the child.

This woman's conduct is inexcusable. There is no reason why she should go to such lengths to spare the youngster. She would prefer that he think more of the integrity of his father than the honor of his mother. At least that is the impression gained, although probably she doesn't give it a passing thought. The husband is a waster. He has outside interests and one of them is the maintenance of a sweetheart. So he comes home intoxicated and surprises his wife with another man, a friend of the family. And proceeds to kill him. The incident presents bungling stupidity on the part of the officers. Follows the court-room scene and the woman seeking temporary exile at Deauville. The world condemns her, so she will try and forget. Even the child is taken away from her on a court order. Her cup of bitterness is overflowing. So she plunges into the gayety of the French bathing resort. After a time a youth enters her life who sends away the shadows. He is willing to believe in her.

The picture is entertaining in spots, but it's characterization is false. In this day of a newfound freedom the feminine sex is not giving up the fight so easily. You know how the plot will develop—that eventually the self-sacrificing woman will find love and happiness. It's a picture the appeal of which rests with its individual scenes—such as the backgrounds at Deauville, and the incident on the boat when the officers come after the child. Everything is arranged for the exploitation of elaborate sets and bizarre costumes. And these it has in abundance.

By David Lisle. Scenario by Percy Heath and Monte M. Katterjohn. Directed by Sam Wood. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Treats of a much abused wife who, to shield her son from the humiliation of learning of his father's disgrace, keeps silent and sacrifies her good name. Tries to remain faithful to marriage vows. Flees to Europe and attempts to forget and eventually meets youth who can give her real happiness.

Classification—Society drama based upon eternal triangle and a woman's self-sacrifice to spare her unfaithful husband and her child.

Production Highlights—Good work by star Robert Cain. The lavish settings. The elaborate detail. The scenes at Deauville. The costumes worn by star.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests a teaser campaign linking up vital situations of plot and the theme so that the lesson is carried home. Also suggests a fashion display by women's specialty shops.

Drawing Power—Name of star will attract. Picture best suited for feminine clientele. Will draw best in neighborhood houses.

"Oliver Twist"

Jackie Coogan Productions Co.-Sol Lesser—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

IT is nothing less than marvelous, this work of Jackie Coogan in the role of Charles Dickens' immortal character, Oliver Twist. Jackie is Oliver. Oliver is Jackie. Take it either way you will. Here is a remarkably well sustained piece of acting, not a series of boyish revelations of youthful emotions such as we have been wont to expect in former Coogan offerings. To "arrive" at Jackie's tender age is indeed an achievement. Well, Jackie has "arrived," in every sense of the word.

Next to the acting of Jackie, comes the directorial work of Frank Lloyd. From out a wealth of material such as Dickens' work afforded, Lloyd has selected only those situations in which he knew Jackie could triumph. He has also wisely ended his story before Oliver began to "grow up." This may cause much criticism. Many will say that the illusion is destroyed and that the ending is abrupt.. Be that as it may, we must recognized that the impossible is unattainable. Lloyd has followed the book closely, wisely changing the action in spots to suit its depiction on the screen.

The story opens with Monks' attempt to destroy the soul of Oliver and the plotting to destroy his life. Then we are taken through a colorful series of adventures—from the moment Jackie is discovered in the workhouse under the "care" of Mr. Bumble until he is safely under the protection of Mr. Brownlow. One of the big features of "Oliver Twist," is the cast. "Fagin" is Lon Chaney's chef d'ouvre. It is indeed an effective bit of screen portraiture. Bill Sikes never had a more convincing portrayer than George Siegmann. Gladys Brockwell is an ideal Nancy Sikes. All the rest of the players have succeeded in clothing the colorful characters of the story with the spirit of reality.

Space prohibits the listing of the many dramatic moments, the appealing and at times pathetic situations in which Oliver finds himself and the melodramatic climaxes afforded by Bill Sikes, Nancy and Oliver. Suffice it to say that the picture is loaded with them. Photographically the production is an artistic achievement.

The Cast

By Charles Dickens. Directed by Frank Lloyd. Adapted by Frank Lloyd and Harry Weil. Photographed by Glen McWilliams and Robert Martin.

Classification — A masterful picturization of Dickens' world famous classic, a colorful melodrama of life in old London town.

Production Highlights—Jackie's inspired interpretation of the role of Oliver. The support given by a really remarkable cast, in which Lon Chaney as Fagin, Gladys Brockwell as Nancy, and George Seigmann as Bill Sikes, stand out. The masterful direction of Frank Lloyd. The exquisite photography throughout. The scenes in the workhouse. The correct atmosphere of Dickens' time. The bringing to the screen of a series of characters of real charm.

Exploitation Angles—The appeal of this picture to the schools suggests an opportunity of a tie-up with the educational forces of your city. Suggests a Jackie Coogan contest and a bookstore display. Suggests a ballyhoo of an English stage coach and 'four" with Oliver Twist characters atop the vehicles and suitable advertising.

"Brothers Under the Skin"

Goldwyn—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

GOLDWYN has knocked another box office home run. This picture seemingly was designed for nothing else than bringing in patrons, and once in, entertaining them. And it has another big asset. It will please the men. Like "Remembrance," it gives the husband's side of married life and shows the women how wrong it is to keep up a continual offensive on the "good provider's" check book or pay envelope as the case may be.

In addition to an absorbing story with a good moral, this picture boasts a cast which gets everything out of the story. Helene Chadwick, Pat O'Malley, Claire Windsor, Norman Kerry and Mae Busch have roles that fit them like the proverbial glove.

The picture has been mounted in adequate style, some of the interiors being unusually elaborate. Its plot will appeal to most audiences. It portrays life as it is being lived in many families in these United States. It strikes home at a vital problem and after it's all over a lot of women and men, too, are going to do some real thinking. If you can make your audience think, you've got a good picture.

E. Mason Hopper has packed several punches into the production. There is sufficient comedy relief. There's a real fistic battle between Pat O'Malley and his foreman in the sixth reel that's a knockout—especially for the foreman. The moments attending both husbands' taming of their wives present action personified. "Brothers Under the Skin" is a right good bangup picture.

| | |
|---|---|
| Newton Craddock | Pat O'Malley |
| Millie | Helene Chadwick |
| Flo Bulger | Mae Busch |
| Thomas Kirtland | Norman Kerry |
| Dorothy Kirtland | Claire Windsor |

By Peter B. Kyne. Directed by E. Mason Hopper. Scenario by Grant Carpenter. Photographed by John F. Mescall.

The Story—Deals with the married life of two husbands and their wives, one rich, one poor. Neither want children until they are ready to "settle down." Both wives think of nothing but clothes and pleasure. Both believe they have discovered their husbands in love with other women. Then their lives cross. The rich man gets some valuable hints on marriage from his employe and the poor man learns a lot from his employer. In the end, there's happiness and the longed-for babies.

Classification—A society drama of the problem sort that strikes at the heart of one of our domestic puzzles.

Production Highlights—The fine direction of E. Mason Hopper. The acting of each member of a particularly fine cast. The comedy as well as dramatic moments attending the entrance of the poor husband into his employer's home. The scenes in which the husbands put their wives where they belong. The cleverly worded subtitles which were also written by Peter B. Kyne.

Exploitation Angles—We suggest you exploit the cast in your advertising. Suggest also a tie-up with your local style shop for a fashion display in one of the windows.

Drawing Power—This one will please any audience. You can feel safe in booking it any time.

"Without Compromise"

Fox—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WILLIAM FARNUM has in "Without Compromise," a picture admirably suited to his personality and talent. Which is to say that the plot possesses vigorous dramatic ingredients that move along swiftly and to the point. It concerns crooked politics and gives Farnum one of those he-man roles which calls for fighting qualities. There is conflict to be sure, for the hero is in love with the powerful senator who controls the mill town. Prior to the election the senator's opponent who has fought for decent government—the uncompromising fulfillment of law and order, dies, leaving his work to be carried on by the sheriff—the character played by the star.

The dramatic moments are not slow in arriving. The town is at fever heat over the murder of the sheriff's ward by a member of the lawless element. The posse captures him, but he is badly wounded. This is the senator's opportunity. Seeing a chance to discredit his rival he incites the mob to lynch the murderer. But the sheriff compels obedience. In doing so he is forced to shoot the ringleader, who turns out to be a brother of the girl he loves and the son of the man who started the trouble. It is a well sustained scene, which carries a healthy punch. You may know how the story will develop, but that is not saying that it fails to measure out considerable suspense.

It is the best picture Farnum has had in a long time. The cast is large and contains players who know how to act their parts. Robert McKim as the senator, is up to his old tricks at villainy. Every move he makes is a picture. Otis Harlan, Fred Kohler and Tully Marshall also contribute sterling performances—the latter providing the necessary note of humor. Lois Wilson makes an attractive heroine and plays her part with considerable feeling. The picture is finely staged, and the direction is of such a calibre that the action moves in a progressive manner straight to its climax.

By Lillian Bennett-Thompson. Scenario by Bernard McConville. Directed by Emmett J. Flynn. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Treats of crooked politics, showing how a senator, who controls the government of the town, is determined to embarrass his political opponent. The latter dies, leaving his work—the fulfillment of law and order to the sheriff, and also entrusting his daughter to the guardian of the law. A murder occurs, but the sheriff stands his ground. And succeeds in overpowering the unruly element. In the end the senator is forced to admit defeat.

Classification—Melodrama based upon crooked politics and the restoration of law and order. Conflict and romance.

Production Highlights—The dramatic conflict. The scene when the sheriff stands his ground and shoots the leader of the frenzied mob. His determination to conquer the unruly element. The work of Farnum and the other members of the cast. The good settings. The able direction.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests a teaser campaign based upon whether a town wants law and order or would rather be controlled by a crooked political boss. The large cast looks like an angle to exploit.

Drawing Power—Will be enjoyed by audiences in most every locality. Particularly suited for downtown houses and in red-hot political towns.

"DR. JACK"

A feature

Pathépicture

"Dr. Jack" is the greatest comedy ever made.

But it is more than a comedy.

It not only arouses tidal waves of laughter but it sounds the depths of the human soul in the intensity of its pathos. The genius that conceived and created the picture realized that laughter is the greatest when it follows upon emotion; that pathos is sublime when it is preceded by laughter.

"Dr. Jack" is a triumph for Harold Lloyd; for Hal Roach; for the unique and wonderful staff that collaborated in its making. It is no less a triumph for the entire motion picture industry, for it shows the greatness of the motion picture.

There can be only one "greatest."

The public has determined, by its laughter and its dollars, its enthusiasm and its praise, the greatest box-office star before the public today.

Phenomenal and unprecedented runs upon his recent pictures, ranging from three to nineteen weeks in the largest cities, with doubled and tripled time in the smaller, with attendance record after attendance record smashed with bewildering frequency, prove that there is but one greatest star—Harold Lloyd.

He, the greatest star, is now presented in his latest and greatest picture—a feature—
"Dr. Jack."

First National—5966 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THIS picture is a big improvement on some of Katherine MacDonald's recent productions. It does not depend so much on the beauty of the star to put it over as it does on the dramatic situations and a fairly absorbing story. Nowadays audiences demand more than just looking at closeups of beautiful stars.

The story of "White Shoulders" sends home a good lesson for mothers who, seeking to better their own financial standing, sacrifice their daughters on the auction block to whoever has the price. In this instance we see the heroine forced to go through several embarassing situations as her mother peddles her about in search of a millionaire! The first "bidder" is shot by the girl's brother when the former speaks slurringly to guests at a big ball about the way he has paid for the very clothes on the girl's back. Changing their name, mother and daughter go South. The next bidder is accepted, but he turns down the offer when he learns that the girl was mixed up in a murder case. And so it goes until the daughter is able to marry the one man she loves—who unexpectedly turns out to be more wealthy than any of the former bidders.

The shooting of the colonel at the ball, the scene at the race track in which Bryant Washburn speeds around the oval with Katherine in a speedy "Henry," the trial of the brother on a charge of murder, the scenes at Crystal Springs filled with scandal mongers, the society pageant, the fistic combats betwen Washburn and Nigel Barrie, the crashing of the auto over the bridge and its blowing up and the saving of an auto following from a similar fate are some of the thrilling moments of the picture.

The title is derived from the fact that the daughter, because of her beauty has been named "White Shoulders." Miss MacDonald displays her famous shoulders on several occasions. The production has been well mounted.

The Cast

Virginia Pitman.....Katherine MacDonald
Robert Lee Pitman.....Tom Forman
Cole Hawkins.....Bryant Washburn
Clayborne Gordon.....Nigel Barrie
Col. Jim Singleton.....Chas. K. French
Judge Blakelock.....James O. Barrows
Little Jimsie Blakelock.....Richard Headrick
Maurice, a modiste.....Fred Malatesta
"Cupid" Calvert.....Lincoln Stedman
Uncle Enoch.....William DeVaull

By George Kibbe Turner. Directed by Tom Forman. Scenario by Lois Zellner. Photographed by Joseph Brotherton.

The Story—Deals with a mother who is determined that her daughter shall not have to suffer the privations she herself has experienced, for the lack of money. To this end, she lays plans to catch a rich man for the girl. Two discover the scheme and both are rich. A third falls in love with the girl, but he presumably is only a poor racing driver. In the end it turns out that he is one of the richest men in the state, so all is well for daughter and mother.

Classification — A Southern society romance featuring Katherine MacDonald's beauty and a thrilling auto wreck is a climax.

Production Highlights—The attractive settings, both interior and exterior. Some closeups of the star that are particularly easy on the eyes. The shots at the auto race track. Miss MacDonald's stunning gowns. The shooting of the colonel by the girl's brother. The scenes attending the pageant. The scene in which an auto does a somersault over a bridge into the gulley below.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests a fashion show in which girls wear newest decollette gowns. Indicates exploitation of auto wreck scene with machine towed around the street with suitable signs on the wreck, setting forth the fact that this is he way the big auto looked after going over the cliff in "White Shoulders."

Drawing Power — Folks who like society dramas will like this one.

In "Just a Song at Twilight," Producers Security offering, we find Evelyn Greeley, Pedro de Cordoba and Richard Barthelmess.

"Impulse"

Arrow—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is quite a dramatic picture which certainly gives Neva Gerber sufficient opportunity to reveal her emotional capabilities. There are plenty of thrills, considerable excitement and suspense which keep the spectator thoroughly interested throughout the action. The plot reads like a column on the back page of a morning newspaper and while it may appear far-fetched to some, nevertheless what occurs could reasonably happen.

We are introduced to the heroine as she is riding away on a train to take her vacation. There is a collision, but the pretty cashier is but slightly hurt. Since she has used a fictitious name the hero is unable to trace her—the young man having been her traveling companion. The dramatic element of the story enters when the heroine accepts a position as nurse to the hero's sister. And the suspense follows when she discovers herself mixed up with a band of criminals. There is a plan afoot to poison the patient in order that the doctor may obtain possession of her property by marrying her niece. However, the attractive nurse thwarts the sinister scheme and finally reveals her identity to the hero.

The picture is well worked out so that the emphasis is always placed where it belongs—at the climaxes. Again it is well acted and directed. Ben Wilson, who produced the feature, has provided a fitting background—his exteriors and interiors being appropriate and in harmony with the plot and figures. If there is any criticism it may be directed against the title—which is rather meaningless. There is a punch here but noticing the title would never suggest it to the passerby. There is a possibility that the story has been featured in some newspaper account. It carries all the necessary color and romance—action and suspense.

The Cast

Julia Merrifield.....Neva Gerber
Robert Addis.....Jack Dougherty
Virginia Howard.....Goldie Madden
David Usher.....Douglas Gerrard
Count Sansone.....Ashton Dearholt
Mrs. Cameron.....Helen Gilmore

The Story. Pretty cashier takes vacation. During journey train is wrecked. The girl is slightly hurt. But she reaches her destination. Here she poses as society girl and meets a young society man. But she doesn't reveal her identity until she is instrumental in saving a woman from being poisoned, the girl having taken up position as nurse.

Classification: Dramatic story of girl who seeks adventure and finds it. Carries mystery, suspense and thrills.

Production Highlights: The mystery and suspense. The progressive plot working up to a dramatic finish. The work of Neva Gerber and a capable cast.

Exploitation Angles: We would suggest linking up with the title on a teaser campaign. Also Neva Gerber is well known to your steady patrons. We would not advise giving the plot away, but stick to the idea of carrying out the mystery.

Drawing Power: Good for most any locality.

"The Kentucky Derby"

Universal—5398 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE is another racing story—this one an adaptation of Charles Dazey's old time melodrama, "The Suburban." As far as the production is concerned it outclasses other pictures of its kind. King Baggot took his company to Kentucky and has been fortunate in collecting some excellent atmosphere. The Derby, the scenes at Churchill Downs in Louisville during the running of the turf classic, the exteriors of some typical Southern background—these "shots" give the story a fine pictorial value. The plot is not so good. In the first place it is antiquated hokum and implausible.

It is far-fetched to see a Kentucky colonel turn his son out of home because of marrying beneath his station. And with such good family connections it is unreasonable that he would have to look for work around the docks of New York. However, this isn't Baggot's fault, nor the scenario writer's. It is Dazey's old-fashioned stuff. The Southern atmosphere is left alone for a time while the hero gets shanghaied. The plot exposes an imposter who has camped on the colonel's doorstep. And this villain has employed a tough skipper and his cutthroats to keep the young scion away until the crooks have had an opportunity to clean up on the Derby. It is unconvincing to read a subtitle telling that the ship is three months off the coast of China, then to see the youth washed up on a desert island on the subsequent scene. Also it is never explained how he managed to reach New York, looking as spic and span as if he had never wandered very far from Broadway.

There are thrills in his exploits on the high seas—crude but actionful melodrama. The real thrill comes at the climax when the youth bobs up in Louisville and exposes the impostor. The racing scene is well done and carries suspense and great atmosphere. The detail here is excellent, for Baggot has apparently used the classic for his background. The colonel's horse wins after an exciting race and the son wins his father's forgiveness. The picture is well acted by Reginald Denny and a competent cast. The picture will please thos who want action regardless of its hokum. It carries first rate exploitation possibilities.

The Cast

Donald Gordon.....Reginald Denny
Alice Brown.....Lillian Rich
Col. Moncrief Gordon.....Emmett King
Ralph Gordon.....Walter McGrail
Helen Gordon.....Gertrude Astor
Col. Rome Woolrich.....Lionel Belmore
Joe Rance.....Kingsley Benedict
Topper Tom.....Bert Tracy
Bob Thurston.....Harry Carter
Captain Wolf.....Wilfred Lucas
Jensen.....Pat Harmon
Mrs. Clancy.....Anna Hernandez
Timmy Clancy.....Verne Winter

By Charles T. Dazey. Scenario by George Hull. Directed by King Baggot. Photographed by Victor Milner. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Kentucky colonel, owner of fast horse turns his son out of home for marrying against his will. The youth goes to New York, where he is shanghaied. After many hazardous adventures he returns at the end of three years. Goes back to Kentucky, exposes the crooks who are determined to run a crooked race and mulct the father of his money, and saves the Derby. The colonel's horse wins the classic.

Classification—Melodrama based upon a race horse story, carrying all the familiar ingredients.

Production Highlights—The fine atmosphere. The exteriors of Churchill Downs. The clever detail. The race. The punch in the melodramatic scenes. The good acting.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests a tie-up with some clever ballyhoo stunts such as a man, dressed as a jockey and riding a horse. It suggests lobby display indicating race-track detail.

Drawing Power—Is certain of drawing in all downtown houses. Good for any neighborhood.

" Peaceful Peters "

Arrow—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HERE we have one of nature's noblemen—a fellow who is quick on the draw, and just as quick in rescuing heroines in distress, with plenty of vim and courage and a good sense of humor. William Fairbanks plays the title role, and we first discover him stumbling over an aged prospector whose end is near. The old miner relates his past to him and starts him off on the trail of the lost property. Then the fun begins. The hero gets into immediate conflict with the crooked dance hall proprietor at the mining town. The latter tries to frame " Peaceful " as the robber of the bank. But you know what is coming. There can be no suspense when it is broadly planted that " Peaceful " is quick on the draw and that he can jump into any emergency at a moment's notice.

The romance introduces the time-worn situation of the heroine rescued from the villainous dance hall proprietor by the plucky hero. She was a waitress who had answered a want ad for a dancing instructor. Naturally she enters the Happy Hour Gambling Hall. The picture packs quite a wallop here and there. There is the usual gun-play and the necessary riding and fighting. The plot is conventional. In fact it offers no variations whatsoever. It has been done since the early days of the nickelodeon and will continue to be exposed on the screen for many, many years to come. If the authors of such obvious stories would only dress up the ideas occasionally with new trimmings it would carry a greater appeal. But they are very careful to follow a familiar groove and draw a map of the action and characterization.

Virtue is sharply divided from villainy. So you just sit back waiting for Right to triumph. " Peaceful Peters " is acted well enough. True it carries a kick at times and is quite likely to entertain the boys who eat up action. The exteriors are first rate. So is the atmosphere. And in the general run of westerns the picture is as good as the majority of them.

| | |
|---|---|
| " Peaceful Peters " | William Fairbanks |
| Jim Blalock | Harry La Mont |
| Peter Hunter | W. L. Lynch |
| Mary Langdon | Miss Evelyn Nelson |
| " Sad " Simpson | Wilbur McGaugh |
| " Cactus " Collins | Monte Montague |

By W. C. Tuttle. Scenario by Daniel Whitcomb. Directed by Lewis King.

The Story—Young westerner stumbles upon aged prospector who directs him to valuable mine. The hero wanders into mining town and gets into trouble with the crooked proprietor of dance-hall. The latter attempts to frame him but is unsuccessful. Finally the youth rescues a girl from his clutches. Love triumphs.

Classification—Western based upon location of mine and rescuing dance-hall girl from villain. Familiar ingredients present.

Production Highlights—Typical western action. The capable work of cast. The first rate atmosphere and exteriors. The rescue of the girl. The frame-up.

Exploitation Angles—This picture suggests the usual ideas—such as staging a prologue featuring a cowboy quartette. Also suggests a teaser campaign.

" Broad Daylight "

Universal—4961 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS is a straightforward crook melodrama which doesn't waste any time getting into action. The authors, apparently, have been reading the papers, for what transpires could reasonably happen. Their plot tells of a girl determined to mete out punishment upon the political power who railroaded her father to prison. She is a crook's daughter and her cronies are habitues of the underworld. So she follows a suggestion that she should marry the son of the powerful senator who is running for office in order to embarrass him. This calls for some comedy on the part of Jack Mulhall as an easy-going drunkard. He develops a laughing jag and gets away with it though the close-ups indicate that he overplays the part a little.

The girl, however, has married the wrong fellow, due to the bungling stupidity of the crooks. Jack's character is really a park bum who comes from a fine family and who attended college with the senator's son, but whose taste for strong liquor has knocked him for a ne'er-do-well. When the crooks discover their mistake they attack him. Thinking he is dead they lug him out to the open country and drop him near a crab apple tree (or is it a maple?). The girl follows and picks him up and nurses him back to health.

The action skips over three years through a subtitle which informs us that the hero has prospered through luck and the inspiration of a girl. She had previously kicked him out. Yet through coincidence she re-enters his life when her father is influenced after his freedom to commit one more burglary. The very house he enters is occupied by the erstwhile ne'er-do-well. The girl, knowing of the crime, follows, and arrives in time to prevent her father from robbing the safe. A shot rings forth and his crook friend is killed. After the visit of the coroner and sufficient explanations are allowed, the girl and the husband pick up the threads of happiness.

The picture carries a fair quality of suspense and good incident here and there and manages to offer fair entertainment. It is well acted by Lois Wilson, who can stand a close-up about the best of any actress we can mention.

The Cast

| | |
|---|---|
| Nora Fay | Lois Wilson |
| Joel Morgan | Jack Mulhall |
| Peter Fay | Ralph Lewis |
| Detective Marks | Wilton Taylor |
| The " Scarab " | Robert Walker |
| Davy Sunday | Kenneth Gibson |
| Shadow Smith | Ben Hewlett |

By Harvey Gates and George W. Pyper. Scenario by Harvey Gates. Directed by Irving Cummings. Photographed by William Fildew. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Girl, determined to avenge her father, sent to prison, is urged to marry powerful politician's son to embarrass the father. She marries the wrong man and sends him away. Later the girl learns that the politician is innocent of her father's punishment, and when he is freed she saves him from committing another burglary. She meets her husband after three years and all ends happily.

Classification—Crook melodrama based upon daughter's determination to avenge her father's imprisonment. Good incident.

Production Highlights—The incident when girl marries youth to embarrass his father. Lois Wilson's acting and competent work of Jack Mulhall as gay drunkard. Scene of the burglary.

Exploitation Angles—This title suggests a teaser campaign and can be linked up with the opening caption which states that " there are two ends to a crook's career; the grey dawn of death or the " broad daylight " of reason. Since the plot features the theft of scarabs, this suggests a tie-up with your jewler.

Drawing Power—Will draw in second class downtown houses.

Al St. John, as he appears in a scene of " The City Chap," Fox.

" The Unconquered "

Aywon-State Rights—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

MACISTE, the modern Hercules, is with us again,. The giant athlete and strong man of Italy who helped to make " Cabiria " such a memorable picture, returns to delight film patrons with feats of prodigious strength. The picture in which he appears is designed after the pattern of a serial in that it features an episodic line of action which always revolves around Maciste making miraculous escapes, effecting startling rescues, and combating successfully the efforts of two hundred or more villains. The giant strong man tosses men around with the ease and nonchalance that a cat employs in tossing a ball of twine. He uproots telegraph poles and houses and executes stunts which would be impossible with any ordinary man.

The plot savors of the mythical kingdom idea—showing a scheming prime minister desirous of gaining the throne by eliminating the princess. Maciste and his friend, a newspaper man with whom the royal lady is in love, save her time and again. Maciste even allows himself to get captured just to show how easy it is to escape or outwit the hirelings of the crafty plotter. He makes our serial stars look like rank amateurs when it comes to putting over some real thrillers. He is something of a comedian too. If men are in the way—wel, he tosses them like a hammer-thrower. If an automobile has pinioned his friend—well, he lifts the forward truck with one hand.

The enemies have a chance to kill him time and again, but wait until the climax to get rid of him. Then he is ordered shot at six in the morning. The clock fails to strike the hour because Maciste's friend in the tower has moved back the hour hand with his feet. This saves time until the princess arrives with the minister of war—and the countermanding of the execution. Maciste uproots the big pole, carries it into the palace and comes out with the designing minister and his arch conspirator tied to each end. He holds these enemies of his at arm's length like you would a walking stick.

Some enterprising producer here should send for him and put him in a serial. It is possible that he could pick up the Woolworth Building or send Brooklyn Bridge spinning through space. It is an interesting picture because of the thrills and stunts. And it holds you with the greatest suspense. You wonder what Maciste will do next.

The Story—Treats of the superhuman exploits of Maciste who, with his companion ,combats successfully the efforts of a designing prime minister to gain the throne of Livonia. The giant athlete outwits them but is eventually caught and sentenced to be shot. However, the princess arrives in time to spare his life.

Classification—Series of thrilling exploits featuring Maciste of " Cabiria " fame. The stunts or episodes are interwoven with a story of court intrigue.

Production Highlights—The marvelous stunts performed by the strong man of Italy, the star of " Cabiria." The scenes showing him lifting the forward truck of an auto, carrying five men around on a ladder, tossing men through the air. The thrills and suspense.

Exploitation Angles—Since this picture features Maciste of " Cabiria " fame we would suggest that his name is the only angle of exploitation.

Children's Book Week Scheduled for November 12 to 18

National Board of Review Puts Over Tie-up With Book Publishers

THE leading book publishers of the country, as have been their practice for the last four years, will hold a Children's Book Week. The movement, a drive to get the best literature before the children and young people, and incidentally to boost the sales of books, is nation wide. Thousands of dollars are spent every year by the publishers in properly publicising the idea. Posters appear in the book and stationery stores, libraries, etc. The movement is widespread, thoroughly organized and proven successful. The results of the preceding campaigns have been astonishing.

This year through the efforts of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, established by the Peoples Institute, an organization whose function is so well known to every exhibitor that it is not necessary to explain it here, an effective plan of linking up the motion picture theatres of the country has been devised and a well developed campaign to this end is now well underway.

The National Committee for Better Films, which is a part of the National Board of Review, has selected a list of motion pictures drawn from literary sources and adapted from published books, which are suitable for young people, that may be obtained for exhibition in connection or coincident with the celebration of Children's Book Week, which this year falls on November 12-18th.

The first step in the undertaking was a series of conferences with representatives of the Children's Book Week committee and then with leading producers of motion pictures, who pledged their respective cooperation. Next, in the development of the tie-up idea was the selection of 109 films from the National Board's "Selected List" of good pictures representing the product of fourteen producing organizations. Many of these films are among the finest examples of screen art. Accompanied by a "community plan" of cooperation between exhibitors and local organizations such as schools, women's clubs, etc., in the exhibition of these films the list was mailed with the cooperation of Children's Book Week Committee to 5,000 members of the American Library Association and American Booksellers' Association, then by the National Board to 15,000 exhibitors.

Both libraries and exhibitors have received the idea enthusiastically. The libraries recognize the opportunity for increasing their circulation by drawing in as readers young folks who have seen the stories on the screen, and also of increasing the circulation of these books among their regular readers.

Children's Book Week Idea

THIS page will fully explain the Children's Book Week idea scheduled this year for November 12th to 18th., and the following pages are devoted to the pictures that the National Board has selected for the event and which the distributors have made available for use during the week.

The section also contains ten and one-half advertising pages in which the producers of the selected photoplays give additional trade information to that presented in the text. Motion Picture News takes pleasure in endorsing Motion Picture Book Week as one of the most constructive plans of securing a better understanding between the theatre and public, especially the better class of the public, ever originated. It should become a yearly event in which exhibitors, producers, trade press, newspapers, book publishers, and the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures, cooperate fully and enthusiastically.

The detailed plan on exploitation for the Motion Picture Book Week as the tie-up with the Book Week idea has been named by the National Board, has been conducted as follows:

Fifteen thousand circular letters sent to the larger theatres in the United States urging their participation in the plan and pointing out that the cooperation of women's clubs, schools, libraries and other community organizations will be forthcoming. List and Plan leaflet accompanied the letters.

Five thousand List and Plan leaflets sent to libraries, members of the American Library Association and booksellers, with communication from Children's Book Week Committee urging the use and patronage of these pictures during their Children's Book Week.

Individually addressed letters in the best style of multigraphing, signature, etc., and appropriately modified for each group, were sent to the three groups of club women below. This letter drew attention to the artistic, dramatic, educative and general cultural values of the films listed in such a way as to present some appeal to almost any club, whatever its purpose. The club women were urged to embrace their opportunity to influence the exhibitors to book more good pictures, by supporting this constructive Motion Picture Book Week plan; they were apprised that the industry would watch the results and it was therefore important for them to prove to the industry that their "influence and activity are genuine factors which may be counted on to support worth while films." The groups addressed were:

One hundred and three national officials, committee chairmen and state presidents in the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

Two hundred and eighty-seven chairmen of committees in the State Federations of Women's Clubs; committees on art, child welfare, civics, community service, drama, education, fine arts, history, information, library extension, literature, mothercraft, motion pictures, poetry, public welfare, recreation.

Three thousand four hundred and sixty-one presidents of the principal women's clubs in every state of the country.

Two thousand nine hundred and fifty-one letters similarly prepared were sent to superintendents of schools in approximately that number of cities and towns. The letters presented the Motion Picture Book Week plan as a step towards the solution of the motion problem as involved in the indiscriminate attendance of school children at motion pictures; it urged the superintendents to inform every school and every parent teacher association in their territory about the plan and urge their cooperation in the same; it stated that it is now up to the school people to show the industry that they can be "counted on to support motion pictures of wholesome recreational and educative value when shown in the theatres."

All the letters to club women and school superintendents were accompanied by a printed form letter to "Mr. Theatre Manager," ready for the recipient to fill in and sign, asking the exhibitor to have his theatre as a community institution join in this plan, for which the signer's support is pledged.

The List and Plan leaflet also accompanied all these letters, as well as a small card from Children's Book Week Committee, which would carry weight with these groups, as the General Federation of Women's Clubs and the schools generally have for several years supported Children's Book Week.

Altogether 30,000 of the List and Plan leaflets were printed and distributed.

Any exhibitor who has not made plans for observing this week in his theatre is missing an opportunity of not only obtaining a greater financial return but also of enlisting the services and securing the active interest of the kind of people who are most desirable in the picture theatre, but who in the past have mentioned.

WARNER BROS. PRODUCTIONS

Goldwyn Productions on Book Week List : :

GOLDWYN wins an honored place on the list with three productions that have already received a high measure of praise from both the critics and the public. These subjects are "Sherlock Holmes," "When Romance Rides" and "Yellow Men and Gold."

"Sherlock Holmes" is based on the dramatization of Conan Doyle's detective fiction in which William Gillette played the stellar role. The title role in Goldwyn's screen version of the famous play is taken by no less a celebrity than John Barrymore. His acting in the part of the most famous detective of modern fiction is declared by critics to be one of the most finished performances of his screen career. The cast is likewise notable for the presence of Carol Dempster and Louis Wolheim. Not an iota of the suspense found in the original dramatization is lost in the motion picture adaptation, and the film is featured for its flawless direction as well as its unusual story and strong cast.

"When Romance Rides" is an adaptation of Zane Grey's famous novel of the West, titled "Wildfire." A wild horse and some thrilling racing scenes furnish action appeal seldom equaled on the screen. Here is a subject that will be uniformly impressive whether your audience is made up of juvenile or adult patronage. A tale clean, vigorous and romantic, which lends itself particularly suitable for Book Week exhibition at any theatre. The cast is an all-star aggregation and portray the characters of Zane Grey's creative genius most effectively. The line-up includes such players as Claire Adams, Carl Gantvoort, Jean Hersholt, Harry L. Van Meter, Charles Arling, Frank Hayes, Mary Jane Irving and Tod Sloan. The last mentioned player was at one time the recognized champion jockey of the American horse-racing track and his part in the present production gives him ample opportunity to show his prowess as a horseman of the first magnitude.

Where is the child, or the grown-up for that matter, who has not thrilled at the tale of the sunken treasure, which men pit their wits and lives to recover and gain possession of. In "Yellow Men and Gold," which was written by Gouverneur Morris, you have the shipwrecked Spanish ship and the adventuress—all the atmosphere and action of the thrilling tales of the Spanish Main which delighted you as a child. Helene Chadwick and Richard Dix carry the leading roles and do much to enhance the appeal of the story itself. The supporting cast is well chosen, including such players as Henry Burrows, Rosemary Theby, Richard Tucker, Fred Kohler, Henry J. Herbert and William Moran. Irvin Willat directed this subject and his masterly handling of the Gouverneur Morris story has given to the screen a melodrama of a high order. The action never lets up for a moment. As Motion Picture News reviewer stated so aptly, "It is a romantic adventure drama which starts off with a bang and ends with a wallop."

Eighteen Paramount Pictures are Chosen : :

EIGHTEEN productions of the Famous Players-Lasky corporation have been placed on the Book Week list.

The first of these is "The Bonnie Briar Bush." This is an adaptation of Ian MacLaren's famous story of rural life in Scotland, and has been widely popular.

The second on the list is "Call of the North," a picturization of the novel by Stewart Edward White. The star of this production is Jack Holt, and Joseph Henabery directed. The story deals with the fur traders in the wilds of Canada, and of the efforts of a young "free trader" to oppose an organized "ring." It is a five-reel production and is replete with thrills and the atmosphere of the North Woods country. It was released in November, 1921, and complete references to Motion Picture News, giving exploitation stories, review, and other information, will be found on Page 17 of Volume II of the Booking Guide.

Next comes a sterling sea story, "Cappy Ricks," from a story by Peter B. Kyne, who has made Cappy one of the best known and best loved characters in contemporary American literature. Thomas Meighan stars in the production, which was made under the direction of Tom Forman. See page 18 of the second volume of the Booking Guide.

"The Conquest of Canaan," a seven-reel adaptation of a Booth Tarkington story of the same name, appears next on the list. R. William Neill directed this, with Thomas Meighan as the star. It is a comedy drama of small-town American life and depicts the struggles of a young man who leaves town practically in disgrace, and who returns to triumph over his enemies. It was released in July, 1921, and complete references to all published material on it in the News will be found on page 24 of volume I of the Booking Guide.

A Wallace Reid vehicle, "The Dictator," is also included in the list. This six-reel picture, a picturization of the famous Richard Harding Davis story, is a current release. It is a comedy drama, the setting of which is laid in Central America.

"Forever," the next picture on the list, is an adaptation of George Du Maurier's famous "Peter Ibbetson." It is in seven reels, and the leading roles are portrayed by Wallace Reid and Elsie Ferguson. George Fitzmaurice directed.

The next picture on the Book Week list is one which centers about one of the best known characters in modern American literature, "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford." This splendid human picture was made by Cosmopolitan, with a cast of featured players that included Sam Hardy, Norman Kerry, Doris Kenyon and Diana Allen. Frank Borzage directed.

The following picture is "The Great Impersonation," one of George Melford's most successful productions. It is an adaptation of the widely popular story of the same name by E. Phillips Oppenheim, which was an English detective story dealing with two persons of similar features, laid in the days before the Great War. It is six reels in length and was released in October, 1921. Complete references of every nature will be found on page 32 of the second volume of the Booking Guide.

Next in order comes "Huckleberry Finn," an adaptation of the novel of the same name by the man whom many consider the greatest humorist that America has produced, Samuel Clemens, or Mark Twain.

Another outstanding picture which appears on the list is "The Little Minister." This photoplay is an adaption of the stage version of James M. Barrie's well-known story—perhaps his best known. It is seven reels long was released in December, 1921, and page 43, volume 2, of the Booking Guide, lists complete data concerning it.

"Male and Female," the next picture among those chosen, is a screen version of "The Admirable Crichton," also by James M. Barrie. This story, which deals with social and class distinctions and the elimination of artificial barriers among a group of castaways, in which the butler becomes the commanding figure, has been unusually popular. The screen production was made by Cecil B. DeMille.

"The Man From Home" is another Booth Tarkington adaption which has been placed upon the list. This story is a romantic drama of Italy and the United States. It is in seven reels and features an all-star cast, including James Kirkwood as leading man. It is a recent release, and will appear in the third volume of the Booking Guide, to appear shortly.

The next story among those selected is a production made by William DeMille, whose book adaptions have been consistently successful in retaining the good qualities of the original tales, the adaption in this case being "Miss Lulu Bett." This is translated to the screen from the book and play of the same name by Zona Gale, prominent American authoress.

Next comes "Morals," taken from the novel, 'The Morals of Marcus Ordeyne," by the eminent English author, William J. Locke. This is a drama laid in the Orient and in London and deals with a girl raised in a harem, who escapes to London, where she finds adventure, love, and, ultimately, happiness.

Another sea story is the next photoplay on the list—"Moran of the Lady Letty." This melodramatic romance of the sea has been adapted from Frank Norris' novel of the same title, and deals with the adventures of a young chap who is shanghaied onto a tramp steamer, where he meets and wooes Moran, the tomboyish daughter of a sailor. He is transformed by his experiences from a "softy" to a regular fellow, and is unable to go back to the old society life. The picture was directed by George Melford, with a cast which includes Dorothy Dalton and Rodolph Valentino. It was released in February, 1922, and full details concerning exploitation will be found on page 51, Vol. II, of the Booking Guide.

Still another J. M. Barrie tale appears among the chosen films—"Sentimental Tommy," adapted from the novel of the same name. One of the most human stories ever written, "Sentimental Tommy" painted a picture of the heart of a young and imaginative boy that has become one of the classics of literature. Laid in Scotland, and largely in the village of Thrums, this sequel to "Tommy and Grizel" combines pathos, comedy, sentiment and adventure to an unusual degree.

First National Well Represented On List : : :

OF the 109 pictures which the National Board of Review selected as being suitable for the Motion Picture Book Week tie-up, nine are from Associated First National, Inc.

The first on the list is "All For a Woman," released in December, 1921, and one of the not too numerous foreign productions that have met with success at the hands of American audiences. The picture is a tragedy from French historical sources, having to do with Danton. Emil Jannings has the principal role and is supported by a strong cast. The feature has won a place with the intelligent people because of its strong dramatic story, founded on authentic historical happenings and from the excellence of its production and fine acting. It screens in eighty minutes. The feature has been a subject that was well exploited during its first run showings. The index to Motion Picture News contained on page 11 of the September, 1921, to March, 1922, Booking Guide will place all the details of the various campaigns put over on the production at the exhibitor's finger tips.

"Bob Hampton of Placer," a melodrama of the American frontier, is second on the First National list. This is from the novel by Randall Parrish and follows the fiction version faithfully and well. In the cast are James Kirkwood, Marjorie Daw and Wesley Barry. The picture has proven very popular with Young America and also carries interest for the regular fan among the grown-ups. The length of the feature is seven reels. The release date was in May, 1921. Marshall Neilan directed. The Booking Guide page is 16 and the volume is No. 1.

"Kindred of the Dust," a new release, directed by R. A. Walsh with Miriam Cooper and George Walsh starred, is the third of First National's product listed. This is a story of a man's devotion and faith, by Peter B. Kyne, one of the most popular of present day authors. The Booking Guide index will be found on page 41, of volume 2—September, 1921, to March, 1922.

James Fenimore Cooper's immortal "The Last of the Mohicans" is listed as one of the 109, as well it may be. This story of Cooper's "good Indian" has been produced with great care and attention to detail with Wallace Beery and other well-known players in leading parts. The picture has been a great success wherever it was exploited properly. It was produced by Maurice Tourneur. See page 61 of volume 1, Booking Guide, for full details and successful exploitation angles.

"Lorna Doone," also directed by Tourneur and just available to theatres (pre-release runs so far) is also down. The reviews on this production are all excellent and First National is claiming great things for it. The book, by R. D. Blackmer, from which the play was adapted is one of the old-time classics and tells a romantic story of the Scotch-English border that has been a favorite in print for years. It should have great appeal with the older generation. It is an Ince production with an all-star cast. The length is seven reels.

Naturally "The Old Swimmin' Hole," which Charles Ray made from the famous James Whitcomb Riley poem of the same name, without recourse to a single title, is down as one of the National Board's appropriate numbers. "The Old Swimmin' Hole" is a rural character study, in which beautiful backgrounds, well executed incidents and the star's ability in the rustic boy roles is counted upon to put it over, more than plot or dramatic moments. Exploitation possibilities (see Booking Guide, volume 1, page 79) are excellent and the production has been proven a wonderul bill for the kind of a tie-up that Book Week offers. Released in February, 1921.

"Penrod," listed by the board as recommended for juveniles, is another of the reasonably new pictures down for the Book Week. This is one of Marshall Neilan's productions and brings Booth Tarkington's juvenile hero to the screen in the shape of Wesley Barry. Certainly a fine Book Week show for any theatre, even if the picture has been played recently. Has been one of the exploitation productions of the year. Index in volume 2, page 57, of the Booking Guide will prove this contention.

In "Pilgrims of the Night," which is the film title of "Passersby," a favorite detective and society melodrama by E. Phillips Oppenheim, the exhibitor has a picture that he can present without fear of displeasing his regular fans and still draw a fine selection for the class of house that fears too much "highbrow" stuff. For cast, length, exploitation that has been used successfully see page 58, volume 2, of the Guide.

The last of the nine selected from First National's pictures is "The River's End," one of the popular James Oliver Curwood series, both in fiction and on the screen. This production is so well known that it does not have to be recommended to the exhibitor. It has hung up many a box office record. Released in 1920, but good any time, since First National has kept the prints up on the release.

Board Selects Eight Vitagraph Releases : : : :

EIGHT photoplays produced by Vitagraph, Inc., have been honored by a place on the Book Week list of the National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review.

The first of these is "Black Beauty." Anne Sewell's famous novel of the same name, known as the "Uncle Tom's Cabin" of the horse, and which did more to promote kindness to animals than any other single cause, has been a universal favorite for generations, and the screen version bids fair to equal it. While the original book dealt only with the story of Black Beauty, the picturization has included the drama and romance in the lives of his owners, although it closely maintains the spirit of the original. Only the happier side of Black Beauty's career has been retained, and the result has been a photoplay that is censor-proof, as clean and fresh as the great outdoors, and filled with human interest and appeal to patrons of every age and type. The finish is stirringly melodramatic. Jean Paige plays the leading feminine role, as Black Beauty's mistress. David Smith directed.

"Dead Men Tell No Tales," the second Vitagraph release on the list, is, as the title suggests, a thrilling melodrama. It is an adaptation of E. W. Hornung's popular novel of the same name. Mystery, romance and drama combine to fill it with suspense and interest. A strange pirate crew, a beautiful girl, a hero who rescues her, and a villainous uncle are among the elements which make up the tale. Many of the scenes are laid at sea. Catherine Calvert is the star, with Percy Marmont appearing as her leading man. Tom Terris directed. It is seven reels in length, and was released in November, 1920. An index to information concerning it will be found on Page 28 of Vol. I of the Booking Guide.

"Island of Regeneration" is the third on the list. This production, from a novel by Cyrus Townsend Brady, has been widely popular. It is laid in the South Sea Islands and deals with the regeneration of a down-and-outer. Antonio Moreno appears in the leading role. It is a five-reel production.

The next on the list is the Vitagraph production of "The Little Minister," which was adapted from the J. M. Barrie novel, as distinguished from the other production of it, based upon the stage play of the same name, also by Barrie. Alice Calhoun appears as the star of this production, which has been warmly received. It is a clean, wholesome picture, and carries the Scotch atmosphere from beginning to end. It was directed by David Smith. The length is six reels. The picture was released in January, 1922, and is listed on Page 44 of Vol. II of the Booking Guide.

Next in order is "The Prodigal Judge," based upon Vaughan Kester's novel of the same title. Laid in the South, in the days before the Civil War, the story unfolds a charming tale of an old judge who turns tramp, and the influence of a small boy, who is kidnapped by the villain, who seeks the child's fortune. A pleasing love interest runs through it, and the entire story carries a particularly broad appeal to every class of picture patron. Jean Paige heads the cast, with Maclyn Arbuckle appearing as the Prodigal Judge. Edward Jose directed. The photoplay was released in February, 1922, and information concerning it is indexed on Page 59 of the second volume of the Booking Guide.

"Restless Souls," taken from a Richard Harding Davis story. "Playing Dead" is also included. This picture, a comedy drama, deals with the pretended suicide of a man who wishes to teach his wife a lesson. Earle Williams is the star. It is five reels in length, and is not listed in the Booking Guide, having been released prior to its publication.

"The Silver Car," another Earle Williams vehicle, is also on the list. The picture is based on a story by Wyndham Martyn, and tells the story of an international swindler who has gone straight, but who is still wanted by the police. He has saved the honor of a statesman, and is happily married. He escapes, following much intrigue, in a silver car. The film was directed by David Smith, and was released in June, 1921. It will be found listed on Page 100, Vol. I, of the Booking Guide.

The eighth and last of the Vitagraph films selected is "The Son of Wallingford," by George Randolph Chester and Lillian Chester. This picture, which was directed by the authors, brings in the famous characters, Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford and Blackie Daw, but centers about Wallingford's son, whom the father is anxious shall go absolutely straight. The son proves to be a chip of the old block, and strikes it rich with an oil well.

VITAGRAPH'S Book Week Offerings

The Following Pictures are the Selections of the National Board of Review

"BLACK BEAUTY," 7 reels. A Master picture, better than the book. "Black Beauty," known and loved for forty years in every part of the world where books are read, has come to life in this masterpiece. Jean Paige is the sweet, appealing heroine.

"THE PRODIGAL JUDGE," 7 reels. By Vaughan Kester. An ante-bellum Southern classic. The story revolves around the lives and adventures of Judge Slocum Price, a lovable itinerant vagabond, and his eccentric friend, Solomon Mahaffy. Star, Jean Paige. Macklyn Arbuckle as Judge Slocum Price.

"DEAD MEN TELL NO TALES," 7 reels. Every individual thrill described in the internationally famous book by E. W. Hornung, author of "Raffles," has been transferred to the film. Love, suspense, mystery, action,—this picture is fairly crammed with it. All star cast, headed by Catherine Calvert.

"THE ISLAND OF REGENERATION," 5 reels. By Cyrus Townsend Brady. Gripping romance of the South Sea Islands, with a startling theme and wonderful scenic beauty. Star, Antonio Moreno.

"THE LITTLE MINISTER," 6 reels. By James M. Barrie. A lovable, whimsical tale of the Scottish lowlands. The quaint, old world atmosphere of the little village of Thrums beautifully created by Director David Smith. Star, Alice Calhoun, as "Babbie."

"RESTLESS SOULS," 5 reels. From the Richard Harding Davis story, "Playing Dead." Good humored satire at the expense of the funny antics of society, or that part of it which is addicted to "isms" and "cults" for diversion. Star, Earle Williams. Famous movie dog, "Pal" does clever work in the picture.

"THE SILVER CAR," 6 reels. By Wyndham Martyn. An Earle Williams picture, and one of his best. As Anthony Trent, international swindler with a price on his head, who "goes straight," saves the honor of a British statesman, and wins his daughter, Mr. Williams is at his best.

"THE SON OF WALLINGFORD," 8 reels. George Randolph and Lillian Chester. A charming sequel to the famous "Wallingford" stories. It's human qualities hold in the screen version. A record cast, including Wilfrid North, Tom Gallery, George Webb, Antrim Short, Bobby Mack, Andrew Arbuckle, Van Dyke Brooke and Priscilla Bonner.

Many Hodkinson Films Chosen for Book Week

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is represented in the list of the National Committee for Better Films by a particularly strong line-up of screen attractions.

"The Beggar Maid" is a two-reeler based on the theme expressed in Alfred Tennyson's poem and the painting by Burne-Jones. It marks a distinct step forward in the efforts of the motion picture producer to present to screen patrons something that is entertaining and at the same time artistic. Mary Astor plays the title role and achieves a distinct triumph.

"Cameron of the Royal Mounted," in six reels, is an adaptation of Ralph Connor's striking story of the Canadian Northwest in which the adventures of Corporal Cameron of the mounted police plays a prominent part. The all-star cast is headed by Gaston Glass, Vivienne Osborne and Irving Cummings. The director is Henry MacRae.

"A Certain Rich Man" was written by William Allen White, who stands in the foremost ranks of America's writers. The story is of the domestic problem type, but is treated with a delicate hand that makes the story and the picture perfectly adaptable for use during Book Week before either a mixed or a juvenile audience. The subject is one of the Great Authors Pictures series distributed by Hodkinson, and was directed by Howard Hickman. The cast is headed by Robert McKim, Claire Adams and Carl Gantvoort.

"God's Crucible" was adapted from another Ralph Connor story titled "The Foreigner." It is a drama of Russian immigrants with the locale laid in Western Canada. The cast is headed by Gaston Glass, Gladys Coburn, Wilton Lackaye and Robert Haines. Direction by Henry MacRae.

"The Gray Dawn" is a Benjamin Hampton production suggested by the novel of the same name which was written by Stewart Edward White. The story is laid in San Francisco of the period of 1856, when the Vigilantes were organized to check the lawless elements that menaced the city in the days of the gold rush.

The product seen on the screen this fall has done much to silence the critics who have heretofore hurled the charge of salaciousness and mediocrity. With so many of the standard literary classics transferred into motion picture form there is being offered to the picture-going public entertainment of the highest order. Not the least among these screen adaptations of literary classics is "The Headless Horseman," based on Washington Irving's "Legend of Sleepy Hollow." The part of Ichabod Crane, the schoolmaster, is taken by Will Rogers, who is said to have given the role a most sympathetic portrayal lightened by touches of his characteristic humor.

Another standard work of literature which has found its way to the screen on the Hodkinson schedule is "Jane Eyre" Charlotte Bronte. This is a drama laid in the Mid-Victorian period. Hugo Ballin directed and Mabel Ballin appears in the title role.

"The Light in the Clearing" is based on Irving Bacheller's book of the same title. Americans and Americanism furnish the theme around which this story revolves. The politics of a small town, family troubles, and the value of a sterling character are the highlights of the story.

Here is another Zane Grey story selected by the committee for presentation during Book Week—"The Mysterious Rider." This subject replete with melodramatic thrills deals with cattle rustling and the action takes place against the stern background of the mountainous country of Arizona.

A romance of stock deals against the quaint scenery of Cape Cod is the story presented in "No Trespassing," written by Joseph C. Lincoln. Irene Castle plays the leading feminine role. The part played by the star gives her ample opportunity of demonstrating the talent that has made her favorite with so many of the picture-going public.

"Rip Van Winkle," famed in story and drama, has also found its way to the screen. Based on the celebrated story of Washington Irving, the screen version is declared by many critics to have eclipsed even the masterful dramatization presented by Joseph Jefferson formerly on the stage.

"The Young Painter," "The Bashful Suitor," and "Hope" are three subjects belonging to the Hodkinson series of two-reel pictures based on famous paintings. "The Young Painter" was suggested by Rembrandt's painting. "The Bashful Suitor' is based on the painting by Josef Israel, and "Hope" is based on George F. Watts' painting.

Paramount's Book Week

John S. Robertson was entrusted with the task of transferring this well nigh elusive story to the screen, and it is generally conceded that he succeeded to an unusual degree. The role of Tommy has been sympathetically enacted by Gareth Hughes, with May McAvoy giving what is perhaps her finest portrayal as Grizel. George Fawcett appears in a loveable character role. This picture was released in April, 1921, in eight reels. It is listed on page 97 of the first issue of the Booking Guide.

Following this comes "Tillie," adapted from "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid," a romance written by Helen Martin and Frank Howe. The story deals with a young girl living among the Mennonites, better known as the Pennsylvania Dutch. The community is a narrow-minded one, and the church fathers attempt to compel her to marry a man for whom she does not care, but she ultimately triumphs and wins love and happiness. The leading role is handled by Mary Miles Minter, as Tillie, under the direction of Frank Urson. The picture was released in January, 1922. Full information concerning it is indexed on page 75 of the second volume of the Booking Guide.

The eighteenth and last on the list of Famous Player productions is an adaption of the most famous of all pirate tales, "Treasure Island." This novel, from the master hand of Robert Louis Stevenson, has an appeal to every person in whom the spark of adventure is not utterly dead, and it has been a universal favorite with boys from six to sixty since it was first written. It has been transferred to the screen by Maurice Tourneur, who has extracted rich pictorial beauty and stirring drama from it. Following the stage convention, the leading role is played by a girl, in this case Shirley Mason. This was released prior to the inception of the Booking Guide, and hence it is not listed in it.

Warners Have Strong Book Week Schedule

TWO Warner Brothers' productions have been given a place on the Book Week list of the National Board of Review, "Rags to Riches" and "Little Heroes of the Street."

"Rags to Riches" stars Wesley Barry, and is adapted from the novel and stage play of the same name by Charles A. Taylor. It is a Harry Rapf production in seven reels, and was directed by Wallace Worsley. The supporting cast includes Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Richard Tucker and Eulalie Jensen. It tells the story of a young boy, reared in the lap of luxury— petted and pampered. He finally rebels against this restraint, and runs away and becomes a real, honest to goodness boy. The picture recently played at the Capitol theatre, New York, where it attracted considerable attention. The picture has wide exploitation possibilities, but is of too recent release to be included in the first or second volume of the Booking Guide.

The second is "Little Heroes of the Street," based on the story of the same name by Lem Parker. This, too, stars Wesley Barry, and is a Harry Rapf production. It is seven reels in length. It tells the story of a policeman's little son, played by Barry who has a typical role which he handles in his usual capable fashion. It has only recently been completed.

Eskay Harris Product Well Represented

TWO five-reel fairy tales and one one-reel subject of similar nature, handled by the Eskay Harris Feature Film Company, have been chosen to fill a place on the National Board's list.

The first of these subjects is "Alice in Wonderland," a story which requires little comment or explanation. Lewis Carroll set, in this immortal fantasy, a mark which few writers of wonder tales for children have equalled. Clean, full of genuine humor, and with a lightness of touch such as few writers have possessed, Carroll's story has been, and is, a favorite with thousands upon thousands of children. This picture is in five reels, and has recently been carefully revised. It is handled direct from the office of the company.

In the same category is "Alice Through the Looking Glass," which Carroll wrote as a companion book to "Alice in Wonderland." Full of the same delightful qualities that made the first book such an overwhelming success, it has vied in popularity with it. The National Educational Association, composed of superintendents of schools, principals, teachers, and other educators, recently selected "Alice in Wonderland" and "Alice Through the Looking Glass" as the two leading books for the child's bookshelf. These were chosen from more than 300 famous books for children.

"Alice Through the Looking Glass" is also in five reels and has been recently revised.

In addition, the board has selected "Old Mother Hubbard," a one-reel production from one of the most famous of all the Mother Goose stories, picturized attractively.

often been not only indifferent to the photoplay but antagonistic.

By getting in on the movement, the exhibitor will be taking a step toward the solution of one of his most difficult problems. Any exhibitor who has not already made plans for observing the week is missing an opportunity. He will get every cooperation from the exchanges, the National Board, the newspapers, libraries, etc.

The titles, from whom they may be obtained, length, etc., are given, and also references pertaining to the Motion Picture News Booking Guide, in itself an index to the pages of Motion Picture.

From the information following all the exploitation campaigns and other data necessary to good showmanship may be obtained.

By the time this magazine goes to press 27,000 school superintendents will also have received an appeal from the National Committee for their cooperation.

The companies have informed their exchanges regarding Book Week plan and exchange managers will be prepared to accommodate exhibitors with bookings of films on the National Board's special list.

Motion Picture News heartily endorses Motion Picture Book Week and urges every exhibitor who has not already done so to make haste in securing bookings from the selected list.

It is also advised that exhibitors notify as far as possible all women's clubs, school authorities, and other organized groups in their vicinity that the week will be observed in their theatres and to begin a comprehensive exploitation and advertising campaign in connection with the national publicity.

We believe that every exhibitor in the United States should take part in this national movement to show what the motion picture industry is doing to benefit the young people of America.

Miscellaneous List of Book Week Subjects

OTHER productions selected by the National Board for Book Week, making up the total of 109 films, include:

Film Booking Offices of America, Inc. "The Call of Home," "The Fatal Marriage" and "Two Kinds of Women."

Fox Film Corporation. "Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," "Evangeline," "If I were Kink," 'Jack and the Beanstalk," "The Lamplighter," "The Last Trail," "Les Miserables," "The Men of Zanzibar," "Merely Mary Ann," "Monte Cristo," "Over the Hill," "A Self Made Man," "A Stage Romance," "A Tale of Two Cities" and "Treasure Island."

Metro Picture Corporation. "The Lion's Den," "Missing Husbands," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and "The Stroke of Midnight."

Pathe Exchange, Inc. "Isle of Zorda," "Lady Godiva," "Silas Marner" and "The Vicar of Wakefield."

United Artists Corporation. "Disraeli," "Fair Lady," "The Iron Trail," "Little Lord Fauntleroy," "Pollyanna," and "The Three Musketeers."

Universal Film Manufacturing Company. "Adventures of Robinson Crusoe," "Conflict," "The Flame of Life," "The Girl Who Ran Wild," "Little Red Riding Hood," "The Long Chance," "Red Courage" and "Under Two Flags."

Educational Well Represented for Book Week

A BRUCE scenic and an entire series of two-reelers have been selected from the short subject product of Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

The scenic in question is "And Women Must Weep," made by Robert Bruce, has perhaps attracted more attention than any subject made by him. Suggested by Charles Kingsley's poem, "The Three Fishers," with its famous lines, "For men must work and women must weep," it might almost be said that Bruce has made scenery act in this compelling subject. It contains a wealth of scenic beauty and a strong human interest. It is a comparatively recent release.

In addition, the National Board has chosen the entire series of the adventures of Sherlock Holmes, in two reels each. The subjects, which are really miniature features, have been given a prominent place on the programs of many leading theatres. Made in England from the world-famous detective tales of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, they transfer to the screen with marked effectiveness the wealth of dramatic interest and ingenuity which made the stories so popular. The role of the world's best known detective character, Sherlock Holmes, whose name is synonymous with "detective," is handled by Eille Norwood, who plays the part convincingly and capably. The subjects chosen, all current releases, are: "A Case of Identity," "The Copper Beeches," "The Devil's Foot," "The Dying Detective," "The Empty House," "The Noble Bachelor," "The Priory School," "The Red-Headed League," "A Scandal in Bohemia," "The Solitary Cyclist," "The Tiger of San Pedro" and "The Yellow Face."

With the Exchanges

THE Chicago Film Board of Trade, composed of the film exchange managers, has planned a big get-together dinner at the Morrison Hotel on the evening of October 30th. Besides the executives of the various film exchanges, members of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners and other exhibitors have been invited to attend, the object of the dinner being to promote co-operation and friendliness among the different branches of the industry and to give opportunity for a general discussion with that end in view. It is expected that short talks also will be made by Senator Medill McCormick, state and city officials, and other prominent men not connected with the industry. It is predicted that this will be one of the largest affairs ever arranged by members of the industry in Chicago, and that between three and four hundred will gather around the banquet tables at the Morrison on next Monday night.

Harry Lorsch has been appointed manager of Goldwyn Pictures' Detroit Exchange and assumed his new duties. Mr. Lorsch, who has a host of friends in Chicago, recently resigned as manager of Goldwyn's Chicago exchange to do special work for that company.

Walter D. Nealand, who was recently appointed to take charge of Goldwyn's exploitation department in the Chicago territory, is busily engaged in carrying out a big publicity campaign on "Remembrance," which will be released in Chicago on November 5th. Mr. Nealand had wide experience in motion picture exploitation work, having been connected with the publicity department of Famous Players with headquarters in New York for many years. He has also done some good work in Chicago, having handled the publicity for the recent food show and other events of importance.

Charles L. Casanave has joined the staff of American Releasing Corporation's Chicago exchange as manager of the sales department. Mr. Casanave recently has been connected with the Fox exchange and enjoys a wide acquaintance among exhibitors. Other recent additions to the staff are Horace Conway, former Paramount salesman at Milwaukee, and C. Elfenbein formerly with Fox at Minneapolis. Both have the title of special representative.

Joe Brandt visited Chicago last week and while in the city completed arrangements for the release of "More To Be Pitied Than Scorned," in Illinois by Griever Productions. A screening of the feature was put on by Mr. Griever last week in the projection room at 831 S. Wabash Avenue, and those who witnessed the picture were convinced that it will be a good box office attraction, the melodramatic tinge of the story being along the lines the public seems to be demanding at present. Mr. Brandt also arranged for a tie-up of his feature, "Only a Shop Girl," with a number of Chicago department stores, who will cooperate in putting over big style shows at theatres where it is shown, as well as giving it window advertising. Mr. Brandt stated that Babie Adair will be brought to Chicago to make personal appearances.

A new face in the Fox exchange is that of A. M. Rosencran, who resigned from his position with the American Releasing organization to take the new job.

Sidney Goldman is the latest of film row executives to leave Chicago to assume a new position, having been appointed manager of the Film Booking Offices of America exchange at Salt Lake City. Harry Berman, of the Film Booking Offices, completed the arrangements with Mr. Goldman when he was in Chicago last week, and the latter will take up his new duties immediately.

Frank Zambreno, of Progress Pictures, will offer the exhibitors of the territory a great series of western pictures this Fall. His releases will start with the Franklin Farnum Productions, which include "When East Comes West," "Smilin' Jim," and four others; he also has the Richard Talmadges, featuring a new star, who is a fine stunt actor, and a protege of Doug. Fairbanks. This series will start with "The Unknown," and includes seven features. The Snowy Baker series of three, produced by William N. Selig and starting with "The Better Man," is next, followed by Big Boy Williams series, including six, also The William Fairbanks features. "The Stranger from Canyon Valley" and other westerns will also be released by Progress Pictures Company. Mr. Zambreno is planning a special advertising campaign to put the pictures over, which will be in charge of Albert Dezel, of Master Advertisers.

Manager Joe Klein, of Film Booking Offices, has added J. M. Duskin to his force of salesmen..

During his recent visit to Chicago, Carl Laemmle perfected plans which, he believes, will greatly increase the efficiency of Universal's Chicago exchange and enable it to give even better service to exhibitors. Under the new arrangement H. A. Stern will be sales manager in charge of city territory and I. L. Lesserman will be sales manager for the country territory, which includes six hundred cities and towns. W. K. Linden becomes office manager and Walter Hyland, heretofore service manager, has been promoted to head booker. Mr. Lesserman has appointed Sigmund Decker assistant sales manager to represent him throughout the territory and Ted Schlanger assistant sales manager to be Mr. Lesserman's personal representative at the Chicago office during his absences in the territory.

Among the Exhibitors

THE Ways and Means Committee of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, which includes Glen Reynolds, Sam Abrahams, Joe Hopp, Sidney Selig, Ben Berve, Adam Dernbach and L. H. Frank, has completed arrangements, which promise to bring home to exhibitors throughout the state, the necessity of organization and the benefits which will accrue to them from membership. The entire state has been divided into zones and a series of meetings in various regional centers arranged, at which officers of the state organizations and members of the committee will be present and make addresses. The meetings not only will enable the representatives of the state organization to come in contact with exhibitors of the different zones, but will also give the latter an opportunity to become better acquainted and interested in association work in their own particular territory. The meetings already scheduled include one at Ottawa on November 8th; Galesburg, November 22nd; Rockford, December 6th; Peoria, December 20th and Springfield, January 10, 1923. Illinois is believed to be the first state to take up this zone or regional idea and this method of building up the organizations will be watched with interest throughout the entire country.

It is reported that Abe Rosenen and Sam Jacobson will erect a $250,000 motion picture theatre in the rear of the group of one-story stores at 4335-63 Armitage Avenue. The stores and theatre site have just been purchased from Henry F. Brookfield for a reported consideration of $135,000.

Good news comes from Aurora that Frank Thielan, of the Thielan Circuit, is continuing to improve and is now able to spend one or two hours a day at his office. Mr. Theilan, it will be recalled, was severely injured when a stone fell from a building on his head and spent several weeks in the hospital.

Harry P. Gerald, who operates the Home theatre at Bureau, was a Chicago visitor this week and states he is planning to keep his house open three days a week instead of two. Bureau is a railroad center and business is still effected adversely by the strike of railway workers, but Mr. Gerald hopes for improvement in the near future.

Albert Deane, Paramount's publicity representative in Australia, stopped off in Chicago for a visit at the local exchange, en route to the west coast, where he will remain for a couple of months before returning to Australia. Australia, he reports, is second only to the United States in the up to date methods of showmanship, and says that he finds the MOTION PICTURE NEWS' exploitation department of great value in suggesting ideas for campaigns.

A party of Famous Players-Lasky officials, headed by Adolph Zukor and Jesse Lasky, were scheduled to arrive in Chicago Thursday, for the opening of McVicker's theatre. Included in the party, beside the above mentioned, were Harold Franklin, manager of the theatrical department; Claude Saunders, manager of the exploitation department; Sidney R. Kent, general manager; John C. Flinn, general representative and others.

Ascher Brothers have disposed of their Adelphi theatre, 7074 N. Clark Street, to Newell & Lester, owners of the Howard theatre, and the actual transfer of this fine house will be made about the first of the month. The Adelphi is one of the handsomest houses on the north side and has a seating capacity of 1312.

A. J. Obreshk reports that work on his theatre and office building at Whiting, Indiana, is progressing and it is planned to occupy the stores and offices by December 31st and the theatre will be ready by February 1st. The latter will have a seating capacity of one thousand and the equipment and decorations will be the latest pattern and high-grade. Mr. Obreshk is president of the Venus Theatre Company, which now is operating the Star theatre, at Whiting and the Venus and Lyric theatres at Gary.

COMEDIES — EDUCATIONALS — SCENICS

Short Subjects and Serials

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

"Robbin' 'Em Good" Nears Completion

HUNT STROMBERG is cutting and titling a burlesque of "Robin Hood" entitled "Robbing 'Em Good," starring Bull Montana which, according to Metro, the finishing work will be done in time to permit release within a few weeks. Results from the field convince Metro that Bull Montana is a comedian of permanent appeal. The putting forth of "Robbing 'Em Good" at a time when the entire fan world is watching for Douglas Fairbanks' appearance of "Robin Hood" is obviously of the utmost timely value. Its satire or burlesque is akin to the present literary practice of parodying best sellers, with the same nature of burlesque, applied to the screen.

Six Educationals Head Current Fox Series

The first six of the Fox Educational Entertainments releases are ready for booking, either in the series or one or more at a time. There are several other subjects in preparation, which are scheduled for release within a short period. However, the current six includes "Alligator and Farming," half reel devoted to showing the methods employed in raising alligators. "Thrills and Spills," a split reel covering winter sports; "Volcanoes of the World," one reel showing Mt. Vesuvius in an angry mood; "Water Sports," half reel offering the diversion of surf riding and aquatic sports; "A Story of Ice," a half reel depicting the industry of harvesting ice and "Ancient Rome," a full reel showing intimate glimpses of ancient historic land marks from an overhead angle.

Christie Comedy is Titled "Chop Suey"

The latest picture to be completed at the Christie studio in the new series of Christie Comedies for Educational release is "Chop Suey," featuring Dorothy Devore with George Stewart, and directed by Scott Sidney.

"Chop Suey" is laid in San Francisco's Chinatown, but oddly enough there isn't a real Chinese in the comedy. All the members of the cast are regular Christie actors, including, in addition to Miss Devore and Stewart, Lincoln Plumer, Kathryn Lewis and others, who wear their wigs and pigtails in Chinese fashion.

Pathe Names Releases for Nov. 5

List, Headed by "Our Gang" Comedy, Includes New Fable and Review

"OUR GANG," the third two-reeler in the Hal Roach Comedy series, heads the list of Pathe releases for Nov. 5. The first comedy of this series, "One Terrible Day," was followed by "The Fire Fighters," the action of both being a riot of mischief, reflected by the cast Boys and Girls—all the different brands from Angel Child to the backyard variety known as "Holy Terrors." Sunshine Sammy, Little Farina and "Roosevelt Pershing Smith," the tough three-year-old, are said to come out especially strong in "Our Gang."

In this program—which includes Pathe News Nos. 90 and 91, and Topics of the Day No. 45—the third episode of "Speed," with Charles Hutchison, is released with the chapter title of "Pious Pedro." At the end of the episode they are occupants of a "wild" freight car which plunges over a precipice into a deep river gorge.

The one-reel comedy called "Shine 'Em Up," presents Paul Parrott carrying on that humble enterprise amid all the difficulties which it seems possible for the bunch of "tough guys" to provide. It contains a sequence in the course of which the hero's line of scated customers get their feet mixed and are amazed to find themselves walking away with one boot black and the other white.

"His Only Father," the single reel Lloyd re-issue of this program, presents Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels.

The Aesop's Film Fable of this program is called "The Elephant's Trunk," which points the useful moral: "A friend in need is a friend indeed." There are two elephants, a playful pair who soak up whole lakes for the pleasure of seeing the other dive unsuspectingly into the mud. They have it their own way until Fido conspires with a mouse to do his worst. This settles the playful elephants. Fido is avenged for many insults, and Mr. Mouse gets back his stolen pants.

Pathe Review No. 180 presents Photographic Gems in which "the pearls of the mountains" are shown to be their lakes, in different atmospheres and degrees of light. "The Tale of a Tortoise" is a study of "Grandpop" at the New York Zoological Park—whose "ridges" show that he was born in 1622. "The Jungle Fast Mail" shows how natives dispatch messages in the heart of Africa, by land and water. "Fireless Heat" is a chemical demonstration.

Educat-r to Direct New Division

Noted Authority on Biblical Research Is Engaged to Cooperate With Exhibitors

ANNOUNCEMENT was made this week by Larry Weingarten, manager of sales and exploitation of Sacred Films, Inc., that the organization had inaugurated an educational division, which will function in connection with the presentation of picture programs in theatres, schools and churches. Since the Bible films produced by Sacred have been on the market, exhibitors have been endeavoring to match their programs to these films so they would maintain a balance. Consequently Dr. Edgar James Banks, authority on Biblical research, graduate of Harvard, professor at the University of Chicago, and Roberts College, Constantinople, will direct the work of the new department. Dr. Banks has likewise supervised the production of the fifteen Bible stories thus far produced by Sacred Films, Inc., and is working assiduously to gain the sympathy of his fellow educators in his work within the motion picture industry.

The Universities of Utah, Florida, Kansas and Southern California are already cooperating and Dr. Banks who has lectured before the student and faculty bodies of every educational institution of note in this country plans to have the entire support of the higher educational institutions in America.

Dr. Banks will make a tour of the country to visit exhibitors who are planning to institute educational departments in their theatres similar to that recently launched by Mr. Crandall in Washington.

"Four Orphans", Two Reel Comedy, Made

THE second of the "All-Star-Comedies," titled "The Four Orphans," which was made under the direction of Gregory LaCava, two-reeler, featuring Mary Anderson, Raymond McKee and Charles Murray, is complete. It is said to present even more hilarious comedy than "Faint Heart," first of the series of twelve two-reel comedies for W. W. Hodkinson release.

The story centers around the matrimonial ambitions of a young married couple, whose hopes of future happiness are based on expectations of inheriting "uncle's" fortune.

Upon looking over the second comedy, Producer Burr stated that he was satisfied that the series would rank highly among the better class of comedies being produced.

Foreign Concern Sells Centuries in Relays

E. J. Smith, managing director of the European Motion Picture Co., Ltd., which releases Century Comedies in England, is selling them in blocks of ten instead of the annual output of fifty-two. A copy of an advertising booklet he has just issued to exhibitors is called "The First Ten."

Those offered in Mr. Smith's attractive booklet are Baby Peggy in "The Little Rascal"; Brownie the Wonder Dog in "Sic 'Em, Brownie" and "Some Class"; Lee Moran in "Red Hot Rivals," "Three Weeks Off" and "Ten Seconds"; Harry Sweet in "Speed 'Em Up" and "Off His Beat"; Queenie the Almost Human Horse in "Horse Tears," and the Century Comedy Kids in "You and Me."

Fables Listed Among "Six Best Sellers"

According to publishers' statistics, Aesop's Fables are to be permanently listed among the "six best sellers." This includes sales in all civilized countries and translations in nearly all modern languages. But, so Pathe reports, the ancient Greek fabulist's fame is redoubled since "Aesop's Film Fables" reached the picture screen in the form of animated cartoons

This is on the authority of Fred Morgan, in his "Cartoonical Critique" column in the New York Sunday News, where "Aesop's Film Fables" appear among vaudeville headliners as one of the "Four Biggest Hits of the Week."

Lane Comedy Ready for October Release

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces Oct. 8 as release day for "The Pirate," two-reel comedy starring Lupino Lane.

The two-reeler is second of the series of Lane comedies being produced for William Fox. The first was "The Reporter." "The Pirate" is said to afford unusual laughs and many funny situations, giving the diminutive star ample opportunity to show his talent.

Two More Comedies Finished by Wilson

Ben Wilson has completed "Love Taps," second Monty Banks comedy of a series being produced for Federated. Also, the director announces the completion of his third Radio comedy entitled "He's Bugs on Bugs," for Federated distribution.

Universal Prepares For Holidays

Will Offer Special Facilities For Booking Yuletide Programs

ESPECIAL arrangements are being made by the Short Subjects Department of the Universal Sales force of high class comedies for showing during the holiday season, December 24 to January 2. Not only will the best Universal comedies of current release be made available for every exhibitor, but many comedies will be offered for showing which ordinarily would not be shown for many weeks.

"Past experience has proved that holiday programs should be light, with a general trend towards comedy," said Art. Schmidt, sales manager of the corporation. "In fact, many exhibitors have found that short subject programs have an unusual appeal during Christmas week because of the carefree state of mind of the average American and his reluctance to sit through anything heavy or pedantic, while the Yuletide spirit grips him.

"In order to help our exhibitor patrons take advantage of this condition, Universal is marshalling all possible comedy material for usage Christmas Week. Not only will extra prints be prepared and placed in the various Universal exchanges, but extra booking help will be placed in each exchange so there will be no booking mix-ups in rush of holiday comedy demands.

"As an added service to our exhibitor patrons, we are going to offer them the opportunity for pre-release booking on Universal and Century comedies. This will mean that the exhibitor will be assured of plenty of new, high class comedies for the week.

"Among the Century comedies to be available during the holiday season will be "Ginger Face," "Just Dogs," "Hello Judge," "True Blue," "Rookies," "Women First," "The Small Town Derby," "Running Wild," and "Pinched."

"Universal's one-reel comedies also offer an unusual selection. The series of Nery Ned comedies, being made by Neely Edwards and his co-worker Bert Roach, have established new one-reeler standards in the interest, our sales force finds. The new Lewis Sargent messenger boy comedies also have been highly successful as a lively reel for the short subjects part of the program.

"We are unable to state at this time the title of the various Century and Universal comedies to be offered pre-release during the holiday week. Many of them are now in the making."

De Haven to Have New Director

Henry Lehrman Will Pilot F.B.O. Star in Remainder of Series

HENRY LEHRMAN, director of screen comedies for the past twelve years, will pilot Carter DeHaven through the remaining six two-reelers which are to be made for release through the Film Booking Offices of America. Lehrman succeeds Mal St. Clair, who directed DeHaven in the first six F. B. O. comedies and who is now producing the "Fighting Blood" series of two-reel fight pictures for F. B. O.

P. A. Power's selection of Mr. St. Clair to direct H. C. Witwer's "Fighting Blood" pictures necessitated an immediate choice of a new director for DeHaven, and the services of Henry Lehrman were obtained.

The first of DeHaven's comedies under the direction of Mr. Lehrman has already been started. It is titled "The False Alarm," is a domestic comedy with Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven playing the leading roles.

The acquisition of Henry Lehrman by the DeHaven Company is a valuable one, states F. B. O. Among his biggest recent hits is "Reported Missing," while his experience in this field of production extends back to the days of the early Biograph, Imp and Keystone comedies.

DeHaven has six more comedies to produce for F. B. O. under his present contract. The first three of these comedies, "Their First Vacation," "Twin Husbands" and "Entertaining the Boss," have already been issued. These have been booked in many of the leading first run houses in the country and are consistently rising in favor, according to information received from F. B. O. branch managers.

"Ropin' Fool", Shown at N. Y. Cameo

Patrons and reviewers were drawn to the Cameo Theatre, New York, last week by a program containing two features of unusual and varied attractions. The first was Harold Lloyd's "Grandma's Boy" and the other presenting Will Rogers in his unique two-reeler, "The Ropin' Fool," the latter announced by Pathe for general release on October 29.

The Cameo Theatre program presented the other Pathe short subjects—the current Pathe News issue, an Aesop Film Fable and Topics of the Day.

"The Enchanted City" Booked by Grauman

Among first run bookings reported on Educational's Special, "The Enchanted City," by Warren A. Newcombe, was one for Grauman's Rialto Theatre in Los Angeles, which began its run at this big theatre on October 17th with "When Knighthood Was in Flower."

"Fire Fighters" Current F.B.O. Release Ready

"THE FIRE FIGHTER," Plum Center comedy which burlesques the exciting occurrence of a fire in a small town, is the third of a series produced by Paul Gerson Pictures Corporation of San Francisco. Dan Mason, veteran comedian of "Toonerville" fame, is seen as "Pop Tuttle," Chief of the Cloud Burst Hose Company, who, with his noble crew of volunteer firemen, answer the alarm fully uniformed and equipped, but, making the slight mistake of not learning the locality of the fire.

The Paul Gerson Company is now far in advance on the production of the series of "Pop Tuttle" comedies. To date seven have been completed, of which "The Fire Fighter" is third, directed by Robert Eddy for the F. B. O. program.

Pre-Release Committee Views "All at Sea"

Immediately upon receipt from the west Coast of "All at Sea," fifth of the Hall series which C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation will release to the State Right market, the film was given a special pre-release showing for a committee of territorial buyers.

This is important, according to C. B. C. in that this comedy was made as the result of a questionaire prepared and sent out for the purpose of finding out whether "action comedies" or "situation comedies" go over better with the public exhibitors. The returns proved eighty six per cent in favor of "action comedies."

Therefore, "All at Sea" was directed by Al Santell with the idea of rapid action, which it is said that he secured without sacrificing the humorous situations to any extent.

Family Films Bulletin Lists Educationals

"The First Flivver," the third release in the new series of Tony Sarg's Almanac for Educational release, heads the list of Family Films in the current Bulletin of the National Motion Picture League.

The Bulletin also lists the first and second issues of Educational's new screen magazine, The Graphic, as well as the latest issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel.

Standard of Pittsburgh Buys Westerns

Standard Film Exchange of Pittsburgh, an independent exchange headed by W. J. Weiland, has purchased the Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia rights to "The Lone Horseman" and "Western Justice," two new western productions on the Arrow releasing schedule.

Second Hamilton Comedy Made

"The Educator" Is Listed Among November Releases of Educational

LLOYD HAMILTON, whose current series of Hamilton Comedies was started with "The Speeder," a current Educational release, has completed his second picture in this new series.

Hamilton's new starring vehicle is called "The Educator," and is a comic portrayal of the experiences of a new teacher in the peaceful (?) town of Angelville.

The educator budded in Boston. With Lincoln as his great ideal, he started out to carry light to the ignorant, drawing a tough job.

Ruth Hiatt, who was Hamilton's leading lady in "The Speeder," again has the leading feminine role opposite, portraying the only angel in Angelville. "The Speeder" was Miss Hiatt's first comedy, this young lady being only recently out of high school.

Little Josephine Adair, who was given a start in pictures by Hamilton two years ago, and who has since been playing child roles in dramas, has a prominent part in "The Educator," which will be a November Educational release.

Demand Brings New Lee Kid Pictures

THE answer to the demand for the return of these youthful stars is the announcement that a series of Lee Kids pictures have been made ready by William Fox. One was released the 8th of October and there will be releases in November and December. The titles of the three pictures are "Double Trouble," "Town Terrors" and "The Wise Birds."

These screen comedies are two-reel versions of the Lee Kids' former five-reel pictures. The task of editing these two-reelers and supplying them with new and up-to-date subtitles has been intrusted to Ralph Spence, the well-known humorous writer, whose witty titles to the screen version of Mark Twain's "A Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court" did so much to preserve the spirit of the original story.

OLD SUBJECTS WANTED

The American Continental Film Assn. (Berlin) is seeking the Agency for good American Films. Old Subjects and films that have run their course can still earn a good revenue in Central Europe. Our Mr. Wadler is now in New York to effect arrangements.

" The Electric House "

(Buster Keaton Comedy-First National—Two Reels)

A BUSTER KEATON comedy is something to look forward to these days. So much ingenuity—so much originality does this sad-faced comedian put into his efforts that whenever one is shown it is easy to state that audiences are far more attracted to it than they are to the feature which carries the big spot in the program. " The Electric House " is charged with dynamic sparks which generate a large amount of humor. Keaton is a fellow who is ever in search of novelty. You never find him repetitious. This time he is not only a fun-maker but an ingenious inventor.

At the graduation exercises of a correspondence school he confuses his diploma with that of an electrical engineer and armed with it he qualifies for the job of equipping a house with the appliances which generate the " juice." He makes his task so complete that the house carries everything to make work easy. It is no light task, digging up new gags, but leave it to Keaton. The cook can put the dishes on a tiny train and the food is carried onto the dining room table. The dining room chairs are moved about by electricity and the vital current is back of an invention which washes and dries the dishes. The stairway beeomes an esealator and the bathtub receives its guest at the bedside and conveys him into the bathroom.

There are no hitches here. Keaton's inventions would make Edison look worried whether someone had stolen his stuff. There are few errors until the real electrician, with revenge in his heart, sneaks into the switchroom and jazzes up the wires. The eomedy keeps pace. Rest assured of that. After some extremely funny business Buster is finally fired by the boss. He beeomes so despondent he attempts to drown himself in the swimming pool. And this is the place for the daughter to push the lever which drains the pool and save her sweetheart's life. Buster and his wooden expression—Buster and his new tricks will give you a big treat here. The comedy is novel, bright and uproariously funny. —LAURENCE REID.

" The Elephant's Trunk "

(Aesop's Fable-Pathe—One Reel)

HERE we have two playful cartoon elephants who plan to soak up a whole lake for the enjoyment of seeing other would-be divers, shoot into a lake of mud. But Fido, the dog, another cartoon contribution, conspires with his friend mouse to frighten the huge animals into decline, resulting in Fido's satisfaction and the recovery of Mr. Mouse's stolen pants. In the end the homely adage " A Friend in Need Is a Friend Indeed " points the moral of the cartoon comedy.—LILLIAN GALE.

Scene from " The Educator," second of the new series of Lloyd Hamilton comedies for Educational.

" Our Gang "

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS is the third of the " Our Gang " series, and includes the entire ensemble of clever children, all of whom give splendid performances and keep clean, wholesome humor at the boiling point. In addition there are some more than intelligent animals before the camera, taking directions like trained artists in studios where feature productions are made. This one will appeal to every mother of a boy, small or otherwise, since there is a type representing a child from every kind of American home known to the census taker. A " bunch " of the boys at play, deeide to induee a dressed up and retieent appearing child to join them, planning to relieve him of his good elothes and in turn dress up a little colored friend, in need of covering. In the process all the white boy's blond curls are shorn. With these go his seeming bashfulness and he teaches thc " rough neek " boys to respect one of a " fine family." Incidentally, a three-year-old " tough guy " and a baby vamp, put the grown-up examples of the species to shame. Very amusing entertainment, one that will make the older heads reminiscent and delight children of every color and creed.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Gymnasium Jim "

(First National—Two Reels)

IN this one Billy Bevan fills two reels with a series of comie bits thinly strung together with a story that would be obviously impossible in anything exeept a motion picture comedy. After a train of wild episodes he enters a gymnasium to train, and it is the sequence which follows that gives the picture its name. His adventures in the gymnasium, especially those with the dummy which is used instead of a punching bag, develop some genuine laughs.—STUART GIBSON.

" Blazes "

(Mermaid-Educational—Two Reels)

SLAP-STICK comedy build around the struggles of a poverty stricken artist, reduced to having an over sized colored man pose as a model and an iron hearted landlady who insists upon collecting over due room rent. There is little plot, and few situations that have anything to do with what there is, but there is plenty of action a few comedy thrills and a well done street flood, embracing a number of amusing incidents. Only low comedy enthusiasts will find sufficient enjoyment in this to thoroughly entertain.—LILLIAN GALE.

" Shine 'Em Up "

(Pathe—One Reel)

AMONG men in different walks of life, one who has more than his share of trouble would seem to be the " boot black." In any event, " Shine 'Em Up " shows Paul Parrott enduring the difficulties of a prominent member of the " shine " industry, in company with a number of other " tough guys."

The most entertaining sequence is one in which the hero's line of seated eustomers get their feet mixed with the result of a mixture of colors applied to their respective shoes. There is considerable fun of the slap-stick variety.—LILLIAN GALE.

" The Moonlight Sonata "

(Prizma—Two Reels)

THERE is no need telling who wrote this magnificent opus which will endure forever. The name of Beethoven will go echoing down the corridors of time. Perhaps this exquisite composition is best rendered by a concert pianist, but after watehing the sentiment which inspired the master and notieing the perfect manner in which it is synchronized with the sonata, you marvel over it and admit to yourself that it is an ideal interpretation. Here is Prizma with its color seheme giving a truly artistie treat. It is an education. But it needs a big orchestra and a piano off stage to give it breadth and substanee.

The master is walking through the woods. He hears (his deafness has not manifested itself as yet) one of his compositions being played in a nearby house. So he enters and is surprised to see that a blind girl is at the piano. She gives him such inspiration that eoupled with the beams of moonlight which flood the room, starts him off on his divine improvisation. The girl's fancy roams. She sees with her mind and the whole world is colored with beauty and romance.

Some of the pictures here might well belong to an art gallery. It is so unusual—so artistie, so spiritual that it transports an audience. At least the Rivoli audience, New York, looked on enraptured. And the subject provides more food for thought than a dozen of our best little photoplays. Book this picture. But be sure to synchronize it perfectly with the score. And we'll dare your audience to walk out on it.—LAURENCE REID.

" Cured "

(Century—Two Reels)

IT'S a tremendous relief sometimes to see a comedy blessed not only by the absence of frankly vulgar slapstick but by a mercifully small number of human beings in the cast. Such a one is " Cured," for in it Queenie, the horse, is the star, and her supporting company is eomposed almost entirely of so-called lower animals. An unusual feature of the film is the fact that the creatures unfold the plot with an ease that makes it not at all apparent that their moves are direeted from off-scene. The picture is novel and amusing, and is interesting as well from the standpoint of anybody who wonders how animals can be trained to such a state of perfection.—STUART GIBSON.

In the Independent Field

Conducted by CHESTER J. SMITH

Barthelmess Feature Is Due Shortly

The Producers Security Corporation which is to handle the distribution of "Just a Song at Twilight," the Dick Barthelmess feature, announces the releasing arrangements being speeded up and it will soon be ready for the market.

This announcement is important in that the feature is to be distributed via the State Right Market. Independents are gradually securing better and bigger pictures and "Just a Song at Twilight" bids fair to be one of the real successes of the season, according to the producers.

Richard Barthelmess's support is strong. Evelyn Greeley, star of "Bull Dog Drummond," and Pedro de Cordoba are cast in important roles.

Producers Security will announce release date in a few days.

London F. B. O. Takes Over Warner Product

Gus S. Schlesinger, general manager of the Warner Brothers' foreign department, successfully negotiated with the F. B. O. of London, headed by Edward Hulton, prominent British newspaper owner, for the distribution of the entire series of six Warner pictures, it is announced.

The deal, according to report, was consummated on the strength of the Wesley Barry picture, "Rags to Riches," a print of which was taken abroad by Mr. Schlesinger. The five other pictures include "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost; "Brass," the Charles G. Norris novel of marriage and divorce; "Main Street," the novel by Sinclair Lewis; "Little Heroes of the Street," featuring Wesley Barry, and "Little Church Around the Corner," written by Olga Printzlau from the stage play of the same name by Marion Russell.

An unusual feature in connection with the negotiations is that for the first time in the hisory of foreign disribution the F. B. O. organization has taken over the six Warner attractions on a percentage arrangement.

Amalgamated Growing Rapidly

Announcement Made of Franchise Holders; Picture Half Completed

This week comes the announcement of the Amalgamated Exchanges of America, Inc., of the franchise holders in the newly formed Independent Company.

Greater New York, New York State and Northern New Jersey will be handled by Renowned Pictures, Inc., J. Bellman, New York City; Northern Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, Celebrated Players Film Corp., J. Lynch, Philadelphia, Pa.; Maryland, Delaware, District of Columbia, Virginia, Federated Film Exchanges of Baltimore, Inc., P. O'Letsky, Baltimore, Md.; North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, and Mississippi, Amalgamated - Savini Films, R. M. Savini, Atlanta, Ga.; California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian Islands, Progress Pictures, Inc., E. H. Emmick, San Francisco, Calif.; Iowa, Nebraska, Kansas and Western Missouri, Supreme Pictures Corp., Al Kahn, Kansas City, Mo.; Oregon, Washington, Colorado, Montana, Idaho, Wyoming, Utah, New Mexico and Alaska, Greater Features, Inc., Lennon and Sheffield, Seattle, Wash.; Dominion of Canada and Newfoundland, Chas. Stephenson Attractions, Ltd., Chas. Stephenson, Toronto, Canada; Australasia, Selected Super Films, Ltd., Chambers and Gurney, Sydney, Australia.

The company is half finished with its initial production, "The Madonna in Chains," at its New Rochelle studio and the final scenes will be finished next week.

It is apparently the endeavor of the newly formed company to make their first production as spectacular as possible as seen last week at the studio when Harry Grossman called over four hundred people on the set for the making of a coronation scene.

Portraying the principal roles of the production are E. K. Lincoln, Martha Mansfield, Mrs. Rodolph Valentino and W. H. Tecker.

William P. Burt, formerly with Pearl White, is handling the direction under the personal supervision of Harry Grossman.

The picture will be ready for its final screening by the end of November and will be released to the franchise holders of the company December first.

"Secrets of Paris" Sales Jump

Premiere at Biltmore Brings Favorable Criticism For Burr-Bennett Picture

THE impetus to the sales on "Secrets of Paris," the C. C. Burr-Whitman Bennett version of Eugene Sue's "Mysteries of Paris" after it's premiere showing last Wednesday evening at the Biltmore Hotel, was in the eyes of its producers a tribute to this 1eature production with its splendid cast of virile story.

Previous to its showing C. C. Burr had sold about eighty per cent of all American and foreign rights to this big feature, due primarily to the confidence leading exchange men throughout the country place in Burr's products; while the line-up of the strong cast, which included Lew Cody, Gladys Hulette, Montague Love, Dolores Casinelli. Rose Coghlan, William Collier, Jr., J. Barney Sherry, Effie Shannon, Bradley Barker, Jane Thomas, Walter James and Harry Sothern, also aided materially in the sale before the production was half completed.

Almost immediately after the showing and coincident with the published reviews in the various trade papers last week a batch of congratulatory telegrams and letters streamed into the Mastodon Film Offices.

According to C. C. Burr pending negotiations on the remaining unsold territories should be closed within the next fortnight. Prints are now being rushed to all exchanges from the Mastodon Film offices in order that release dates to first run theatres may be fulfilled without any delay.

Griever Will Release C.B.C. Specials

Si Griever, head of Griever Productions of Chicago, secured rights this week to the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series of six specials for release in this territory. Griever Productions is one of the most important State Right organizations in the Middle West, and the fact that the series, of which "More to be Pitied," is the first, will be released through them to Indiana and Northern Illinois, is already being received with enthusiasm by exhibitors of that territory.

New Boston Exchange Holds Opening

THE Franklin Film Company, Boston, handling the entire series of Warner Brothers' seven productions, was opened last week to a large and enthusiastic group of New England theatre owners, according to Sam E. Morris, an executive of the Warner organization.

Mr. Morris made a special trip to Boston to attend the opening. Hundreds of the most prominent exhibitors in the New England territory attended, and the Warner Brothers float preceded by a brass band started festivities in an auspicious manner.

A telegram from the Franklin Film Company to the Warner offices, commenting on the opening, reads as follows: "Greatest and most successful opening in history of New England film circles. Hundreds of exhibitors including those most prominent in territory in attendance. Just booked Loew's State Theatre on 'Rags to Riches.' They are enthusiastic about the picture."

Will Nigh Starts Work on Second Feature

The director of "Notoriety," the eight-reel society drama being disposed of by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, has already begun on his second feature for that independent organization. The script, as usual, was written by Will Nigh, who has written every picture that he has produced. It is expected that work at the studio will begin next week. The cast, which is planned to be an all star line-up, is now being assembled and reservations in an Eastern studio have already been made. The title is "Easy Goin'," but this will be dropped very shortly and the final title substituted.

"Chicago Sal" Is Being Cut and Titled

Word reached Eastern Manager Irving Lesser of Principal Pictures Corp. this week from Los Angeles to the effect that the Irving Cummings special, "Chicago Sal," starring Alice Lake and Milton Sills, who are supported by a distinguished cast of players, had been completed. Work on cutting and titling this production is now well under way and it is expected that this latest feature will be ready for general release some time next month.

N. Y. Theatre Rented for "Success" Scenes

The Lexington theatre, which boasts one of the largest stages of any playhouse in New York, has been engaged by Murray Garsson for the staging of a number of big scenes from "Success" which Ralph Ince is making.

The action of the story calls for the filming of certain big scenes from "King Lear" and in order that these adhere faithfully to the original, special facilities were required, hence the renting of the Lexington.

Fifth of Hoxie Westerns Are Under Way

Anthony J. Xydias announces the fifth of the series of eight western Jack Hoxie starring vehicles is now being started by the Sunset Productions.

Robert Bradbury, former director for Art Acord and Tom Santchi has been signed by Mr. Xydias to direct this production.

Mr. Xydias states that the remaining four of the series of eight Hoxie productions will be made in the near future. The first four released to date are: "Barb'-Wire," "The Crow's Nest," "Riders of the Law" and "Back Fire."

Elinor Glyn Story in Production

Production on "The World's A Stage," the Elinor Glynn Production, which Principal Pictures Company will release through leading exchanges, has been started, according to a telegram received this week by Eastern Manager Irving Lesser. Dorothy Phillips, will be starred in this production, which already has aroused considerable interest in the independent market.

An all-star cast has been engaged, including Kenneth Harlan and Bruce McRae. Colin Campbell is directing.

Canadian Concern Buys Arrow Comedies

Arrow Film Corporation reports the sale to Canadian Releasing Corporation of twenty-six Arrow Comedies. In these are included Speed Comedies, XLNT Comedies, Cruelywed Comedies and Muriel Ostriche Comedies.

Canadian Releasing Corporation maintains offices in Toronto, Montreal and St. John, which insures wide distribution for the product named above.

Coast Plant Distributes Product

Principal Pictures Corporation Adds Eight Pictures to Super-Features Announced

THE Principal Pictures Corporation will produce and distribute eight super-features during the coming year instead of seven, as was first announced. The productions will be filmed, developed and handled in their entirety in Los Angeles, marking the first attempt of Los Angeles to compete with New York as a distributing centre for motion pictures.

The entire sales force of the Principal Pictures Corporation will work out of Los Angeles, touring the United States and Canada. Irving Lesser, general manager of the organization, and Mike Rosenberg, secretary, have just completed a big deal in New York with the Eastern exchange managers to handle the eight big productions, the first being Elinor Glyn's romance of Hollywood, "The World's a Stage," directed by Colin Campbell, and starring Dorothy Phillips, with an all star cast including Kenneth Harlan, Bruce McRae, Otis Harlan and others.

The second feature will be Irving Cummings' production of "Chicago Sal," by Harvey Gates, with an all star cast including Alice Lake, Milton Sills, Ralph Lewis, Gertrude Claire, Richard Headrick and Ben Hewlitt.

The third production will be Irving Cummings' production of "The Last Days of Pompeii." Lesser is now arranging for five additional productions, starring women of international reputation to be filmed in widely read plays.

For two years Irving Lesser and Mike Rosenberg have worked against odds endeavoring to prove that Los Angeles is the logical distributing centre of motion pictures, as well as the producing capital, and at last they have announced that their efforts have been crowned with success.

C.B.C. Production Is Completed

"Only A Shopgirl" Being Edited and Titled for Early Showing in New York

ACTUAL production was completed this week on "Only a Shopgirl," the picture to follow "More to be Pitied" on the C.B.C. Film Sales Corporation series.

According to a wire received by Jack Cohn at the New York Distributing Offices, from Director Edward LeSaint, the final scenes of the feature were shot early this week and the attention of the production forces is now being focused on getting the picture edited and titled so that it may be sent East for showing and distribution.

Director LeSaint said over the long distance telephone this week that he and producer Harry Cohn were highly enthusiastic over this second feature and that the editing staff has expressed the opinion that it was even better in every way than the first picture, "More to be Pitied."

He said that the players, Estelle Taylor, Mae Busch, Wallace Beery, Tully Marshall, Claire DuBrey, James Morrison, William Scott, Willard Louis and Josephine Adair had worked together like a happy family.

Special attention is being given to the editing and titling of this feature and the staff at the Coast studios has been greatly augmented for this purpose. One of the things to which close attention was given during the shooting of this picture was the taking of good still pictures which would serve as the basis of attractive paper and lobby displays, and be used to the best advantage for publicity and exploitation purposes. Producer Cohn, realizing the importance of this, himself supervised the making of the still pictures.

David M. Hartford, president of the M. P. D. A. of Los Angeles, who has purchased "Bulldog Carney" for picturization

Will Morrissey to Direct Billy West

Billy West has completed arrangements whereby Will Morrisey, former actor, author and producer of the legitimate stage, will take up directorial reigns of the new Billy West series of comedies.

The new director has had a varied experience on both the screen and stage, and the comedian declares his satisfaction in having secured Morrissey's services as supervising director of the Billy West Comedies to be released through Smart Films, Inc.

Buster Keaton Comedy Released October 16

Buster Keaton in "The Electric House," was the First National Big Time Comedy scheduled for release during the week of Oct. 16.

This was produced by Joseph M. Schenck and directed by Eddie Cline. The story is by Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline.

Simeral Reports Booking on "Night Life"

H. C. Simeral, who just closed a tremendous contract with Arrow Film Corporation, under the terms of which H. C. Simeral Co., Inc., will distribute a large majority of Arrow's productions in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia, reports his first big booking on "Night Life in Hollywood," the great new Arrow special.

"Night Life" will play the Rialto Theatre, Erie, Pennsylvania, for an entire week beginning November 5th and Mr. Simeral and his associates are now working out with the management of the theatre an intensive advertising and exploitation campaign for the production.

"Mr. Bingle" Campaign Sheet Completed

The Producers Security Corporation's Publicity Staff this week completed the campaign and exploitation sheet for "Mr. Bingle," the latest Maclyn Arbuckle release.

"Mr. Bingle" is one of George Barr McCutcheon's most widely read stories.

The characterization is claimed to be Maclyn Arbuckle's greatest work, which is saying a lot in view of his excellent work in "The Prodigal Judge," "Mr. Potter of Texas," "Square Phin," "Welcome to Our City," and other features.

The Producers Security Corporation has placed "Mr. Bingle" on the State Rights Market pursuant to its plan to give the Independent Market a powerful program of features.

Accessories Are Selling "Notoriety"

The buyers of L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North's first Will Nigh production, "Notoriety," are selling the picture to their exhibitors by the accessories and novelties that have been prepared by the producers, according to the latter.

The state-right buyers realize as well as the producers themselves that picture patrons see the posters, heralds and throw-aways on a picture before they see the picture. That is why they are sending in heavy advance orders on all the advertising and exploitation material accompanying the picture.

Beauty Contest Winner Starts with Arrow

Edria Fisk, one of the winners of the Atlantic City Beauty Contest, who was engaged by Arrow Film Corporation for a part in their new Curwood special, began work last Wednesday in the Peerless Studios, Fort Lee, New Jersey, under the direction of Dell Henderson.

"Jacqueline" is an original James Oliver Curwood story and numbers in its cast such players as Lew Cody, Marguerite Courtot, Paul Panzer, J. Barney Sherry, Edmund Breeze, Kate Bruce, Sheldon Lewis, Effie Shannon, and Rose Coghlan.

"Finger Prints" Offers Exploitation Chance

"Finger Prints," the first of the series of six features to be issued by Hyperion Pictures Corporation for independent exchanges, has been hailed as a picture with an unusual exploitation title, according to reports received at the home office.

The Hyperion exploitation department has mapped out over a score of practical, inexpensive, effective stunts which they declare are sure to help the production score. The idea of the State Chamber of Commerce to fingerprint every person, is recommended to the exhibitor, who will be helped to fingerprint every patron, each one retaining his "print" as a souvenir and means of identification.

Equity Closes Deal for Western Pennsylvania

Equity Picture Corporation announces the signing of contracts whereby their "What's Wrong with the Women"? will be distributed throughout Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia by the Supreme Photoplays Productions, Pittsburgh, Pa. Arrangements have already been negotiated for first run bookings in Pittsburgh, Erie, Wheeling, McKeesport, Johnstown and other important cities in this territory.

The deal was closed between John N. Weber, manager of Equity Pictures Corporation and Harry F. Grelle, representative for Supreme Photoplays Productions.

Blind Pianist Writes Picture Music

A song called "More to be Pitied" has been written by Guy Hunter, the blind baritone and pianist, and set to music by him.

Mr. Hunter, hearing that the popular stage success was being made into a photoplay, asked to have the continuity read to him, and used it as the basis of his song.

It is considered by everyone who has heard it to have the earmarks of a real popular hit, and the Apollo Exchange, which holds New York rights to this first of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series of six pictures, has made arrangements with Mr. Hunter whereby his services are available to exhibitors who book the picture. Mr. Hunter plays his own accompaniment.

Newspaperman Added to Publicity Staff

Increased activity in their publicity and exploitation departments was noted this week in the Weshner-Davidson Agency when this agency announced that Jesse L. Platt, formerly a newspaperman on the Boston American had been added to their staff.

Mr. Platt will confine his efforts to trade and newspaper publicity for the Weshner-Davidson clientele.

Supervision of all publicity will continue under the direction of D. E. Weshner.

Warners Not To Sell In Groups

Announcement is Made That Exhibitors May Purchase Any or All of Product

A SIGNIFICANT feature in connection with the forthcoming series of the Warner Brothers' seven productions, following the unsolicited praise from exhibitors and an unusual number of first run bookings on "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry, was revealed by Harry M. Warner just prior to his departure for the west coast studios.

Mr. Warner declared that the seven productions will not be sold in group to exhibitors, that each and every picture will be sold on its merit. In following this policy, Mr. Warner said, that it is the reverse of the plan pursued by the other organizations in the industry.

"We have received many reports from the exchanges handling our productions," said Mr. Warner, "to the effect that exhibitors are desirous of contracting for the entire seven pictures we will release this season. After considering the many aspects of the situation, we finally concluded that each picture will be sold on its merit.

"We do not believe in throwing all our productions on the exhibitors just because they happen to be eager for one. In other words, strange as this may seem, we want to safeguard an exhibitor's interests. And here's the reason:

"For a long time it has been the policy of other organizations to sell their productions in groups of fifteen, twenty-five or forty pictures, according to a formularized schedule. This means that exhibitors in being forced to buy the entire series acquire pictures that are far below the standard of a few big productions. And they are compelled to pay first-run prices for a mediocre picture fit only for a third-run house.

"We are against this plan. We believe that exhibitors should first realize the box-office value of each one of our pictures before booking it. If they don't want any particular production, we will not hold a club over their heads and say: 'This is decidedly wrong,' and we will not knowingly allow any exchange to foist the group series plan in part or in whole upon theatre owners. We are eager to help exhibitors, because their success means our success, and in order to do it properly each picture will be sold on its own merits."

Independents Buy "Notoriety"

Six Territories Disposed of on First Week; Nigh Production for Weber & North

SIX state-right buyers have bought the rights on Will Nigh's first production for L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North, "Notority," within the first week of its completion. This makes the fastest selling time of any production Will Nigh has made.

All of the buyers whose names follow were willing to take "Notoriety" sight-unseen, but Sam Sax, sales manager for Weber & North, insisted on showing the picture before he would accept any cash advance. It is admitted that much more territory could have been sold within the same week if an extra number of prints were available. The buyers are all recognized as leading exchangemen in their respective territories and keen judges of market value.

The Apollo Exchange bought "Notoriety" and the three more Will Nigh features to follow for the New York territory. Sam Grand of the Federated Feature Film Co., Boston, purchased the Will Nigh series for the New England States. "Notoriety" is to be his leading feature number and as such was given the exclusive advance showing at the Copley Plaza Hotel recently. "Notoriety" and the Will Nigh series were sold for Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Ben Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia. A special campaign is being staged there to co-operate with exhibitors who have already booked the picture for an early first-run.

The Supreme Film Co. of Los Angeles, represented by George Montgomery, constitutes the fourth buyer of the Will Nigh list. The territory sold covers California, Arizona, Nevada and the Hawaiian Islands.

The Columbia Film Service of Pittsburgh makes the fifth buyer of the series. It operates in Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Miss M. Rosenfield, acting for James Alexander, J. E. Davis and Edward Lebby, owners of the exchange, negotiated the purchase. The sixth territory sold on the series is the Upper New York State Belt. The Grand North Exchange of Albany and Buffalo bought the rights for that district.

Rapid Progress Made on "Way Down South"

Rapid progress in the filming of "Way Down South," which one of the Murray W. Garsson companies is making in and around Albany, Georgia, is reported by Harry Diggs, author of the story.

But one untoward incident has marked the company's progress. U. S. Commissioner George F. White of Albany, while driving Director Roy Sheldon, Harry Diggs, and Norma Lee and Ruth Page, two of the players, back from location, became blinded by the lights of an approaching car and drove his car almost over a high embankment. The machine stopped with the front part suspended in space. The occupants fortunately escaped with a slight shaking up.

First Belasco Picture Is Completed

George H. Davis, Eastern representative of Edward Belasco, president of Belasco Productions, Inc., announces that "Her Price," the first of a series of productions to be made by this newly organized company, has been completed and is now in the cutting room.

It is expected that the picture will be released in a short time. Already important plans are said to be under way whereby the picture will reach the public in an overwhelmingly big way.

Every scene in the picture was personally supervised by Mr. Belasco, with Dallas M. Fitzgerald doing the actual directing. Mr. Fitzgerald has been retained to direct the entire Belasco output.

"Lena Rivers' for State Rights Release

General Manager E. Marks Behrman, of Smart Films, Inc., has made arrangements to release on the state right market, the picture "Lena Rivers," the love story from the pen of Mary J. Holmes.

M. Welsh of Welsh Brothers, has purchased the rights for all of New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Washington, and will road-show the picture with a circus ballyhoo.

A. Johnny Mack, Territorial Sales Manager of Smart Films, Inc., is busy closing territory on "Lena Rivers," and reports that the independent buyers are anxious to buy this picture for their respective territory.

New Management for Charlotte Exchange

Planning an active campaign for the distribution of Second National Pictures Corporation releases in North and South Carolina, the Continental Pictures Corporation of Charlotte, N. C. under new management, has changed its designation to Second National Film Exchange, with H. Van Matie as its manager.

Murray W. Garsson, President of Murray W. Garsson, Inc., who, with a company in New York producing a screen version of the stage hit "Success" under Ralph Ince's direction, and a company in Georgia making "Way Down South," has entered the front rank of producers

Stage Stars Sees Doug's Latest Picture

PROMINENT members of the theatrical profession playing in Chicago paid their respects to their former associate of the stage, Douglas Fairbanks, which they attended a matinee performance of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at Cohan's Grand Opera House, Chicago. The audience at this performance disclosed one of the most brilliant assemblage of dramatic celebrities ever attending any showing of a motion picture. Among them were: Frank Bacon, star of "Lightnin'," George Arliss, star in "The Green Goddess," Pauline Lord, playing in "Anna Christie," John Drew and Mrs. Leslie Carter of "The Circle," and leading players of "Bombo," "The Cat and the Canary," "The Perfect Fool," "Six Cylinder Love" and other theatrical successes.

Exhibitors Praise Rex Ingram Picture

When Rex Ingram's photoplay, "The Prisoner of Zenda," founded upon Anthony Hope's famous novel, was seen upon the screen of the Howe and Merrill house in Riverside, Cal., Mr. A. Howe wired thanks to William E. Atkinson, general manager of Metro. He said:

"For the first time in our long experience, Monday's receipts exceeded Sunday's."

Almost coincidentally came the following telgram from E. A. Phillips, manager of the Garrick theatre, Fargo, N. D.:

"'Prisoner of Zenda' absolutely one of the best pictures that has ever played the Garrick theatre. Wonderful directing with a perfect cast. Nothing but praise, everybody satisfied. Played to good business against stiff opposition."

This Rex Ingram production for Metro was adapted by Mary O'Hara. Edward Rose dramatized the novel. Included in the cast are Alice Terry, Ramon Novarro, Barbara LaMarr, Robert Edeson, Edward Connelly, Malcolm McGregor, Lewis Stone and Stuart Holmes.

Keaton Wins Honors at N. Y. Rivoli

Buster Keaton in "My Wife's Relations," a First National Attraction, captured honors at the Rivoli Theatre, New York, this week.

"Once more the comedy captures the programme." wrote the critic of the New York Times, in a lengthy lead dealing with "My Wife's Relations."

Universal Corrals Star Writers

Recent Reorganization Brings Literary Luminaries Together to Prepare Product

THE recently completed reorganization of the Universal City Scenario Department, sets a new mark for this company in gathering together a larger and better-known group of literary lights than has ever before been corraled under the "U" banner.

Among the well-knowns now stepping on the accelerators of their twin-six Remingtons and Underwoods are Raymond L. Schrock, George Randolph Chester, George Bronson Howard and Perley Poore Sheehan.

Charles Kenyon stepped into the limelight years ago with sketches for the stage and, later, full-length plays. One of his dramatic pieces, "Kindling," has recently been judged by the Drama League of America as one of the best five American dramas ever written. Kenyon left the stage and turned his attention to motion picture writing with immediate success. His screen efforts have been classed among the leading film classics. He is now a supervisor and an active writer at Universal City. His latest scenarios are "Bitter Sweet," based on William Dudley Pelley's story and starring Lon Chaney, and "The Power of a Lie," now being directed by George Archainbaud at Universal City.

George Randolph Chester tested the public's desires at the high register point with the "Get-Rich-Quick Wallingford" stories. At the height of his success in the magazine field he was led to cast his lot with the screen, and contributed to the new art several original stories and continuities of his own plots.

George Bronson Howard wrote so many thrillers for both screen and magazines a few years ago that he came to be regarded as a master of dramatic punch. He is writing both originals and scenarios at Universal City today.

Perley Poore Sheehan's success as a novelist, like that of Chester, preceded his recognition in picture-land by several years.

Raymond L. Schrock, newly-appointed scenario editor at Universal City, needs no introduction. His literary skill and executive talent has done much to add to the prestige and eminence of Universal.

Many Tieups for "Lorna Doone"

Numerous Exploitation Facilities Are Assured for Thomas H. Ince Production

FOR exhibitors who play First National's forthcoming Thomas H. Ince production "Lorna Doone," unprecedented exploitation facilities, rivalling the exploitation tie up of "Molly O" will be available as the result of arrangements completed with manufacturers and national distributors by the Thomas H. Ince offices, according to that office.

Thousands of dealers, located in every city and town of the United States, will be in a position to cooperate with the theatres presenting "Lorna Doone."

From these sources more than a dozen campaigns will be initiated to facilitate exploitation on the picture and give exhibitors every assistance in arousing public interest through the advantages offered by retail cooperation. Books, songs, jewelry, shoes, articles of feminine apparel and groceries are included in the list of wares that will participate in this drive, to popularize the picture through the wide distribution of "Lorna Doone" products. As the result of arrangements completed in New York, every campaign is being timed to coincide with the release of the picture and its subsequent showings in different parts of the country.

With the inspiration of the "greatest love story ever written" turned into an exceptional film, the Milton-Bradley Co., of Springfield, Mass., have published the Madge Bellamy edition of "Lorna Doone." The edition is a credit to the publishing craft, handsomely illustrated, many of the pictures being in four covers, with a cover front of Madge Bellamy. The books are assured of distribution in the most reputable bookstores in every part of America and Canada. Their distribution will be accompanied by an advertising campaign that will give full credit to the Maurice Tourneur production.

Under the brand name of "Lorna Doone" a popular shortbread has been marketed for some time by the National Biscuit Co., and this will be popularized and advertised in a strenuous campaign that will accompany the release of the picture.

The theme of "Lorna Doone" forms the basis for the "Lorna Doone Ballad" which is being published.

A line of "Lorna Doone" pearls, bracelets, sautoirs and earrings will be distributed.

"Lorna Doone" hats are being put on the market. This will be a sport hat in several colors at popular prices.

Hold Trade Showings on "Oliver Twist"

TRADE showings of Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist," a Sol Lesser production, are being held throughout the country under the auspices of First National, which is releasing the "Big Time" picture.

The showings, which are for exhibitors and their friends, are taking place on an elaborate scale. The first one was held in Boston on Oct. 18 and was under the supervision of F. M. Brockell, supervisor of First National Exchanges, and T. B. Spry, manager of First National's Boston Exchange. Reports from Boston were that the exhibitors were enthusiastic over the picture and that many sales were made immediately after the showing.

Other showings held under the supervision of First National Branch Managers were: Buffalo, Cleveland, Detroit and Chicago.

First "Fighting Blood" Episode Completed

Final scenes of the first episode of the "Fighting Blood," series of two-reel fight pictures, adapted from the stories of H. C. Witwer, were filmed this week, according to reports received at the F. B. O. Home Office. The pictures are being made at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles under the direction of Mal St. Clair. There will be twelve episodes in this series, each of which will show one smashing ring battle.

P. A. Powers will feature George O'Hara in "Gale Galen," the typical American boy who enters the prize ring to rise to fame and fortune. O'Hara started his screen career with Mack Sennett and scored a big hit in "Love, Honor and Behave." The leading lady will be played by Clara Horton, and other prominent in the cast will be Wm. Courtwright, Mabel Van Buren, Arthur Rankin, M. E. Ryan, Ena Gregory, Kit Guard and Al Cooke.

Rupert Hughes Finishes "Souls For Sale"

Rupert Hughes has completed the screen version for his next picture for Goldwyn, "Souls for Sale," based upon his recently published novel of life among the motion picture players' colony at Hollywood. He will direct, edit and title it himself.

Two other Hughes pictures, "The Bitterness of Sweets" and "Gimme," already photographed, are in the final stages of editing and titling.

Pathe Sales Head Sees Record Business

RETURNING last week from Cleveland and a tour of key cities in that district, Edgar O. Brooks, Pathe Serial Sales Manager, reports record business assured for this Fall.

"Throughout this district," said Mr. Brooks, "I found the immediate prospects for Pathe serials outstripping our optimistic expectations. Conditions were as satisfactory as I had found them to be in the Eastern District. This included all current Pathe-serials.

"Forthcoming productions are eagerly awaited, and I noted that most of the theatre owners and managers whom I interviewed were particularly desirous of information about 'Plunder,' the new Pearl White production which is now approaching completion."

Johnny Walker to Have Big Production

More than five hundred persons and two hundred horsemen will be seen in the climax scenes of "Captain Fly-By-Night," Johnnie Walker's starring production now being produced by the R-C Studios in Los Angeles. "Captain Fly-By-Night," will be the first production starring Walker under his recent contract with Mr. P. A. Powers, for Film Booking Office's release.

Johnston McCulley, author of "The Mark of Zorro," wrote this story especially for Walker. It is a tale of Southern California in those romantic days when it was still under Spanish rule, and allows much picturesque costuming and colorful action.

William K. Howard is directing Walker. The leading feminine role is played by Shannon Day and the principal supporting players include Francis McDonald, Eddie Gribbon Victory Bateman, James McElhern, Charles Stevens, Ashley Cooper, Bert Wheeler, Fred Kelsey and others.

"East Is West" Scores in Test Runs"

Constance Talmadge in "East is West," a First National Attraction, is scoring a tremendous success in Test runs throughout the country, according to reports being sent the First National officers by exhibitors. The test runs system is a method adopted by First National for determining the exhibition value of a Big Time picture. Showings are held in key centers, and on the basis of the business done in these centers the amount that the picture is expected to gross in the United States is determined.

One of the first of these runs was held at the Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Iowa. The following report on it was received at the offices of First National:

"'East is West' opened Des Moines theatre with holdout at seven o'clock. Lockout as early as this has not occurred in this theatre during any previous engagement this year."

N. Y. Likes "Tailor Made Man"

Reviewers Unanimous in Commendation of Charles Ray's Latest Effort

CAPACITY audiences and spontaneous applause with generous and general approval by the theatre-going public and newspaper reviewers was meted out to Charles Ray and his latest photoplay feature, "A Tailor Made Man," when this United Artists release was given its first New York showing at the Strand theatre last week.

"This is Charles Ray's most ambitious effort," said the critic for the Herald, "and it gives satisfactory evidence of the pains that have been expended on its production."

"When Charles Ray is really acting, he can mean more and make a scene mean more than almost any screen performer you can name," said the reviewer for the Times, "and he is all in and for his part several times in 'A Tailor Made Man.'"

"In 'A Tailor Made Man,' Mr. Ray fulfills his promise and goes further," said the critic for the Daily News. "Between himself and his director, Mr. DeGrasse, the resulting picture has elements which classes it, in our estimation, as one of the best of the year."

"Mr. Ray has not lost one atom of that pathetic charm which won for him the hearts of all theatre-goers, and he plays John Paul Bart with all the naive whimsicality which belongs to that character," wrote Harriette Underhill in the Tribune.

"Charles Ray, one of our favorite screenites could not be improved upon in the role of John Paul Bart, the leading character," said Don Allen in the Evening World.

"Ray is once more a delight to the eyes," said the Sun's reviewer, "as he forges ahead in 'A Tailor Made Man.' The story itself has been speeded up by the introduction of a whirlwind chase over and under freight cars and docks and it gives Ray above all a chance to show that he still keeps his finger on the pulse of dramatic art."

Jane Novak Picture Is Completed

F. B. O. Announces Lavish Production For Popular Story by Marie Corelli

HERALDED as the greatest production in which Jane Novak has ever appeared, "Thelma," Chester Bennett's production of Marie Corelli's novel of the same name, has been completed at the R-C Studios in Los Angeles for release through the Film Booking Offices of America.

"Thelma" was first published fifteen years ago and immediately brought its author into world-wide prominence. It remained for many years among the best sellers, and today enjoys thousands of readers.

Realizing the popularity of the story and the value of the drama, Mr. Bennett immediately made plans to produce "Thelma" on the most lavish scale. The story opens in a small Norwegian village, and to obtain the proper results an entire village extending for several blocks, was especially built. It was constructed near the Pacific Ocean, several miles north of Santa Monica, where the scenes strongly resemble that of Norway. Boats of special Norwegian design were also built for the ocean scenes of the production.

"Thelma" will also give Miss Novak an opportunity to wear many beautiful gowns before the camera, a distinct change from the outdoor clothes in which she has heretofore appeared in many dramas of the Northwest.

Miss Novak is supported in "Thelma" by Vernon Steel, June Elvidge, Bert Sprotte, Barbara Tennant, Wedgewood Noel, Peter Burke, Harvey Clark, Jack Rollens, Gordon Mullen and Harry Londsdale. "Thelma" has been scheduled for early release through the Film Booking Offices of America, and will be issued by that company with exploitation and advertising aids worthy of the production.

"Broadway Rose" Draws Big

Tiffany Production Starring Mae Murray Wins Approval of Coast Critics

BIGGER crowds than have ever thronged the doors of Loew's State theatre in Los Angeles since this playhouse adopted a policy of special photoplays only, were present each day of the run of Mae Murray in "Broadway Rose," according to the Metro office

The newspaper accounts all commented favorably on the excellence of the picture. A few extracts from the newspaper notices follow:

"There's one thing about Mae Murray. She gives the public what it wants from her, and the public is so extremely grateful that it stands in long lines to see her pictures. This week at Loew's State is no exception. Her 'Broadway Rose' is drawing huge crowds."—The Los Angeles Examiner.

"Throbbing with the life of New York's Broadway and built on a background filled full of the gaiety of the theatrical world, 'Broadway Rose,' a fragrant contribution to the screen's 1922 season, is being well received this week at Loew's State theatre, where it is having its premiere showing in keeping with the house's new policy."—The Los Angeles Herald.

"The cyclonic Murray personality, with its whimsical pathos, its subtle humor and its dynamic vivacity . . . a picture that becomes exceedingly popular."—Los Angeles Express.

Extra N. Y. Performances for "Knighthood"

AS a result of the remarkable success scored by "When Knighthood Was in Flower," starring Marion Davies, Cosmopolitan Productions, which created the wonderful picturization of Charles Major's famous story, this week inaugurated a new policy of three performances a day at the Criterion Theatre, New York, where "Knighthood" is entering upon its seventh capacity week.

Meantime the success of "Knighthood" has been so great in Chicago, Los Angeles and in Washington, as well as in London, where it has been hailed by royalty and nobility as a classic in photoplay productions, that Cosmopolitan is planning for the next few weeks a series of new openings that will bring the super picture into contact with film fans in all parts of the country. According to present arrangements, "Knighthood," before Thanksgiving Day, will be unreeling its manifold thrills and beauties in a dozen cities of the United States.

Practical Press Book for "Shadows"

Practical in contents and arrangement is the description most suitable to the new campaign book just issued by the Al Lichtman Corporation for the Tom Forman production titled "Shadows." Twenty of its twenty-four pages are perforated along the inside margin so as to permit of ready extraction from the rest of the book. These twenty pages are likewise printed on only one side so that clippings may be made without destroying any copy on the reverse side.

Every phase of publicity, advertising, and exploitation is provided for in the subject-matter. Readers, catch lines, interesting stories concerning the players and the production, photographs of the cast members and of striking moments from the picture—all are included and in a form that permits of their ready use. In addition there are practical suggestions for effective exploitation stunts, a cue to special music score, a list of mailing suggestions, and a guide to the numerous accessories available for the presentation of the picture to the theatre's patrons.

Penn Writes Song Tie-Up for "The Storm"

Arthur A. Penn, noted song writer, has written a song tie-up for "The Storm," the Universal-Jewel picture starring House Peters, supported by Virginia Valli. Penn's song is entitled "You Know How 'Tis," and is taken from the catch phrase used by the little Canadian girl, Manette, in the picture. This role was taken by Miss Valli and definitely established her as an actress of the highest rank.

The song has been published by M. Witmark & Sons, publishers of many of Penn's successes.

Advertising Campaign for "Shadows"

ONE of the most important local advertising campaigns in some time has just been arranged between Al Lichtman and Sam Zierler for the exploitation of "Shadows" in Greater New York. Three hundred 24-sheet stands have been signed for. The paper will be up on the boards by November 1.

Zierler is the local franchise holder of the Lichtman product. He handles distribution in Greater New York and in Long Island. The contract provides for slightly more than half of the stands to be erected in Manhattan and the Bronx. The remainder will go up in Brooklyn. About 100 will be illuminated effectively so that they will be observed at night. The Lichtman corporation has had two styles of 24-sheets made. One of these depicts the climatic scene from the picture and has on it three of the principal characters, Chaney, Harrison, Ford and Marguerite De La Motte. The second is expected to attract more than the usual amount of attention. It has on it a large-sized head of Lon Chaney as Yen Sin.

Color Photoplay Makes Good Impression

J. Stuart Blackton's Prizma color photoplay, "The Glorious Adventure," first all-color feature length picture ever made, and starring the beautiful Lady Diana Manners, is said to have made a genuine hit when it was shown recently at the California theatre, Los Angeles, under release by Allied Producers and Distributors Corporation. Not only did this picture play to good box-office figures, but it won much praise from both public and newspaper critics. The following are typical:

"It is here—a miracle in cinema," said the critic for the Evening Herald. "J. Stuart Blackton, in 'The Glorious Adventure' has demonstrated that brilliant hues can be effectively used in the photo-drama as well in color travelogues," says the reviewer for the Record.

Enid Bennett Stars in Pathe Picture

"The Bootlegger's Daughter," a current release, is off to a good start, according to information given out at Playgoers' main offices in New York. With Enid Bennett starring and Fred Niblo in the leading male role, this attraction presents the most prominent players ever offered in a Playgoers feature.

It is an original story by R. Cecil Smith, with the production directed by Victor Schertzinger. It depicts the romance of a barroom slavey and village outcast who blossoms into the town's pride and joy.

Melbourne MacDowell is said to be true to type as the bootlegger, and J. P. Lockney is said to give a gem of an "old soak" characterization.

Vitagraph Has Ambitious Series

Will Produce Twelve Stories From Famous Authors With Well Selected Casts

ONE of the highlights in the motion picture news of the week is the announcement of Vitagraph's twelve special productions.

Albert E. Smith, president of this company, obtained the rights to novels and plays from twelve of the world's most famous authors and playrights—each one a masterpiece from the pen of a master.

Following is the list of the big twelve: "The Ninety and Nine," by Ramsay Morris; "Msaters of Men," by Morgan Robertson; "A Ready Made Husband," by Rupert Hughes; "The Man Next Door," by Emerson Hough; "Hidden House," by Amelie Rives; "The Kidnappel Millionaires," by Frederick Upham Adams; "My Man," by Edith Ellis; "The Man From Brodney's," by George Barr McCutcheon; "A Shop Girl," by C. N. and A. M. Williamson; "Steele of the Royal Mounted," by James Oliver Curwood; "The Tenderfoot," by Alfred Henry Lewis, and "Who's Who," by Richard Harding Davis.

"This announcement marks the end of several months of strenuous effort," said Mr. Smith. "It is my conviction, after twenty-five years' active production, that the screen deserves, and demands, the best that is humanly possible to create. We have searched a vast field for the material contained in the twelve stories and plays we have just announced. Experts have been employed—men who know what the public wants.

"Although no two of the series are similar, each will be found to contain the necessary elements of universal appeal, the story that has, with only the power of the printed word, achieved fame for its author, should be and can be made, a powerful, irresistible box office attraction.

Critic Praises Florence Vidor

Approves Announcement She Will Play Tarkington Prize Story as Written

ANNOUNCEMENT by Florence Vidor that she proposes to play "Alice Adams," the novel which won for Booth Tarkington the Pulitzer prize in 1921, just as it is written, is regarded by Booth Conlon, well-known picture reviewer, as an event of sufficient importance to justify a special interview with the Associated Exhibitors star, with extended comment.

Mr. Conlon addresses his article, which appears in the San Francisco Chronicle, to "The authors of America," and declares that they owe Miss Vidor a debt of gratitude. In the course of the article he says:

"If stories written by justly famous and successful authors are suitable and worth while for screen production, declares the star, they should be visualized on the screen as a faithful reproduction of the writer's creation, or not at all.

"There is no greater disappointment for true book and screen lovers than to recognize in a motion picture only the title of their favorite story. If a story must be 'improved' for screen translation why produce it at all? It is manifestly unfair to the author to use his name as a magnet for a story he didn't write. And it is equally unjust to the patrons of the theatres who hope, sometimes against hope, to see their favorite stories correctly interpreted, their beloved characters realistically portrayed. Alice Adams will be Booth Tarkington's Alice Adams. This is the policy by which I shall succeed or fail.

"From this interview it will be surmised that Florence Vidor is an unusual young woman. She is! I have followed her work closely since the day she startled the world by converting a minor role into a classic. Remember the little French dressmaker who rode to the guillotine with Sidney Carton in 'A Tale of Two Cities?' Although her name was not even mentioned in the cast, the 'beautiful unknown' who could act with such rare humanness was acclaimed by scores of exacting critics and thousands of fans, Florence Vidor came into fame overnight."

Neilan Buys Famous Novel Rights

Will Make "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" In Association With Goldwyn

MARSHALL NEILAN has purchased the screen rights to "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," the most famous novel of Thomas Hardy, dean of English letters. The picture will be made in association with the Goldwyn Pictures Corporation and will be filmed in England and at Goldwyn's studio in Culver City.

Frank Urson, staff director for Mr. Neilan, David Kesson, his twenty-one-year-old camera genius, and other members of the company sailed for England last week on the Berengaria to take some of the scenes for "Tess" in the natural locale. In this they will have the co-operation of Thomas Hardy.

The scenario for Hardy's powerful novel was made by Dorothy Farnum, who has just arrived at the Goldwyn studio from New York. Miss Farnum, although only twenty-four years old, has made the adaptation of many notable stories, including "Jim the Penman," "Good References," and Rex Beach's "Fair Lady" and "The Iron Trail."

First of Texas Ranger Features Completed

THE first of a series of six Texas Ranger features, bearing the title "The Web of the Law," has been completed by producer Tom Gibson at the Long Beach Studios, California. Patricia Palmer and Bill Miller are featured and are supported by a capable cast including George Sherwood, Harry Belmour, Alfred Hewston and Hal Stephens. Tom Gibson directed and wrote the story and Elmer Dyer photographed it.

The second of the series will be placed in production shortly and will have the Sea for its background for the Texas Ranger, like his able Brother of the North, the Mounted Police, is not hampered by time or place when he goes out to get his man. Each of the stories will be of a different nature, allowing a change of locale for each.

Marketing arrangements are in the hands of Geo. H. Callahan of New York.

Meighan Revamps Town for New Picture

Thomas Meighan has had another town made over for motion picture purposes. This time it is Sag Harbor, L. I., which is being used as the locale for "Back Home and Broke," a George Ade story now being produced for Paramount by Alfred Green.

So far as available statistics go, Meighan holds the record for having towns revamped. For "The Conquest of Canaan," the main street of Ashville, N. C., was changed to that of "Ganaan," of which Booth Tarkington wrote. Jamestown, Cal., was utilized for the exterior scenes of "If You Believe It, It's So," and for "Our Leading Citizen," Modesto, Cal., served as the locale. In making "Cappy Ricks," the Meighan Company utilized three town, San Francisco, Boston and Bar Harbor, Me.

Women Writers Making Screen Classics

Whether or not woman has any longer a place in the home, she has certainly found one in screen literature. Three of the biggest screen adaptations now in preparation are being made by women writers. June Mathis is making a screen version of "Ben Hur." No director or cast has yet been announced by Goldwyn, who acquired from Klaw Erlanger the film rights to the famous novel and play.

Dorothy Farnum has been commissioned by Marshall Neilan to write the continuity for his forthcoming production of Thomas Hardy's classic, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles."

Violet Clark's name will be on the screen as adapter of Elinor Glyn's story, "Six Days," for which scenes are being made abroad, and which will be completed at the Goldwyn studio in Los Angeles.

Stockholm Gives Approval to "The Shiek"

"THE SHEIK" has added another triumphal premiere to its rapidly growing list of world-wide successes, according to cable advices received from Carl York and W. LeMat, Paramount distributors in Scandinavia, by E. E. Shauer, director of the foreign department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

The Paramount success was introduced to the public of Stockholm on Monday, Oct. 9, at the Rialto and Sibyllan theatres, packed houses witnessing every performance despite the strong competition given by three other important premieres. The same cable also reported that "The Sheik" was playing to record-breaking business in Christiania, where it was shown in the largest theatre.

"Till We Meet Again" is in Demand

"Till We Meet Again," the William Christy Cabanne production, presented by Dependable Pictures Corporation and just released by Associated Exhibitors, is in heavy demand for early booking dates, despite the comparatively brief time which has elapsed since the first announcements were made, declares Associated Exhibitors.

During the week, "Till We Meet Again" played at seven different theatres in New York, including Loew's State, besides many leading houses elsewhere.

Final Scenes Shot on "Adam and Eva"

Work on "Adam and Eva," the new Cosmopolitan picture starring Marion Davies and directed by Robert G. Vignola, was finished this week when the final scenes were "shot" at the Cosmopolitan studios.

What is claimed to be one of the most striking and beautiful scenes ever filmed is the Venetian carnival scene in "Adam and Eva." This was designed by Joseph Urban and brings into play all the atmosphere of Venice.

Artist Lauds Constance Bennett

Malcolm Strauss Declares Equity Star One of Three of World's Beautiful Women

NO less a distinguished personage and celebrated artist than Malcolm Strauss has paid Constance Bennett, daughter of Richard Bennett, and star in the new special production, "What's Wrong With the Women?" a sweeping compliment.

In an article published in the Hearst papers on September 10th last Mr. Strauss stated with much finality and emphasis that our most admired beauties are not really beautiful at all when complete symmetry of figure and proportion of features are considered. In part, Mr. Strauss says:

"All my life I have been a seeker for beauty—not one woman in ten thousand is beautiful! Twenty-five per cent of all women are attractive. In all my world search, I have seen but three beautiful women. One of them is dead. One is unknown. The third was but yesterday a child. At eighteen she is undeniably a beauty. One of these was Lotta Faust. There was no fault in this Broadway favorite whose untimely death is still mourned. Another woman without defect is one who passed as a ship in the night from a fete in Paris. But I painted her portrait. She is unknown. Her name is Nancy Dare. The third is one whose childhood is just behind her. She is Constance Bennett, the daughter of Richard Bennett. All beautiful because they are all perfect. Miss Bennett is but eighteen."

Miss Bennett exhibits her charm and beauty in "What's Wrong With the Women?" In fact, dramatic critics were unanimous in stating that a new star was added to the film roster, so convincing and so absorbing is her portrayal of the ingenue. And her grace and beauty in this picture are outstanding evidences to confirm the opinion of Mr. Strauss.

Coast Likes Doug's Picture

Congratulatory Messages Swamp Star After Showing in Los Angeles Theatre

ANY less agile and athletic citizen than Douglas Fairbanks would be completely snowed under by the deluge of congratulatory and commendatory telegrams which the star-producer has received in the last few days from producers, directors, actors and others in the motion picture industry after they had seen his newest photoplay sensation, "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," at the Grauman Theatre, Hollywood. A few of the telegrams received at the Fairbanks' apartment at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York City, run as follows:

"Stupendous," said Thomas H. Ince. "I am still gasping and inarticulate. There's no use advertising the production expense of 'Robin Hood.' It baffles statistics. It shows a million dollars' worth of brains, a million dollars worth of thought, a million dollars' worth of acting and a million dollars' worth of personality. I salute you."

"A new era has dawned. Douglas Fairbanks in 'Robin Hood' and 'The Birth of a Nation' is the order now," said Arthur S. Kane, eastern representative of the Charles Ray organization. "Every person in the industry will be your advance agent, every adherent of motion pictures your salesman. You have humanized history."

"About 'Douglas Fairbanks in 'Robin Hood'—'Veni, Vidi, Vici,' only we went, we saw, you conquered," telegraphed Charles Ray, star and producer.

"Sir Douglas of the Lion Heart," said William C. De Mille, "my hat is off to you for the magnificent thing you have done for this new art. You have achieved a new poetry of the screen."

"It would have done your heart good to have seen the opening of 'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood' telegraphed Sid Grauman, who signed the first releasing contract for this picture sensation. "It is an absolute sensation."

"Words would fail me even though my vocabulary be larger to express my admiration and appreciation of your latest glorious achievement," said Erich von Stroheim, director. "Accept my sincerest congratulations and may I wish for you more 'Robin Hoods.'"

Pathe Reports Heavy Bookings for Lloyd

Pathe reports that exhibitors in practically every section of the country are booking with increased activity all products bearing the name of Harold Lloyd, and point to a fresh impulse in this direction which was noticed following first announcement of the forthcoming release of "Dr. Jack," Lloyd's second feature length comedy. The entire list of Lloyd two-reelers, some of which are more than two years old, are said to be sharing in the current tendency to book all Lloyd productions.

Kyne Praises Screening of "Palomar"

That his story, "The Pride of Palomar," the picturization of which has just been completed by Cosmopolitan Productions, will meet with the unqualified approbation of film fans when it is released in December, is the opinion voiced by Peter B. Kyne, the author. In a letter received by Cosmopolitan, Mr. Kyne says in part:

"Last Saturday I saw a run of 'The Pride of Palomar' in about fourteen reels and was deeply impressed with it. The story has been followed with great fidelity, and the picture will, I am sure, be a great success."

"The Pride of Palomar," adapted for the screen by Grant Carpenter and John Lynch, was filmed in California under the direction of Frank Borzage.

Forrest Stanley portrays the role of the hero and is surrounded by a capable cast, including Joseph Dowling, Warner Oland, Marjorie Daw, Tote De Crow, Alfred Allen, James Barrow, George Nichols and Edward Brady.

Hodkinson Gets Stills on "Tish" Picture

Stills for the last of the Autumn releases for distribution by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation have been received according to an announcement made by the New York office. The working title for this production is "Mind Over Motor," and is an adaptation of the famous "Tish" stories by Mary Roberts Rinehart.

According to the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation the stills on this production are such as to presage a highly commendable production that will prove of box office value to exhibitors. Trixie Fraganza, one of the most talented female comedians on the American stage, will appear in the role of "Tish."

"Mind Over Motor" is being produced by the Ward Lascelle Productions at the West Coast Studios, and is scheduled for release in November through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Cosmopolitan Company Sails for Home

The company which has been in France for the last six weeks working on the exterior scenes of the Cosmopolitan picturization of Blasco Ibanez's story, "The Enemies of Women," finished work this week and sailed for home on Wednesday, October 25.

The "exteriors" of the picture were taken amidst the very scenes in Paris, Nice and Monte Carlo where the author located his latest, and as many consider his greatest romance. As soon as the company arrives back in the United States, the picture will be finished in the Cosmopolitan studios here.

Alan Crosland is also directing "The Enemies of Women." The members of the cast who have been abroad include Lionel Barrymore, Alma Rubens, Pedro de Cordova, William "Buster" Collier, jr., Gareth Hughes, W. H. Thompson, Gladys Hulette and Mario Majeroni.

"The Ghost Patrol" Goes Into Production

The Sinclair Lewis novel, "The Ghost Patrol," which Universal is filming with Nat Ross as the director, has been put in work with a cast of unusual strength.

Bessie Love and Ralph Graves portray the romantic leading roles. The big character of the story, an old New York "copper," is impersonated by George Nichols.

George B. Williams and Max Davidson, both noted for their character work in the Universal-Jewel success, "No Woman Knows," are enacting roles of similar importance in "The Ghost Patrol."

Lydia Yeatman Titus is one of the most capable character women and one of the most outstanding "types" of the screen, and her work in a principal part promises noteworthy quality. George Cooper, Melbourne MacDowell and Jack Carlyle handle other roles.

Western Exhibitor Lauds "Timber Queen"

In connection with recent reports of unexpectedly heavy Fall bookings of all Pathe serials, Pathe quotes the following letter just received from an exhibitor in a typical Western town—Manager I. E. Runyan, Manager of the Iris Theatre, Hutchison, Kansas.

"Having run two serials every week for over five years, I feel competent to express an opinion on 'The Timber Queen.'

"I have just run chapter thirteen of this story, and can truthfully, cheerfully and positively declare that I believe it is the best serial that has ever been produced. It outranks them all in point of story, action, suspense and thrills."

New "Sleepy Hollow" Book Issued

Foreseeing the exploitation possiblities regarding the presentation of "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," the Hodkinson Corporation made arrangements with Barse & Hopkins, publishers, to have this book printed in handy form and distributed to the public through the medium of bookstores and newsstands.

This will give the exhibitor an opportunity for closer co-operation with the news distributors in his territory for the exploitation of both the book and the production.

Century's "Just Dogs" Is Completed

Among novelties issued by Century Film Corporation is "Just Dogs," a two-reel comedy in which all the actors are animals. The principal parts are taken by "Pal," the bulldog, "Joe" the monkey, and "Camisole" another talented canine. The action circles around the Barktown grocery store, where there is dirty work around the safe, which is circumvented by "Pal" as the aerial police.

Al Herman, who directed this, has recently signed a long term contract with Century to make similar animal comedies.

Cameramen to Try for Fox Prizes

Handsome Trophies Will Be Awarded Successful Contestants in Competition

FOX News announces the cameramen's contest for 1923 in which valuable prizes will be given again to the cameramen who produce pictures that stand first in the qualifications mentioned in the following schedule. This contest starts immediately and ends June 1, 1923.

A beautiful gold trophy of exclusive design and valued at $100, for the best thrill picture, used by Fox News during the seven month period.

A silver loving cup valued at $85 for the best picture included in Fox News under the heading "News Novelties."

A handsome engraved bronze plaque valued at $75 for the picture taken during the 7-month period that shows the greatest enterprise, photography, and news value. This picture must be exclusive.

All of the above awards will be engraved with the cameraman's name, address, and reason for his wining the prize.

The judges of this contest will be William Fox, W. R. Sheehan, and Don Hancock, Director-in-Chief.

Last year staff cameraman Russell Muth won the thrill picture trophy which was a beautiful gold Mercury figure for his subject "Vesuvius Conquered." This was not only a prize winner for Fox News, but was without doubt the greatest thrill picture ever shown in any news reel in the world. Muth nearly lost his life in attempting this flight, but only Muth knows how hard he had to work to put it over as only a Fox News cameraman can.

The picture for the best baby subject was awarded Robert Farrow of Montclair, N. J., a field representative. Farrow thought up and staged "The babies' reunion" at a local hospital. Mr. Sheehan was extremely pleased with this picture and the enterprise shown by this operator.

The prize for the best animal subject, a bronze plaque, was won by C. J. Kaho of Fort Worth, Texas, for his subject "Direct From the Factory." Kaho staged this picture absolutely alone, of a milkman supplying a cat with its dinner direct from the producer.

Every cameraman has the privilege of sending in as many pictures as he pleases for this contest. One can win the three prizes. The corporation executives are extremely interested in what every individual cameraman is doing for this news reel. They are giving an incentive to make more pictures and to make pictures of the first quality.

The gold badge contest has been running since June 1, 1922, and will continue until June 1, 1923. Blaine Walker, Los Angeles staff cameraman, won this handsome prize last year for the greatest number of points, and Walker is again leading at this time. This doesn't mean by any means that Walker is again the winner. Greenwald, San Francisco staff cameraman, is creeping up on him. "Larry" Ellis of Boston is third highest. This contest will be a "neck-and-neck" race throughout.

Metro Picture Boasts Star Cast

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" Roles Portrayed by Aggregation of Real Artists

WHEN "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the special produced by Associated Pictures Corporation as an S-L attraction for Metro, reaches the screen, a notable gathering of stars will be seen. Every leading player in the S-L special has been a star in his or her own right in some of the biggest productions of the past few years.

Blanche Sweet, famous for her performances in Griffith films and the star of "The Unpardonable Sin," heads the long list of "Quincy Adams Sawyer" stellar players. Lon Chaney, remembered for his work in "The Miracle Man," has been the star of innumerable Universal-Jewel and Goldwyn specials.

Barbara La Marr achieved stardom through her performance in Metro's "Prisoner of Zenda." Elmo Lincoln is the creator of the character of "Tarzan" on the screen and has played this role in "Adventures of Tarzan" recently. Louise Fazenda is a former Mack Sennett star whose work made many of the Sennett successes possible.

Joseph Dowling established himself in the stellar ranks of screen performers through his characterization of the title role in George Loane Tucker's "The Miracle Man." John Bowers has starred in more than ten successful features during the past year.

Hank Mann is another player recruited from the ranks

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" contains a host of other stars, including June Elvidge, Claire MacDowell, Edward Connelly, Victor Fotel and Gale Henry.

This picture will be released through Metro the latter part of

Hartford Is Purchasing Successful Books

David M. Hartford has entered the arena as purchaser of successful books and stories for screen production and his negotiations to date will furnish his producing organization with enough material to cover nearly two years' of continuous effort.

"Bulldog Carney," by W. A. Fraser, is the first title announced and it is Mr. Hartford's intention to make a series of "Bulldog Carney" features.

Hartford is a member of the Theatre Owners Association and President of the M. P. D. A. of Los Angeles.

Music Composer Series Is Approved

The recently announced plan of employing the motion picture for the presentation of biographies, including the filming of the lives of the great musical composers in order to stimulate interest in these geniuses and their work, called forth a lengthy editorial in the Chicago Evening Post in which the writer cited the George Arliss picture, "Disraeli," a United Artists release, as a picturization of a play that served a valuable purpose.

"'Disraeli' presented entertainingly a phase of English history little known on this side of the Atlantic," said the editorial, "and at the same time aroused interest in one of the greaest figures of English national life. How many Americans had more than a passing knowledge of Lord Beaconsfield before he found his way to the screen? But once there, with this picture being shown wherever there was a motion picture theatre, Benjamin Disraeli became well known. It is probable that this picture inspired many to read the story of his life in detail and likewise, perhaps, to read his published works."

Pryor's Band to Play "Human Hearts"

Arrangements have been made by Universal with Arthur Pryor, the popular band leader, for his band to include in its regular program, "Human Hearts," the song tie-up written by Victor Nurnberg and Milt Hagen for the Universal-Jewel picture of the same name starring House Peters.

Pryor's band opens for its winter season at Miami, Fla., on Dec. 8. It will return to Luna Park next summer.

The "Human Hearts" song is being put over in Toronto, Canada, by a special advertising campaign on the part of Leo Feist, Ltd., of Toronto, the Canadian publishers of the song. They will send singers to various theatres showing the picture.

"Lorna Doone" Approved at Showings

Maurice Tourneur has excelled himself in "Lorna Doone," according to those who have witnessed private showings of the new First National attraction or have seen it in the making at the Ince Studios.

The story of "Lorna Doone" is one of the world's most enthralling romances. Written in 1869 by R. D. Blackmore, it has been read by each succeeding generation.

More than a thousand men took part in the big battle scenes before the Doone gates. The scenes were "shot" by six cameramen under the direction of Henry Sharp, first cameraman of the Ince forces.

Madge Bellamy is the heroine. She is supported by a cast headed by John Bowers, in the role of the hero; Frank Keenan, as the patrician exile, Sir Ensor Doone, and Donald MacDonald as the swashbuckling gentleman brigand Carver.

Buffalo Briefs

The Olympic theatre has been leased by Universal, which company will take over the house at once, according to M. A. Chase, district manager. The Olympic recently re-opened on Latayette Square, following a complete remodeling and re-decoration. It has been showing double feature bills. It is understood the present operating staff will remain. Bill Whiston is now the house manager.

Bruce Fowler, one of the most popular exhibitors in Buffalo, who has been manager of the Elmwood, the big neighborhood house, for several years has resigned to accept a position as manager of the Indiana theatre, Terra Haute, Indiana. The appointment comes from Harold B. Franklin, head of the Paramount theatre department and a close friend of Mr. Fowler for many years. Mr. Fowler will leave Buffalo, Saturday, November, 4.

Manager Vincent McFaul sure did put on a big show at Shea's Hippodrome this week. "Nice People," topped the bill. Then came "The Three Must Get Theres," the Max Linder comedy, followed by Yerkes' Flotilla band and a big fashion show staged in co-operation with the Hengerer store and featuring Miss Buffalo, the girl who represented the city at the Atlantic City beauty show. Could you get in? Yes, if you had a crow bar!

Harry Marsey, manager of the local Niagara Pictures Corporation Exchange, has leased the Criterion on Sundays for film shows. "What's Wrong With the Women," will be the first attraction, Sunday, November 5. The Criterion shows Shubert vaudeville during the week.

The Strand and Andrews theatres in Salamanca, N. Y., have been acquired by Associated Theatres Corporation, of which Harold P. Dygert is general manager. O. T. Schroeppel, formerly connected with several Buffalo exchanges and theatres, will manage the two houses.

Albert H. Malotte, Shea's Hipp new organist, is in town preparing for dedication of the new Wurlitzer organ early in November. Mr. Malotte has been organist at leading theatres on the Pacific coast for the past seven years.

The Temple theatre on William street, has been re-opened as the New Family, under the management of J. Buchinski.

Around Cleveland's Film Row

NAT BARACH, manager of the local Goldwyn exchange, says that the new Goldwyn releases are booked 100% in the key cities of northern Ohio, and he doesn't care who knows it. "Remembrance" and "Sherlock Holmes" are booked for four solid weeks on release date, October 29th, in Cleveland, Akron, Canton and Toledo.

J. A. Koerpel, Central Western Division Manager for Goldwyn, is back in town again after a several weeks' tour of his exchanges, which, since last week, include an office in Indianapolis.

W. Willman has been appointed manager of the Goldwyn Indianapolis office. Willman formerly was with United Artists, covering the Indianapolis territory out of Chicago.

D. Klein has joined the local Goldwyn family, and is covering the Akron territory in a sales capacity. Klein used to be with Select.

George Colby, Goldwyn auditor, who has been in Cleveland for the past eight weeks, received instructions last week to pack his bag and be ready to move on. So Colby's on his way again.

Carl Hoague, office manager for the Cleveland Famous Players-Lasky exchange, has resigned to occupy a similar position with First National, also in Cleveland. Hoague's successor in the F. P.-L. office has not yet been named.

The Ohio State endurance prize is about to be won by those famous winners "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse." They've been running in the state without interruption for a year and a half, and aren't out of breath yet. "Going just as strong as ever" said Cleveland Metro manager C. E. Almy, and booked solid for the next several months. "The Four Horsemen" is now playing the smaller towns throughout the state, as well as repeat engagements in the larger cities.

Lee Chapman, former exchange man, has bought out M. J. Glick's interest in the Western Pictures Company, a recently formed independent releasing company. Chapman is associated with Fred Schram in the new enterprise.

Harry Charnas, of the Standard Film Service Company of Cleveland wears an expansive smile, in addition to his new fall raiment. Reason: unqualified success of "Rich Men's Wives" all through the territory. "It's cleaning up wherever it's shown," said Charnas, and in substantiation of his statement showed telegrams from exuberant and enthusiastic exhibitors.

With the Buffalo Branches

HARRY RATHMAN, personal representative for Sol Lesser, was in Buffalo, Friday night, October 20 with a print of "Oliver Twist," which was shown at a special screening party for local high school principals, teachers, city officials, exhibitors and invited friends in Shea's Hippodrome after the regular show. The party was arranged by E. J. Hayes, local First National exchange manager. Over 250 guests attended. From Buffalo, Mr. Rathman left for Cleveland and Detroit.

Friday afternoon, October 20, Al Teschmacher, Pathe booker, received a call on the phone. It was his wife. Two tons of coal were deposited in the street. Al was commanded to come home and invite the coal in. Al did. All he had was a little express wagon. He started early in the afternoon of the 20th. At this writing he is working on the last few bushels. Its a merry life, claims Al.

Vyola Peck has resigned from the Pathe office staff to devote her entire time to the stage and vocal work. Last week she appeared at Shea's theatre in Bradford, Pa.

Jesse Weil has arrived in town to take charge of exploitation work for F. B. O. He put over some fine work for "In the Name of the Law," when this subject was shown at the local Strand several weeks ago.

There will be two Kahn Weeks (not Convicts) at the local Metro exchange, December 3 to 16, at which time Branch Manager Henry W. Kahn expects to break all booking records for Metro product. Mr. Kahn denies the report that because of the poximity of the Yuletide, he will give film free to exhibitors.

E. O. Williams, formerly with Paramount, is now a member of the Nu-Art sales staff. Fred M. Zimmerman, president and general manager for Nu-Art, is now devoting all his trip to a big sales offensive on "Sure Fire Flint," which had its western New York premiere at Fay's theatre, Rochester, the week of October 22.

Fred G. Sliter, field representative for First National, was at the First National exchange, last week end, for conferences with Branch Manager E. J. Hayes.

George A. Hickey, former manager of the local Goldwyn exchange, was in town last week. Mr. Hickey has been made district manager with headquarters in Chicago.

Cleveland Paragraphs

The many friends of L. B. Cool, general manager of the Feiber and Shea interests, will be grieved to hear of the death, last Tuesday, of Mrs. Cool. Although Mrs. Cool had been in poor health for some time, the end was not expected. All local theatrical and motion picture representatives turned out for the funeral on Thursday, to pay their last respects to Mrs. Cool and offer condolence to Mr. Cool. An eleven-year-old daughter survives her mother. Burial was in Canton, the former home of the Cools.

M. B. Horwitz has been staging a series of Child Contest Songs in his chain of eight Cleveland motion picture theatres with such success that he has inaugurated regular amateur nights for adults also. Three prizes are given away at each of these performances, of $7.50, $5.00 and $2.50. Horwitz says that the contestants do all sorts of things; sing, dance, and acrobatics. Each of his theatres has regular nights set aside each week for Amateur Night.

With Detroit Exchanges

C. J. SONIN has arrived in Detroit from Pittsburgh. He is the new manager for Warner Bros., replacing Dave Warner, who has lett for Los Angeles where he will be busily occupied with production.

The Golywyn local exchange has a new manager in the person of Harry Lorch. F. J. Downey, former manager, has been promoted to take charge of the special sales work for the state of Michigan.

Ray J. Branch, secretary and treasurer of the Merit Films, Inc., has broadened the scope of his enterprises. He will handle the C. B. C. special productions for Michigan under the firm name of the Ray J. Branch Feature Productions.

Better Films Body Is Formed in Charlotte

The Charlotte, N. C., Better Films Comm'ttee which was organized two weeks ago, is now functioning as an organization under the leadership of Mrs. James E. Reilly and one of the first official movements of the organization was the formation of plans for morning matinees for the children of the city.

The membership of the board consists of some thirty prominent Charlotte men and women and l'st R. D. Craver of the Broadway E. F. Dardine of the Strand and Ray Beall of the Imperial theatres as members being representatives of the theatrical interests.

San Francisco Items

A lighted cigarette thrown into piles of photo paper stored in the basement of the Independent Film Exchange, was the cause of the disastrous fire and explosion at Golden Gate Avenue, according to Fire Marshal J. F. Sullivan. Sullivan explained that the fire ignited gases formed from storage of films in the basement, thereby causing the explosions and fire which resulted in the injury of eleven persons, one fatally and a property loss of $350,000.

Because of this fire a special meeting of the Board of Fire Wardens and the Bureau of Fire Prevention was called by the fire chief and the chief of police and resolutions were adopted urging immediate action by the Board of Supervisors on a pending ordinance which imposes greater restriction on the storage of motion picture films. The ordinance provides for the special handling and storage of films, for automatic fire doors and sprinklers in buildings, used by film companies. The majority of the film concerns are not opposed to this ordinance.

Eugene Roth, associate managing director of the California, Granada, Imperial and Portola theatres of this city has returned from a three-weeks' business trip to New York where he went to discuss important matters of national interest to film men with some of the biggest film men of the country. While in that city he also considered new plans for the local theatres he is connected with and discussed ideas for the five-year celebration the California theatre is about to hold.

Charles Pincus, manager of the California theatre, has been given full charge of the "Herbert L. Rothchild Corporation Trademark" that is now used in publicity work connected with the California, Granada, Imperial and Portola theatres. The managing directors in appointing Mr. Pincus stated they did so because they were pleased with the manner in which he handled the "Teddy Bear" publicity for the California theatre.

New England Notes

Payson Smith, state commissioner of education for Massachusetts, has been named by the National Educational Association as a member of the committee which will represent the association at a conference with Will Hays and many motion picture producers in November, when joint study of the application of motion pictures to public school work will be taken up. Col. Leonard P. Ayres, who has been in Boston the past week, will also be one of the committee.

"Superior Pictures," a Massachusetts producing corporation, to operate entirely in New England, and for the most part in the vicinity of Boston, will without doubt become a reality next Thursday when Holman Day, movie director, lumberjack, author and journalist, meets with a group of New England business men at the Boston City Club to perfect plans for the organization. The initial meeting was held last Wednesday night.

Around San Francisco's Exchanges

ACCORDING to C. A. Nathan, manager of Universal's San Francisco exchange, never in his career has he seen prints of any pictures routed as tight as those he has on "The Storm" and "Human Hearts." Although he has four prints of each picture they are all routed solidly until the first of the year and with only a few "holes" in the bookings from then until the end of March.

---

F. A. Flader, manager of the Frolic theatre, San Francisco, hooked up with The Bulletin's Argonaut Mine Sufferers' fund during the showing of "Human Hearts" in his theatre and secured columns of space, including considerable front page matter. To put the stunt over The Bulletin had various civic and fraternal organizations designate individual days during which each attended in a body. A line in the advertising that created much interest was "If you have a human heart see 'Human Hearts' and help the Argonaut Mine victims."

---

So great was the business done on "The Storm" at the State Theatre, Sacremento, that dates have already been secured for a return engagement. The original showing was for four days and the return date will be for three days, starting November 5th.

---

Word from Edward Armstrong, western division manager for Universal, who is at present in the northwest, brings the information that "Under Two Flags" is to have its first run in nearly all of his exchange centers within a few weeks. One of the most auspicious openings of the season was that given to "Under Two Flags" at the Granada Theatre, where the Pacific Coast premiere was held on Saturday, Oct. 7th. Both Saturday and Sunday capacity business was done through the day and evening and waiting lines were in evidence at each performance.

---

Salem, Mass., has gone wild over the Paramount company that is in that city filming exteriors for the forthcoming production, "Java Head." In the words of the Salem newspaper, "Salem is movie mad." About 1,000 citizens applied for jobs in the picture in extra parts, and many of them got in. The city is capitalizing the company too. The Dollar Day committee, boosting Salem trade for all it is worth, got some of the stars and Director Melford to attend a meeting at the Town Square, where they were all presented to the mayor. Pictures were shot of the gathering and will be shown this week in Salem theatres. Hardly a day goes by but the company, in some way or another, is good for a column write-up in the paper.

---

"Down to the Sea in Ships," the New Bedford picture, will show at the Bijou Theatre, Fall River, the first half of the week. The Majestic in Providence will have the film from November 6 to 25, and on December 4 it will open at the Metropolitan Opera House, Philadelphia, running through to the last of the month. Out of courtesy to some of the directors of the company, several towns of Cape Cod will see the film, including Chatham, Wellfleet and Orleans. Agitation is also under way to get the picture at the Martha's Vineyard Tabernacle.

---

The historical romance, "Julius Caesar," was brought to Salem under the auspices of the High School Latin Club, where it was shown for one running at the plaza theatre, the club receiving many congratulations for the venture.

---

George Fawcett and Raymond Hatton, prominent Paramount stars, took a little time off the other day and journeyed to Lowell, where both are well known. They appeared and spoke at the Merrimack Square theatre.

Rhode Island Jotting

The fifteen-cent motion picture show has passed the experimental stage in Providnce, and has come a reality. As a result the Capitol theatre, which was leased by the Modern and Strand theatres for the showing of second run features at fifteen cents, gets a separate manager in Claude A. Phinney, who entered upon his duties October 16. Formerly the house was run under the combined efforts of Manager Reed of the Strand and Manager Braunig of the Modern. This week the management also added a ten-cent seat, making the entire balcony ten cents at any time, while the lower part of the house sells for fifteen cents at any time. Both the Strand and Modern theatres are highly elated over the success of the venture.

It was discovered this week that there are at least two Newports on the map. "In the Name of the Law," was booked in for the Opera House at Newport, Rhode Island, for the last part of last week. Suddenly it was discovered when the print did not arrive that something had happened. The picture was traced to Newport, Vermont. It required some hustling on the part of Manager Vietri to get another print, but he made it by automobile to Boston and had his print back in time to give a showing of it, as advertised.

---

The Emery theatre, which shows feature and comedy pictures in connection with its vaudeville, celebrated its eighth birthday during the week of October 23.

---

It is understood here that "Down to the Sea in Ships," which was filmed in New Bedford recently, has been purchased for a three weeks' showing at the Modern theatre here.

---

The Opera House in Newport, which has been closed for some time because of litigation, was opened on Oct. 16, the presentation being "My Wild Irish Rose." Harry R. Horgan, one of the owners of the building, will manage the house.

Eastern New York

The largest and most important pre-release showing ever held in Albany occurred October 20th at the Mark Strand theatre, when state and city officials, as well as exhibitors from all sections of northern and central New York, attended a showing of "Oliver Twist," previously arranged by Manager Herman of the First National exchange in Albany. Invitations had previously been sent to many of the state and city officials, and to all exhibitors in the territory. Mayor Hackett of Albany, and several representatives from the State Department of Education, were among those present. The showing also brought one of the largest gathering of exhibitors ever seen in Albany, outside of the state convention.

---

The new theatre in Hudson Falls, which is being erected by the Cohoes Amuscment Company, is scheduled to open early next month.

---

The Capitol, a new theatre in Ballston Spa, is scheduled to open the latter part of the month. The house, which will be handled by W. F. Benton, the owner, will be the second motion picture theatre for the well known summer resort.

---

Announcement was made this week that J. M. Schine, of Gloversville, had purchased the Colligan theatre in Carthage. This will now give Mr. Schine motion picture theatres in Oneonta, Gloversville, Norwich, Oswego and Carthage. With the exception of Carthage and Oneonta, Mr. Schine is absolutely in control of the towns where he is located. During the past four or five years Mr. Schine has advanced very rapidly, until today he is reckoned as one of the biggest factors in filmdom in northern New York, ranking in that respect, practically the equal of "Nate" Robbins of Utica.

---

A. C. Wyer, who handles the Opera House in Delhi, was in Albany last week, purchasing film. He reports that business is showing a steady gain.

---

Mrs. Myers, wife of the proprietor of the Star in Schenectady, died last week, and the house was closed for several days.

---

The Palace, in Troy, will be run as a second-run house after October 29, according to an announcement just made by the owners. The house was opened last December, and has been a first-run theatre from that time. The fact that Troy has five first-run houses and that the Palace is located in the residential section, is responsible for the announced change.

---

Theatres in many of the small places in the Catskill region, which depend to a large extent for their patronage on summer visitors, are now down to a one day a week basis. But even at that, business warrants the assertion on the part of many of the managers that the fall and winter will probably be the best in years. The other day,

Washington Gossip

Announcement was made this week that the new Crandall Tivoli on 14th Street, Mt. Pleasant, Washington, will be under construction as soon as the new Catholic church on 16th Street, is ready. The property purchased by Crandall is now used by the church.

---

The limited one week run of "Broadway Rose" at the Columbia, closed Saturday evening, after doing a capacity business.

---

Manager Mark Gates of the Columbia is now offering an extended engagement at the regular 35, 55, and 75 cent prices of "When Knighthood Was In Flower." This is the first showing preceding the national release date outside of New York and Chicago. Advertising and publicity are on an unusually extensive plan, as billboards, newspapers and window cards have been liberally utilized. General Manager Larry Beattus of the Loew's interests here, has also arranged some good publicity for the showing this week at the Palace of Theodore Roberts in "The Old Homestead."

---

The Advisory board of Mrs. Locher's Public Service and Educational Department in the Crandall organization held its first formal meeting Monday evening, October 16, at the studio of Harriett Hawley Locher. Organizations actively in contact with children, alone, are enrolled in the board. Definite cooperation with the Crandall organization and the neighborhood houses was arranged for, and representatives from the organizations for each theatre were appointed.

---

The Washington branch of the "B. P. A., Inc.," met Thursday morning, October 19th, at the Rialto. The picture screened for the organization's benefit was the United Artists' production of George Arliss in "The Man Who Played God." Organizations cooperating and represented in the local chapter were: The Washington Federation of Churches, The General Federation of Women's Clubs, the National Catholic Welfare Council, and the National Council of Jewish Women.

---

The Women's City Club went on record at its last meeting as favoring stricter regulation of public amusement centers, stressing the dance hall but omitting any direct reference to the movies.

---

Saturday matinees at the Avenue Grand, Apollo, Savoy and other Crandall theatres were red letter days with Washington kids as their big sister, Mrs. Locher, had gotten a real pioneer of the West, Ezra Meeker, to appear and tell them of his boyhood in the frontier prairie schooners. As he is past ninety-two, he could tell them how the West looked over eighty years ago

With Washington's Exchanges

CHARLES E. KESSNICH, southern district manager for the Metro Pictures Corporation, was a Washington visitor last week. Seen at Manager Fuller's office, Mr. Kessnich said that the new industrial boom throughout the South, the boom in cotton and tobacco prices and other signs of employment, was of enormous benefit to the picture industry as shown at the box office.

Lester Rosenthal, formerly with F. B. O. and other local film interests has taken charge of the Washington branch of the Independent Film Exchanges of Philadelphia. Mrs. Lehman, who is office manager for Mr. Rosenthal, looks after the office during his road trips.

H. A. Gillespie, office manager for the Washington exchange of the Hodkinson Company, has been promoted to the executive headquarters of Hodkinson at New York City. W. T. Marshall, former booker, succeeds him as office manager. Robert M. Grace, connected with various film exchanges here, has become booker, relieving office manager Marshall.

Exploiteer Rockwell of F. B. O. returned from Tennessee and other Southern points.

Southern theatre owners and executives here last week included: Booker Bernstein of the Wells theatre of Norfolk and other Virginia points; John Pryor of Pryor Bros., and Mr. Hofheimer of the independent theatres of Norfolk and vicinity.

Bob La Voise of Goldwyn, has been busy putting over the Washington, Richmond and Baltimore runs of "Sherlock Holmes," "Remembrance" and other subjects.

J. J. Milstine of American Releasing Corporation, now gets to see the trade with his new Dodge sedan while the numerous sales force of the First National are able to use a new Ford, secured by the exchange for the Washington territory.

A Hallowe'en party will be given by the First National social club at 1731 I Street, October 28.

Ralph Edmunds of the exploitation publicity department, objects to being called George. He has put over some clever stunts lately, especially for the Baltimore showing of "East is West," with Connie Talmadge. He says that life with their exchange, after hours, is just parties, more parties, and again parties.

The Boy Scout picture has recently been shown with benefit to the local scout troops, at the Strand theatre in Norfolk.

The management of the Orpheum theatre, recently destroyed by fire, have asked the Portsmouth, Virginia, city council for permission to float a loan of $300,000 to rebuild and operate the house.

In Kansas City's Film Centre

NEGOTIATIONS for new Kansas City headquarters of the Enterprise Distributing Corporation were closed last week by W. K. Jenkins, division manager, who was in Kansas City. The new headquarters will be in the Bauer Building, Eighteenth and Wyandotte streets.

Jule H. Hill, manager of the Kansas City Goldwyn branch, will leave next week to assume duties as manager of the new Goldwyn branch opened at Oklahoma City last week by W. E. Truog, division manager. The vacancy at the Kansas City branch will be filled by Harry Lorch, manager of the Goldwyn branch in Chicago. The Oklahoma territory formerly was divided between Dallas, Tex., and Kansas City exchanges and the new Oklahoma City branch will serve all exhibitors of Oklahoma. The Oklahoma exchange makes the fourth city over which Mr. Truog, whose headquarters are in Kansas City, has supervision.

Arthur Gebaur, cashier of the Kansas City Universal office, has succeeded Art Johnson, Universal representative, who resigned to accept a berth on the F. B. O. staff in Omaha, and will be known as the service manager in the future.

W. W. Hildebrand is the latest addition to the Metro sales force in Kansas City. Mr. Hildebrand, who until recently was in the advertising department of the Journal-Post, Kansas City, will cover the Northern Kansas territory.

E. C. Clay, F. B. O. representative out of Kansas City, was operated upon for appendicitis in a Topeka, Kan., hospital last week and is reported to be in an improved condition.

L. J. McCarthy, the record-breaking First National salesman out of Kansas City, has been called in from the territory to handle sales in Kansas City, temporarily, at least.

The A. H. Blank Enterprises office at Kansas City was host to Al Lichtman, president of the Al Lichtman Corporation, last week. The A. H. Blank Enterprises distribute the Lichtman productions in Kansas and Western Missouri.

Baltimore Bulletins

A change of policy for the Strand and Wizard theatres, directed by Thomas D. Goldberg, has been announced. These houses, both downtown, hereafter will present first-run pictures concurrently for one-week runs. At the same time the change was announced Mr. Goldberg let his patrons know that he had arranged to show Paramount, United Artists, Selznick and big independently produced pictures.

---

Installation soon will be started of a $12,000 orchestral organ in the Cluster Theatre, Benjamin S. Cluster's South Broadway house. The theatre probably will be closed during the installation of the organ.

---

A special private showing of "The Man Who Played God," with George Arliss, has been arranged by Thomas D. Goldberg, manager of the Strand Theatre for clergy and educators of the city, to whom special invitations have been sent.

The Maryland League for Better Motion Pictures, an organization of women here, has launched an active winter campaign in which a series of addresses on the subject of motion pictures and censorship will be a feature. The league has frequently gone on record as favoring a more rigid censorship in Maryland.

Exhibitors of Baltimore already are planning in an informal and tentative way a vigorous fight against proposals to make Daylight Saving in the city an annual institution. A city ordinance providing for the plan each summer has been drawn in the City Council and probably will appear on the ballots at the municipal election next spring.

Seattle Slants

Gene O'Keefe, formerly manager of John Hamrick's Blue Mouse theatre in Astoria, Oregon, was last week transferred to this city as house manager of the local Blue Mouse.

Arthur Hile, manager of the Seattle theatre for a few weeks' will succeed Mr. O'Keefe in Astoria, and will also take charge of the two new houses recently acquired by Mr. Hamrick in that city.

Both Mr. O'Keefe and Mr. Hile, before joining Mr. Hamrick's organization were interested in the theatre game in Montana, and are well known among film men on this coast.

After a visit of several days in the city, Edward Armstrong Northwest division manager and superintendent for Universal Film Company left here a few days ago on his return trip to California. Mr. Armstrong has just completed a tour of his territory, having been out on the road for a number of weeks.

The Colonial theatre in Tacoma, owned by the Jensen-Von Herberg circuit, was robbed of $1,500 on the night of Sunday, October 15th, during the showing of "Flesh and Blood."

According to the story told to the police, the robbery occurred about 10:20 p. m. Manager Ralph Winsor was seated at his desk in his office when two well-dressed young men entered. Each of them drew forth a revolver, and forced him to open the safe. They took the $1,500, spurning $50 which lay on the table and which they termed "chicken feed." After taking the money, they produced a rope and bound Winsor to a chair.

After the robbers left, Winsor rolled to the floor and squirmed to a buzzer, by which he summoned assistance. Robert Lander, doorman, said that he saw two men answering the description given by Winsor walk down the stairs from the manager's office on the second floor, but was not concerned as the stairway also is used as an exit from the balcony.

Archie "Cherry" Malotte, formerly personnel manager for Selig in Los Angeles, has just been engaged in Seattle by Edward Armstrong to take charge of sales, publicity and exploitation of all Universal pictures in Spokane. Malotte will succeed W. L. Fenny, formerly a Spokane newspaper man, before joining the Universal staff. Although Fenny has not announced any plans for the future it is thought likely that he will return to the newspaper game.

Around Carolina's Film Rows

JIMMY CARRIER, formerly general manager of the TL Keasse Circuit of West Virginia, and later of the Koplar Circuit of St. Louis, has been appointed Southeastern exploitation representative for Goldwyn. Mr. Carrier is one of the most aggressive showmen in the Southeast, and his many friends in the territory will welcome him again.

American Releasing Corporation will open an office in Charlotte, N. C., to serve the exhibitors of the Carolinas with T. K. Lane as manager in the very near future. Mr. Lane is well known in the Carolinas, having been manager of this company's branch in Atlanta when first opened.

Southern Enterprises, Inc., operating over the Southeast, have opened the Alhambra theatre, Charlotte, N. C., as a first-run motion picture theatre, giving Charlotte, for the first time in its history, six motion picture theatres.

M. C. Coyne of United Artists, was a recent visitor in Charleston, S. C. Mr. Coyne is looking for better business everywhere.

C. J. P. Edwards, owner and manager of the Princess theatre, Waynesboro, N. C., has been busy in the exchanges buying pictures for the new season.

W. H. Wassman, one of the best known film men in the South, has been appointed representative for Associated Exhibitors and is now out in his territory.

J. C. Pace, representing Goldwyn, is now covering the Carolinas for this concern.

George E. Ebersole, formerly booker of the Charlotte Pathe Exchange, has been appointed inspector-booker for the Southern division and is now at work on his new duties. Before leaving Charlotte for Atlanta, his first stop, Mr. Ebersole was dined by the members of the Charlotte office and given a good send-off by them.

Newsy Notes from Canada

Members of the Underwriters' Association in attendance in Ottawa, Ontario, during the presentation of "Remembrance" at the Regent theatre, Ottawa, were the guests of Manager J. C. Kennedy at an extra showing of the feature one morning, many local insurance men also being present. The insurance idea suggested in the picture was also further emphasized by the publication of a number of appropriate insurance advertisements along with the Regent theatre's own advertising in the two local newspapers, the papers having canvassed local insurance agencies for this purpose.

Ottawa, Ontario, saw itself again in a moving picture with the first presentation of "Glengarry School Days" at a private screening of the new subject at the Imperial theatre, Ottawa, under the auspices of the Ottawa Film Productions, Limited, the local company which has made the feature.

The Imperial was crowded to the doors for the special presentation of the new release and the big crowd evinced much enthusiasm during the screening. This was the second feature to be produced locally by the Ottawa Film Productions, Limited, the first having been "The Man from Glengarry," Miss Pauline Garon being the star of both productions.

Major J. C. Kennedy of Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, Ontario, started a series of "National Music Nights" at the Regent on Friday evening, October 20, with the presentation of a Scottish concert in addition to the regular film program, the feature of which was "The Face in the Fog." The musical numbers included an overture, "The Thistle," and "McGregor Patrol" by the Regent Orchestra. Scottish songs by Miss Peggy McLean and a violin solo, "Comin' Through the Rye," by Rudolph Pelisek, conductor of the Regent orchestra. The National concerts are to be held every Friday evening, "English Night," being the second of the weekly series. Symphony concerts are also being held every Monday evening as a special musical attraction with augmented orchestra.

A new publication feature in the moving picture theatre activities of Toronto, Ontario, is the "Picture Theatre Program News," which has been brought out as a weekly paper of four pages to announce current attractions of the many local houses. Display advertisements of about 90 theatres are found on the four pages along with special advertisements. The Program News, which is published each Friday by the Picture Theatre Publishing Company, 336 Confederation Life Building, Toronto, is distributed free at the theatres as a service to the public and it is also sold by newsboys and at newsstands. The publication carries general advertising.

The Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, started out on October 23 with a ladies' orchestra of five pieces, the director of which is Miss Violet Johnston who is also first violin. The orchestra is made up of Mrs. Clara Clarke, violin; Miss Pearl Hogg, 'cello; Miss Rhea Park, clarinet, and Miss Sylvia Hall, piano. Miss Kathleen Sinclair is the organist of the Lyceum while a mere man, Mr. Twyman is relief organist.

John T. Fiddes, proprietor of the System theatre, Montreal, booked a return engagement of "Alf's Button," the English film comedy, starting October 23. Anglo-Canadian Picture Plays, Limited, Montreal, handling English productions exclusively in Canada, will shortly release "The Son of Kissing Cup" in the Dominion.

The St. James theatre, Portage Avenue, Winnipeg, Manitoba, is rapidly nearing completion. It is being built by L. Caplan at a cost of $60,000.

J. B. Whitney, a former exhibitor in Canada, has been engaged as a salesman by Associated First National Exhibitors, with headquarters at Toronto, Ontario.

S. R. Scott has made a big jump in his employment as a moving picture theatre manager. Formerly manager of the Orpheum theatre, Moose Jaw Sask., he has taken up residence in Toronto where he has become manager of Allen's Danforth theatre. B. Whitman, previous manager of the Danforth theatre, will have charge of the purchasing and advertising department of the Famous Players Film Service, the Allens' exchange, with headquarters at Toronto. On his retirement from the management of the Danforth theatre, Mr. Whitman was presented with a silver-handled umbrella by the theatre staff.

The interesting announcement is made that the Allen Theatre Enterprises, Toronto, personally represented at Winnipeg by Bernard Allen, has taken action in the courts at Winnipeg to secure repossession of the Province theatre in that city from Col. J. Sullivan and Dr. Wilmott, who purchased the property from John A. Schuberg of Vancouver, B. C., six months ago. The Allens claim legal ownership of the theatre through a purchase agreement with Schuberg several years ago.

Lady Byng, wife of Lord Byng, Governor-General of Canada, and a party of eight, attended the regular presentation of "Orphans of the Storm" at the Lyceum theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, on October 19, the presence of the viceregal party being unsolicited by the "Plantation Musical Week" was conducted by Manager Miller Stewart of the Allen theatre, Winnipeg, during the week of October 23. The Allen orchestra rendered a number of Southern melodies at all performances during the week as a special feature.

Shea's Hippodrome, Toronto, has reverted to its old policy of presenting a combination programme of moving pictures and vaudeville, the change being made during the week of October 16. Last summer the Hippodrome, one of the largest downtown houses in Toronto, was overhauled and an organ, the largest in Canada, was installed. When the house reopened, special film productions were featured along with the organ music. Special pictures are to be continued but the vaudeville has been added once more.

N. L. Nathanson, managing director of Famous Players Canadian Corporation, has appointed W. Knight Wilson to the post of conductor of the orchestra for the Capitol theatre, Regina, Sask. Mr. Wilsan was previously concert master of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra and was also identified with the orchestra of the Regent theatre, Toronto.

Florida Flashes

Charles Price, whose father operates the Dixie Theatre at Dunedin, has covered the state with "Mickey" and is now doing it all over again with the Robinson Crusoe feature. He says that business in the small towns is getting better every day.

The Rivoli Theatre in Ybor City the Latin portion of Tampa, is doing some great advertising on "Blood and Sand." They are using the red and yellow colors of Spain in every way, and as Ybor has mostly Latins, they expect to "mop up" with this feature.

The Sans Souci Theatre, located in Ybor City, is being cleaned up and made ready for opening on the 21st. This house has been closed for nearly a year now. The policy has been Tabs, but the new management say they will use feature pictures and Spanish acts from Havana.

Friday the 13th the weather man announced another storm was due in just three days. It was in October last year that the hurricane hit here and closed up all theatres for from two days to a week, so everyone started hoping the storm would stay out in the Gulf, as is the usual custom.

C. D. Cooley has installed a Concert Orchestra in his Strand Theatre, Tampa, Fla. That their fine music is appreciated, is shown by frequent "hands" given them by the audiences.

The report comes from Bradentown, Fla., that Chicago interests are constructing a new theatre there, which will be operated by the Lynch Enterprises when completed. The Wallace Theatre has had the field to themselves since the Pandora closed.

Jack Frost, assistant to C. D. Cooley, of the Consolidated Amusement Co. of Tampa, Fla., has a hobby. Yea; when he has doped out the publicity for this companies string of houses, he hies himself to his work shop, where he turns out the nifty cabinet work. Jack has a cedar chest on the fire now and is cooking up a swell dish. He says it is absolutely puncture proof and has guaranteed his wife she will have no fear of moths when she stores the winter furs in it.

In speaking of the many "Weeks" that different distributors are putting over, one of the leading exhibitors of Florida said, "So many of the exchanges are putting over special weeks that it makes it hard for us to try and please them all. We have our special days for Serials and they cannot be set aside or the prices shifted. I do the best I can for them but find it impossible to change dates and give any one exchange a full week."

George Hoffman, the genial representative of the Fox Film Corp., was in Tampa last week giving his many customers the glad hand. He was standing with the "bunch" in front of the Strand, when someone said, "Do you know George, I think that Queen of Sheba picture of yours is a bird. I have seen a lot of the big foreign productions, but while they build the big sets, there is something lacking. When it comes to making real monsters and putting the kick in too, they can't touch the Americans."

"Ah; hush," one of the others chimed in, "First thing you know you will have George thinking he has a picture."

"Well, by George, I have," Hoff came back quick.

Scott E. Chesnutt, the representative of the Southern Enterprises, Distributors of the Paramount Pictures for this territory, was another Tampa visitor the past week. Mr. Chesnutt is working up interest in the big "Quality Week" they are promoting for October 29th to November 4th

St. Louis Snapshots

The Lafayette Theatre, Jefferson Avenue near Lafayette, was damaged $2,000 by fire a few nights ago. The St. Louis Amusement Company owns the house.

A street carnival backed right up in back of the Gravois Theatre, controlled by the St. Louis Amusement Company the past week, furnishing some competition. But the picture fans resisted the temptation of winning a goose for a dime to see their favorite films, and business held up nicely.

Joseph Erber, who formerly controlled the Erber and Avenue Theatres in East St. Louis and the Washington and Lyric Theatres in Belleville, has decided to make New York his future home. Several weeks ago Erber sold his interest in the Erber and Avenue theatres to Phil Cohen. Prior to that they had sold the Belleville houses to a local syndicate.

The handsome new Clara Theatre, Moline, Ill., owned by Fred L. Cornwell, who also controls the Delmonte Theatre here, was opened last week. Mayor Henry K. Kiel of St. Louis and United States Senator James A. Reed of Missouri were among the out-of-town guests.

S. F. Rothstein and J. E. Keillow, owners of the Arkansas rights to the Dempsey-Carpentier pictures, were fined $250 each in the Federal district court at Little Rock, Ark., last week for exhibiting the pictures.

The Yerkes S. S. Flotilla orchestra through the courtesy of Herschal Stuart, manager of the Missouri Theatre, gave a special concert Monday, October 17, for the benefit of the wounded soldiers at the U. S. Public Health Service Hospital on Arsenal street. The St. Louis Star co-operated with Stuart in making the affair a success.

Mrs. Frances Pert of the Pert Theatre, Gillespie, Ill., was a caller at the Enterprise office.

Ben Eskind, Dixie Theatre, Madisonville, Ky., spent several days here arranging for his winter programs.

Harry Turner, Eagle Theatre, Pana, Ill., was another out-of-town visitor of the week.

H. Robinson opened his new house at Glasgow, Ill., on Saturday, October 14. It is known as the Opera House.

St. Louis Exchange News

J. M. McCOY, personal representative of Hope Hampton, was in the city the past week in the interest of Miss Hampton's latest starring vehicle, "The Light in the Dark."

Harry Weiss, local First National manager, spent the week out in the territory. Intends to make all the key cities before he returns.

Stuart M. Kohn, Howell Sales Corporation, New York, dropped in on several of the boys along Film Row.

Douglas D. Rothacker of Rothacker Film Corporation is in town cleaning up final preliminary details for the production of "The Spirit of St. Louis." The film will tell the history of St. Louis and be used for exploiting the city's industrial, commercial, education and home advantages throughout the world.

Barney Rosenthal of Universal has returned from Chicago where he was in conference with Art Schmidt, general sales manager.

W. K. Jenkins, division manager for Enterprise, called on J. B. Underwood, local manager, during the week. Conditions here pleased him. His office is in Atlanta, Ga.

Lester F. Scott, Jr., of C. C. Burr Productions, was here in the interests of "I Am the Law" and "Sure Fire Flint."

Mention fish in the vicinity of the Paramount office and your life is endangered. Two weeks ago John Koenig, office manager, and Bill Wondell, booker, departed on their annual vacation and fishing trip, promising the gang a big fish fry. Back from Galconda, Ill., they reported having had many bites. But the fishes should have known you can't fry mosquitoes, one of the girls remarked in deploring the failure of the fish fry to materialize.

Arthur Cole, Kansas City office manager for Paramount, was a caller.

R. J. McManus, local Paramount manager, was home for a few days because of illness.

Jack Weil, Goldwyn manager, has added two new salesmen. R. M. Beck is travelling Arkansas, Tennessee and Kentucky, while Morris Aaron, formerly with United Artists, hasn't been assigned his territory as yet.

Charley Werner, Metro manager, and Joe Desberger, who has charge of the St. Louis and Kansas City offices of American Releasing, attended the convention of the Missouri exhibitors at Excelsior Springs.

Studio and Player Brevities

Talmadge will be here to begin production by December 1.

Victor Heerman is now directing Owen Moore in "A Dollar Down." Alice Lake appears as leading lady, and the cast embraces Douglas Carter, Snitz Edwards, Mayme Kelso and Frank Hayes.

Allan Holubar will make "The White Frontier" from the Jeffrey Derend novel for First National under arrangements completed by M. C. Levee. Dorothy Phillips will play the lead, and most of the exteriors will be taken in Canada.

Lee has also arranged for a series of four Maurice Tourneur productions, the first of which will be "The Isle of Dead Ships" by Crittenden Merriott. Interiors will be made at the United Studios and exteriors on the Pacific off the coast of Jan Juan Capistrano.

Production will be renewed at the Ince studios next week when John Griffith Wray as director begins making of an original American present day drama by Bradley King. May McAvey has been borrowed from Lasky, and Lloyd Hughes will be the other lead.

Del Andrews has been engaged by Ince to write the continuity of an untitled comedy drama.

The Schulberg-Tom Forman company has returned from a month at Eureka, Cal., and the Washington-Canadian border, after securing exteriors for "Are You a Failure"? in production under the direction of Victor Schertzinger.

Schulberg has placed Kenneth Harlan and Orville Caldwell under long-term contracts, and is making screen tests with a view to adding to American woman types to his stock company.

Charles H. Duell, president of Inspiration Pictures, announced today that he had signed a long term contract with John S. Robertson, who recently completed "Tess of the Storm Country" with Mary Pickford.

Rosemary Theby has just signed a contract with Mrs. A. B. Maescher of the A. B. Maescher Productions to co-star with J. Frank Glendon in the "Rip Tide," Mrs. Maescher's next production.

Katherine MacDonald is again supported by Orville Caldwell in "The Scarlet Lily," which is now under production by Preferred Pictures for First National release. Producer B. P. Schulberg and Director Victor Schertzinger were so pleased with Caldwell's work in "The Lonely Road" that he has been giving a long term contract with Preferred.

Simultaneously with the return of Sol Lesser from New York comes the announcement that Jackie Coogan's latest production, temporarily titled "Fiddle and I," is almost completed. Jack Coogan, Sr., is supervising the cutting and editing.

Coincident with the showing of her first Kenma production, "The Purple Highway," on Broadway next month Madge Kennedy will start work on her second film production. This star will continue her role in "Spite Corner," one of the season's stage successes.

Ray C. Smallwood leaves New York for Hollywood Saturday, Oct. 21, accompanied by George A. McGuire, his assistant, and Thomas Bracken, who will act as business manager of Pyramid's west coast studios. Mr. Smallwood will undertake the making of two productions for Pyramid, namely "Tatiana," written by H. S. Shelden, and "The Deerslayer," one of James Fenimore Cooper's works. Mr. Smallwood will personally direct "Tatiana" and will supervise the picturization of "The Deerslayer."

Departure to Roman Design Followed in San Francisco House

New Castro Theatre Embodies Novel Ideas in Architectural Features

A DEVIATION from the accepted lines of the design for motion picture theatres was followed in the erection of the new Castro theatre, San Francisco, Cal. The following description was received of this house:

San Francisco has another first-class motion picture house. The new Castro theatre, which has just opened its doors, is an uptown house. It was erected at a cost of $300,000 and seats 2,000. With its opening, the six Nasser brothers saw the fruition of many years' efforts. In this theatre William, Elias and George Nasser will be actively associated, while Richard Henry and James Nasser, who are professional men, will be indirectly associated in the Casino.

On the opening night Mayor James Rolph, Jr., made the dedicatory address on behalf of the city and members of the Board of Supervisors were among the honor guests of the evening.

The builders of the Castro, of which T. L. Pflueger was the architect, turned to the semi-exterior or court scheme in planning the interesting auditorium. It is suggestive of the Roman Amphitheatre, which consisted of stone walls, a cantilever roof over the stage and a cloth canopy hung on ropes for the protection of the audience from the sun. Though the Roman design is predominant, there is a daring combination of Oriental and Spanish in detail ornamentation. The canopied ceiling is the climax of the architectural effect. It is made entirely of plaster, but seems to be some fine fabric of rich design. It is fringed with tassels, valances and cords, and is hung upon great golden ropes, all of which is plaster.

No effort has been spared anywhere to make the Castro a monument to the art of motion picture presentation.

Music will have a special place on all programs at the Castro. Waldemar Lind, a first violinist with the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra and a cousin of the great Jenny Lind, will conduct the new Castro orchestra. Concert numbers will be offered. Lloyd Carmichael will play

Photographs Xray of Human Body

LOS ANGELES.—A scientific feat has been accomplished in motion pictures in Los Angeles, it was revealed today at the Famous Players-Lasky, by which scenes have been photographed through an X-ray.

Paul P. Perry, A. S. C. (American Society of Cinematographers), famous "camera man" for the last two years with the Penrhyn Stanlaws company and who has filmed many of the biggest features in "Movieland," achieved the world's record in photography in "Pink Gods," starring Bebe Daniels.

A "uorescope," literally a human X-ray machine to search persons for stolen gems at the great Kimberley diamond mines in South Africa, was used. Mr. Perry (American Society of Cinematographers) finally synchronized both "florescope" and camera.

The achievement of Mr. Perry has created a sensation in motion picture circles.

Improvement in Demand for Organs

A gratifying improvement in the demand for organs for installation in motion picture theatres is reported by J. G. Kurtz, general sales manager of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, who is putting on two more salesmen to take care of the numerous prospects which his company has obtained in the last few weeks.

That the industry is practically back on a normal basis, according to Mr. Kurtz, is proven by the numerous installations recently made by the Bartola company, some of which are as follows:

Rockford, Ill., Orpheum theatre, Rockford Theatre Company, owner; Royal Oak, Mich., Baldwin theatre, Citizens Theatre Company, owner; Dallas, Texas, Rivoli theatre, Rivoli Theatre Company, owner; Dixon, Ill., Family theatre, L. G. Rorer, owner; Cleveland, Ohio, Nemo theatre, R. H. Trinkner, owner; Grand Island, Neb., Strand theatre, P. W. Karr, owner; Milwaukee, Wis., Regent theatre, Fred C. Seegert, owner; Milwaukee, Wis., Idle Hour theatre, M. C. Krofta, owner; Monroe, Mich., Family theatre, J. R. Denniston, owner; Muncie, Ind., Orpheum theatre, John J. Meehan, owner; Minneapolis, Minn., American theatre, American Amusement Company, owner; Omaha, Neb., Roseland theatre, J. W. Murphy, owner; Appleton, Wis., Majestic theatre, Arthur Behlinger, owner; Iron River, Mich., Cozy theatre, William H. Marloff, owner.

Union Theatre, Seattle, Closed for Repairs

W. L. Hartman, manager of the Union theatre, has made a trip to California to obtain new furnishings and accessories for the theatre which has been closed for a few days to undergo extensive repairs. It is expected the house will remain closed for approximately a month during which time the walls will be repainted, chairs installed and fixed up, screen repaired, projection room improved and new musical apparatus installed. When reopened the Union will be one of the best houses of its kind in the city.—Prager.

Two Stage Settings Effected with One Special Drop and Colored Lighting

THE Allen Theatre, Vancouver, is the first house to use, what may be described, as a two in one drop, just placed on the market by the Acme Scenic Artist Studios, Chicago, and reports that its audiences were greatly enthused over the wonderful effect produced.

The Acme Studio drop is something new in the way of stage effects, as two distinct scenes are painted upon it, one being visible under one color light, and the second scene only being visible under another color.

In actual use the drop is set as an ordinary back drop and the transition from one scene to another is made by changing the color of the lights, when one of the scenes on the drop disappears and gradually melts into the other view.

The drop so successfully used at the Allen Theatre, was recently demonstrated at the Colonial Theatre, Chicago, where it won enthusiastic praise from a critical audience. In this instance, the views on the curtain or drop were those of a beautiful, formal garden and of a picturesque rocky gorge, highly colorful with huge mountains towering into the sky in the background. As a red light was thrown on the drop the lovely garden scene was revealed and then as the dimmers were worked, and the red light gave way to blue, the rocky gorge disappeared from the curtain, as if by magic, and in its place appeared the charming garden scene.

It is interesting to note that no suggestion of the second scene appears during the showing of the first, and the change comes so gradually that the disappearance of one scene and the appearance of the other, as the lights are changed, are not only most pleasing, but actually bewildering in the subtlety of the effect.

Dariel Fitzkie, originator of this remarkable curtain, and who is now connected with the Acme Studios, explains that the result is obtained through synchronizing the lights on the curtain with the design, adding the well known scientific facts, that certain lights bring out certain colors, while others remain invisible, and this is used as the basis for painting the scene.

The big possibilities of this new advance in stage drops for heightening presentations and prologues, is easily apparent and doubtless will meet with prompt recognition from motion picture theatre men.

The drop which was used at the Allen theatre, has also been acquired by the Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, and by Roth & Partington, San Francisco.

Patent Granted for Color Projection

Patent No. 1427131. Granted August 29. Cinematograph color projector. To Hester Stewart and Reginald Killick, London, England. Filed February 15, 1922. Serial No. 536809. Nineteen claims. (C1-88-104.)

Color projection device comprising a projector, mounted in optical relation to lens for dividing rays of image-bearing light into a plurality of beams, a color filter in path of each beam and movable means in operative relation to projector for gradually interrupting beams in predetermined alternate succession, filters being colored to correspond to the color conditions prevailing at time of filming.—Knappen.

Apparatus for Recording the Human Voice on Motion Picture Film

AFTER several years of careful research Professor Edgar I. Wenger, formerly of the Electrical Engineering Department of the University of Illinois, has now in actual operation instruments for photographing any or all sounds and reproducing them at will without the use of any needle such as is required in the phonograph.

Heretofore we have only seen photographs. However, these new developments will now enable us to also hear them as recently shown by Professor Wenge when he exhibited and demonstrated his instruments to a representative of this department. The new invention is closely related to the telephone and camera, and in addition uses the peculiar properties of the light sensitive cell in the reproduction of the sound record.

Briefly described, the sound camera is a small compact, portable instrument not unlike a motion picture camera in appearance, which records any audible sound on standard motion picture film. From this negative positives are made and these positives on being run through the reproducer, the photographic record reproduces the original sound with remarkable fidelity.

The advantages of the Fototone are its portability, permitting he making of records at any place regardless of conditions. Any length of record can be made. In the entire system of making records and reproducing them there are only two moving parts i, e., the diaphram of the telephone transmitter and the diaphram of the reproducer. The fact that the system, both in making the record and reproducing it, is based on the action of light, the fastest thing known to science, is responsible for the making of records with great accuracy in which every inflection, crescendo, or variation of volume is recorded and reproduced.

The ability of the operator to synchronize the sound record with the pictures without the intervention of the human element is undoubtedly a step in advance. In fact it is impossible to get the two out of synchronism.

The system as a whole may be described as follows: Sound is transposed into electrical waves by a telephone transmitter, and these are changed into impulses of light by a small electric lamp. These light impulses are recorded on the sensitized photographic film. The printed positive is used as a light screen or filter in reproducing the sound. It interrupts the lights from a small lamp as it falls on the "sensitive to light" cell which changes the light impulses to electrical waves which are then transformed into a reproduction of the original sound by means of a loud speaking telephone receiver.

The use of standard apparatus for almost all the operating parts is an important feature making for easy standardization.

Sensitive to light cell used in the apparatus for recording the voice on motion picture film

The sensitive to light cell is a remarkable piece of apparatus and deserves special mention. The action of the cell is such that its electrical resistance decreases with the amount of light that falls on it. In other words the more brilliantly it is illuminated the more electric current flows through it. This action which is common to several substances, notably silurian, nevertheless required considerable work before a cell was obtained that would act quickly enough for recording the human voice. This was finally accomplished by the use of a compound which was subjected to special heat treatment. This combination gives cells which will last for years without deterioration and is the keystone of the system.

The recording apparatus can be installed in the ordinary camera and the reproducing apparatus can be installed in any projector.

Strip of Eastman film with the record of sound waves of the human voice

Apparatus for recording sound on motion picture film permitting the sound to be reproduced in perfect synchronism with the pictures

Projection Department Offers Good Example for Others to Follow

SETH E. BARNES, chief projectionist of the new Miller Theatre, Wichita, Kansas, has submitted a very comprehensive description of his projection department. From all indications the projection department of the Miller Theatre is about as near perfection as any in the country. Seth Barnes, who, besides being chief projectionist of the Miller, is also in charge of the projection departments of the Princess, Palace and Regent Theatres in Wichita, tells about his department as follows:

The projection room is 10 by 24 feet with a nine foot ceiling. All wiring is in large conduits that are concealed in the walls, floors and ceiling, thereby doing away with the unsightly wires and cables found in most projecting rooms.

Current Control

The service current is supplied to the projection room, through two 211, 600 circular mill cables, these being rated to carry 312 amperes at 70 volts Direct Current, from a 15 K. W. General Electric Constant voltage, multiple type motor generator set, the D. C. generator of this set is normally driven by a 25 horsepower 3 phase 220 volt A. C. motor, but there is also a multiple cylinder gasoline engine direct connected to the generator which can be started immediately, should the city power service be shut off for any reason, thereby insuring constant service for the projection machines at all times.

The projectors are each equipped with Peerless Automatic Arc Controls.

In front of each machine, beside the lookout ports, are located handsomely finished control panels that are set flush with the front wall. On each panel is mounted a voltmeter, ammeter, radial arc rheostat and control switch and one momentary contact push button switch, the latter being used to signal the stage.

The volt and ammeters upon the panel boards at each machine register the voltage and amperage, respectively, that is being used at the arc lamp of the machine. The radial switch cuts in or out the resistance which, being connected in service with the arc lamp, increases or decreases the screen illumination which can be changed at will according to the density of the film subject, much in the same manner as the turning up or down of an ordinary gas jet. The amount of voltage and amperage being used is readily determined by a glance at the volt ammeter.

Panel in front of each machine in the Miller theatre projection room which enables complete control of the arcs and also signals the stage

On the right side of the projection room, set flush in the wall, is the large switchboard which is also of special design and which controls everything electrical that is located in the projection room. This board extends through the wall into the electrical room and all connections are back connected. In the electrical room are located the rheostats, all of which were especially built for this theatre, and are built on a new multiple unit system and are so constructed as to allow for the increase of light intensity at the arc by the putting in to the circuit of added resistance instead of cutting out the coils in series as has been customary in resistance systems heretofore in use.

In one end of the electrical room is a large substantial work bench which is fitted out with all kinds of mechanical tools for the purpose of repairing or overhauling any of the mechanical equipment of the projection room. Mounted upon the wall in front of the bench is a large tool board with all of the smaller and finer tools arranged neatly in order and within easy reach of the repairman.

Ventilation

In the ceiling of this room there is a large vent which leads to the open air for the purpose of carrying off all the heat that is thrown off by the rheostats.

There are also three large ventilators in the ceiling of the projection room, to which are piped the lamphouses of the projectors so that practically all heat and fumes caused by the powerful arc lamps are carried to the open air.

All look-out ports and projection room openings on the front wall of the projection room are protected by an automatic fire shutter system. A fire-proof door operating in sliding ways is fitted over each opening. Across the front wall near the ceiling is located a steel rod the length of the room. This rod is hung in ball bearing sockets and has a short arm brought out at right angles to it in the form of an L. Attached to the end of this rod is a cord which is carried along the ceiling and goes down through a fuse link at each machine. Attached to the rod immediately above each opening is a steel peg to which is attached the sliding door for the openings. The master cord connected to each machine holds the rod in such a position that the pegs are all parallel with the ceiling. The fuse links which hold the cord are made of a very soft material which part at the first indication of abnormal heat, and thus allow the rod to turn a quarter turn thereby unhooking all the sliding doors, practically sealing the projection room and eliminating any possible danger that might occur through any projection room emergency.

Also located in the projection room is a large special built motor driven rewind and film storage cabinet, for the rewinding and storage of films used during the performance. The rewind is geared down to a very slow speed and has automatic switch which cuts off the motor as soon as the reel is rewound.

The floor of the projection room is covered with heavy battleship linoleum and the walls are painted a dark blue color which harmonizes with the battleship grey machines and makes a very pleasing appearance.

Taken as a whole the projection room of the Miller Theatre is the most complete installation of its kind in the middle west and will serve as a model for future installations for some time to come.

Two screens are used at the Miller Theatre. The distance from the projection room to the front screen is 120 feet, the size of the screen surface being 13 by 17 feet, while the projection distance to the main screen is 135 feet, this screen being 15 by 20 feet. Special attention has been given to the screen surface that was to be installed at the Miller Theatre and in order that the very best surface could be selected to suit the conditions prevailing, a great many experiments were made before the final selection was decided upon.

Reviewing Room

Besides the projection room in the theatre, another smaller theatre is located at the Miller Theatre, this being used for a reviewing-room where will be run any photoplays that the management may wish to review or edit. This room is also fitted up in the latest approved fashion.

Dear Sir:

I have neglected to write to the League long enough. So I am going to send in a few words.

Some of the boys say they have been having h—— with the film they have been running.

I have been chief projectionist for a month and a half and the worst film I have received in that time was "WHY GIRLS LEAVE HOME." The third reel was almost demolished. There were eight reels of the picture and all of them were in the worst of shape. We ran it two days and I put it in the best shape I could. It left with one misframe.

I have still got what I cut out of it. I think I shall keep the pieces as a token of about four hours' work.

Find enclosed my application for membership in the N. A. M. L. and 25c. for a membership button. Please send me information regarding the cost of slides, stickers, badges, etc. I believe the League is doing good work, for I have had but one misframe in the last two weeks, and I don't get extra good film, either. Still I find lots of tail pieces out of frame, but those do not matter much unless it is in a fade-out. I am glad to say that I never have used a punch, but I always remember the last scene when I inspect the picture.

NATIONAL ANTI-MISFRAME LEAGUE PLEDGE

AS a motion picture projectionist who has the interest of his profession at heart and is willing to assist in eliminating some of the evils practised in the projection-room, I promise that I will to the best of my ability return films to the exchange in reasonably good condition, according to conditions of film when received. Furthermore, I will when it becomes necessary remedy misframes, bad patches, etc., that may be in the film which I receive and in this way co-operate with my brother projectionists and give greater pleasure to those who make up the motion picture audience by showing films that are free from such defects. I also promise that I will not make punch marks in film, and when film is received by me, with punch holes, I will notify the exchange to that effect so that they may use their efforts to correct this evil.

New members when sending in application blanks for membership in the N. A. M. please enclose twenty-five cents for a membership button

Sold subject to approval by all dealers. Write today for illustrated folder.

"Joe" Hornstein to Appoint Distributors

"Joe" Hornstein, of the Howells Cine Equipment Company of New York City, the well known motion picture supply dealer, is now director of sales of the Automatic Ticket Machine Company and is making an extensive tour, which will include all the large cities in the country, for the purpose of appointing distribution on the new ticket machine and tickets made by the Automatic Ticket Machine Company. It is reported that a novel idea has been inaugurated for the protection of distributors appointed for this product on all sales made either direct or indirect. "Joe" Hornstein will also endeavor, while making this tour of the country, to increase the rapidly expanding membership of the Association of Motion Picture Supply Dealers of America, of which the Automatic Ticket Machine Company is now a member.

Contracts for Small Model House

John Praggastis, film man of the Northwest coast, has just let contracts calling for the erection of a 650-seat theatre in Kelso, Wash., according to an announcement made this week.

The house is to be built on a lot 50 by 120 feet, in the main business section of the town.

Plans for the building and equipment, as well as the decorating, of the new house have been placed in the hands of B. F. Shearer & Co., theatre equipment specialists of Seattle and Los Angeles.

Simplex projectors will be installed. Contracts for the chairs, electric signs, fixtures, furnishings, drapes and decorating have all been given to the Shearer company, who are starting work at once.

When completed the house is expected to be one of the most complete and modern theatres of its size in the West.—Prager.

New Ruling for Shipping Film

Under proposed new rules for ocean shipping as suggested to the Hague conference certain regulations are of interest to the export and import trade in films. One hundred pounds is the maximum liability, so shipments of film and raw stock should be in packages that will come within that valuation. When inflammable goods, if not known to the shipper, are damaged or destroyed through fire or chemical action they will not be accounted for. If they are invoiced and it is necessary to destroy them, such compensation may be made. This would apply to commercial film if not packed to neutralize the inflammable character of the product.—Knappen.

Closes New Contracts

The Enterprise Optical Manufacturing Company have closed a contract for the installation of Motiograph De Luxe Projectors in all houses of the Lubliner & Trinz circuit.

The decision to use motiographs in all their houses was arrived at by these leading Chicago exhibitors after a thorough try out of the machine in one of their leading theatres.

A battery of motiographs also have been installed in Jones, Linick & Schaefer's new McVicker theatre, and is all ready for the opening of the house.

Lobby Display Machine Proving Success

A new device called the "Slide-O-Graph" has been placed on the market for use in theatre lobbies and prominent windows for display advertising. This machine can be employed for attractive presentations of a chosen assortment of standard motion picture slides, which show the most interesting scenes of each coming feature or vaudeville act to be shown in the theatre and can also be used to very good advantage in presenting various advertising slides from local business houses. Reports are that theatres using this machine have met with very good success.

The "Slide-O-Graph" is very neatly designed with a gold finish, being absolutely foolproof in its mechanical make-up. Slides are slipped into the machine, which automatically projects them on a screen. The pictures change at regular intervals quickly and quietly and then repeat. It is reported that this machine will soon pay for itself by getting local storekeepers to pay a very nominal sum for the display of one or more slides advertising their product.

The accompanying photograph shows Model 48, which automatically displays twenty to forty-eight slides on the screen sixteen by sixty inches. The top panel can be used for the name of the theatre or any other message and also below the main screen is another panel, eight by ten inches, which flashes on and off between changes of slides and can be used for admission prices or policy of theatre, etc. The machine will be found to fit very conveniently in almost any size of lobby. It is manufactured by the Standard Slide Corporation.

The "Slide-O-Graph," a machine for lobby display of slides on coming features, is now being used in theatres to good advantage

Fire Engineers Pass Resolutions on Inflammable Motion Picture Film

FOLLOWING action of the Bureau of Police in Paris, France, prohibiting the use of nitrocellulose motion picture film in places of public assembly on and after January 1, 1925, the Pacific Coast Association of Fire Chiefs and the International Association of Fire Engineers at their conventions in San Francisco in August unanimously adopted the following resolutions:

Whereas, the nitro-cellulose motion picture film now in general use is of the nature of guncotton, and the handling, transportation and storage of the same is therefore a menace to life and property, and

Whereas, there is now commonly manufactured in America and in Europe a film of cellulose acetate, or slow-burning material, rendering the same safe and non-hazardous; it is therefore hereby unanimously

Resolved by the International Association of Fire Engineers that in view of the availability of a safe film the present expensive burden of inspection regulation and surveillance of motion picture displays placed by the motion picture industry upon public fire and safety departments is unwarranted and indefensible, and it is the moral duty of this industry to adopt at once in the production of all new pictures the exclusive use of the slow-burning film; and it is further

Resolved, That the International Association of Fire Engineers hereby calls upon the Federal, State and municipal governments to take proper steps to prohibit by law the use of the nitrocellulose motion picture film on and after January 1, 1925.

Joe Aller Plans Trip to Europe

The calendar at the Rothacker-Aller Laboratory took on a new significance to Joe Aller recently. One evening as he was winding up a fifteen-hour shift at the Hollywood plant he happened to glance up at the chronological chronicler and caught the calendar looking at him reproachfully.

"By the green cat's eyebrows!" swore Joe softly. "It's time to take my vacation. Thanks, calendar, old chap, for reminding me of it."

Aller's last vacation was in the fall of 1912. He makes a practice of taking a vacation regularly every decade, so he packed his bags, laid in a supply of Fatimas and started for London, Paris, Berlin and intermediate points.

He stopped off in Chicago for a short conference with Watterson R. Rothacker. A couple of days later the head of the Rothacker enterprises followed on to New York, where the conference was continued.

Aller's plans call for sailing for Europe on the Olympic October 15. This decade he will take his vacation on board ship. He has work to do in London in connection with the proposed Rothacker British plant and on the continent he will investigate some new devices for laboratory improvement.

The last of November will find Joe back in Hollywood.

Latchis Building in Keene, New Hampshire

Mr. Latchis bought in Keene, N. H. the Lamson block on which will be built a modern theatre, fireproof, with a thousand seats, big pipe organ, cooling and ventilating system and whatever is necessary to make it the best theatre of its size in America. This block is four stories high and has three stores, the center store will be used as an entrance for a theatre.

To Build Theatre in Ont.

Fred Guest, one of the pioneer moving picture theatre proprietors of Hamilton, Ontario, has completed arrangements for the erection of a large moving picture theatre and apartment block in Hamilton to cost upwards of $500,000. The project involves the construction of a theatre having two entrances, one on King Street and the other on Main Street, with individual facilities for fourteen stores and a number of apartment suites—Gladish.

TEN YEARS

is a long time in the picture business and subscribers of ten years standing aren't so plentiful. When one speaks, his words are worth quoting.

Here is what Hugo Plath, manager of the Queen Theatre, Abilene, Texas, writes us in renewing his subscription for the eleventh year:

"Personally I think the News is the leading paper in the field. There are three papers coming in each week—usually on the same day. The News is the first to have the wrapper taken off. I have been reading the News for ten years and have received many valuable suggestions from it"

THE personal service of which THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES boast means more than a catchy slogan. It means that individual attention is given every bit of film developed and printed in our fine, new plant. It means that the heads of our organization know the daily progress made on each production for which we are doing laboratory work and that every scene is personally tested by them.

IT is only through unusual efficiency that a big organization like THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES can give this personal service to each individual order. Perfect co-ordination of all departments is necessary to permit such attention. The foremost producers of the West now utilizing the complete camera-to-screen service of THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES have learned how much this means to them. It saves them time, trouble and money and gives them better prints.

FIFTY million fans will have the time of their lives at "Kick In," and they'll all say it's better than "On With the Dance."

It's melodrama de luxe, the king of crook stories, the last word in action and suspense. Fitzmaurice has many great box-office hits, but none so big as "Kick In." There have been all-star casts before, but none finer than this one.

One of the five biggest pictures of the season --- and you know how big the first four were!

They had to stop selling tickets before the first show started — the crowd lined for a block down Broadway !

New York Herald

"A fine picture and a distinct credit to the Goldwyn corporation, which sponsored it . . . There is some splendid acting in the picture. Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick and James Kirkwood are all thoroughly sincere in their attempts to interpret the characters that Henning Berger has created, and they do their work well . . . Here again Mr. Lloyd demonstrates the fact that he is one of the few movie directors who really understand moving pictures. In 'The Sin Flood' he is even more delicate than in 'Oliver Twist.' The entire production is well modulated and consistent."

New York Tribune

"Done in a way that we consider extremely satisfactory. Frank Lloyd has directed it with marvelous understanding and humor and the cast is fine. Lloyd has seized upon the material and made it into a fascinating screen comedy . . . A delightful picture play."

Evening Telegram

"One of the most absorbing and gripping photoplays of the year . . . the 'movies' are revealing what a triumph they can win over the 'speakies' with Goldwyn's 'The Sin Flood,' produced here on the spoken stage as 'The Deluge' and which is every bit as gripping in the silent drama."

New York Times

" 'The Sin Flood' stands up well and as motion pictures go is far superior to the general run of stuff. Sharply realistic . . . All of the parts are well played . . . Frank Lloyd has done remarkably well as the director."

Morning Telegraph

"Intensely dramatic photoplay; is one of the most effective seen at the Capitol in many months; unquestionably far above the ordinary, a feature that has been exceedingly well-made and acted . . . Being a well-produced, strong story this Goldwyn film should prove decidedly popular with the public."

This is unmistakably a successful box-office picture. The answer comes after it has played and given the answer for exhibitors in dollars. It is the kind of picture that will go on booking and delivering patronage year after year. Read the box-office reports in the various trade papers.

Most of the first runs in the big cities have played it, with a fine profit and in those cities where it has not been booked for first run it will be held back from subsequent runs pending the playing of the larger theatres—it's that valuable a picture.

And when YOU are satiated with crime, and bloodshed, with ancient swashbuckling, and sleuthing, and sex, seek retreat at Miller's, and get back into the warm realities of life. Go and see Baby Helen Rowland and little Joseph Depew, Margaret Seddon and Marie Day, become before your very eyes, Timothy, Lady Gay, Alvida and Samantha in all reality, as if they lived again to reproach the screen of today with their simple story.

Feel the touch of a baby's soft sigh upon your heart, and do not be ashamed of a tear now and then; suffer and sympathize with Samantha, for her burden is as heavy as the hardness of her heart, and find the sadness relieved by laughter upon the intrusion of the champion gab-and-chatter character of the films, Vivian Ogden, who again is the village gossip.

You may not recognize many of the names, but you will not easily forget "Timothy's Quest," with its quaint New England atmosphere, as directed by Sidney Olcott. May the independent American Releasing organization give us more like it and like him.

Dear Mr. Gage:-

I am sending under separate cover, newspaper of the advertising we did on Timothy's Quest, and would say that we had a most satisfactory week, breaking house records, and want to say that "Timothy's Quest" was the most satisfactory, and had the favorable comments of more patrons than we have ever had on any picture we have ever run in this house.

It really drew people that never went to a picture show before, and if we could get more of this kind of pictures, it would be the greatest uplift to the moving picture industry that they could have.

Hoping to see more such pictures on the American Releasing Company programme. With kindest regards, I am,

Friday...October 27TH, was the greatest day in our history!

This was the day "SHADOWS" was first shown to an audience...an audience that was as representative of the world and its viewpoint as an audience could possibly be.

It comprised people from all walks of life and from every quarter of the globe there was Hayakawa..Abe Blank of Des Moines E.V. Richards of New Orleans...Sam Katz of Chicago..in fact, people from everywhere. There were critics from all the trade-papers dailies, magazines. There were artists, producers directors, distributors, writers; foreign buyers, rewind girls, publicity men, and a great many not connected with pictures.

Here are some of the comments after the showing:

HAYAKAWA said, "Lon Chaney's characterization of an Oriental is the truest and most realistic impersonation an Occidental could possibly portray."

HARRISON, of Harrison's Reports, said, "The picture is in a class with 'THE MIRACLE MAN'".

Proud!

GILBERT EMERY, the playwright, said," It is the most legitimate drama I have ever seen in motion pictures."

GEORGE BLAISDELL said, "This is a picture which will make new reputations and fortify others."

It is not merely because "SHADOWS" is a great picture that we are proud - after all, great pictures are expected of every producer. The fact that our second picture is one which has already created so much talk, and is acclaimed so wholesome and out-of-the-ordinary and one that will bring the whole industry honor and esteem, is what makes us proud!

"SHADOWS" will create prestige, profits and respect for your theatre.

Your patrons will thank you for the opportunity of having seen a picture so different and worth while.

You will hold your head high during the run of "SHADOWS"

Mr. C. C. Blumenthal, San Francisco Representative.

Gentlemen:

The spontaneous laughter and approval of the clientele of the California Theatre this week in the showing of Lloyd Hamilton's comedy, entitled "Speeders," are indeed very gratifying to us and I know will be to the Educational Film Exchange.

Needless to say, we are very much elated with the contract in our possession for the forthcoming releases of this comedian's delightful, clean, entertaining comedies. And with the contracts also for the Christie's as well as the Mermaid's, we feel we have an insurance for refreshing comedies in our programs at our California, Granada and Imperial Theatres for the ensuing term.

Your progressive development, coupled with the national campaign, is being splendidly handled, and all progressive exhibitors like ourselves will find themselves duty-bound to contract for these productions to round out a perfect, well-balanced program to satisfy their clientele.

With very best wishes for your continued success,

Yours very truly,

Eugene H. Roth

It is an unbiased opinion of a big progressive first-run exhibitor after he had actually run the picture in the CALIFORNIA one of San Francisco's biggest and best theatres.

Opinions like this, which reflect audience approval, expressed by men of the standing and judgement of Eugene H. Roth, are valuable. They beat projection room reviews all to death.

Lloyd Hamilton will make six feature comedies in two-reel length for 1922-1923. Book the entire series.

"The moment came to this strong man and this adorable woman, causing time and place and all else to be forgotten."
ELINOR GLYN

ELINOR GLYN'S name is synonymous with ravishing love stories and "The Man and the Moment" is a typical Elinor Glyn novel, read and re-read by her millions of followers.

It starts out with a marriage between a man and a woman who are utter strangers to each other. The heroine is being forced to marry a man she hates.

The hero can only be saved from an entangling alliance by marrying some one else. So they wed each other. But such a marriage of convenience offers complications. as this one does, in true Elinor Glyn style.

As a photoplay, "The Man and the Moment" can be played up strongly and, relying upon the fame of Elinor Glyn and the fascinating appeal of this sensational drama, it is sure to be a tremendous success at the box office.

Politics

EVERY time election approaches a dire effort is made to throw the screen into politics.

Last week a New York daily carried a first page story charging Mr. Hays with deeply laid designs to give over the screen in New York State to Governor Miller's Campaign for re-election.

Which, of course, is plain rubbish.

No one knows better than Mr. Hays that the screen must be kept utterly clear of politics; no one will work harder to this end.

The story was immediately and effectively denied by Charles L. O'Reilly, President of the New York State League of Exhibitors; and the thing quickly dissolved into thin air.

* * * *

It is decidedly human to kick back especially when one is kicked in the face.

It is human to want to reward friends and rebuff enemies.

We can readily understand how exhibitors, in every state, feel the urge to work for or against a candidate who has had to do with the freedom of the screen.

That is all right for the individual; his vote is his own and so is his speech and his influence. But it is not for the organized screen. That is entirely another matter.

* * * *

So far as Gov. Miller is concerned there remains in our mind's eye—and always will—a Governor who after listening patiently to a two hours hearing on a bill for shoeing horses said jokingly: "and now we'll take up this movie thing."

Censorship of any kind we had always thought of as one of the most serious of all constitutional matters—one that went to the roots of American government, and, one that might even rock a nation with civil war.

Just why a state governor, a lawyer and a former Judge should be so determined to have motion pictures officially censored has been a great enigma to us—and always will be.

We can pretty well imagine how every motion picture man in this state feels about Governor Miller—or ought to feel, regardless of any political consideration. We for one don't hesitate at all to put our opinion in print, much less to express it verbally.

And that—still remains our blessed privilege, and every other man's. We couldn't, of course, say it with films—not with a censor on the job.

* * * *

But the screen we repeat and emphatically, is another matter.

Its a mighty powerful agent. It is natural to turn to it—and its power—when we are stepped on.

But the screen doesn't belong entirely to the exhibitors of any one state or locality. It belongs, in that sense, to the exhibitors of the nation, and THEIR best interests. And still more, it belongs to this entire industry and ITS best interests.

And still more it belongs to the public and ITS best interests.

* * * *

It is proper and fine for the screen to fight for principles. And censorship is a principle, big and vital to the people of this country. It is our duty in fact to tell the public just what censorship is, provided of course we don't bore them to death.

But to fight for or against political candidates is not the right or duty of the motion picture screen. It is not only selling a great birthright for a mess of pottage; but it's selling out the other fellows' right—the other exhibitor elsewhere, the other motion picture man everywhere who suffers correspondingly when the screen is dragged into the mud of the political candidates' battles.

The screen is for principles—not politics.

And we'll keep it so.

WM. A. JOHNSTON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

TWO amazing characterizations have come forth the past week which must be classified as among the greatest the screen has offered—characterizations which one might expect when such talented personalities as Jackie Coogan and Lon Chaney grace a picture. We all knew that little Jackie would more than make good with Dickens' immortal character, Oliver Twist. Some might say that he is too young, but the people who offer that criticism have been influenced by the fact that the forlorn figure, who became Fagin's disciple of crime, has heretofore been interpreted by some actor or actress who has reached maturity. Dickens' character was only nine years of age. Jackie Coogan is eight. Therefore, he is the closest approach to the author's conception than any representation of the past.

The tiny star has flashed his genius before. Possessing a sensitive, mobile face which expresses every kind of emotion, he has brought screen pantomime to such a high stage of expression that his champions (and they are legion) are willing to come forward and say that he is the most perfect actor of the shadow stage. He fairly tugs at one's heart strings, extracting the utmost sympathy as Fagin and, later, Bill Sykes guide him along the highway of crime. Jackie steps from Dickens' novel, a pitiable little figure. He gives to Oliver the breath of humaness and reality. His performance is sheer artistry. The book gains in substance and interest. You will admit it when you read it again. And the screen gains one of its finest expressions.

Lon Chaney is an actor endowed with a genuine talent for characterization. He also possesses a countenance which is able to reflect the feelings of the heart. This gift for true characterization coupled with his sincerity makes any study which he interprets a memorable achievement. We all know what he can do and we are never disappointed. You saw him in "The Miracle Man," and "The Penalty," and marveled over his uncanny ability to get into character and never step out of it. Now he comes forward with what must be considered his greatest study, that of the heathen Chinaman, who accepts Christianity when he observes the divine power of forgiveness, although his religion—his idol-worshipping religion—is based upon faithful devotion for friendly service.

"Shadows" presents Chaney in a superb expression. Always a master of make-up, he outdoes himself here in his marvelous drawing of the Chink. The drooping shoulders, the shuffling gait, the peculiar coolie hair-cut, the expressions of the eyes and mouth and the eloquent hands—these stamp this man as the ablest character actor of them all. He is always the perfect representation of what he portrays. He never abuses the make-up, though he uses it more than any other actor. He knows how to apply its contents—and once applied he steps right into character through a heart that feels the emotions and a face which reflects them. Hail to Jackie Coogan and Lon Chaney!

H. H. VAN LOAN, the scenario writer and author of "The Virgin of Stamboul," and many other screen attractions, has gone into the publishing business with R. T. Thornby and Lindsay McKenna. H. H. Van Loan, Inc., are the publishers of the author's book, "How I Did It." Mr. Van Loan writes that the book is very constructive and of educational value to anyone who is contemplating scenario writing. He adds that it is an interesting volume in itself and need not be confined to people who are contemplating story writing, although no claims are made that it will teach anyone how to write.

AMONG the list of passengers who sailed on the S. S. Homeric was William Blumenthal whose purpose when he reaches London, is to look after the interests of his brother, Ben Blumenthal.

* * *

THERE are several shots in "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" which show that someone endowed with true artistic perception was on the job. We know that Allan Dwan can compose some mighty effective scenes; we know that Wilfred Buckland, being an artist of the brush, knows the value of colors, lights, shadows, and backgrounds. Undoubtedly Messrs. Dwan and Buckland cooperated to give the picture the full advantage of their combined talent. You will wait a long time before you see such rare etchings as the Earl of Huntingdon and Maid Marian atop the battlement in the full expression of love. What about the hollow in Sherwood Forest where is gathered the motley faithfuls of Robin Hood? What about the impression of vast space within the confines of the castle? What about the hollow square where on all sides knights and ladies and courtly personages are gathered to witness the joust between Huntingdon and Gisbourne? These scenes (there are many more) reveal a true insight of what constitutes composition and background.

GOLDWYN'S "Brothers Under the Skin," and "Hungry Hearts," First National's "Minnie" Pathe's "Bill of Divorcement," "The Young Rajah," offered by Paramount, and "The Headless Horseman," offered by Hodkinson, are the pictures which win the asterisks of the National Board of Review—pictures which they recommend as particularly fine.

* * *

JOHN M. STAHL is in New York for a stay of three or four weeks combining business with pleasure. This is the director's first vacation in over two years, during which time he has produced several features. His latest picture, tucked away in its container, preceded him by a few days.

A MAGNIFICENT Madge Bellamy edition of "Lorna Doone" has been brought out by the Milton Bradley Company to tie up with the release of the photoplay directed by Maurice Tourneur. The book carries a jacket in full color, showing Madge Bellamy as Lorna, and a facsimile autograph of Miss Bellamy. On the fly-leaf, also in facsimile, is a personal message from the youthful star. The preface is by Thomas H. Ince, and following this appears the words of the song, "Lorna Doone," especially written by Arthur Penn, himself a native of the country in which the action is laid. The volume contains 23 illustrations, 10 of which are duo tone reproductions of scenes from the photoplay, and 13 full color illustrations by Harold Brett. The volume is beautifully printed in large, clear type, and is an admirable example of the book publisher's art.

* * *

MANAGING DIRECTOR JOE PLUNKETT of the New York Mark Strand reports that "Oliver Twist" is bringing the children in by the thousands. A picture which will do this at the present time is a good thing for the whole industry. When children become enthusiastic about a picture, they tell the whole world about it, and if the adults of the family don't come with them, they are likely to come later. Incidentally, this thought suggests some good possibilities in the way of tie-ups with schools.

FOX seems to have a penchant for picturizing Longfellow's poems. A few seasons ago this company produced "Evangeline." Now "The Village Blacksmith" will soon be placed on view. In the cast are William Walling, Virginia Valli, Tully Marshall, Bessie Love, George Hackathorne and David Butler.

ALEXANDER VAN RENSSALAER, formerly on the New York Sun and now with the publishing house of Duffield and Company, contributes an article to the November Bookman on "Photoplay Writing and the Photoplay Market." After giving various practical and useful advice to those who would write for the screen, he says, speaking of the usual misconception of the financial rewards involved: "Once in a while, and rather of a long while at that, $25,000 or $50,000 or maybe a bit more is paid for the picture rights to a story. As a rule, the most successful sales are nearer $2,500 or $5,000, and the AVERAGE sales are somewhere around $500. It is said on good authority that Lasky paid only $7,500 for the picture rights to 'The Sheik,' one of the best selling moving pictures of 1922."

* * *

WE name for your approval three actors of the silversheet who never go wrong in their characterizations. No matter what kind of stories they have—whether they are good, bad or middlin'—no matter what kind of direction—these players always give finished performances. If one of them is in a good picture he makes it quite a superlative achievement; if one of them is in a poor picture he makes it look better than it really is. Gentlemen we present: Lewis Stone, House Peters and James Kirkwood.

* * *

BEN GRIMM, who has been in England the past year in the interests of Universal, has returned to the States, as they say in the London he left a short while ago.

* * *

FRANK LLOYD has two productions on Broadway this week in "Oliver Twist," and "The Sin Flood." Both these pictures are entirely different from each other in subject matter and characterization. Which goes to show how gifted Lloyd is in catching the psychology of his stories and making them into highly entertaining photoplays. The average director is only capable of sticking to his last—of doing one thing better than he can do another. Lloyd is one of the few versatile handlers of the megaphone who can do two things well, though they may be entirely different.

* * *

WHEN a double needs a double is equivalent to saying, after the manner of Briggs, the cartoonist, "when a feller needs a friend." Of course Maciste, Italy's strong boy, doesn't need a double. He can do the work of twenty or even fifty doubles. We would like to see him in a zip-bang American serial where he is called upon to carry Brooklyn Bridge around or tear the Woolworth Building up by the roots. Maciste dropped out of sight after "Cabiria." Some said he was killed during the war. But he looks very much alive in "The Unconquered," a picture which presents him putting over one thrill after another.

* * *

THOMPSON BUCHANAN has left Famous Players to devote his whole time on his dramatic work at which he is quite deft. The re-writing of parts of one of his recent efforts, "The Sporting Thing to Do," will engage his spare moments for a few weeks. The play is scheduled for a New York opening in the very near future.

* * *

IT certainly looks like a line-up of REAL PICTURES on Broadway these crisp November days. Take notice what is offered on the big street. "The Sin Flood" is at the Capitol. "Oliver Twist" is at the Strand. "The Town That Forgot God" is catching them at the Astor, while the Criterion is turning them away with "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Just around the corner on 42nd Street one may see Griffith's "One Exciting Night," and "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood." At Loew's State is "Timothy's Quest."

* * *

EUGENE O'BRIEN'S followers are certain to register disappointment when they learn that their favorite is saying goodbye to the screen for a while. The former Selznick star, who has not been active in pictures since his accident several weeks ago on the West Coast, will be seen within a few weeks in a new stage play, "Steve." Rehearsals will begin in New York in a few days.

* * *

HAROLD LLOYD is due for a short vacation in New York, arriving in time to witness the Broadway premiere of "Dr. Jack." The date of the comedian's departure on his annual trans-continental trip combining business with recreation is subject to postponement in case he should decide that his latest production needed some further finishing touches.

Harold Lloyd is one of the top-notchers who still wears the same sized hat. As a result the boys are always glad to see him. And he is always glad to see the boys.

* * *

DID you know that Theodore Roberts has a hobby—which is the collecting of animals? The latest addition to his menagerie is a goat. This able character actor has collected "goats" before. Several actors have complained that he has a way of stealing a picture. Well, when you have personality and can "troupe" why not show these qualities when the opportunity arrives? Roberts' collection of goats must total a baker's dozen or more. But only one is entitled to graze upon a Hollywood pasture and he owns four legs.

* * *

THe nicest thing we can say about J. D. Williams is to put down here briefly the sum total of all the nice things said about him in the New York film world this week. It all boiled down to: Williams is a good fellow and a big man."

And that's a good deal to say about anybody.

Like all big-sizeable men Williams has his faults; but they are minor to his bigness. And he has in large measure this essential of success—that he is not only eager for advice but he always listens to it and frequently follows it. He's a cabinet man; he hires other good men and gives them authority.

The genius of J. D. Williams is simply this: he was born, bred and trained for the show business. He knows it and loves it. He has the creative instinct, and he plans big with a sure foundation policy of show sense. He looks and works a year ahead—all the time. There are, indeed, few of whom this can be said. So we look for big things from this man—things that will have a lot to do with the big future of motion pictures.

Massachusetts Censorship Defeat Forecasted

Father of Original Bill Now States Publicly that it is Dangerous Measure

ELECTION DAY for the State of Massachusetts is less than a week away, and the forces that have been working to kill the state censorship bill for motion pictures seem to have neglected no avenue. Now, in the nature of a ninth inning pinch hit, a TNT. bomb has gone off in the camps of the reformers.

Senator George D. Chamberlain, of Springfield, father of the original bill for censorship, passed last year by the legislature, has disowned his own child. He has publicly stated that he considers the measure dangerous, and has expressed serious doubt that his bill offers the best solution. He gives it as his opinion that the place for censorship is in the making of the films, and that he thinks the job better left to the industry itself under the direction of Will H. Hays, already the creator of much that is good.

Coming as it does at the last moment in the campaign, and backed by the solid support of war veteran bodies, labor, many of the state's more prominent clergy, and nearly 100 per cent. of the newspapers, it looks as though all had combined into a rather weighty straw that had badly bent, if not broken, the censorship camel's back. He has been rather wobbly on his ungainly legs for some time, but now they have sunk beneath him.

One of the most significant points in the fight is that B. Preston Clark, leader of the censorship army, and who is popularly believed to be in the process of having his leg pulled by the reformers, has consistently declined the offers and challenges hurled by Brig.-Gen. Charles H. Cole, leader of the antis, to argue with him publicly. Gen. Cole has also challenged him to name a single film that he has seen in the state that he alleges to be indecent. Mr. Clark refused the challenge on the ground that "it would go to swell box office receipts."

Editorial comment on the question continues unabated. The Worcester Daily Telegram takes up Gen. Cole's challenge on indecent films and asks the voters to apply the test of the need of censorship to their own case, and ask themselves how many indecent films they have seen personally. They also ask that the members of the organizations named by Mr. Clark as supporting censorship ask themselves the same question.

The Boston Traveler demands: "When will our self-appointed reformers learn that enough is enough? Surely this is not the psychological moment for clamping on further restrictions. Legislation that is not backed by education—supported, that is, by the educated opinion of the people and consonant with their desires—is apt to be productive of more evil than good."

The Waltham Evening News says: "Censorship of motion pictures will lead inevitably to the censorship of the press, of art, and of literature. Abuses far more serious than those which exist in the pictures of today will follow in the wake of censorship law, for the door is opened to religious and political bigotry, to intolerance and to graft. The effect of censorship in states where it has already been tried has been to lower the standards of the pictures. It has frequently been said that a person who is qualified as far as any man or woman can be qualified to be a censor, would never consent to act as one; and there is considerable truth in the statement. Men and women of broad minds recognize that their opinions are not infallible."

The Boston American has again unearthed a very bad point in the bill. It is Section 56, Chapter 438, and is as follows:

"Subject to the approval of the Governor and the Council the commissioner (censor) shall make and enforce such rules and regulations as he may deem necessary to carry out the provisions of Sections 52 to 58, inclusive."

Significant also is the fact that many of the local city censors are strongly opposed to the measure.

Anna T. Steinauer, assistant censor of the City of Boston, declares that the measure is unconstitutional and a very dangerous procedure to encourage. Speaking from a municipal standpoint she said: "Your only safeguard is to keep within your household what rightfully belongs to you and allow no interference from outside controls, which means autocracy and tyranny."

Miss Zonia Agnes Tabor, of the Lynn board, says: "It takes all the time 15 censors can give to attend to their work, let alone one man doing it. I will do everything in my power to defeat the state censorship bill and my 14 friends on the Lynn censorship board are with me against it. I urge everybody to vote NO with me on November 7."

Mrs. Gertrude Hayes O'Leary, secretary of the Democratic State Committee, declared: "Suppression of free speech and the press, which failed in the attempt ages ago, resemble this hysterical effort that would mean only the creation of jobs for extremely reactionary reformers. Massachusetts has an enlightened citizenship and is quite capable to judge for itself without dictatorship."

Even in the official book issued by the state with information for voters, setting forth each question coming up for decision, with arguments on both sides of the question presented, Gen. Cole and his associates swamped Clark with their arguments.

Indiana Club Women Ask Censorship Bill

AFTER lying dormant for two years the censorship issue came to the front in Indiana late last week when the Indiana State Federation of Women's Clubs in annual convention at Indianapolis adopted a resolution withdrawing support of the work of the Indiana Board of Photoplay Indorsers and calling for appointment of a committee to lobby in the next Legislature for passage of a censorship bill.

Thousands of club women in every corner of the state were represented at the convention. There was sharp division upon censorship but a faction which was angry because it was defeated in the Legislature two years ago, and which has quietly built its fences ever since proved strong enough to push through its resolution after a sharp debate with women who believe in the work of the indorsers.

The indorsers hold with the photoplay industry that censorship is un-American and that it is more effective in the interest of cleaner films to publish endorsements of good films, ignoring the bad or merely suggesting betterments to the exhibitor. Exhibitors all over the state have co-operated with the indorsers for the past two years.

Sydney Cohen Takes Part in Daylight Savings Fight

On Monday of this week, October 30th, the Western New York Motion Picture Theatre Owners, Inc., while meeting in the Palace Theatre, Buffalo, went on record as strongly opposed to Daylight Saving and favoring its abrogation in the referendum now before the people of Buffalo. National President Sydney S .Cohen took an important part in the meeting. Accompanied by M. J. O'Toole, head of the Public Service Department of the M. P. T. O. of A.; Howard Smith, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Western New York; and L. J. Dittmar, president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Kentucky, Mr. Cohen went from Buffalo to Rochester and addressed the Rochester theatre owners at the Elks Club in that city, on Tuesday afternoon.

One of the features of the visit of the M. P. T. O. of A. executives to Rochester was an inspection tour through the Eastman Theatre and the Eastman School of Music as the guest of George Eastman.

At the Buffalo meeting on Monday Daylight Saving was the issue. The intrusion of the Daylight Saving measure upon the daily programs and sleeping hours of all classes of working people and its alleged detrimental effects upon the health of adults and children especially were scored by the speakers. National President Sydney S. Cohen and Mr. O'Toole made interesting addresses. Mr. Cohen spoke of his recent tour in the West and reported satisfactory progress being made by the national organization in all sections. He emphasized the need of concerted action to offset moves inimical to the interests of theatre-owners and mentioned Michigan, Boston and Chicago as centers in which organized effort was especially imperative at the present time.

The screen of the Buffalo theatres is being used to advise the public of the Daylight Saving situation, reels and slides being utilized to carry messages against the measure to motion-picture patrons.

La Crosse Theatres Win Exploitation Prize

First prize in the Northwest "Go To Movie Week" exploitation contest, conducted by a Northwest trade magazine, was awarded this week to the La Crosse Theatres Company, which operates the Rivoli and Majestic theatres in La Crosse, Wis. The honor carries with it a cash prize of $100. The contest was based upon the selling of the idea of Go to Movie Week to patrons. The movement, endorsed by producers, exhibitors and distributors all over the northwestern states, resulted in one of the greatest increases in attendance recorded in film history.

Williams Resigns as First National Manager

Popular Executive and Organizer Is Succeeded By Richard A. Rowland

J. D. WILLIAMS, who five years ago organized Associated First National Pictures Inc., has resigned the general managership of that organization and has been succeeded by Richard A. Rowland, who joined the First National forces last spring, and who previous to that time was president of Metro.

These were the announcements made by First National during the week, and they put an end to a spirti of unrest that has permeated the atmosphere around those headquarters for some time past. Williams presented his resignation to First National officials and it was reluctantly accepted.

So far as can be learned there will be no other changes in the executive forces of the organization, for the present, at least. The directorate and executive committee will remain as in the past with the exception of the withdrawal of Williams as the chief and the advancement of Rowland to that office.

Just what effect these changes will have on the future of the organization is problematical. Rowland, the new general manager, has not announced any changes of policy nor will he do so until he "gets on his feet," according to announcement from the First National offices.

The withdrawal of Mr. Williams from office has occasioned considerable regret as is evident by the following statement issued late last week from the First National headquarters.

"Mr. Williams' association with First National, as manager from the time of its organization, and his prominence in the starting of this company, as well as in the motion picture industry generally, are so well known that little need or can be said.

"Mr. Williams leaves the office of manager of First National with the best wishes and kind regards of all of his former associates. It is probable that Mr. Williams will take a considerable vacation before announcing his further plans.

"Mr. Richard A. Rowland, who has been associated with Mr. H. O. Schwalbe and Mr. Williams for the last six months in directing the affairs of First National, has been appointed by the Board of Directors, General Manager of First National."

The consensus of opinion in the industry is that Williams is a most efficient executive and one whose efforts have placed First National on the present high plane which it occupies.

J. D. Williams organized First National five years ago, starting with theatres on the West Coast, thence to the South and winding up a country-wide trip in New York. Small offices were taken at 18 East 41st street. C. L. Yearsley joined him here. In time a number of the original franchise holders dropped out—Eugene Pearce of New Orleans, Jake Wells of Richmond, T. L. Talley of Los Angeles, William Swanson of Denver, Jones, Linick and Schaeffer of Chicago, William Sievers of St. Louis, G. N. Halsey of Dallas, and their interests were taken over by the present franchise holders in these districts. S. L. Rothapfel was the first president, his interests, on resigning being taken over by Mitchell Mark. Mr. Williams still holds an interest in the New York exchange.

First National speedily became a power in the business, has often been a storm center in the big developments of the industry and has grown rapidly to large dimensions. The financial investment today is a very heavy one. In the Spring of 1919 at Atlantic City Associated First National Theatres and Associated First National Pictures were incorporated with large capitalizations and with Robert Lieber as president.

Just previous to the organization of First National and while still in the West, Mr. Williams wrote and had published in Motion Picture News a letter in which he outlined his principles of organization—namely the protection of and the fostering of the interests of the independent producer and the independent exhibitor. In a recent statement he says: "these things—the creed of independence for producer and exhibtor—are the fundamentals upon which I organized First National almost five years ago and they are the things which I have effectively held forth since then as the chief reason why that organization should and must continue."

Mr. Williams has no anouncement to make as yet about his future plans. It is almost certain however that this same fundamental policy will be the basis of his future activity and it is rumored that he will shortly re-enter the industry upon a large scale. At present he will go to California for a short trip.

J. D. Williams has always been a prominent figure in this industry and measures up today as one of its chief constructionists. Coming here from Australia, where he built and operated a big string of theatres some ten years ago he joined forces with W. W. Hodkinson and organized Paramount. At one time he contemplated a string of theatres in India and visited that country for that purpose. He returned here however and devoted his energies to the creation and organization of First National.

Rumors have been flying thick and fast in New York for the past few days because of the changes in the First National organization, but until General Manager Rowland has had time to thoroughly acquaint himself with his new surroundings there will probably be no official statement as to coming activities.

Among other things it is rumored that First National will take up the production end of the game on an elaborate scale and that the organization is already on the path of a number of studios in which to start production work. Apparently there is no sound basis upon which these rumors are based, and officials of the organization have scoffed at them.

There have been rumors of other executives resigning, and of various members of the directorate and executive staffs withdrawing from their posts, but these supposed upheavals have apparently been magnified, according to all appearances and announcement from the home office.

The spirit of unrest within the offices has been quieted within the past day or two with the statement of President Robert Lieber that heads of the various departments need feel no concern regarding their positions so far as their work proved satisfactory.

That Richard A. Rowland will make an able successor to Williams is conceded by the entire industry. He has been closely identified with the motion picture game for many years and is well qualified to succeed Williams.

As an organizer, Rowland has few superiors. It was largely through his efforts that the old Alco was salvaged, when Rowland was one of the original franchise holders, and Metro was launched from it. Franchise holders of Alco sent for him to rescue what could be saved from the Alco wreck, and this was converted into the successful Metro organization. It was early in 1915 that this reorganization was effected and Rowland remained at the head of that organization until about a year ago when he tendered his resignation and left for Europe.

Rowland is senior partner of Rowland and Clark of Pittsburgh, First National franchise holders of Western Pennsylvania and the largest motion picture theatre operators in that territory.

Wisconsin Theatres Aid Potato Week

THE Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Wisconsin are lending their fullest cooperation to the Governor of the state and the Department of Markets in Potato Week, November 5 to 11.

The potato situation in the Northwest, particularly in the states of Wisconsin and Minnesota, is such as to demand immediate attention. Wisconsin has over 100,000,000 bushels more than it can use for its own consumption, and Minnesota's crop is conservatively estimated at 17,000 carloads.

The Theatre owners are endeavoring to enlighten the public and stressing the fact that the immediate purchase of potatoes will enable the consumer not only to take advantage of the present low prices, but will also aid in bettering general business conditions. Every theatre in Wisconsin will run a slide calling attention to the Governor's proclamation for Potato Week.

Famous Players Canadian Shows Neat Profit

Despite the existence of depressed conditions, generally, in the theatrical world during the past year, the third annual report of the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, prepared for presentation at the annual general meeting of the company at Toronto on November 9, shows that the corporation made profits of $439,192.18, before allowance for depreciation was made. This amount also includes share of profits in subsidiary organizations under the control of the Famous Players company.

The official report shows total assets of $14,402,087, and totalled stock issued $12,500,000. Quarterly dividends at the rate of eight per cent. were paid on the company's first preferred shares, which required $320,000, and, in addition, there was set aside $100,481.15 as depreciation allowance, while $18,372.42 was written off deferred charges. Provision was also made for the 1921 income tax of $32,382.61 and deducted from the balance of surplus account carried forward from last year.

Russian Cinema Will Cater to All Classes

Government Mass Instruction Policy in Pictures to Be Supplanted by Live Stories

By Huntly Carter

THE future of the moving picture and film trade in Soviet Russia depends on the direction this country is going to take. There is no doubt that today Russia is at the parting of the ways. This fact is as clear as crystal to any intelligent visitor. The sign-post points on the one hand to a partial return to pre-war conditions with the workers as the new bourgeois, and, on the other, to a modified communism which will permit the workers and the peasants to remain owners of the factories and land while at the same time inviting foreign capitalists and technicians to assist them to manage and develop their property.

Whatever happens, there will never be a complete return to the old pre-war life. The peasants, it is true, still hanker after a Czar, but he must be a Czar of a different pattern to the former "Little Father," one who will accommodate himself to their new-born idea of land ownership.

Looking at the course of events since the Revolution we notice three distinct periods of disorganization and organization. From 1917 to 1918 there was a wild attempt to apply all sorts of Communist theories and consequent disorganization. From 1918 to 1921 there was a bold and systematic attempt at organization. All private property was confiscated and all places of entertainment were nationalized. From 1921 to the present day there has been another period of disorganization.

Owing to the public unrest, lack of resources, the famine and other causes, the Government has been compelled to adopt a policy of de-control and denationalization. I was told that this disorganization is only temporary and there will be a return to Government organization as soon as the situation permits, that is, as soon as big scale industry has been permanently established.

This optimism on the part of the Government officials is not supported by the public attitude. One can see quite plainly that the public has grown tired of interference with its individual rights and will no longer tolerate being sent to school in the theatre, cinema and other places of entertainment. It is beginning to resent the obstinate attempt to apply in its recreational centers the defined principles of a uniform type of proletarian school, and wants to be set free and more to its own form of amusement.

From this we may infer that the mass instruction movement in the cinemas is going by the board never to return. Very shortly we shall find the Russian cinemas catering for two or three classes instead of one. Doubtless this class will include the artistic, intelligent cinema-goer to whom red-hot revolutionary satire is not the only pebble on the cinema beach. To him there is something more alluring in romance served up with the aesthetic trimmings which it is becoming the fashion in western Europe and America to supply. Another class will ask for the good, live story in place of lectures on health and explanations of a day of the life of a flea. In face of strengthening public opinion the Soviet Government will have no choice but to permit the exhibition of home-made or foreign novelties.

It is conceivable that with the return of the private exhibitor it will add a stimulus to home production of individual films. He is not going to exchange his money in goods that the public is not asking for. The Government finding themselves faced with the possibility of losing their rent and taxes and having the cinemas returned on their hands, would doubtless make more concessions. At any rate, the Government admits that it is out to attract Russian and foreign capital for the purpose of developing the film industry. This means, if it means anything at all, that films are to be produced and exhibited on a paying basis.

In other words, money-makers are likely to be wanted in Soviet Russia. And, of course, if the Government carries out their intention of importing films, they must import money-makers or nothing. On the whole a film trade revival in Russia may be expected. And it may be that this vast country which covers one-sixth of the world's landmass and contains 150,000,000 inhabitants is going to be a veritable Klondike to all engaged in the world's film industry. But it will not be just yet. For the moment trade revival is barred by several things. There is first of all the exchange. Secondly, there are ruinous rents and taxes.

Perhaps the exchange is the worst feature. With the rouble so many millions to the dollar, buying or renting new American films is quite out of the question. How long this state of things will continue it is hard to say. It may not last so long as some people think: In November the Soviet Government will make a move towards the stabilization of the rouble. Owing to a favorable corn field and the profit they have made out of it, they have been able to buy up the pre-1922 paper currency. They are now issuing new notes which are worth 10,000 times more than the face value of the old notes.

Thus a 1,000,000 rouble note will, after October, be worth no more than 100 roubles. But it should be said that this appreciation of paper money does not alter the cost of things either in or out of Russia. If today a Russian exhibitor pays, say 30,000,000 roubles for an old foreign film in November he will pay 3,000 for it. At the same time, if his box office receipts are now 40,000,000 roubles weekly, in November they will be no more than 4,000 roubles. So that as far as purchasing films is concerned in November he will be in precisely his present position. It is true he will have less notes to count and maybe will find that a matter for cheerful reflection.

This is the barest suggestion of what the future of the cinemas in Soviet Russia is likely to be. The Government is anxious to attract capital. Capital once attracted may serve as an outlet and inlet for the enormous new activities of the cinema industry.

Bright Picture Future Seen in Russia

THIS is the third and last of a series of stories by Huntly Carter written especially for Motion Picture News on picture conditions in Soviet Russia. In the series Mr. Carter has given an intimate insight on the Russian situation so far as the industry is concerned.

This story deals with the future and what it holds. The writer sees splendid prospects ahead, with great wealth to be made as conditions change. Mr. Carter is well qualified to write on the subject as he has been well within Russia twice for the past two years and he made the pilgrimage solely for the purpose of ascertaining conditions. He only recently returned from the second visit.

Industry Will Aid Red Cross Roll Call

Under the chairmanship of Will H. Hays, a strong and representative committee of producers and distributors is working to boost this year's Red Cross Roll Call, which begins throughout the nation on Armistice Day, November 11, and continues until Thanksgiving Day, November 30.

The need of the Red Cross is doubled and redoubled, Chairman Hays explains, through the refugee emergency, in the Near East, to meet which the Red Cross, as a semi-Governmental agency, has been called upon by President Harding. Besides being chairman of New York producers' and distributors' committee, Mr. Hays has been appointed by President Harding as Chairman of the National Co-Ordinating Committee, which will have charge of the nation-wide campaign for relief funds, in which the Red Cross and the Near East Relief will be the official bodies for receiving contributions.

The following are the men who are associated with Chairman Hays in New York's Red Cross Roll Call committee:

Harold Bolster, The Kenma Corporation; William Fox, Fox Film Corporation; R. H. Cochrane, Universal Film Co.; Adolph Zukor, Famous Players-Lasky Corporation; Marcus Lowe, Metro Pictures Corporation; Lewis J. Selznick, Select Pictures Corporation; Earl W. Hammons, Educational Films Exchange, Inc.; Frank J. Godsel, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation; John M. Quinn, Vitagraph, Inc.; Joseph M. Schenck, and Warner Brothers.

Theatres to Help Advance Postal Service

Dr. Hubert Work, Postmaster General of the United States, has entered enthusiastically into cooperation with the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America and through this organization with all Theatre Owners to advance the postal service of the Nation and make it of the greatest possible service to the people.

The Postmaster General recently announced that certain advanced moves were determined upon to bring the Postal Service closer to a paying basis and make such general and other improvements as the new lines of procedure comprehended.

Desiring to aid in every way this very commendable division of public service, National President Sydney S. Cohen advised Dr. Work that it was the purpose of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America to cooperate with him in every way.

Fairbanks Picture Takes New York by Storm

By LAURENCE REID

THE premiere of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" at the Lyric theatre, New York, Monday evening, Oct. 30th, marked the most notable opening of a Fairbanks production in this city. Everyone vitally interested in the screen or connected with it in any way made it his business to be present. It was a distinguished audience, composed of literary celebrities, artists of the stage and the silent drama, editors, people prominent in public life, producers and other notables of the theatrical and screen world, as well as representatives of the social whirl, which assembled in the theatre awaiting the opportunity to witness one of the most colossal achievements of the silversheet, an achievement heralded in advance as something extraordinary.

The audience held an impromptu reception throughout the theatre. It came to pay homage to a marvelous canvas. It was perhaps the most brilliant assemblage yet witnessed at a motion picture premiere. Outside the theatre and blocking traffic were hundreds of people who, unable to gain admittance, were content to linger in hopes that they might catch a glimpse of Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford and their other favorites. The lucky holders of tickets had to storm the doors—run the gauntlet, so to speak. If one was alert one could hear such remarks as "Here comes Tom Meighan. Oh look, here's Nazimova." But Doug and Mary disappointed them. Indeed they had difficulty reaching the stage door on 43d street.

Meanwhile the notables were being seated—men and women listed among Who's Who in Big Accomplishments. John Barrymore, Richard Barthelmess, George Fawcett, Tex Rickard, Betty Blythe, Hope Hampton, Carol Dempster, John McCormick, Charles Bryant, Hiram Abrams, William Fox, J. D. Williams, Lewis Selznick, Frank Crowninshield, June Mathis, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford, Mary Hay, Melville Stone, John Fairbanks, Col. William Hayward, Elmer Harris, Allan Dwan, John Stahl, Tom Geraghty, and hundreds of others equally famous were among those who had come to pay tribute to this picture which stands as one of the greatest achievements of the industry. Several minutes after the appointed hour the theatre was placed in darkness. The hub-bub of excitement diminished and all eyes were focused upon the stage where a prologue, in the spirit of the picture, featured a baritone singer attired as a Crusader, singing "In Days of Old, When Knights Were Bold."

No member of this audience came to scoff. Every spectator knew what was in store for him. He knew that Douglas Fairbanks had a gigantic picture in every sense of the word. And as the mammoth scenes of Norman Castle were flashed showing the magnitude of the sets—when the star astride a prancing horse engaged in a joust with a worthy rival before the castle towers—these spectators composed an audience of one mind. "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" had conquered them completely. It was indeed a triumph for the fifth industry—a triumph for the star and the director and their associates. Joseph Littau, who arranged the musical setting, caught the spirit of the mediaeval days. There was pomp and ceremony in his selections when the knights journeyed forth on their holy crusade; there was gayety and abandon when Robin Hood ventured forth to avenge his sweetheart and his king. English Morris dances predominated. And so appropriate were these selections that they aided considerably in transporting the audience and giving it the feeling that they were actual participants or spectators in the romantic drama.

A review of "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is not included in the assignment of which these words are a part. We all know that the star has offered us a masterpiece in this drama of troubadours and knights and robber bands and jolly friars. We all know that England furnished a fount of romance and chivalry through the middle ages. And what greater figure of romance and chivalry could be found than Robin Hood, who defied his king to save that worthy his throne.

The production is divided into two parts, the first being taken up with the preparations for the crusade to the Holy Land. Here one catches an idea of the magnitude of the picture visualized in huge banquet rooms and castle towers, moated battlements and walls. It showed that careful and painstaking research work must have been expended to see that every detail—every scene and set were historically correct.

And let us go on record in stating that Douglas Fairbanks has furnished some of the most beautiful love scenes ever caught by a camera. What a background for them! High up on the walls against a shrine the Earl of Huntingdon lingered to bask in the sunshine of Maid Marian's radiant personality. Here is a true etching of the age-old song of love—a picture so eloquent that it looks like the canvas of a great master.

The second part of the production tells the story of Robin Hood and his brigands—Robin Hood, who kept his real identity hidden that he might avenge Marian's supposed death and re-conquer England for Richard. Prince John had usurped the throne and his cruel machinations inspired Robin Hood to lift the country from the terrible plight in which the wicked ruler had placed it. There is typical Fairbanksian comedy presented. Yet the star is always Robin Hood—a jaunty, care-free, devil-may-care fellow who flirted with death with a song on his lips and a twinkle in his eye. The scenes in Sherwood Forest are tremendously impressive. Here is genuine atmosphere. In fact, the picture is saturated with it. And Robin Hood saves England for his king and Maid Marian becomes his bride.

Naturally with such gorgeous scenes—such glorious tapestries the audience sat spellbound. And when it was over, instant demand was made for the appearance of Mr. Fairbanks. He responded and told of the dynamic force which went into the composition of the picture—that everyone concerned worked with a labor of love and enthusiasm. Then he introduced Mary Pickford, who he claimed was responsible for the inspiration. And Mary admitted that she considered it his finest picture. Allan Dwan, the director, came forward, but modesty prevented him from expressing himself beyond an appreciative bow.

At the conclusion of the first premiere and the five-minute demonstration for Doug and his "silent partner" the second premiere was given to take care of the over-flow as well as actors, dramatic critics, and people whose professions prevented them from attending the earlier performance. And it is not a matter of publicity to state that thousands were turned away.

"Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood" is a sensation. It will be talked about as one of the finest spectacles—one of the finest romances—one of the most gigantic productions ever flashed on the screen. Some will say that it dwarfs them all. We won't dispute it. We know of only one other picture, or possibly two, worthy to be mentioned in the same class. Certainly it carries more sparkling adventure and romance than any other picture ever produced. Douglas Fairbanks' New York season is comparable to John Drew's Empire season when society and the world of letters turned out annually to pay him homage.

The production had cost close to a million dollars but it will prove a money maker for exhibitor and producer. When you have a star with an immense personal following appearing in a picture which is rich in every element of the drama—which carries the glamour of mediaeval times—which is colossal in conception and execution—well, all that can be written is SUCCESS. Isn't it possible that, henceforth, producers and everyone connected with the industry will say when talking of some future achievement "as big as 'Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood'?"

Babson Survey Articles to Start in News Next Week

PUBLICATION of a series of articles based upon the results of the Babson-Columbia University-MOTION PICTURE NEWS survey of the exhibiting branch of the motion picture industry will start in the NEWS next week.

The material for these articles is taken from the questionnaires returned by exhibitors, which have come from houses of every size and from every section of the country. They present a picture of present conditions among the theatres of the country which should prove of interest to everyone connected with the industry.

They will be copiously illustrated with charts and diagrams bringing out the salient facts in accurate and concise form.

U. S. Trade Commission Halts Film Co.

The Federal Trade Commission has issued its findings in the case of the Eskay Harris Feature Film Company, ordering that concern to cease and desist from directly or indirectly procuring photoplays publicly exhibited, and then giving them different titles from those first used; advertising, selling, leasing, or offering to sell or lease such retitled films of photoplays, unless such former titles be clearly stated in presentation and publicity.

It is also ordered to desist from using the words "Black Beauty" in depicting the 1917 Edison picture "Your Obedient Servant," or from publishing any warning or threatening to bring suit against any person showing a motion picture entitled "Black Beauty."

New McVickers Opens in Chicago

Splendid New Edifice Commemorates Original House Which Opened in 1857

THE opening of Jones, Linick and Shaefer's new McVickers theatre on Thursday, Oct. 26, was a "first night" of more than usual interest to theatregoing Chicagoans and tremendous throngs attended and made the occasion a triumph for this enterprising firm of pioneer motion picture showmen.

More than two million dollars had gone into the construction of this splendid house and its beauty and comfort reflect the genius of the men responsible for this, the latest cinema palace, and a palace it is, to open its doors in the Chicago loop.

Standing within a few feet of State and Madison streets,, it is rich in historical associations, for the first McVickers theatre was erected here in 1857 and a theatre of that name has stood on the site ever since and within its walls have appeared the leading actors, actresses and prima donnas whome names are a part of the city's and nation's dramatic and musical history.

Among the plays that enjoyed long runs at old McVickers one of the most famous was Denman Thompson's "The Old Homstead" and the picture based on this great play was the appropriate choice for the premier performance in the new McVickers. Where crowds once applauded Thompson, throngs gave their plaudits to Theodore Roberts, George Fawcett and the other splendid actors who made the "Old Homestead" live again and again bring tears and laughter, but this time on the silver screen.

The opening program revealed the policy of the new house and promises splendid entertainment for Chicago amusement lovers, combining as it did the allied arts with splendid feature pictures and short subjects. The prelude, "Autumn Leaves," produced under the personal direction of S. Barrett McCormick, proved to be a beautifully conceived and magnificently staged singing number and the Bolm Ballet, under the personal supervision of Adolph Bolm, presented the Tartar portion of the opera "Prince Igor" with all the grace and beauty which has become associated with the Imperial Russian dancers.

Music, and with a capital M, was one of the finest features of the opening performance and the fine orchestra assembled and trained by H. Leopold Spitalny was acclaimed as one of the greatest organizations ever heard in Chicago. The playing of W. Remington Welch, who was at the console of the great Wurlitzer organ, was also hailed as masterly and won enthusiastic applause and cheers.

The promptness with which the program moved was commented upon favorably by those familiar with first nights and credit was given to Manager McCormick for the perfection of every detail. The projection booth was in perfect working order and the pictures thrown on the screen by the battery of new Motiograph de Luxe projectors were notable for their steadiness and brilliancy. The lighting effects which were operated by a Major pre-selected remote control switchboard were also declared perfect.

The audience at the premier, as was to be expected, was a brilliant one and included social, business and political leaders and men of national prominence in the motion picture industry. The new McVickers is to be the home of Paramount pictures and among the leaders in the industry who attended the opening were Adolph Zukor, Jesse Lasky, General Manager Flin and other officials of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Marcus Loew sat with the Paramount party and other notables were noted throughout the audience.

One of the greatest crowds ever assembled for a Chicago theatre opening was gathered when the hour for opening the doors arrived, e tending for a block and a half in each direction. So large was the throng that hundreds who stood patiently for hours finally had to be turned away when the house was filled to overflowing for its second performance of the evening.

The enterprise that has made the firm of Jones, Linick & Shaefer one of the dominant factors in Chicago amusement circles reaches its climax in the magnificent new McVickers and all that it stands for and comes after many years of constructive endeavor, their first picture house having been opened on Christmas Eve, 1905, and this has been followed by constant expansion and development.

Brief News Notes by Wire From the West Coast

SID GRAUMAN emphatically denies printed rumor of negotiations to sell Third Street house to Gore Brothers, Lesser and Ramish.

Larry Semon was host Friday night to 100 guests assembled at the Plantation Inn, in celebration of his comedies being booked by Grauman for showing at Third Street house. Sid Grauman was guest of honor.

The Five Warner Brothers, all in Los Angeles, announce the completion of their program for 1923, which will include 18 specials costing $5,000,000, all to be made in Hollywood.

The Rev. Neal Dodd, rector of Hollywood's "Little Church Around the Corner," has been engaged to supervise the church sequence of "The Little Church Around the Corner."

Nat Deverich, president of the Fine Arts studios, is leaving for New York this week to perfect plans for two producing companies to come West.

Five New Companies in N. Y. Industry

Last week witnessed five new companies incorporating in New York state and entering the motion picture business. The five represented a combined capitalization, however of only $80,500. These are:

Winthrop Theatre, Inc., Brooklyn, $60,000. Frank Gregory, Harry Gregory, George Hollis, Brooklyn; Bon Bon Buddy, Inc., $10,000. A. C. Davis, Walter Brooks, J. E. Cort, New York City; Tuscan Theatre Corporation, $5,000, Franklin Bien, Jr., Englewood, N. J.: Joseph L. Frieder, Herbert Weiss, New York; The Christian Herald Motion Picture Bureau, $5,000, H. H. Nieman, R. D. Henkle, New York; A. A. Kelley, Montclair, N. J.; Columbia Opera Company of New York, $500, A. R. Gentile, Filippo Nardone, Giuseppe Spilotros, New York.

Penn. Censors Protest News Reel Complaint

THE Pennsylvania State Board of Censors, through its chairman, Harry L. Knapp, has taken exception to a complaint of a Washington (D. C.) producer of a news reel in which it was claimed that the producer's product had been held up because of unnecessary red tape. The story appeared in a recent issue of Motion Picture News.

Chairman Knapp claims the delays were occasioned, not by his office, but by the fact that the producer did not comply with state laws, over which the Board has no control. He writes in part:

"Our records show that the distributors originally sent certified checks payable to the state treasurer, which is a part of the state law, over which we, of course, have no control. Then on succeeding reels they sent cash, which we were forced to return with an explanation. Following that they sent money orders made out in the name of the State Board of Censors, which of course, we had to refuse and return. Again we advised them of the lawful procedure. But as subsequent applications proved, they paid no attention whatever to this communication, continuing to send money orders or cash. And, as is customary, these were returned."

Library of Congress Seeks Back Numbers of News

A letter received this week from Yale O. Millington, acting chief, periodical division of Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., contains a request that copies of the following editions of Motion Picture News be forwarded to the Library of Congress to complete its file. As Motion Picture News has no available copies of the dates mentioned it calls the attention of its readers to the numbers desired in case they might wish to respond to the appeal of Mr. Millington.

Single Seat Saves Troy House $42 Weekly

In Troy there is a city ordinance, which makes it mandatory upon the part of the theatre owner of a house with 700 seats or more, to have two firemen present at all performances, the house paying the expense which amounts to a matter of $42 a week.

J. C. Rosenthal, who is erecting a new house known as "The Rose," will install 699 seats and thereby get out of paying this amount. The Rose will open about January 1 and will charge an admission of 15 cents.

Kansas City Turns Over Houses to Legion

In the future there will be no opposition in amusement between the American Legion and the Kansas City, Kas., exhibitors. At a meeting of the Kansas City, Kas., exhibitors this week it was decided to turn virtually every theatre in the city over to the Legion Armistice Day, the Legion to pay the operating expense of the theatres and receive the profit, and in return agree not to operate any carnival or amusement which would be in direct opposition to motion picture houses.

Producers Plan Historical Pageant Next June

THE Motion Picture Producers' Association will, in June of next year, give an American historical review and motion picture industrial exhibition at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, or some other suitable place, according to a special wire from the coast.

In addition to industrial exhibition, continuing for 30 days, there will be a change of program daily, with different pageants based on American historical events, such as the Discovery of America, the First English Settlement, First Continental Congress, Declaration of Independence, Boston Tea Party, Birth of the American Flag, Founding of the American Army and Navy, and so on.

The exhibition will be international in scope and invitations are now going out to all foreign nations to participate. W. J. Reynolds, secretary of the Producers' Association, is acting general manager.

Famous Players Lease Toronto Hippodrome

One of the most important announcements in the Toronto, Ontario, theatre field in many weeks was that made on October 26 that the Famous Players Canadian Corporation, Limited, Toronto, had leased Shea's Hippodrome, one of the largest theatres in the Toronto downtown district and that the attractions booked for the Regent theatre would be transferred to the Hippodrome.

The principal reason for the important change is that the Hippodrome is considerably larger than the Regent, the latter having approximately 1,000 seats less than the capacity of the Hippodrome. The Hippodrome is the property of Jerry Shea who is also proprietor of Shea's Vaudeville Theatre, Toronto, playing big-time vaudeville.

New Field Force Aids Jackie Coogan

Department Created for Purpose of Rendering Service on Young Star's Pictures

THE Jackie Coogan Productions have established, in addition to their eastern distributing offices, a field force. This new department consists of experienced salesmen whose duty it is to circulate throughout the entire territory, visiting all exchange managers, sales managers, and exhibitors. They will carry a slogan of service to the exhibitor.

Newt Levy has just been added to this newly formed department. Mr. Levy will confine his efforts in the Western field, keeping in constant touch with exhibitors in Portland, Seattle, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Butte, Denver, Des Moines, Omaha, Kansas City, Dallas, New Orleans, Charlotte, and Western Canada. He is now enroute to New York.

The field representatives will be under the direction of Irving M. Lesser, head of the eastern Jackie Coogan Productions offices.

Joseph Deitch, formerly of Educational, has recently been added to the Coogan eastern staff. Deitch will assist in the supervision of all Coogan bookings, checking and approving of contracts, particularly the "Oliver Twist" agreements and contracts.

Harry Rathner and Max Roth are both in the eastern field stopping in all key centers where they are presenting "Oliver Twist" In private exhibitor pre-views. This private preview scheme will be carried out in every key city.

Changes in Personnel of Hodkinson Branches

CHANGES in branch-office personnel have been announced by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. P. G. Morris becomes office manager of the Denver branch, effective October 16, replacing L. E. Hobson who has been transferred to the sales force of the Los Angeles office.

W. F. Marshall, booker for the Washington, D. C., branch of the Hodkinson Corporation, has been made office manager, replacing H. A. Gillespie, who has been transferred to the home office in the contract department.

"Oliver Twist" Opens in New York

Given Enthusiastic Reception at Both Press Showing and Premiere at Strand

JACKIE COOGAN'S production based on Charles Dickens' "Oliver Twist" got away to a most auspicious start in New York City this week. Preceded by a press showing on Friday, October 27th, at which representatives of the New York dailies, popular magazines, and trade publications viewed the production, the picture opened to the public at the Mark Strand Theatre on Sunday of this week. At both the press showing and the public opening the picture was given a cordial reception, many hailing it as a distinct achievement in screen art.

On Friday afternoon a luncheon was given the press representatives at the Knickerbocker Grill prior to the showing of the production. The gathering was a highly representative one of the scribes of Gotham, including such well-known writers and "colyumists" as Heywood Broun, Robert Sherwood, Ruth Hale, Alan Dale, Quinn Martin, Neil Kingsley, Frank Vreeland, Louella O. Parsons, Ruth Pollock, Adele Whitley Fletcher, Elizabeth Brady, Otto Kurth, Tommy Grey, Julius Cohen, S. M. Weller.

The showing followed at Wurlitzer Hall on West 42d street. The program consisted of a vocal rendition of the song "Oliver Twist" by Vaughn De Leigth, the composer, the showing of a few hundred feet of an "Oliver Twist" production of ancient vintage, and then the up-to-date Coogan version in feature length. The unfolding of the Dickens' tale was followed with rapt attention, and the closing brought a spontaneous burst of handclapping from the critical audience. The printed reviews and comments that appeared subsequently in the publications represented at the showing showed the uniformly favorable impression made by the picture and the work of its young star and his supporting cast.

The premiere of the picture at the Strand on Sunday last was the occasion of an unusually enthusiastic turn-out of Coogan admirers. It became necessary for Joseph Plunkett, the managing director of the theatre, to call for extra police assistance on Sunday afternoon to handle the crowds seeking admission. It became necessary at seven o'clock Sunday evening to suspend the sale of tickets for an interval of an hour, and again at nine forty-five the ticket-windows had to be closed down for a period. According to word from observers the long lines of patrons awaiting admission during theatre hours have continued almost uninterruptedly. The picture as evidenced by its audiences at the big Broadway house is attracting adult and juvenile patrons alike. The picture was preceded by a two-weeks' advance exploitation campaign which aroused interest in the production all over the Big Town.

The Dickens film opened at the Chicago Theatre, Chicago, last Monday, and latest reports indicate that in the Windy City, as in New York, it has made a tremendous success. These two engagements with the exception of one in Lexington, Ky., are the only ones to date on the new Coogan film.

New Goldwyn Manager for Detroit

Harry S. Lorch has been named as manager of Goldwyn's branch exchange at Detroit, Mich., succeeding F. J. Downey, who has been given other work in the Detroit territory.

Lorch was originally an exploitation man with the Chicago Goldwyn exchange, later becoming a salesman there and then promoted to be manager of the Omaha exchange.

He was later placed in charge of the Chicago exchange.

Scenes from "Good Men and True," directed by Val Paul, with Noah Beery, Tully Marshall and Vola Vale in support of the F. B. O. star, Harry Carey.

"Pawned," with Tom Moore and Edith Roberts, a J. Parker Reid, Jr., production, will be distributed by Selznick.

Goldwyn Appoints New Branch Manager

Goldwyn announces the appointment of Edgar Moss as resident manager of its branch exchange in Philadelphia following Felix Mendelssohn who was recently made supervisor of the territory embraced in the Philadelphia, Washington and Pittsburgh exchanges.

No one is more thoroughly familiar with sales and exchange problems in the Philadelphia territory than Mr. Moss. He was at one time sales manager in Philadelphia for Famous Players-Lasky and has had other film connections in that city.

"The Scarlet Lily" to Have Strong Cast

An exceptionally well rounded cast has been signed by B. P. Schulberg for the filming of the Fred Sittenham story, "The Scarlet Lily," starring Katherine MacDonald. It includes in addition to the star, Orville Caldwell, Stuart Holmes, Edith Lyle, Adele Farrington, Lincoln Stedman and Grace Morse.

Victor Schertzinger, who directed Miss MacDonald in her last First National attraction, "The Lonely Road," will serve in a similar capacity for this production.

Paramount Will Release Two Strong Features

FOR November 5 Paramount announces the release of two of its strongest features of the year—Thomas Meighan in "The Man Who Saw Tomorrow" and the Irvin Willat production, "On the High Seas," with Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt.

In the leading feminine role is Leatrice Joy. The "other woman" is portrayed by June Elvidge. The rest of the cast includes Theodore Roberts, Albert Roscoe, Alac Francis, Eva Novak, Laurance Wheat, John Miltern, Robert Brower and Edward Patrick.

"On the High Seas," in which Dorothy Dalton and Jack Holt are featured, is the first story written for the screen by Edward Sheldon. Other players in the supporting cast are Mitchell Lewis, Winter Hall, Otto Brower, William Boyd and James Gordon.

Metro Will Distribute Graf Productions

MAX GRAF, supervising director of Graf Productions, Incorporated, has returned to San Francisco after consummating a contract, under the terms of which the photoplays of the producing organization which he represents will be distributed throughout the world by the Metro Pictures Corporation.

During Mr. Graf's stay in the East he made a careful study of the present trend of the industry and is most enthusiastic over the outlook for the future.

"The Forgotten Law," the first production to be distributed through Metro will have its premier showing at Loew's Warfield Theatre in San Francisco on November 5th.

"Pride of Palomar" Is Near Completion

"The Pride of Palomar," picturized from Peter B. Kyne's story of the same name for Cosmopolitan Productions, is now undergoing the finishing touches preparatory to release in December.

The picture, adapted for the screen by Grant Carpenter and John Lynch, was filmed in California under the direction of Frank Borzage, who directed Cosmopolitan's "Humoresque," amidst the very scenes where the author conceived and wrote the story on the picturesque ranch of Senor Cave Coutts.

New England Theatres Sell Two Houses

The New England Theatres, Inc., have sold the Strand theatre at Randolph, Vt., and the Black theatre, at Bethel, Vt., to James F. Bennett.

This cut shows three scenes from "The Woman Who Came Back," a Playgoers-Pathe production

Some striking scenes from "The Forgotten Law," a Max Graf production for Metro release, in which Milton Sills, Cleo Ridgeley, Jack Mulhall and Alec Francis play important roles.

First Nat'l Names November List

"Oliver Twist," "Brawn of the North," "Dangerous Age," "Woman Conquers," Due

THE "Big Four" announced on the First National schedule for November are Jackie Coogan in "Oliver Twist," the National release date of which is Nov. 6; Strongheart, the Wonder Dog, in "Brawn of the North," released Nov. 13; "The Dangerous Age," a John M. Stahl production, with Lewis Stone and an all-star cast, released Nov. 20, and Katherine MacDonald in "The Woman Conquers," released Nov. 27.

"Oliver Twist" is now having its New York pre-release presentation at the Strand Theatre. This Sol Lesser production has been acclaimed by all who have seen it for its faithful portrayal of the spirit, atmosphere and characterization of Charles Dickens' famous story. An unusually strong cast supports Jackie Coogan. Lon Chaney is seen as Fagin; Gladys Brockwell is the unfortunate Nancy Sikes; George Siegman is Bill Sikes; Lionel Belmore is the tender-hearted Mr. Brownlow; Carl Stockdale is Monks; Eddie Boland is seen as Toby Crackit; Lewis Sargent is Noah Claypool and James Marcus is Bumble the Beadle. Frank Lloyd directed the subject.

"Brawn of the North," a Larry Trimble-Jane Murfin production shows the wonder dog of the screen, Strongheart, in another story of the North woods. Among the feature's highlights are Strongheart's battle with a tyrant of the North Woods.

"The Dangerous Age," is a John M. Stahl production with a powerful matrimonial theme as its basis.

Lewis Stone plays the part of the husband and Cleo Madison is the wife. Ruth Clifford is seen as the second woman in the case. Others in the cast are Edith Roberts, Myrtle Stedman, James Morrison, Helen Lynch, Lincoln Stedman, Edward Burns and Richard Tucker.

"The Woman Conquers" was directed by Tom Forman from the story by Violet Clark. Katherine MacDonald plays the part of a society favorite, who, deploring the seeming lack of physical fibre in the men about her goes to the Hudson Bay country to take charge of large trapping interests bequeathed to her. Washburn plays the part of a society youth. Mitchell Lewis carries the heavy role. June Elvidge plays the girl chum. Clarissa Selwynne, Boris Karloff, and Francis MacDonald are also seen in the east.

Besides these four big First National Attractions, a Mack Sennett Comedy, "When Summer Comes," is scheduled for release Nov. 13 and a Buster Keaton comedy, "Day Dreams" for Nov. 27.

"The Village Blacksmith" Opens in New York

WILLIAM FOX'S screen adaptation of Longfellow's poem, "The Village Blacksmith," opened Thursday evening, November 2nd, at the Forty-fourth Street Theatre, New York City, succeeding Fox's other special, "Monte Cristo."

"The Village Blacksmith" was directed by Jack Ford, and Paul H. Sloane is responsible for the scenario. The cast includes: William Walling, Virginia Valli, Tully Marshall, Bessie Love, George Hackathorne, Lon Poff, David Butler, Ralph Yearsley, Virginia True Boardman, Gordon Griffith, Ida May McKenzie, Patric Moore, Jennie Lee, Caroline Rankin, George de la Garrigue, Cordelia Callahan, Simon Jenks, Francis Ford, Mark Fenton, Helen Fields, Jobie Amos, Alan Richmond and Edward Dribbon.

F. P.-Lasky Convention For Coast

Invitation of Los Angeles Mayor and Chamber of Commerce Accepted by Zukor

ON the invitation of Mayor Cryer of Los Angeles and the Chambers of Commerce of that city and of Hollywood, and at the earnest solicitation of Jesse L. Lasky, Adolph Zukor announced yesterday that the semi-annual convention of the department of distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will be held November 21 in Los Angeles.

A special train, leaving the Grand Central Station the night of November 16, will carry the Paramount executives, heads of home office departments and many of the district and branch managers to the Coast, picking up other contingents at stops along the route. The party is due to arrive at Los Angeles Monday afternoon, November 20, and for the rest of that week the convention will be held at the Hotel Ambassador.

Both executives of the Paramount organization and the civic leaders of Los Angeles and Hollywood are completing plans which are expected to make this convention the most important of its kind ever held in the film industry. When Mr. Lasky arrived in New York Saturday he laid before Mr. Zukor and S. R. Kent, head of the distribution department, all of the plans which had been formulated by Los Angeles officials and business men for the entertainment of the Paramount organization. Mr. Zukor and Mr. Kent immediately accepted the arrangements and wired Mayor Cryer that he had won the convention for his city.

Details of the convention were not divulged by either Mr. Zukor or Mr. Kent further than the announcement that the sales policy of the company for the six months after February 1 will be discussed and announced. Details of the events scheduled for the entertainment of the party were also withheld, as several surprises have been planned.

Among those going to the convention with the main party are the following:

Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky, S. R. Kent, E. E. Shauer, Marcus Loew, A. M. Botsford, H. H. Buxbaum, John Clark, H. B. Franklin, G. B. J. Frawley, Charles E. McCarthy, Claud Saunders, Frank Newman, Oscar Morgan, George Meeker and A. O. Dillenbeck.

Salesmen Added to Assoc. Exhibitors' Staff

W. B. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, announced this week the addition of several new members to that organization's staff of salesmen.

A. H. Livzey becomes a member of the force at the Detroit branch, Vincent Trainor at Newark, Floyd Rice at Atlanta, and John C. Cain at Pittsburgh, while Jack Schaefer is appointed sales representative in the New Orleans office.

"The Headless Horseman" Booked for Symphony

The Symphony theatre, Los Angeles, Cal., has signed the Hodkinson special "The Headless Horseman" for an indefinite run, beginning November 5th.

"The Headless Horseman" is a C. S. Clancy production adapted from the story "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" by Washington Irving. Will Rogers plays the role of Ichabod Crane, supported by Lois Meredith, Ben Hendricks, Jr., Mary Foy, Charles Graham, and Nancy Chase.

New Story For Alice Calhoun Is Completed

C. Graham Baker has finished an original screen story for Alice Calhoun, the Vitagraph star. The temporary title is "Mary Mixes In." The story concerns a little miss from the West thrown into the merciless intrigue of an Eastern family. How she remolds the characters around her and saves the selfish family from financial ruin is the theme of the photoplay.

New Philadelphia Manager For American Releasing

American Releasing Corporation announces the appointment of Jack Greenberg as its resident manager in Philadelphia, succeeding Edgar Moss.

Mr. Greenberg comes to American from the Selznick organization, with which he has been connected in Philadelphia for several years.

First National Exchanges in Sales Contest

EXCHANGES of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., are in the midst of a "Harvest Time" sales contest which shows that business has "come back" with a big punch.

The contest opened Oct. 2 and closes Nov. 25. Reports for the first three weeks indicate that sales records are being smashed in each of the Branch Exchanges, and Branch Managers and salesmen are enthusiastic over the big business which is being brought in under the First National banner.

The awards consist of a first prize of $300, a second of $200, a third of $150 and a fourth of $100 to the winning salesmen in each of the following sales districts: Canadian, Eastern, Western, Mid-Western, Central, and Southern.

Goldwyn Names Releases Up to January 21st

GOLDWYN PICTURES announces the order of release of its next six photoplays up to January 21st, 1923. Marshall Neilan's "The Strangers' Banquet" and Maurice Tourneur's adaptation of Hall Caine's "The Christian" are among the group.

"Brothers under the Skin," directed by E. Mason Hopper from Peter B. Kyne's story is scheduled for November 19th.

"Hungry Hearts," founded on Anzia Yezierska's book and directed by E. Mason Hopper also will be released to the trade November 26th.

"A Blind Bargain," adapted from Barry Pain's "The Octave of Claudius," has been set for December 10th. Lon Chaney is featured. Wallace Worsley directed the subject.

Goldwyn's prize story, "Broken Chains," is scheduled for release on December 24th. This is an Allen Holubar production.

"The Stranger's Banquet," produced by Marshall Neilan from Donn Byrne's novel, has been fixed for December 31st. Hobart Bosworth and Claire Windsor head an all-star cast of unusual calibre.

Goldwyn's picturization of Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," has been scheduled for January 21st. Richard Dix and Mae Busch head the cast in this Maurice Tourneur production.

All these productions are now in the final stages of editing and titling.

DeMille Vice-President in Hollywood Bank

Cecil B. DeMille, director-general of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has been elected vice-president of the newly organized Federal Trust and Savings Bank of Hollywood. This new financial institution will care for its share of the rapidly increasing monetary business of the film capital.

Associated with Mr. DeMille in the enterprise are prominent Hollywood business men, including C. E. Toberman, president; George L. Eastman, vice-president, and A. J. Olsen, vice-president and manager. Mr. DeMille's step into a vice-presidential position in the new bank was not altogether a new venture into banking as he has been for some time a director of the Commercial National Bank of Los Angeles.

The new Hollywood institution opened its doors to the public on October 14.

Strong Cast to Support Bull Montana

An excellent supporting cast has been engaged for "Glad Rags," the next Bull Montana comedy now being produced by Hunt Stromberg for Metro. The players include Betty Francisco, Otis Harlan, Tom Gallery, Max Davidson, Billy Elmer, James Quinn, Thomas O'Brien, Marion Otis Harlan and Mervyn Le Roy. David Kirkland and Clyde Bruckman have been added to the Stromberg-Montana scenario staff.

Hugh Fay, who directed Bull Montana in "A Punctured Prince," will serve similarly for "Glad Rags."

The comedy is based upon two stories: Rene Rivierre's "Silk Purse and Cauliflower Ears," and Mr. Stromberg's "Lowry from the Bowery."

Some amusing moments from Harold Lloyd's new production, "Dr. Jack," which appears on the Associated Exhibitors-Pathe schedule.

New Fox Special Opens at Astor

"The Town That Forgot God" Is Well Received at Its New York Premiere

THE Astor Theatre, New York, was packed by a typical picture first night audience on Monday night, when "The Town that Forgot God," the newest William Fox special, received its first showing. The picture was accorded a tremendous reception, and at the climax of the picture the house fairly rocked with spontaneous applause.

From the moment the overture began, and the curtains parted on the main title of the picture, until the moment when the storm-tossed waif and his protector have found happiness, the audience was held in a tense spell of suspense and interest.

The main title itself proved a novelty, being tinted in color, with a rural landscape surrounding the printed title matter.

In the opinion of those who were present at the opening, there never has been quite such a storm scene on the screen. No mere wind-and-rain machine effect is this. It is a literal deluge, and the screen seethes with swirling storm tossed wreckage. As Quinn Martin, the New York World's reviewer, put it: "We were face to face with a cinema storm so terrifying, so catastrophic, so beastily real that we shivered in our boots and actually forgot that such a thing as a motion picture camera ever had been invented. If there ever was a scene of fury pictured on the cinema screen, here it is!"

Numerous comments on the emotional scenes, and on the performances of individual actors, were heard, but these were overshadowed by enthusiasm for Director Harry Millarde's masterly handling of the flood scenes, for which he built an entire village in New Jersey, to be completely wrecked by the deluge when the dam above it was opened.

The musical setting for the picture was arranged by Erno Rapee, who presides over the orchestra at the Capitol theatre, and this did much to enhance the effectiveness of the photoplay at all times. Many familiar airs, such as "School Days," "Mighty Lak a Rose," "Somewhere a Voice is Calling," "Somebody's Coming to Our House" and "Turkey In the Straw" were worked into the score at appropriate moments.

Will Hays was on hand for the initial showing, as also were Harry Millarde and his wife, June Caprice. Others in the audience included Violet Mersereau and her mother. Judge Corrigan, Elizabeth Marbury, Police Commissioner Richard E. Enright, Messmore Kendall, S. L. Rothafel and Joe Plunkett.

The concensus of opinion among those present seemed to be that William Fox and Harry Millarde had produced another "Over the Hill," plus a tremendous flood scene.

Earle Williams Next in "Riddle and the Ring"

"The Riddle and the Ring" is the title of Earle Williams' next subject for Vitagraph. The story is one of adventure revolving around a young prince who is determined to marry the girl he loves instead of the woman chosen by his royal sire. Williams appears in the part of a young American who happens to resemble the prince closely enough to make him the center of numerous complications.

"Little Red Schoolhouse" for Arrow Release

Arrow Film Corporation has just completed negotiations with Martin J. Heyl, under the terms of which Mr. Heyl will produce for Arrow release "The Little Red Schoolhouse," the famous old Hal Reid stage play which was sometimes enacted under the title of "In Convict Stripes."

John G. Adolfi has been engaged to direct the production. An all-star cast will be chosen to enact this drama.

Lloyd Is Popular In "Dr. Jack"

Sixteenth Multiple Reeler of Comedian Costliest of His Productions

BEGINNING with "Dr. Jack," announced for early release Harold Lloyd's new contract with Pathe lifts the golden rooster trade-mark from the long list of popular short comedies to a series of feature length productions heralded by a succession of multiple-reelers which have placed the comedian among the world's most celebrated laugh-makers.

"Dr. Jack" is Lloyd's sixteenth multiple-reel comedy, and his second of full feature length, the popular "Grandma's Boy" being the first excursion into the larger form. "Dr. Jack" is said to be the costliest of any Lloyd production to date, and was nearly five months in the making.

The Hal Roach technical staff was called on to build nearly a dozen big sets. These occupied, during the period of the production the entire 30,000 square feet of the Hal Roach dark stage. One important set was erected on the lawn in front of the home of one of Los Angeles' richest bankers, who is at the head of an active Better Films Committee—which explains the significance of the courtesy extended to Lloyd.

At least six times during the production work was held up while the scenario staff developed new and more original lines of action. The original story and continuity occupied this staff exclusively for three weeks, the authors being Hal Roach, Sam Taylor and Jean Havez. Later changes, including the introduction of new "gags" added a full month to the period that had been considered ample within which to complete the production.

Mildred Davis plays the heroine role. Others in the cast are Eric Mayne, John T. Prince and Norman Hammond.

Famous Circus Story for Jackie Coogan

"Toby Tyler," that famous story of circus life and a wee small lad, will be the next Jackie Coogan production. Arrangements were concluded between Irving M. Lesser, representing the Jackie Coogan Productions in New York City, and Harper and Brothers, representing the estate of the author of the well known volume.

Work will commence on the production immediately. With this announcement comes also word that Eddie Cline has been secured to pilot little Jackie through the amusing episodes of the story.

Rex Beach to Write for Thomas Meighan

Rex Beach is the latest famous author to devote his talents to the writing of Paramount pictures for Thomas Meighan.

Following the announcement that Booth Tarkington had been engaged to write an original story for the popular Paramount star, it was made public during the week that a story by Mr. Beach will also be placed in production in the near future with Mr. Meighan as the star.

Mr. Meighan is now engaged on George Ade's original story, "Back Home and Broke."

Scenes from "The Impossible Mrs. Bellew," starring Gloria Swanson (Paramount.)

"My Friend the Devil" November Release

The famous characters of Georges Ohnet's novel "Dr. Rameau," have come to life on the screen in the William Fox version of the story adapted under the title of "My Friend the Devil," to be released on the November schedule of Fox Film Corporation.

Charles Richman depicts the role of George Dryden, eminent surgeon.

Barbara Castleton is the beautiful, but faithless wife whose love affairs with a youthful artist in his studio in the Latin quarter of Paris are revealed to her husband nearly a score of years later.

Peggy Shaw and William H. Tooker have prominent roles.

"My Friend the Devil" was directed by Harry Millarde.

Playgoers' Releases Named for Month of November

PLAYGOERS' schedule of releases for the month of November through Associate Exhibitors contains a dramatic offering and a western, titled respectively "The Man and the Moment" and "The Man Who Waited."

"The Man and the Moment," adapted from the novel by Elinor Glyn, is set for release on November 5th. The cast is of the all-star variety. The subject is in five reels.

"The Man Who Waited," another five-reel production, has been set for release on November 19th. This subject is declared by the Associated Exhibitors' home-office to be "far out of the ordinary run of westerns" and to present unusually artistic scenic effects.

Robertson Directs New Producing Unit

A DEAL involving the launching of a new production unit to make pictures which are to be known as John S. Robertson Productions, was consummated this week between the former Famous Players director and Charles H. Duell, President of Inspiration Pictures Corporation.

Until he tendered his resignation a few weeks ago, Robertson was for a period of five years one of the mainstays of the directorial complement of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. During this period he created "Sentimental Tommy," "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde" and "Footlights."

Under the terms of the contract with Inspiration Pictures Corporation, it is expected that not only will Mr. Robertson handle his own unit, but he will also direct some of the stars under contract with Inspiration. Mr. Robertson will produce in the East.

Mae Murray's Next Has New Title

Robert Z. Leonard, who presents and directs Mae Murray's pictures for Metro release, announces that the title of Miss Murray's forthcoming picture upon which she has been working at the Metro studio has been changed from "Coronation" to "Jazzmania."

Coincident with this announcement was issued a list of Miss Murray's supporting cast, including Rod La Rocque, Robert Fraser, Lionel Belmore, Herbert Standing, Wilfred Lucas, Mrs. J. Farrell McDonald, Jean Hersholt and Edward Burns.

"Jazzmania" is an original story by Edmund Goulding, and is produced by Tiffany Productions, of which M. H. Hoffman is vice president and general manager.

"Shadows" Premiere at Biltmore

One Thousand Guests Attend Second Release at Invitation of B. P. Schulberg

ABOUT 1,000 guests attended the premiere of B. P. Schulberg's "Shadows" in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Biltmore on Friday evening, October 27.

The affair was the first to be held by the Al Lichtman Corporation since its formation and was arranged to introduce to exhibitors and the trade at large the second release of the company. Many of the Lichtman franchise holders made special trips to town for the premiere. Ben Amsterdam and L. Korson came up from Philadelphia with Walter Greene, their director of publicity; Sam Lefko, one of their crack salesmen, and several others in the party. Harry Asher was in from Boston. Sam Zierler and Herman Jans were kept busy most of the night greeting exhibitors from the Greater New York and Northern New Jersey territories.

Erno Rapee, conductor of the Capitol theatre orchestra, was engaged to direct the orchestra, which was composed of 26 pieces. A choir composed of eight men and women sang "Nearer My God to Thee" off-stage during certain sequences and also at the end, when Lon Chaney as Yen Sin drifts out to sea to his death.

There were many notables in the audience. Aside from a large gathering of local exhibitors, there were some from out of town. All important film executives who were in New York that evening were there. J. D. Williams, former general manager of First National; A. H. Blank, of Des Moines, and E. V. Richards, Jr., of New Orleans, were in the audience.

Sessue Hayakawa was present as the guest of Lester Blankfield, whose wife, Eve Unsell, is head of the scenario department of Preferred Pictures, Inc., which made "Shadows"; D. W. Griffith, Pedro De Cordoba, Leatrice Joy, Hope Hampton, George Melford, Julia Swayne Gordon and Gilbert Emery were among the stage folk present. Emery is the author of "The Hero," which, incidentally, will be the fourth Lichtman release.

Rowland Rogers, head of the deparment of photoplay instruction at Columbia, was a guest, as was Professor Leon Whipple, of the Department of Journalism of New York University. Dr. Stephen Wise was likewise a guest. All of the New York dramatic critics were on hand. The gathering included several magazine editors, among them Howard Brubaker, editor of Success, and Thomas B. Wells, editor of Harpers. The Hon. George H. Cobb and the Hon. Joseph Levenson, chairman and secretary respectively of the Motion Picture Commission of the State of New York were in the assemblage.

Earlier in the day the Lichtman office was advised by the Motion Picture Commission of New York State that the picture had been passed without a cut. Ben Amsterdam advised that the Pennsylvania board had taken the same action.

"Breaking Home Ties" Set for Nov. 12th Release

"Breaking Home Ties," Associated Exhibitors' six-reel feature, has been scheduled for release on November 12th. The same homely touches and "appealingly dramatic situations" that contributed to the success of "Humoresque" are said to be found in this new subject.

Tourneur To Make Four Specials

Productions to Be Presented By M. C. Levee Through Associated First National

M. C. LEVEE, president of the United Studios, announces that he has completed negotiations with Maurice Tourneur whereby that popular director will make a series of four special productions of sensational size and quality during the coming year, to be known as Maurice Tourneur Productions, and to be presented by Levee through Associated First National Pictures, Inc.

Tourneur's first vehicle will be a picturization of the fantastic and colorful novel, "The Isle of Dead Ships," by Crittenden Marriott. Several other stories and plays are now under consideration by Messrs. Levee and Tourneur for future production.

Production will begin at the United Studios in about two weeks. The continuity is now being prepared under Mr. Tourneur's personal supervision. The production will be on a lavish scale and a special technical staff has been engaged to build the fleet of ships that are an important feature. More than thirty ships, in type to match nautical history for the last four centuries, will be used in the setting of the mysterious Sargossa Sea where, according to the lore of ancient mariners, wrecked, water-logged and derelict ships come together like "vessels in a fog" and, upheld by an area of tangled kelp, float wraith-like over the face of the sea. A location for these scenes has already been chosen, on the kelp beds off the coast of San Capistrano.

Selection of the cast for this production will begin almost immediately. Four players of stellar quality are being considered for the four important roles.

In addition to presenting the Maurice Tourneur Productions through First National, Mr. Levee is also sponsoring Allen Holubar's second production for that organization, which will be a picturization of Jeffry de Prend's "The White Frontier." It is probable that the title will be changed before the picture reaches the theatregoers, however. Dorothy Phillips will be the star and will be supported by a distinguished cast. "The White Frontier" is a big outdoor melodrama and is laid in the Canadian northwest. It is Mr. Holubar's intention to film many of the exteriors on the actual locale of the story.

Howard Estabrook to Head F.B.O. Sales Promotion

Howard Estabrook, who joined the Film Booking Offices of America this spring, has been placed in charge of sales promotion of a number of F. B. O. features and short subjects and has also been made manager of the newly formed Educational Entertainment Service.

Mr. Estabrook came into the film business in 1914 and has been associated wtih Paramount, Metro and other companies, largely in connection with production. He also produced Aesop's Fables Cartoons, disposing of them to Fables Pictures, Inc., and is sponsor for "The Enchanted City."

Marentette Again Heads Goldwyn Exchange

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation announces the return to that organization of J. L. Marentette, one of the best known motion picture figures in the South. He has been named as resident manager of Goldwyn's branch exchange in Atlanta, Ga. He assumed the duties of his new position on October 23.

Marentette was previously connected with Goldwyn, but has until recently been with the Southern Enterprises.

Scenes from "Only a Shopgirl," second of a series of C. B. C. Film Sales Corp. productions

Foreign War Veterans See "Skin Deep"

Blase and busy Broadway stopped the other afternoon when a detail of mounted police outriders with sirens shrieking drew up in front of the Strand theatre and the twenty-four heroes of the World War, representing the Inter-Allied Veterans Association, halted on their sightseeing trip of New York to witness a presentation of Thomas H. Ince's "Skin Deep."

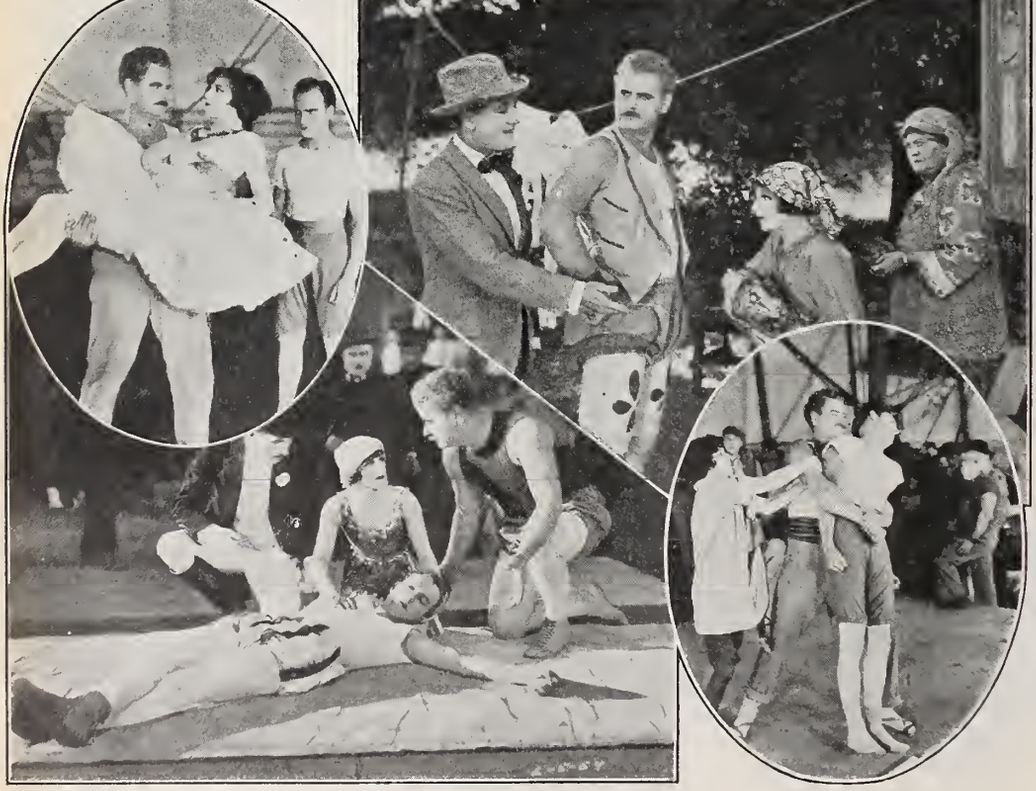
The distinguished foreign visitors were under escort of Colonel Alvin Owsley of Texas, new National Commander of the American Legion, and Lemuel Bolles, National Adjutant of that organization.

The delegates visited the Strand at the invitation of Thomas H. Ince, the producer, who wired his invitation to them at their dinner the night before at the National Vaudeville Artists Club where they were entertained by the N. V. A. Post of the American Legion.

"Queen of Moulin Rouge" at N. Y. Cameo for Run

AMERICAN RELEASING CORporation has entered upon an eight weeks' occupancy of the B. S. Moss Cameo Theatre, New York, opening Sunday, October 29, with Ray C. Smallwood's Pyramid production, "Queen of The Moulin Rouge," from the famous play by Paul Potter.

Several of the special productions being distributed by American Releasing will follow "Queen of The Moulin Rouge" in the Cameo and then will be played across the metropolitan circuits in New York City and Brooklyn.



Scenes from "Shirley of the Circus," a William Fox production starring Shirley Mason

Leon D. Nettor Joins Al Lichtman Staff

Leon D. Netter has joined the Al Lichtman Corporation where he will divide the sales management of the company with Henry Ginsberg. The new arrangement will relieve both Lichtman and Ginsberg of a number of details. Ginsberg and Netter will have complete charge of the foreign and domestic sales.

Mr. Netter was recently New York manager for Educational and before that was in charge of the Seattle office. Before affiliating with Educational, he was associated with Sol Lesser in the conduct of the latter's state rights business on the Pacific Coast for eight years, and also in Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and other cities.

Amalgamated Exchanges Announces New Film

Amalgamated Exchanges, Inc., announces that its second production will be "Sunshine of Paradise Alley," by Denman Thompson. Jean Acker has been cast as one of the co-stars for the new production. The first Amalgamated Exchanges production, "The Madonna in Chains," is nearing completion.

Six Feminine Players in "Dangerous Age" Cast

"The Dangerous Age," the new Louis B. Mayer-First National attraction, directed by John M. Stahl, presents in its cast six feminine players that have taken important parts in past productions for the screen. They are Cleo Madison and Myrtle Stedman, seen in mother roles; Edith Roberts, Ruth Clifford, Helen Lynch and Dellorice, the last mentioned player having been identified with Hal Roach comedies. In addition the cast includes Lewis S. Stone, James Morrison, Lincoln Stedman, Edward Burns and Richard Tucker.

R. H. Page is the representative of the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation in the Carolinas. It was announced in error in the issue of November 4 that J. C. Pace was covering the Carolinas for Goldwyn.

Sidney Olcott to Direct Marion Davies

SIDNEY OLCOTT has been engaged by Cosmopolitan Productions to direct Marion Davies in her next picture, a screen version of Rida Johnson Young's stage play, "Little Old New York." Work on the picture, the scenario of which is by Luther Reed, will begin about the middle of December. The engagement of Olcott to direct Miss Davies comes as a result of Robert G. Vignola's proposed world's tour. Mr. Vignola has directed Marion Davies in some of her biggest productions, including "When Knighthood Was in Flower." Vignola will start on his trip the latter part of November and will be gone about six months.

Mr. Olcott is at present on his way to Europe, but will be back ready to start work on "Little Old New York" in about five weeks.

Fox Announces Schedule of November Releases

FOX FILM CORPORATION announces its releases for the month of November to comprise the following:

"My Friend the Devil," adapted by Paul H. Sloane from the French novel "Dr. Rameau" by Georges Ohnet, is scheduled for November 19th. Harry Millarde directed the subject.

"Tom Mix in Arabia" is to be released on November 19th also. Claire Adams plays opposite the star.

John Gilbert appears as the star of "The Love Gambler," written by Lillian Bennet-Thompson and George Hubbart. Joseph Franz directed.

"Boss of Camp 4" is the November vehicle for Charles Jones. W. S. Van Dyke directed.

Dustin Farnum is the star of "While Justice Waits." The story was written by Charles A. and Don Short. Bernard J. Durning directed.

"Shirley of the Circus," starring Shirley Mason, will be released November 12th. Rowland V. Lee directed the picture from a story by Robert M. Lee.

Lupino Lane in "My Hero" is set for November 19th.

"Lazy Bones," the Clyde Cook special, is set for November 5th.

Al St. John appears November 19th in "Out of Place," and the Lee Kids come in "Town Terrors," a re-issue re-edited by Ralph Spence.

Viola Dana Supporting Cast Selected

The complete cast for "A Noise in Newboro," the next Metro photoplay in which Viola Dana is to be starred under the direction of Harry Beaumont, has already been selected. Actual production on this motion picture is to begin soon, according to advices received from the Metro studios in Hollywood.

In support of Miss Dana will appear Allen Forest, David Butler, Betty Francisco, Eva Novak, Joan Standing, Alfred Allen and Bert Woodruff.

Edgar Franklin is the author. Rex Taylor has already prepared the screen adaptation.

Albert Kenyon Signs on Universal Staff

Albert G. Kenyon has joined the Universal City scenario department as a writer of continuities and originals. He is a brother of Charles Kenyon, one of the supervisors of the department, and is known to his new associates through active participation in the affairs of the Hollywood writers' world.

He has been associated with three of the largest studios on the west coast, and among his contributions to the screen are "The Spenders," "The Fan," "The Green Seal," "Faith," and "That's Good."

"Miles Standish" Is to Be Directed by Sullivan

Charles Ray has engaged Frederick Sullivan to direct "The Courtship of Miles Standish," according to a wire from the Coast.

Four months' research work has been completed. The preparation of the script by Albert Ray will require three more months. The subject will probably not be released until one year from date.

Annual Supper Dance to Be Brilliant Event

What promises to be the most brilliant social event in filmdom's busy whirl is the Third Annual Supper Dance, to be held under the auspices of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce. The Gold Room of the Hotel Astor, New York, has been engaged and if the plans of the committee are a criterion, the night of Saturday, Dec. 2nd, and the morning of the 3rd will be remembered and recalled long after the event is over.

Lee Ochs, Chairman, and the Members of the Ball Committee are crystallizing ideas that bid fair to make this yearly function not only the season's social sensation in the Annals of Celluloid Row, but the season's most colorful and distinctive entertainment flavored with outstanding attractions.

Goulding to Adapt Story For Lillian Gish

Several weeks ago, when Edmund Goulding finished an original screen story called "Fury" as a starring vehicle for Richard Barthelmess, which is now in course of production by Inspiration Pictures Corporation, the producers were so well pleased, it is said, that Mr. Goulding was immediately signed to make an adaptation of F. Marion Crawford's novel, "The White Sister," which the photo-playwright is now completing.

This adaptation will serve to introduce Lillian Gish as the new star of Inspiration Pictures when the photoplay is produced. It is to be filmed in and about Italy, and Miss Gish and her company are expected to sail in a few weeks to commence production.

Carey Starts Fourth for F. B. O. Releases

Having completed his third picture for release through the Film Booking Offices of America, tentatively titled "The One Man," Harry Carey started immediately on "Canyon of the Fools," which was purchased for him by F.B.O. Carey has already made for F.B.O.,

"One Week of Love" to Have Ritz Showing

"One Week of Love," co-starring Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle, will have its first and formal showing in the Grand Ball Room of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel, New York City, Friday evening, November 3.

Three Titles Chosen for Paramount Pictures

THREE new titles have been chosen for as many forthcoming Paramount pictures.

William de Mille's recently completed production from an original story by Clara Beranger, in which Bebe Daniels, Lewis Stone, Kathlyn Williams and Harrison Ford have the important roles, has been permanently titled, "The World's Applause." "Notoriety" was the title originally chosen.

Mary Miles Minter's latest picture, just completed under the direction of Charles Maigne and adapted from Stephen French Whitman's novel, "Sacrifice," is to be called "Drums of Destiny."

"Racing Hearts" is the title chosen for the new picture Agnes Ayres is just starting under the direction of Paul Powell.

CHARLES RAY
Gives You a few Pointers
Dear Friends:—
You know a fellow can't be perfect. We all make mistakes. I haven't been exactly proud myself of some of my recent pictures.
But they didn't give me Charles Ray stories and no one can make a good dinner out of a rubber boot.
In my latest picture 'SMUDGE' now playing at the Sun Theatre I am not disappointed, and I KNOW YOU WON'T BE !!
It is the type of story and character just suited for me.
I run a country newspaper in the orange district.
I pick a pretty peach, but have to squeeze a lot of lemons to get her.
Altogether making sour PUNCH
Believe me

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATERS

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Cowboy and the Lady—
Very fine picture with good box office value. (West.)

Fair picture and business normal. (East.)

Played to only fair business. (Middle West.)

The Old Homestead—
This is going good. Starting a mid week run on Thursday and now running into next week. Packs them in at the hours when business is best. (Middle West.)

Got off to flying start and held up fairly well during week's run. Has much good photography, but some patrons thought it little old-fashioned. (Middle West.)

Fair production and fair box office receipts. (West.)

To Have and to Hold—
Went over very well. Receipts up to expectation. (Middle West.)

Pink Gods—
Difference of opinion. Many thought this a splendid picture both as to story and acting. Others thought it silly. This diversity of opinion helped the theatre and we had a good week. (Middle West.)

Valley of Silent Men—
The attendance for the week was good. (Middle West.)

Manslaughter—
Thomas Meighan supporters turned out well for this one which did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Nice People—
Went over to capacity because it was surrounded by the strongest bill in the history of the house. (East.)

The Top of New York—
May McAvoy not much of a drawing card. Business fair. (East.)

ASSO. FIRST NATIONAL

The Eternal Flame—
Best Talmadge picture in a long time. Stood them up for two solid weeks. Matinees better than in weeks. Really excellent picture with great appeal. (Middle West.)

The Barnstormer—
Picture and business both bad. (East.)

Lorna Doone—
Went over well with intelligent class but not so well with those who do not appreciate the finer and more artistic things. (Middle West.)

Very good picture and good business. (West.)

The Bond Boy—
Business just fair. Rather somber note in the picture. There seems to be some dissatisfaction and O. E. S. Convention did not seem to strengthen business. (Middle West.)

Skin Deep—
Fairly good business and entertainment value. (West.)

East Is West—
Moderate business. Mediocre feature. (West.)

FOX

Silver Wings—
Very poor week all through. Started out with a startlingly light house and didn't win any more. Mary Carr did not draw a sufficient number and the picture didn't hold those who did come. (Middle West.)

A very good picture but being regarded by patrons and those who passed the front boards as "sob stuff." Did not draw exceptionally well. (Middle West.)

Mary Carr is very popular here. Very good patronage. Some regarded it on a par with "Over the Hill" (Middle West.)

A Fool There Was—
Excellent version of old story. Fair business. (Middle West.)

Shackles of Gold—
William Farnum always attracts a good number in this town. This picture held up well all week. (East.)

METRO

Hole in the Wall—
Mystery story and seems to draw well. Wonder if this is the general trend of interest now. (Middle West.)

Prisoner of Zenda—
Good picture and excellent business. (East.)

Broadway Rose—
About the usual Mae Murray production. Drew well. (Middle West.)

Sherlock Brown—
Fair picture and fair business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Remembrance—
This is a disappointment. The picture was not as good as the "Old Nest." Business started out well but fell off towards the end of the week. (Middle West.)

When Romance Rides—
Good Zane Grey picture. Wonderful photography. Has all the ingredients of success. We did well with it and had full houses all week.

The Sin Flood—
Fine production and good business. (West.)

The Dust Flower—
Bad picture and business off. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Grandma's Boy—
Up to Lloyd's usual standard in all respects. A sure fire box office value. (Middle West.)

This one which was originally booked for a week, did three week's business. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Lone Hand—
One of the best thrillers of its kind. Business correspondingly good. (Middle West.)

Wolf Law—
Moderately good picture and box office value. (West.)

The Storm—
Immense. One of the best of the year. (Middle West.)

The Kick-Back—
A good western which did good business at the box office. (East.)

SELZNICK

Handcuffs or Kisses—
Fair picture which failed to attract even average business. Strong competition nearby blamed. (East.)

Love Is an Awful Thing—
Proved a very popular feature and did excellently throughout run. Has all the qualities a high class film entertainment should have. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

The Man Who Played God—
Good picture but business only fair. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

My Wild Irish Rose—
Both picture and business was fair. (West.)

The Fighting Guide—
Found this to be a fairly good picture with average box office value. (West.)

STATE RIGHTS

After Six Days—
Called a masterpiece by patrons and newspaper critics. Held for second week. (Middle West.)

Sure-Fire Flint—
Picture very good and went over first rate. (East.)

Flesh and Blood—
Excellent picture and average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

I Am the Law—
Only average picture and box office attraction. (Middle West.)

Rags to Riches—
Fine picture and good business (West.)

Effective use of black background in "Remembrance" ad carried by the Sun theatre, Omaha.

Windmill for "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge," built in the lobby of the Strand theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., by Manager Charles H. Amos. It is built of beaver board painted red and marked off in white. A motor was concealed behind the mill, making the wings revolve at a slow speed. All lights in the lobby were dyed red.

Insurance Underwriters Tie Up on "Remembrance"

Ottawa, Ont.—The Life Underwriters' Association, through its Ottawa branch, ran an advertisement in local newspapers during the showing of "Remembrance" at the Regent theatre which was of decided exploitational value.

A three-column six-inch advertisement was run in the papers. The ad read as follows: "SEE 'Remembrance' and remember 'A life insurance policy is the sincerest love-letter a man can write.' Endorsed by the Life Underwriters' Association of Ottawa."

Clever Catch Lines on "If You Believe It, It's So"

El Paso, Texas—In addition to an unusually heavy use of cut-out letters, satin-draped three-sheet frames, a 24-sheet on the front of the house, and such material, Manager J. M. Edgar Hart, of the Plaza, used large cards carrying teaser copy taken from the subtitles of the picture. Some of these read as follows:

"Jno. D. Rockefeller hocks his watch to buy a gallon of gasoline." IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO.

"Cold and probably snow tomorrow." IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO.

"The United States is going wet." IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO."

"The Kaiser gives his support to the American Legion." IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO.

Street ballyhoo for "East Is West," at the Des Moines theatre, Des Moines, Iowa. The small electric spotlight on the dashboard made it possible to use this at night

Football Rooters and Team Aid "Smilin' Through"

PAOLA, Kans. — Manager Willard Frazier of the Empress theatre evolved a really new piece of exploitation on "Smilin' Through," when he got each member of the local football team to wear a banner on his back reading "Let's Go Smilin' Through," and had the cheering section drilled in this yell:

"You'd better go home
You'd better go home
We're going to do it to you
We'll hit that line
Hit that line
And all go SMILIN' THROUGH."

The yell made such a hit that the newspapers ran it in special boxes and on the sporting page and it was good advertising for the picture.

"Blood and Sand" Exploitation Suitable for Small Towns

Newburgh, N. Y.—Cohan's opera house played "Blood and Sand" simultaneously with the New York and Los Angeles runs, and Manager Gilbert P. Josephson put it over to enormous business with a well-planned exploitation campaign for a small town.

Mr. Josephson kept a crowd hanging around his lobby two days in advance with his art gallery. One hundred and thirty-six stills from the picture were displayed in frames.

The opening was on a Monday and the preceding Friday Mr. Josephson wrote letters to every preacher in town, calling attention to the fact that a chapel is an indispensable part of a bull ring. Four or five of the ministers made mention of the picture in their sermons the following Sunday.

A curt, business-like letter was sent to each club secretary listed in the city directory. It stated that the demand for tickets was so great that the management had been asked to set aside blocks of seats for certain organizations. This told more by indirection than the usual press-agency harangue. Sixteen organizations took advantage of the offer and many secretaries placed the notices on their bulletin boards.

Mr. Josephson sent a negro ballyhoo to sit in the park and attract the attention of the crowds usually gathered there, with the window card.

"Slim Shoulders" Gowns Given Guard of Marines

Springfield, Ill.—C. D. Hill, manager of the St. Louis Hodkinson exchange, arranged a live exploitation stunt on the "Slim Shoulders" fashion promenade that gathered in considerable publicity for its showing in Springfield at Gus Kerasotas' Strand theatre.

Hill hiked down to the division commandant of the United States Marines in the Federal building and sold him the idea that $25,000 in pretty gowns was too big and important a package to travel from St. Louis to Springfield, Ill., without special protection of Uncle Sam. It seemed easy enough to get the Marines, but to arm them was another story, but Hill took care of that.

But this took time and the Springfield opening was but a few hours away. Train service was uncertain. He couldn't take a chance on the interurbans. So he called on John Schroeder, vice-president of the Schneel Motor Corporation, and talked him into donating a high-power touring car for the trip.

Schroeder said he would drive the car. Under the protection of two armed Marines the precious package was put in the back of the car. The car carried a large banner which read: "This car is delivering $25,000 worth of Irene Castle gowns made of Corticelli Silk to the Strand theatre, Springfield, Ill., for their fashion show starting Sunday."

This eye-catching cut-out was prepared by Manager G. M. Phillips of the Strand theatre, Atlanta, Ga., on "Sky High"

The new Cameo theatre, Pittsburg, Pa., made effective use of its lobby to put across the atmosphere of "Under Two Flags" recently, as seen in the decorative panels shown above

Novel Trailer Copy Is Used on "Love Is an Awful Thing"

San Francisco, Cal.—J. A. Partington evolved trailer copy for "Love Is An Awful Thing" which put a personal touch into it, and which added no small measure of interest to the trailer itself, when shown at the Granada. The copy was as follows:

"Love Is An Awful Thing." Ask Peggy Joyce, Mme. Walska, Mme. Matzenauer, Nora Bayes or Geraldine Farrar.

They might not agree on the subject but they will all agree that "Love Is An Awful Thing" is the most riotously funny seven-reel farce ever made. The excellent cast includes Owen Moore (who ought to know something about the subject), Katherine Perry (who, by the way, was named by Howard Chandler Christy as the most beautiful girl in New York), Marjorie Daw, and other celebrities.

In keeping with the spirit of "Love Is An Awful Thing" the Granada's entire program will be of a jolly, jazzy joyful nature and I promise that "a good time will be had by all."

Just think of 3,000 people—all at one time—laughing as they have never laughed before. Can you afford to miss it. It starts next Saturday. I thank you. J. A. Partington. P. S.—These few scenes from "Love Is An Awful Thing" will give you an idea of what it's all about.

Lobby display, with cut-outs, three-sheets and banner, on "Golf" and "A Rogue's Romance" at the Orpheum theatre, Cleveland.

Gets Run Over by Auto to Call Attention to "Manslaughter"

PEORIA, Ill.—Bill Danziger, Paramount exploiteer, caused considerable excitement in Peoria by a street stunt on "Manslaughter."

After arranging for an automobile from a local agency, Danziger stretched himself out in the street and let the automobile run over him—almost. Bill, however, is such a considerable chunk of humanity that the wheels stopped just before they started climbing over his chest.

Every time he did his little act, everybody on the street ran to the scene of the "tragedy," and just as they were about to murmur "poor chap, and so young, too," Bill jumped up and delivered a lecture on reckless driving. "This is the way the accident happened in the Paramount picture, 'Manslaughter,'" he said. "You can see it for yourself at the Ascher's Palace theatre."

Thorough Campaign Put Over for "The Old Homestead"

Peoria,, Ill.—The Palace theatre opened its "Old Homestead" campaign with a series of five interviews with prominent local celebrities, all of whom reminisced sentimentally about "old homesteads." These interviews were dug up through William E. Danziger, Paramount's cub exploiteer, and the newspaper carried them as straight news, as the name of the theatre and the date of the run were omitted. This prepared the town for the campaign which followed.

Danziger next tied up the Peoria Fire Insurance Company for a cyclone policy, which was photographed and printed in the morning paper. The cyclone ties up with the stupendous storm of the picture. Inasmuch as there hasn't been a cyclone in Peoria within the memory of man, the insurance company risked the policy gratis.

The State Fair being in full swing, the hotels were naturally crowded. The Palace put out a rube ballyhoo carrying an umbrella reading:

"You can always get accommodations at Uncle Joe's 'Old Homestead.'"

Three hundred window cards were placed, each reading:

"Tell Reuben—if you see him—to come back to 'The Old Homestead.' Eph, Uncle Josh and Ann are waiting for him."

"Remembrance" Contest Tied Up with Newspaper

Jackson, Mich.—Manager H. Frank, of the Majestic theatre, in association with Earl Hall Payne, Detroit Goldwynner, got a newspaper tie-up on "Remembrance" which resulted in much publicity.

Following a press book suggestion, they interested the editor of the Jackson Citizen-Patriot in a contest which appealed to the remembrance of old settlers as to past happenings in their city. Two questions a day for five days were asked. The answer that was correct, or nearest correct, won $5 in gold, the second prize a three months' pass to the Majestic theatre, and other prize tickets for "Remembrance." The contest was called Remembrance Contest and was tied up definitely with the showing of the picture.

Another press book suggestion that attracted attention was a display in the windows of a shoe store. A long shelf was placed in the window with a huge pair of old shoes in the centre and very pretty shoes on either side. Running from the bottom of the shelf to the front of the window was a banner reading, "See how the old shoes pay for the new in 'Remembrance' by Rupert Hughes, Majestic theatre, October 8."

Checks on Bank of Joy Issued on "Grandma's Boy"

SPRINGFIELD, Mass.—Manager McDonald of Fox's theatre arranged a Joy Week celebration in connection with his run of "Grandma's Boy." "Let's have done with tears, with heavy drama, for a while," he said in a letter which he sent to many citizens. "Let's devote ourselves to having ONE GOOD TIME. And there is no other way quite so good as seeing Harold Lloyd, that joyous boy, in the Master Mirthquake, "GRANDMA'S BOY."

Mr. McDonald also issued checks on the Bank of Joy, each good for 2,912 laughs and signed by Harold Lloyd. The endorsements on the back of the checks read: "Endorsed by every newspaper in New York and Los Angeles as the greatest comedy achievement of any age."

Friday the 13th Tied Up with "Nice People" at Tampa

Tampa, Fla.—Opening "Nice People" on Friday the 13th for a three days' run, may look like disaster if one is superstitious, but the old hoodoo jinx thing did not phase C. D. Cooley, manager of the Victory theatre. He capitalized on it and put it over.

Friday morning's Tribune carried a big double page tie-up spread. Clear across the top of the two pages, three inches deep, was the caption that Friday the 13th was Lucky Day, and that here were many bargains for "Nice People." Then came a little talk on "Lucky Day" and another on "Lucky Folks."

In the center of this double page spread was the announcement of the theatre, using a space four columns wide and 14 inches deep. Surrounding this were the ads of the merchants. Three of the merchants offered 13 bargains each. A laundry offered to do all family wash that day at just half the regular price, and the other ads all offered some special bargain. All ads were so worded that the "Nice People" and "Lucky Day" were brought in.

Proposes Renaming Broadway as "Easy Street" Stunt

New York, N. Y.—Charles Verhalen, who recently staged a campaign in New York City on "Easy Street" for its simultaneous showing at 92 theatres, had the clubs and associations around New York guessing for a time.

A letter was sent to the secretary of each club proposing that Broadway be renamed "Easy Street," and setting forth various reasons why. This was on the stationery of the Progressive Civic League, a non-existant organization, and to further aid the appearance of genuineness a regulation petition was enclosed, to be signed by the members and returned.

A window card was also used extenisvely around the city, setting forth twelve reasons for renaming Broadway "Easy Street," signed "Progressive Civic League," and bearing no hint of the picture. Large illuminated signs were also taken on Times Square bearing a similar message.

Approximately 60 of the 92 theatres also used a Chaplin impersonation contest for children, as suggested by Mr. Verhalen.

"Short Skirts or Long?" Basis of "Broadway Rose" Stunt

YOUNGSTOWN, Ohio.—The management of the Dome theatre got front page publicity on "Broadway Rose," with pictures of the star, through a contest for the best essay on "Shall Skirts be Long or Short?" Miss Murray was quoted in special articles as being in favor of the short skirt, and pictures of her were published with the articles.

The first prize was $10 in gold, the second and third, $5 each, and the next 10 passes to "Broadway Rose."

Bank Mails Out Photoplay Ads with Monthly Statements

WILMINGTON, N. C.—Ernest G. Stellings, manager of the Grand theatre, has uncovered a new way to get advertising matter mailed to a selected mailing list, which almost any exhibitor can adopt, provided that he stands in well with his bank.

Stellings is having advertising material the same size as the bank statements printed, and the bank sends these out with the monthly statements to all its depositors. It was given a trial recently on "Manslaughter."

Manager Charles Sasseen of the Queen theatre, Galveston, Texas, prepared this lobby on "Blood and Sand" recently

Manager Earl D. Sipe of the Fox American theatre, Paterson, N. J., resurrected this fire apparatus of 1864, and used it as a street ballyhoo on "The Fast Mail"

Naval Cadets Parade as Stunt on "Oathbound"

Winnipeg, Man.—The management of the Province theatre effected a splendid tie-up during the run of "Oathbound."

Naval cadets of the Naval League of Canada, in full uniform, paraded down the main street the night of the opening bearing a banner reading: "We're on our way to see 'Oathbound' at the Province." The front of the house was dressed with signalling flags, life buoys and other appurtenances of the sea, while the Canadian Pacific Railway people added to the success of the exploitation by loaning the management a fine model of one of their boats, which, along with a large and handsome painting of a motor-boat racing a yacht, depicting one of the thrilling scenes of the Fox production completed the picture.

A feature of the exploitation was the putting out by the management of the Province of over 10,090 novelty folders bearing the caption, "The Lucky Rings of the Sea," and announcing that specially imported mother-of-pearl rings, exquisitely carved, would be given out to the first 50 women who attended the showing of "Oathbound" after 7:30 in the evening.

Exhibitor Gets Benefit from Saturday Evening Post Ad

TUSCALOOSA, Ala.—Manager C. B. Grimes of the Belvedere theatre started his "Manslaughter" campaign with a tie-up that got him the full benefit from the double page Saturday Evening Post ad carried nationally.

Every copy distributed in Tuscaloosa carried a hand written notice attached to the front cover calling attention to the double spread. Then attached to the double spread was another notice stating that it would play the Belvedere and giving dates. About 250 "Posts" were thus labeled.

There was a circus in town one week before opening. Mr. Grimes bannered one of the elephants for the parade. He also distributed heralds to the circus crowd as they returned from the matinee.

Old Settlers' Homesteads Get Stories Over in Paper

Milwaukee, Wis.—Manager Ralph Wettstein of Ascher's Merrill theatre, in conjunction with R. C. Gary, Paramount exploiteer, obtained considerable publicity in the Milwaukee Journal on "The Old Homestead," through a tieup with the Old Settlers' Club and a little extra effort in digging up photos and stories on "old homesteads" around Milwaukee.

The Old Settlers' Club consists of 750 members, many of whom are the town's leading citizens. All the high "sassiety" hearkens back to the old days. Manager Ralph Wettstein and R. C. Gary, Paramount exploiteer, invited the entire membership to a special showing, and they turned out one hundred per cent. They liked it so well they gave interviews to the Journal reporter who covered the event.

Gary and the Journal reporter and a staff photographer visited several of the old-timers in their "old homesteads" tucked away in some forgotten corner of town, or hidden by years of fauna growth. Pictures were taken of the dwellings and their owners and ran for a week as a feature in the Journal.

Happiest Recollection Contest Exploits "Remembrance"

Brockton, Mass.—The management of the Colonial theatre obtained an unusual amount of newspaper publicity through a newspaper contest on "Remembrance," in the form of a "Happiest Recollection" contest conducted by the Brockton Times. Cash prizes to the amount of $40 and 50 pairs of theatre tickets were offered for the best manuscripts submitted in the contest. The first cash prize was $20, the second $10, and the third $5, with five of $1 each. The Times made the first announcement of the contest under a four-column head.

Kash's Photo Studio used a large window card, tieing up with the photoplay, suggesting that readers send their photo for "remembrance" to their friends. The United Talking Machine Company used a large card advertising the screening of the film and calling attention to its records of old time songs.

Talmadge Hair Wave Exploited at Oklahoma City

Oklahoma City, Okla.—Manager Tom Boland of the Empress theatre exploited the wave in Norma Talmadge's hair in his campaign on "The Eternal Flame." It was good for a tie-up with the Oklahoma City Times and the leading Marinello shops.

Not only were Oklahoma City beauties invited to compare their hair waves with Norma Talmadge's but a gorgeously arrayed woman demonstrated the Norma Talmadge wave from the theatre.

The Times gave the idea publicity and the Marinello shop was swamped with applicants who thought their hair was just like the well known star's on Saturday—the first day after the first story had been printed.

Incidentally "The Eternal Flame" won a window display in the W. C. Dean Jewelry company, which has never before allowed its windows to be used for the advertising of goods other than its own.

Phonograph Dealer Co-operates on "Remembrance" Stunt

LANCASTER, Pa.—Manager George M. Krupa of the Hamilton theatre, in conjunction with Saul Silver, Goldwynner, recently staged an effective campaign on "Remembrance."

They obtained window displays with two jewelry stores, the United Cigar store a drug store, a toy shop and a phonograph store.

The phonograph dealer not only helped with a window display but loaned to Mr. Krupa a Victrola and the record of "The Sweetest Story Ever Told," sung by Sophie Breslau of the Metropolitan Opera company, which was played, behind the screen, during the scene in which "Pop" Grout deliriously recalls the early days of his courtship and marriage. This proved a most effective presentation aid and received much favorable comment.

Telegrams Sent to Patrons on "Turn to the Right"

PIKEVILLE, Ky.—One hundred and fifty selected patrons of the Weddington theatre received telegrams, delivered by regular Western Union messengers on "Turn to the Right."

The telegrams used were worded as follows:

"The crowd is with the crooks to a man and 'Turn to the Right' is an established success. Shown at the Weddington Thursday, September 28, 1922. I am going to see it. Meet me there. Bill."

Shopping Story Makes New Sort of Co-operative Ad

WICHITA, Kans.—A different angle on co-operative advertising was originated by Stanley Chambers of the Palace theatre on "Nice People." It was variant on the "girl shopper" idea used by many newspapers as a co-operative ad stunt.

The story was captioned "Dolly Varden Goes Shopping for 'Nice People.'" Dolly starts off praising the picture, then describes her visits to the leading stores of the town, using such headings as: "Nice People" Have Attractive Hair. Distinctive Hats for "Nice People." Seven more in a smilar vein followed.

Prologue to "The Sheik" Given Without Expense

Madison, Wis.—A successful prologue that did not cost Manager St. Pierre a cent introduced "The Sheik" at Fischer's Majestic here. Mr. St. Pierre found two Madison girls who were eager to do dancing, and ready to give their services in exchange for the publicity involved in order to introduce their talents. Even the costumes were furnished. "The Sheik" dance proved popular with the audience, and the local talent prologue attracted notice in the news columns of the newspapers. The girls were rewarded with photographs of Rodolph Valentino.

An oriental setting made by Mr. St. Pierre, who designs and constructs sets for all the Fischer theatres, added to the atmosphere. The set, all of which was made in the workshop of the theatre, consisted of two side transparent windows, with four great columns shading from deep purple at the bottom to light cream at the top, all stippled. The transparencies painted with Egyptian figures, and lighted from the rear. Real lamps hanging from the arches of the windows and great flower vases below them added to the reality of the illusion.

Tie-up with dairy company obtained by Publicity Director Gallagher of the Haring & Blumenthal circuit, in Jersey City, N. J., in which a chocolate milk drink was served in the lobby of the theatres to exploit "The Curse of Drink"

"Remembrance" Linked Up with Political Campaign

Uniontown, Pa.—Fielding H. O'Kelly, manager of the Main theatre, made effective use of a political tie-up when "Remembrance" was shown at that house.

Gifford Pinchot was due to make a political speech a day or two preceding the first showing of the photoplay and Manager O'Kelly, assisted by Goldwynner William A. Robson, arranged for the children of Uniontown to present the gubernatorial candidate with a bouquet of chrysanthemums. A large yard-long ribbon with the word "Remembrance" printed on it in large gold letters was tied about the bouquet.

Miss Geraldine Harader, daughter of the manager of Uniontown's two daily newspapers, presented the bouquet to Mr. Pinchot just after he had been introduced to the crowd of 3,500 persons who had gathered at the court house, to listen to his speech. The small son of Manager O'Kelly also presented to Mr. Pinchot a half-sheet card reading, "A Remembrance from the children of Uniontown to our next Governor, Gifford Pinchot."

Decorative treatment of theatre entrance at the Aris, Pittsburg, Pa., for "Nanook of the North." The management reproduced it in the newspaper advertising

Needle Gives Novel Angle to "Sherlock Holmes" Card

PITTSBURGH, Pa.—A novel idea was originated by William A. Robson, local Goldwynner, for the trade showing of "Sherlock Holmes" at the State theatre.

Robson issued ordinary admission tickets for the showing, but the top line read, "Quick, Watson, the Needle," and at the left an ordinary needle was pinned through the card.

The idea is adaptable to use by theatres, as well, and is inexpensive.

Safety Council Ties Up with "Manslaughter" Campaign

Cleveland, Ohio.—What is perhaps the biggest teaser campaign ever put over in Cleveland was pulled in connection with "Manslaughter" at the Stillman theatre.

Through the aid and co-operation of the Cleveland Safety Council cards were attached to 1,000 trolley poles in the most traveled parts of the city bearing the inscription, "AVOID MANSLAUGHTER. Drive Carefully."

It is contrary to a city ordinance to attach cards to trolley poles, but the influence of the Safety Council was great enough to overcome the objections.

The main traffic sections of Cleveland have huge instructions painted on the pavements. In these sections Sladdin had the slogan, "Avoid MANSLAUGHTER. Drive Carefully," painted in letters four feet high. The signs faced both directions, and each one covered one-half the width of the street.

The Cleveland Chamber of Commerce issued 2,000 cards with the same slogan printed in heavy type to members who have trucks.

Five hundred 22 x 28-inch trolley dash boards were used for the same purpose, and another 500 cards were tied to the rear end of the street cars.

Spelling Bee Linked Up to Ads on "Skin Deep"

Terre Haute, Ind.—A spelling bee was on in Terre Haute when "Skin Deep" began its run at the Liberty theatre. Advantage was taken of this on Sunday, when a double truck co-operative advertisement appeared with half its words misspelled, centering about the picture.

Coming at a time when there was interest in spelling and with passes for the first identification and correction of the misspelled words, residents who hadn't looked at a grammar for years took up the study again and dictionaries were at a premium.

Then to top the puzzle, a special reward was offered to the first person who put the misspelled words in a sentence advertising the picture. The obvious line up for the letters was: "Skin Deep. Liberty Theatre. All Week."

Miniature lobby display on "Hurricane's Gal," used by Manager W. A. Doster of the Strand theatre, Montgomery, Ala.

Puzzle Picture Contest Is Run on "Rags to Riches"

Toronto, Ont.—Manager Miller of the Pantages theatre conducted a picture puzzle contest in connection with the presentation of "Rags to Riches" for which no less than 2,551 prizes were given for boys and girls 13 years of age and under.

A scene from the feature was cut into 25 sections and these were run wild throughout the theatrical section of the Toronto Star Weekly. Boys and girls were invited to assemble these pieces and to bring the made-up picture to the theatre. First prize of $25 was given to the first child bringing a perfect assembly of the picture and the next 25 received $1 each. The next 25 received a pass for the show and the next 2,500 received a combination dunce cap and false face for Hallowe'en. This stunt caused a tremendous stir among the youngsters of Toronto.

Streetcars and Taxis Tie Up on "Fools First"

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—The management of the Tivoli theatre arranged a tie-up on "Fools First" in which the municipal street cars used a Safety First campaign.

During the picture's run every car carried the sign "FOOLS FIRST in accidents. Use the Crossings for SAFETY FIRST." It was a campaign against jaywalking across the streets in which the Checker Taxi company also co-operated and which was adequately tied up with the feature at the Tivoli.

Theatre Makes Guests of Bobbed Haired Girls

ATLANTA, Ga. The day before the opening of "Bobbed Hair" at the Rialto, Manager William Bedell offered free admission to all bobbed hair girls between eleven and one.

"Hurricane's Gal" Gets Story Through Foundling

SIOUX FALLS, S. D.—An orphaned baby girl was found in Sioux Falls just about the time Manager Dundee of the Strand theatre was ready to start his advertising campaign on "Hurricane's Gal."

Immense interest attached to this foundling and capital was made of the fact that a mysterious character had been seen in the vicinity where the baby was found.

A story found its way into the paper that this was a character known as Hurricane Wilson and the child was referred to as "Hurricane's Gal."

It was pure fabrication by a press agent to build up attendance, but it brought good business to the Strand and found a home for the baby as the result of the publicity given the child.

"Old Homestead" Tied Up with Real Estate Campaign

St. Louis, Mo.—Mike Vogel, St. Louis Paramount exploiteer, used an unusual method of exploiting "The Old Homestead" which showed at the New Grand Central, West End Lyric and Capitol theatres, controlled by Skouras Brothers.

Harry E. Prettyman, realty salesman, has been selling lots in the Pennsylvania Park subdivision for several weeks. That gave Vogel an idea. The appeal of "The Old Homestead" would make an ideal argument in selling building lots, not to speak of the advertising it would furnish the picture's title. Prettyman thought so to, and he arranged an "Old Homestead Day" at Pennsylvania Park, inviting all St. Louis to attend.

He took large space in the advertising colums of the newspapers and hired brass bands and sent them about the city attired as countrymen. He printed hundreds of thousands of hand bills, literally flooding the city with them.

Striking front on "Blood and Sand" arranged by Arthur Swanke, advertising and exploitation manager, at the Rialto theatre, El Dorado, Texas. Red and yellow was the color scheme

Elaborate lobby display and costumed house employes at the Plaza theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., arranged by Manager E. J. Bauman for the run of "The Sheik of Araby"

Varied "Remembrance" Campaign Put Over in New York

New York, N. Y.—S. L. Rothafel, managing director of the Capitol theatre, and W. A. Ferguson, Goldwyn's special exploitation man, staged a strong and varied exploitation campaign on "Remembrance."

The biggest single exploitation feature was the tie-up with the United Cigar Stores by which a card advertising "Remembrance" and tying it up with the United's advertising campaign for one of its own brand of cigars was obtained in each of the 750 stores of the company in Greater New York. This tie-up, arranged for by Mr. Ferguson, was of national scope, as the United is using the card in every town where it has stores during the first run showing of "Remembrance."

Another national tie-up was with the Victor Talking Machine Company. This resulted in a fine window display in New York. A large painted Victor record, with a portrait of Pop Grout, of the picture, holding his grandson, with lettering which read, "The Old Songs for 'REMEMBRANCE,'" was placed in the window, flanked by a sign giving the date of showing and theatre.

Names from Directory Exploit "The Eternal Flame"

TERRE HAUTE, Ind.—The manager of the Liberty tied up with a local department store to good effect on "The Eternal Flame."

Every article on its counters was tagged with slips bearing an ad for "The Eternal Flame" and the name of some woman, a resident of Terre Haute, picked at random from the city directory.

The woman who came to the store and identified the tag with her name was given two passes to the theatre.

To obtain the full results of this it was necessary to advertise it. A two column six ad was used at first but the crowds drawn to the store as a result were so promising that the store followed up with a half page advertisement.

"Fast Mail Week" Put Over as Postoffice Link-Up

Los Angeles, Cal.—By obtaining the consent of the postmaster, the exploitation campaign on the showing of "The Fast Mail" at the Alhambra theatre was tied up with the work of the mail carriers.

The first thing the postmaster did was to proclaim the week of September 23-30 as "Fast Mail Week." During this stretch of seven days, all Los Angeles mail carriers, after having divided their districts into a series of zones, were entered in a "Fast Mail Contest." The mail carrier in each zone who displayed the best record of fast mail delivery was to receive a prize granted by the Alhambra theatre. Similar opportunities were offered to the letter handlers and the drivers of U. S. mail trucks.

So spirited began the quest for the prizes and resultingly, so improved became the mail service to the citizens of the city that the newspapers carried many columns of favorabl comment on the idea, and recommended the people of Los Angeles to give a vote of thanks to the theatre management.

The U. S. Mail trucks for a period of ten days carried large banner signs advertising the run of the picture at the Alhambra.

Another feature of the campaign was a race between a modern mail truck and an old-fashioned pony-express stage on a main street.

Candy Kisses and Cigarettes Are Tied Up With "Arabian Love"

Winnipeg, Man.—The National theatre obtained two exploitation tie-ups on "Arabian Love" which proved of great assistance.

Four Winnipeg candy manufacturers were impressed by the management of the National, and a number of their retail stores in prominent locations of the city sold candies specially made by the manufacturers called "Arabian Love Kisses," samples of which were distributed in the lobby of the theatre by a girl in an Arabian costume.

Leading tobacconists of the city tied up with the National management by displaying in their windows oriental brands of cigarettes, and four stills in colorful frames, showing in the center a large card similar to the one used by the candy stores.

Three Boys and Dog Ballyhoo "Penrod" on Streets

Lakeland, Fla.—Manager B. B. Garner, of the Casino theatre, took extra newspaper space to announce the coming of "Penrod," featuring Booth Tarkington and "Freckles" Barry.

A street ballyhoo was arranged for the day before opening and on opening day. Three boys were dressed, one like "Penrod" and two like the little negroes in the picture. They were placarded back and front and went all over town. With them was a shaggy dog who did his part of the work by carrying a blanket banner.

Manager Harry Frank of the Majestic theatre, Jackson, Mich., got this window tie-up with a shoe store on "Remembrance."

Improvement on the log cabin effect for the lobby, with windows made of translucent cloth and light shining through, constructed for "The Man from Hell's River," by Frank J. Miller, manager of theatres, at the Rialto, Augusta, Ga.

Duplicates Page of Old Paper as "Buffalo Bill" Stunt

LEXINGTON, Nebr.—Manager R. E. Falkinburg of the Majestic theatre used a page ad on "The Days of Buffalo Bill" which possessed many unusual features. Down either side of the page was reproduced a string of advertisements from the Dawson County Pioneer of 1884, set in the old style, fancy type.

Down the two center columns was a signed message from Manager Falkinburg, tying up the historical features of the chapterplay and of the town of Lexington. The residents of the town found the page extremely interesting, and much valuable publicity for the picture resulted.

Dignified Lobby Display Used on "Under Two Flags"

Pittsburg, Pa.—Manager Charles T. Hoskins of the new Cameo theatre believes in dignified, artistic lobby displays, rather than crude, circus effects. He demonstrated this on "Under Two Flags," on which the general scheme of the Cameo front was that of a cyclorama depicting a desert scene. Superimposed on this were cut-outs of an Arabs' tent camp, camels and Priscilla Dean in the role of "Cigarette." Concealed lights (red, white and blue to correspond with the coloring of the British and French flags which adorn the marquee) gave an original touch to the display.

Manager Hoskins also used two six-sheet side cases with cut-out scenes against a background of artistically illuminated Arabian locale. To enhance the effectiveness of the cyclorama, Mr. Hoskins painted the under side of the marquee and the wide panel above his doors a vivid sky blue, relieved by white cloud effects, thus adding atmosphere and perspective to the artistic display.

Boy Scouts Parade in Uniform for "Remembrance"

St. Paul, Minn.—Manager William Mick, of the Tower theatre, enlisted every Boy Scout possessing the regulation uniform to exploit the showing of "Remembrance."

Their bugle and drum corps gave a half hour concert in front of the State Capitol Building before parading through the business section of the city to the Tower theatre.

This concert was given on a Saturday when the streets were crowded and attracted much attention. Arrived at the theatre, every Boy Scout in the parade was admitted to the first de luxe performance. Scoutmaster Neilis gave Manager Mick and Chas. C. Perry, Goldwynner, remarkably fine co-operation in this stunt. He had a drive on among his Boy Scouts to get them all to buy the Boy Scout uniform and used their free admittance to see a showing of "Remembrance" as inducement to urge those who had no uniforms to buy them.

Automobile Hook-Up Made on "Across the Continent"

JAMESTOWN, N. Y.—Howard Waugh, exploitation manager of the Winter Garden theatre, arranged a Ford parade with 50 cars in line on "Across the Continent."

Engraved Invitations Sent Out on "Her Gilded Cage"

SIOUX CITY, Iowa. — Invitations from Gloria Swanson, requesting everybody's presence at the showing of "Her Gilded Cage" at the Plaza theatre were sent out to an extensive mailing list.

Miss Swanson's invitation was in the form of an engraved card which bespoke class and conservativeness quite in keeping with the picture.

As an added part of the Plaza attraction Miss Bonnie Murray, who has won the beauty prize for the state in the series of beauty contests staged by John J. Friedl, Paramount exploiteer, was engaged to make personal appearances.

Pleasing effect obtained through use of irregular-shaped compo board flats in lobby by Manager H. B. Clarke of the Majestic theatre, Memphis, Tenn., on "Heroes and Husbands"

"Hungry Hearts"

Goldwyn—6517 Feet

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

HERE is another "Humoresque." Just as good in every way and just as finely acted by a cast that could not have been improved upon.

If your patrons crave heart interest pictures—the kind that strum at the heart strings—the kind that keep the eyes moist in sympathy with the characters—"Hungry Hearts" will satisfy them 100 per cent.

If your audience likes a finely produced, exquisitely photographed picture, with a story that is a reflection of real life as it is lived by thousands of immigrant families who daily pour into the maelstrom of America's great "melting pot," "Hungry Hearts" is the next attraction for you to book.

Last year it was Vera Gordon in "Humoresque." This year it will be Rosa Rosanova in "Hungry Hearts." The work of this star in the role of Mother Levin is nothing less than an achievement. It is a masterpiece, because it is lived, not acted. Her emotional work when she destroys her little white kitchen after her rent has been raised for making her home so attractive and during the moments when she is on the stand in court is pantomime par excellence.

There is a charming romance woven into the plot with Helen Ferguson as Sara, the daughter who seeks just a little of the happiness that others about her enjoy, and Bryant Washburn, as the young lawyer, carrying it along in an appealing manner.

The Ghetto scenes are good because they were photographed there. The trial scene is filled with emotional as well as comedy moments. One of the real high-lights comes when Mother Levin crazed at having her rent raised starts in to destroy her little home. Another arrives when the tenement owner visits the home and finds his nephew dining with the "low lifers." "Hungry Hearts," is a human document that should find a place in the film hall of fame.

The Story—Deals with the pathetic struggle of newcomers to our great melting pot, of a little Russian heroine and her family, seeking sunshine and happiness in America and finding at first only shadows and sorrow and persecution. Love comes at last and the little heroine finds joy in the home of her lawyer husband—who takes in mother Levin, father Levin and all the little Levins.

Classification—A heart interest drama that stands out from the average run of pictures like a lighthouse on a barren coast. A joy to behold.

Production Highlights—Rosa Rosanova's colorful character portraiture in the role of Hanneh Levin. The excellent work of the cast. The very fine and intelligent titles. The correct mounting of the scenes in Russia and in New York's Ghetto.

Exploitation Angles—They liked "Humoresque." They'll like this too if you tell them how good it is. Play up Roda Rosanova in the role of Mother Levin. Advise ballyhooing picture by putting man on the street dressed as a Russian emigrant. Advise dressing your lobby with strings of red hearts.

Drawing Power—This one should draw them in most anywhere.

"Tom Mix in Arabia"

Fox—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

WITH Doug Fairbanks setting the fashion for using his name for the title of a picture, and Tom Mix coming along with the same idea, we may expect that selling one's self through the title will get some attention from the passing throng. Bull Montana will hear of the stunt soon and will probably exploit himself as "Bull Montana in Evening Clothes." Tom Mix, as the title indicates, does a "Valentino" here to the tune of snappy action, adequate love interest and comedy. It's a rattling good attraction—with the star putting on several new gags to make his Westerns enjoyable. Leave it to this star—he usually gets off the beaten track.

We find him here in the opening shots acting as guide to a girl who specializes in dead languages—a girl en route to Arabia with her father and brother. The cowboy takes things easy on his ranch. So when he is resting pretty in his hammock, he little dreamed that he might be tossed out of it by a speeding roadster. The girl has made her departure for the Orient. The occupant of the car is an Arabian prince who explains that he is fleeing from retainers of his court, who are determined to prevent him from marrying a Follies girl. So he asks the adventurous rancher to double for him. The hero steps into the car for the purpose of throwing the pursuers off the track until the Arab has had time to escape. The retainers, however, refuse to listen to the cowboy's explanation. And they lug him off to the Orient.

It is all good hokum and naturally cannot be taken too seriously. The comic opera character of the plot may be appreciated in the subsequent scenes which place him in the midst of a scheme to overthrow the prince. He discovers that the pretender to the throne has abducted the heroine, while her father and brother are captured by brigands. Then it is up to Mix to rescue him in heroic fashion. The real prince arrives in time to save him from further embarrassment. The picture is well directed, carries a quota of atmosphere and is capably acted by a well balanced cast. It is fully as interesting as anything Mix has done—which is saying a good deal.

By Tom Mix and Lynn Reynolds. Directed by Lynn Reynolds. Photographed by Dan Clarke.

Produced by Fox.

The Story—Cowboy meets pretty girl who specializes in dead languages. She travels on to Arabia. The hero then tastes adventure when he is tossed out of his hammock by a speeding roadster which is driven by an Arabian prince. The latter employs the cowboy to double for him in order to evade pursuing Arabs. However, they lug him off to the Orient, where he meets the girl and rescues her.

Classification — Comedy romance featuring Tom Mix cutting up didoes. Plenty of spirit in this one.

Production Highlights—Fast action. Good comedy. Fine exteriors. Snappy work of star and capable support by cast.

Exploitation Angels—Novel title here which suggests a teaser campaign featuring the star "sheiking" around the Orient. Would advise playing up star and cashing in on his pupularity.

Drawing Power—Will draw well wherever shown provided your crowd likes the star.

"Another Man's Shoes"

Universal—4251 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT'S an actionful melodrama, even if it is old stuff and smacks of comic opera heroics. To give you your money's worth the author has assembled several familiar ingredients. There is a dual role—an adventurous hero who is bribed to double for another—there is the attractive ruler of a mythical Balkan kingdom who employs a trio of assassins to kill a wealthy youth in revenge for killing her father—there is attempted kidnapping and what not to give you an evening of excitement. It's all far-fetched but because it keeps moving all the while one must accept it as fair entertainment. You'll have to overlook the fact that no two people resemble one another.

Here we have Herbert Rawlinson masquerading as—Herbert Rawlinson. He willingly steps into the rich man's shoes. And then the fun begins. His fiancee doesn't know the difference, nor do any of the servants. One night he is surprised by the pretty queen attempting to shoot him. But he persuades her to give up her desire and does it so effectively that they develop a serious love affair. Then it's up to the girl to save him from her vicious retainers. He saves himself on several occasions by keeping his wits about him—such as putting a dummy figure in the bed when the assassins would stab him to death. The suspense is not so good, though events do happen. The climax arrives with the foreigners killing the other man, and the gay adventurer bobs up smiling to take the girl to the marriage altar.

It is never explained how Mr. Briber happened to be accused of the murder of the fair queen's father. Herbert Rawlinson is never at ease in his portrayal. He acts as much with his elbows and knees as he does in sending expressions across his face. The cast is competent enough, though the players have little to do except run around wildly. Call it an average program feature and let it go at that.

The Cast

Stuart Granger / Jack Burton.....Herbert Rawlinson
Mercia Solano.....Barbara Bedford
Grace Burton.....Una Trevelyn
Ropal.....Nick de Ruiz
Gouret.....Joseph Swickard
John Alvara.....Jean De Briac
Lawrence.....Harry Carter
Milford.....Nelson McDowell
Mrs. Chetwell.....Lillian Langdon
Duenna.....Jessie Deparnette

By Victor Bridges. Scenario by Arthur Statter. Directed by Jack Conway. Photographed by Ben Reynolds. Produced by Universal.

The Story—Wealthy youth in fear of assassination induces his cousin to assume his identity. The latter accepts, little realizing the danger. A girl attempts to shoot him, and several efforts are made to put him out of the way by her retainers. But he escapes death. The wealthy man, however, is eventually killed. Which clears up the complications and romance ushers in the happy ending.

Classification—Adventurous melodrama balanced with strong romantic interest. Case of dual identity based upon outwitting a group of assassins.

Production Highlights—The pep in the action. The poise of Barbara Bedford as the heroine. Good production.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests a campaign along teaser lines, and several ballyhoos which can be exploited around the title.

Drawing Power—Good for second class downtown and neighborhood houses.

"Shadows"

A1 Lichtman-Preferred—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ASIDE from the entertainment values of this picture, an adaptation of Wilbur Daniel Steele's prize story which appeared in the Pictorial Review under the name of "Ching," Ching, Chinaman,"—aside from its spiritual quality, its human note, its pathos and sentiment, one must consider that it gives Lon Chaney, an opportunity to demonstrate his remarkable versatility for characterization.

Playing the role of a Chinaman tossed up by the sea, who opens a laundry in a houseboat in a fishing village, who is scorned because of his race and religion but who eventually accepts Christianity when he appreciates the faith and forgiving nature of one of its disciples—Chaney carries you along. You marvel at his make-up and the manner in which he catches the psychology of the character. He is the Chinaman to the life—the inscrutable, mystic heathen.

He watches and waits. He believes in returning kindness. And at his death-bed he solves the pastor s problem.

The opening scene shows the villagers accepting the loss of their relatives who have perished in an angry sea. A pastor comes to town and wins the love of a young widow, whose husband (listed among the missing) had made her life a nightmare. Eventually the minister receives a note from the supposedly missing husband asking for money. Perhaps the blackmailer's identity is made too apparent. We all know that the pillar of the church is responsible for his sorrow because of his failure in winning the attractive widow. The Chinaman watches and waits. He knows the true sinner. Meanwhile the pastor has given up the church and his home —a pitiful figure of fate. The climax presents the Chinaman sending for the minister. And the villagers flock to his little houseboat. And he wrings a confession from the hypocrite and accepts Christianity through the faith and forgiving nature expressed by his friend.

The closing scene shows the Chinaman cutting the ropes which have held his houseboat to the pier and sailing away to his own country. It is highly effective, though the concluding shot of a love embrace should be eliminated. The picture could be trimmed a reel.

Its strongest points are Chaney's characterization, the atmosphere and the spiritual quality.

The Cast

Yen Sin, "The Heathen".....Lon Chaney
Sympathy Gibbs..... ...Marguerite De La Motte
John Malden.....Harrisen Ford
Nate Snow.....John Sainpolis
Daniel Gibbs.....Walter Long
Mister Bad Boy.....Buddy Messenger
Mary Brent.....Priscilla Bonner
Emsy Nickerson.....Frances Raymond

By Wilbur Daniel Steele. Scenario by Eve Unsell and Hope Loring. Directed by Tom Forman. Photographed by Harry Perry.

The Story—Young wife becomes a widow when brutal husband is lost at sea. In time she marries a young minister. He becomes a good friend of lonely Chinaman, one of the derelicts washed up by the sea. And the Chink values his friendship enough to watch over him. In time the Mongolian exposes the false friend of the pastor and accepts Christianity before he dies.

Classification—Human interest story based upon faith, revenge and devotion. Locale a fishing village in New England.

Production Highlights—The marvelous characterization by Lon Chaney. The human appeal. The conflict between the "pillar" of the church and the pastor. The scenes in the Chinaman's houseboat. His death. The final shot showing him cutting the ropes.

Exploitation Angles—Suggests a tie-up with papers featuring fact that this is prize story of the year. Suggests a colorful prologue with a Chinese background, using Chinese music, etc.

Drawing Power—Should go big in every community.

Head of Charles Murray being held fast by Raymond McKee in the C. C. Burr comedy "Faint Heart."

"Another Man's Boots"

Aywon—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS western may not be original, nor carry any novel highlights, but it is crowded with action. Therefore, it is easy to say that it will please those audiences who do not discriminate too carefully. The customary fighting, shooting and riding carry the spectator along and his interest is sustained even though he may anticipate the climax from the opening reel. This plot is based upon the assumed identity idea—which shows a man stepping into a friend's character at the latter's request, and the dying man recovering in time to go to his pal's defense. Of course the plotting of the villain furnishes most of the excitement.

The director has done fairly well by the plot, although he hasn't eliminated the obvious note. One might say that he has played safe. The hero incurs the wrath of the native for posing as the wounded man. You anticipate the latter's arrival, and you are not disappointed. It would have added suspense to show the injured man completely eliminated by death. The hero has his moments when he pleases the girl. Yes, he rescues her from death on her galloping horse. A little comedy strays in the picture here and there. It is not novel any more to show a bar-room fitted up to sell ice cream cones and advertising the beverage known as milk.

The picture did not cost a great deal of money to make. This is noticeable in the manner in which scenes are duplicated. But despite its obviousness, it manages to prove acceptable as entertainment. The action sees to that. Francis Ford, an old-timer these days, has the leading role and gives a satisfactory performance even though he becomes too emotional in the close-ups. The other players are unknown with the exception of Frank Lanning who plays one of his familiar Indian roles. The exteriors are first rate. Since you do not expect much from interiors in this type of picture why worry about them?

The Cast

"The Stranger".....Francis Ford
Ned Hadley.....Harry Smith
Neil Hadley.....Elvira Weil
"Injun Jim".....Frank Lanning
"Sly" Stevens.....Robert Kourtmann

By Daniel F. Whitcomb. Directed by Wm. J. Craft.

The Story—Man is injured and thinking he is going to die he begs his pal, known as "The Stranger," to assume his identity and go to his home with the money he has saved. The villagers discover that he is not the other man and plan to lynch him. But the injured man recovers and goes to his rescue. "The Stranger" develops love affair with his friend's sister.

Classification — Western melodrama based upon assumed identity.

Production Highlights — First rate action. Good atmosphere. Some thrills. Cast competent.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing it up through the 3 and 6 sheets. Also would suggest teaser campaign based upon title. Catch lines would be a good angle.

Drawing Power—Wherever westerns are popular this one will be liked. Best suited for second-class downtown houses.

"The Town That Forgot God"

Fox—8500 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

YOU recall, with satisfaction, "Over Hill," because of its human interest val a picture women enjoyed crying through a men actually took seriously, making it a sı ject of extensive comment and resulting in success.

Here, we have another, made by the sa director, containing the identical elements pathos, rural comedy, preachment and me drama, perfectly blended. In addition, it pı sents the greatest of all storms yet to rea the screen. That is a broad statement, sin the season has offered "storms" in variatio Nevertheless, for a genuine, realistic, righ in-our midst disaster, picturizing a simil catastrophe to the Dayton flood, of a fe years ago, it's all there, showing complete d struction of an inland town.

The fact that the cast contains no "names of established value means nothing. F "The Town that Forgot God" brings to th screen two players headed straight for bi things. One is Warren Krech, who chara terizes the town carpenter, and the other Bunny Grauer, in the role of "David," te year old orphaned son of the village scho teacher. No assignment could make mo drastic commands upon the histrionic abil ties of a senior actor than does the emotiona role delivered by this boy, who gives a finishe and charming performance. Jane Thomas, a the teacher-mother, and Harry Benham, th village Squire, also make lasting impression in their respective parts. In fact, there is n fault to find with the cast, including some o the best selected "types," depicting smal town characters, yet found.

Harry Millarde, who directed "Over th Hill," has hit the mark again as surely as h did with his masterpiece. It is a picture tha will command reverence, gratify admirers o thoroughly clean, enlightening entertainmen and satisfy followers of worth while motio pictures.

The Cast

David, the boy.....Bunny Graue
Eben, the carpenter.....Warren Krec
Betty Gibbs, the teacher.....Jane Thoma
Harry Adams, the surveyor.....Harry Benha
The Squire.....Edward Denisor
His wife.....Grace Bartor

(In the Epilogue)

David Adams.....Raymond Bloome
His wife.....Nina Casavan

Scenario by Paul H. Sloane. Directed by Harry Millarde. Photography by Joseph Ruttenburg assisted by Albert Wilson. Edited by Hetty Grey Baker. Produced and Distributed by William Fox.

The Story—Relates of an unspoken love the village carpenter has for the township's attractive school teacher. She does not realize it and in turn gives her heart and hand to a surveyor. This couple are blessed with a son. Soon after his birth the father dies. The mother has to teach school again. On account of jealousy existing among parents whose children do not grasp as fast as "David," the teacher's son, her life is made miserable. She dies and David is adopted by the town Squire, an unjust and cruel foster-father. In due time the town carpenter returns from his wanderings, devotes his love to the boy and finally, after heartbreaking tribulations, these two survive the storm that destroys the village whose people have forgotten kindness, mercy, God. In the end, the boy grown up is a successful man, having patterned his life after great men of American history.

Classification—Rural melodrama, relieved by comedy situations characteristic of a small town community. Spectacular, from standpoint of the storm. Dramatic in that it tells a story by realistic happenings.

Production Highlights — The storm, in its realism, drowns other high-lights, including fine acting and plentiful heart-throbs.

Exploitation Angles—A picture that can be tied up with various religious and general welfare organizations. It could be shown, without compunction, at a Church benefit. Also, with educational concerns, book stores and schools.

Drawing Power—Recommend as a picture comparing favorably with "Over the Hill."

"Enter Madame"

Garson-Zierler-Metro—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE stage has given another of its smashing hits to the screen in "Enter Madame," a play which sparkled with wit and color—a play based upon the so-called temperament of an opera singer who, when she learns that her husband is contemplating divorce proceedings with the object of marrying another, calls upon all the artifices of her sex and the tricks of her profession and succeeds in winning back his affection. Of course the play depended entirely upon dialogue and stage "business," so in transferring it to the screen the substance of the conversation loses its emphasis deprived of the human voice. Consequently we see a wealth of subtitles, most of which have been lifted from the play. And these captions carry the action.

There are practically no pictorial qualities present. The settings are few in number and these feature the home of the husband. One in particular, where most of the conflict occurs, is almost an exact duplicate of the set which formed the background of the stage play. It is an unusually faithful adaptation—too faithful for screen purposes. The thought arises, however, that the adaptor could not have treated it otherwise, unless he wanted to eliminate the character of the original and make an entirely new screen version. Had he followed this course he probably would have invited criticism among those who detest seeing a brilliant play made over into something totally different.

The picture has its interesting moments. Why not? The idea is sound and it is well developed. But in seeing it reminds us that it has served for a number of our film comediennes—Constance Talmadge, for example. And it looks best when treated lightly. Madame comes home and exudes her temperament. She gets on her husband's nerves. A stormy scene develops betwen her stepson and his father, since the woman is the only mother he has ever known. So he goes away. Then the opera singer gives a dinner and before the evening is over the husband, one of the guests, is faithful again to his marriage vows. The picture is well staged and directed and competently acted by Clara Kimball Young in the role which Gilda Varesi played upon the stage, and Elliott Dexter as the husband. It could be profitably shortened to five reels.

The Cast

Prima Donna Lisa Della Robbia (Mrs. Gerald Fitzgerald)....Clara Kimball Young
Gerald Fitzgerald....Elliott Dexter
Mrs. Flora Preston....Louise Dresser
Archimede....Lionel Belmore
Doctor....Wedgewood Nowell
Bice....Rosita Marstini
Miss Smith....Orra Deveraux
John Fitzgerald....Arthur Rankin
Aline Chalmers....Mary Jane Saunderson
Tomamoto....George Kuwa

By Gilda Varesi and Dolly Byrne. Scenario by Frank Beresford. Directed by Wallace Worsley. Produced by Harry Garson. Photographed by L. William O'Connell.

The Story—Temperamental opera singer carries on amours in Italy. Husband, thinking that his romance is over, develops another during the diva's absence. She returns home and is chagrined to discover that she has lost his affection. She resolves to win him over again, and succeeds by calling upon the artifices of her sex as well as the tricks of her profession.

Classification—Romantic comedy-drama based upon different treatment of eternal triangle—showing wife determined to win back husband's love.

Production Highlights—The fine settings. The faithful adaptation of stage success. The good work of cast. The intimate scenes in his home.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests a teaser campaign based upon big hit of stage play from which picture is adapted. Also suggests a teaser campaign based upon theme. Advise exploiting the title.

In "Chop Suey," Educational-Christie comedy, Dorothy Devore appears in the role of the young Oriental girl.

"The Girl From Rocky Point"

Pacific Film Company-S. R.—5,000 Feet

(Reviewed by Eugene Carlton)

CONTRARY to the title, the "Girl From Rocky Point" is nothing more or less than a "re-hash" of the neighborhood religious question. But there is one thing that saves it from being associated too closely with the tangled mass of film that has gone before it. The plot, what little there is of one, is presented with tact and diplomacy, creating the same effect that a political argument would have on election day, while the actual merit of the production is lost sight of by the average audience, amid the excitation of partisanship. Therefore, if a picture must be judged by its possible box office value, this production must be labeled "good."

The story is a simple one. The pretty daughter of a sea captain could be expected to do nothing else but fall in love with a much objectionable stranger that happened to be washed ashore. But the punch of the theme is brought out when the religious fanatic of the village, who brings about much grief for all parties concerned, is discovered to be an inmate of an insane institution, leaving a feeling of much gratification in the hearts of those who oppose such characters, while a bad taste is left in the mouths of the wearers of the long, sober faces.

The outdoor settings, while nothing lavish, are to be commended.. Ora Carew, who is starred in the production, does some good work, while the supporting cast "hits the ball" from start to finish.

The Cast

Samuel Hotden....Milton Ross
Betty....Ora Carew
Corrine....Gloria Joy
Daniel Williams....Charles Speare
Timothy Smith....F. G. Davidson
Robert Griffing....Theodore Von Eltz
Mignon....Verna Brooks
The "Devil"....Walter Whitman

By Sherwood MacDonald. Produced and directed by Frederick G. Becker. Photography by John Thompson.

The Story—Daughter of sea captain falls in love with stranger who is washed ashore and who is an infidel. She is driven from home by father and seeks aid from old gentleman known as the "Devil." Damaging rumors are spread by religious fanatic, who is discovered to be a lunatic, while eyesight of the infidel is restored, as well as his faith, and he and the girl are united, with the blessings of the sea captain.

Classification—A domestic drama featuring the extreme in religious fanatics.

Production Highlights—Battle on cliff between fanatic and the hero; outdoor settings and the restoration of the hero's eyesight.

Exploitation Angles—The line, "Remember the 'Miracle Man?' See Walt Whitman in 'The Girl from Rocky Point," can be used effectively. Suggests an essay contest among children on infidelity.

Drawing Power—If properly advertised it should do a good business in the neighborhood or rural houses, but it is not a strong prospect for the large first run theatres.

"The Man Who Saw Tomorrow"

Paramount—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IF the idea behind this story was practical it would solve the question of unhappy marriages. If a man was in a quandry as to which girl would make him the better wife, all he would ned to do is to be wafted to sleep by some hypnotist and peer into the future. Then he could be guided correctly. It's a fantastic idea, but implausible. Therefore it cannot be taken seriously. In the first place, a constant lover would only have one romance. And he would take the plunge and let the future take care of itself. There would be no thrill nor suspense in his life if he could visualize accurately what takes place as he grows older.

As a picture, it fails in holding one's interest. Here is Tom Meighan, who meets two girls who are widely separated in their stations in life. One is the daughter of an eccentric skipper whom he has met in the South Seas, the other belongs to England's highest society. He meets her while returning to America. The scenes up to the moment that he enlists the services of the hypnotist are fairly rich in action of a melodramatic character. But the moment that he seeks solution of his romantic problem the story loses its punch. And it's apt to invite ridicule.

Meighan goes to sleep. And the spectator, if he is not paying strict attention, is liable to yawn a bit himself. The puzzled romancer sees what would happen if he married the titled lady, then the scene shifts while he develops his other love affair. We would call this fellow a coward for wanting to be so sure of his future life. Really he hasn't a spark of romance in him for being so practical. The scenes which attend his courtship and marriage to the two girls are filled with sufficient adventure and are pictorially satisfying. The hero wakes up but is immediately wafted back to sleep. Meanwhile the society girl is waiting for him in a car out front, while the other girl and her father are inside patiently waiting for him to finish his seance or conference with the learned hypnotist.

It is all hokum, and would make much better reading via the printed page than from the silver sheet. Leatrice Joy is not given much opportunity to flash her emotional talent. In fact, there is very little opportunity for real expression by any member of the cast.

The Cast

Burke Hammond....Thomas Meighan
Capt. Morgan Pring....Theodore Roberts
Rita Pring....Leatrice Joy
Jim McLeod....Albert Roscoe
Sir William De Vry....Alec Francis
Lady Helen Deene....June Elvidge
Vonia....Eva Novak
Larry Camden....Laurence Wheat
Prof. Jansen....John Miltern
Bishop....Robert Brower
Botsu....Edward Patrick
Mayau....Jacqueline Dyris

By Perley Poore Sheehan and Frank Condon. Scenario by Will Ritchey and Frank Condon. Directed by Alfred Green. Produced by Famous Players.

The Story—Man in love, uncertain of which girl would make him the better wife, goes to a hypnotist with his problem. The hypnotist sends him to sleep and the future is visualized. It is all made clear as to which girl he should marry. And the youth governs himself accordingly.

Classification—Romance based upon problem of lover uncertain of his future. Fantastic plot, punctuated with adventure and melodrama.

Production Highlights—The fine cast containing several favorites. The scenes in the South Seas. The good production. The work of Tom Meighan, Leatrice Joy and Theodore Roberts.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests a teaser campaign based upon title and theme. It suggests a tie-up with newspapers featuring the novel idea. The cast features names which should be exploited. Also suggests a prologue, carrying atmospheric background with quartette singing "Mandalay" or "Danny Deever."

Drawing Power—Good for first run houses and liable to draw on the star's popularity.

"The Streets of New York"

Burton King-Arrow—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT takes ten shots of New York streets and three or four heavily "moralized" subtitles to start this sob sister type of plot on its conveniently melodramatic way. "The Streets of New York" is burdened with most everything which appealed to the gallery god some twenty years ago. There is the crooked Wall Street man and his clerk who "gets" something on him; there is the rich man's daughter, unaware of his villainy; there is her car which the chauffeur uses to run over the son of the wealthy skipper who was trimmed by the wealthy banker; there is his mother who scrubs out the magnate's office and who tries to steal five hundred dollars to secure an operation for the crippled youth; there is the scene when the daughter gives her the needed sum only to have it stolen by a footpad; there is the scene when the landlord evicts the ill-fated family; there is the scene of the youth who becomes a street musician to keep the wolf from the door.

And so it goes. If the author or the director have left out anything we would like to know what it is. The action is always convenient and obvious and conventional. The blackmailer holds the receipt and gets blood money—the receipt given the rich skipper when he gave up a hundred thousand dollars to the banker to invest for him. We call your attention to the fact that the captain met with foul play. Coincidence plays a strong factor in gathering the characters together, and the captions are written with an eye on the moral value. The daughter falls in love with the crippled son who is cured by means of the subtitle. For comedy relief there is the typical Irish family. The bright spot in the scenes which feature this family is the "Amarilly" study by Dorothy Mackaill.

The trouble with this picture is the fact that it is old-fashioned. The climax features the banker and the blackmailer fighting it out for the receipt at a shack on a river bank. A storm effect is employed. There is quite a thrill here when the men and the girl who has been a witness to the combat are swept into the river. But the hero jumps to the rescue and saves his sweetheart. Neighborhood audiences in certain districts will doubtless like it. The title has exploitation possibilities.

The Cast

Gideon Bloodgood.....Anders Randolf
Lucy Bloodgood.....Barbara Castleton
Paul Fairweather.....Edward Earle
Badger.....Leslie King
Sally Ann.....Dorothy Mackaill
Mrs. Fairweather.....Kate Francke

By Leota Morgan. Directed by Burton King.

The Story—Rich Wall Street banker near financial ruin mulcts a wealthy investor of his money. His clerk, however, discovers his crookedness and blackmails him. The financier's daughter accidentally runs over the son of the investor who has died from the excitement caused by the argument in demanding back his money. She falls in love with the youth, who is cured eventually. The magnate and the clerk are eliminated in the end when they fight for possession of the investor's receipt. Love triumphs.

Classification—Melodrama based upon frenzied finance coupled with blackmailing, pathos, heart interest and sentiment.

Production Highlights—Good work of Anders Randolf, Barbara Castleton, Edward Earle and Dorothy Mackaill. The atmosphere. The climax when financier, blackmailer and hero fight in shack on edge of river. The rescue.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise dressing lobby with atmosphere. Also advise using old time songs, such as "East Side, West Side" for musical prologue, etc. Suggests a teaser campaign based upon plot.

Drawing Power—Will in all probability be liked in neighborhood houses, and some second class downtown houses.

One of the attractive sets of "Omar, the Tentmaker," Richard Walton Tully's second production starring Guy Bates Post, directed by James Young

"Blazing Arrows"

Western Pictures—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THE old "Strongheart" model is used for this western—a picture which features an Indian for its hero. They efface the barrier which separates racial differences through making the girl unduly grateful toward the youth who has rescued her from the villainous would-be suitor. This girl in question has a wealthy guardian who has come under the influence of the villain through the latter's effort in having the rich man finance a gold expedition. The Indian, a graduate of Columbia (this university was Strongheart's alma mater) has met her at college and the way the plot develops it is easy to assume that he will go to her defense. This picture is an obvious little affair, relying upon the customary western detail which is quite tame here and shows a fair amount of the necessary conflict.

But the author hasn't much faith in his hero. Afraid of the much talked-of racial barrier and the effect it might have upon our audiences he reveals in the denouement of the plot that his redskin is really white—a youth brought up by an Indian chief. Much Indian hokum is presented. The hero shoots the blazing arrow and discovers that there is no barrier which separates him from the girl insofar as the blood which courses through his veins is concerned. The author resorts to the antiquated device of having the hero learn of his real identity through a locket.

It is an "exterior" picture of an ancient vintage, but it carries a good sample of western scenery. It is fairly well acted by Lester Cuneo as the Indian and Francelia Billington as the girl. For houses which show a daily change of program or offer double feature day, this attraction should find a place.

The Cast

Sky Fire.....Lester Cuneo
Martha Randolph.....Francelia Billington
Gray Eagle.....Clark Comstock
Mocking Bird.....Lura Howard
Elias Thornby.....Lafayette McKee
Bart McDermott.....Lew Meehan
Scarface.....Jim O'Neil

Written and Directed by Henry A. McCarthy.

The Story—Indian youth, a college graduate, goes to rescue of girl he knew while in Columbia. He saves her from villain. The girl is perplexed over the fact that he is a redskin, but it is proven in the end that he is white. Thus she gives him her love.

Classification—Western featuring racial barrier theme.

Production Highlights—Some good western exteriors.

Exploitation Angles—This suggests all the paper you can get which will attract a crowd. Would advise playing up the racial barrier theme for teaser campaign. Also suggests a colorful prologue featuring Indian songs, backgrounds, etc.

Drawing Power—Might draw in second class downtown houses and in small towns.

"The Broadway Madonna"

Film Booking Offices—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

WE can't have masterpieces every day There have got to be some average pictures. This is one. It hasn't much originality in the way of a story, but is saved from mediocrity by a good-looking star, an adequate cast and some attractive settings.

Dorothy Revier appears in the role of Vivian Collins, a cabaret dancer, who is forced by her husband, a crook, to try and "marry" a son of wealth so that they can get their hands on some much needed cash. Miss Revier is easy on the eyes, but there is too much footage devoted to closeups of her. The story is too slim in dramatic material to warrant its being dragged out to six reels. It would have been much better in five.

The opening scenes of Broadway at night, the cabarets and the dances performed by the star are all good and attractively mounted. It is quite a la Mae Murray for a moment. Jack Connolly appears in the leading male role, Eugene Burr is a convincing "Slinky" Davis and our old friend of serial fame, Juanita Hansen, is seen as Gloria Thomas, a nurse.

The murder of Judge Bradshaw during the masque ball is a dramatic moment. Lee Willard, who portrays the judge, is inclined to overdo the part. The inquest furnished some more sob stuff when the mother, thinking her son killed his father, takes the blame on her own shoulders. The old mother is sent to jail. The story does not ring true here. The action of the son in allowing the mother to go to prison takes a lot of sympathy from the role.

The titles are good, but smack much of the style of "Foolish Wives." The author, scenario writer and photographer are not credited. We don't blame them for not wanting their names used.

The Cast

Vivian Collins.....Dorothy Revier
Tom Bradshaw.....Jack Connolly
Dr. Kramer.....Harry Van Meter
"Slinky" Davis.....Eugene Burr
Gloria Thomas.....Juanita Hansen
Judge Bradshaw.....Lee Willard

Directed by Harry Revier.

The Story—Deals with the effort of two crooks, husband and wife, aided by a gang of ruffians, to get the woman "married" to Tom Bradshaw and thus get their hands on some of the wealth possessed by the family. One of the crooks in robbing a safe in the Bradshaw home, meets up with Judge Bradshaw and in the scuffle which follows, kills him. The gang tries to do away with Tom when the ringleader becomes suspicious that he knows the real murderer. They fail, however, and in the end justice prevails.

Classification—A society drama possessing an attractive star, some elaborate sets and a lively ending.

Production Highlights—The beauty of the star. The scenes in the cabarets. The murder of the judge in his home. The dances performed by the star. The birthday celebration at the Bradshaw home on the Hudson. The masque ball. The inquest where the mother takes the blame for the murder of the father, thinking that her son committed the crime and seeking to shield him.

Exploitation Angles—The title is a good one for box office uses. Would advise featuring the elaborate cabaret scenes and the dances. There is a striking Roamer roadster used in the picture. Suggests a tieup with the local dealer to use a similar model in the streets suitably covered with your advertising signs.

Drawing Power—This is just an average program picture. It should go well in house that do not care as much for logic as they do for melodramatic action.

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

A MOST successful get-together dinner was held by the F. I. L. M. Club of Chicago in the banquet room of the Morrison Hotel on Monday night, with close to three hundred exchange managers, film salesmen, bookers and other exchange employees having to do with the distribution of films representatives of the state exhibitors' association and the press in attendance. The event was the first of its kind ever held in Chicago and marks another milestone in the advancement and improvement in the business methods of the film industry.

Joe Friedman, who acted as toastmaster, having been delegated by President Eddie Silverman to this important post, introduced the speakers in a series of brief, but witty, speeches which kept the crowd in a good humor.

H. O. Martin, manager of Pathe's Chicago exchange, outlined the object of the meeting, which, he stated, was to bring the salesmen closer together and make them realize that they are part of a great industry and have corresponding responsibilities and backing. He also declared that the meeting was intended to show the magnitude and power of the industry to those connected with the exchanges, as well as to politicians and others who might have a voice in the legislation affecting its welfare. He served notice that the producers and distributors, in conjunction with the strong exhibitors' organization, from now on were prepared to fight for their rights, and spoke for the strongest and closest co-operation between the exchange men, salesmen and exhibitors, with fair dealing paramount at all times. Particularly impressive in his address, as in others made during the evening was the spirit of friendship and confidence towards exhibitors. Salesmen Friemel, of Paramount, was listened to with interest as he declared that salesmen no longer are film peddlers, but are representatives of producing and distributing companies and carry the reputation of their employers with them. He asserted that, in their direct contact with exhibitors, they should right the idea that this is a crooked industry and that they should regard this as their mission. He also cautioned them that honest and fair dealing is the only basis for success.

President L. M. Rubens, of the Illinois M. P. T. O., stated that it is his belief that both exhibitors and exchanges in this territory were playing fair and commented on the friendly terms the various branches of the industry were on in the Chicago territory. He pointed out the advantages of the exhibitors' organization to the industry as a whole, assuring better business methods and a powerful voice in civic and state affairs, and suggested that the salesmen, who are in closer touch with the country exhibitors than anyone else, do some missionary work for the M. P. T. O. in securing members. One of the outstanding features of the meeting was the acceptance of this suggestion by exchange managers, as voiced by Joe Friedman, who declared that the salesmen would be instructed to do this work for the benefit of all.

Secretary Dibelka, of the M. P. T. O., followed President Rubens and praised the work of the Arbitration Board, composed of exchange managers and representatives of exhibitors, and declared that the five hundred cases which had been settled during the year by this tribunal, were satisfactory to both parties, and that not more than one or two objections to decisions had been heard. He paid tribute to the fairness evinced by the men who sat on the board, whether exchange men or exhibitors.

Clyde Eckhardt, manager of the Fox Chicago exchange for the past five years, who is about to leave for New York to assume a more important position, was given a rousing send-off, and spoke a few words of parting advice and friendship to the boys with whom he had been associated for so many years. Other speakers were Martin Quigley and Fred McQuigg, better known to Chicago motion picture men as Bob Reel, of the Chicago American.

District Manager Harry Danto, of Goldwyn, informs us that "Remembrance" is making a remarkable booking record, and that exhibitors are enthusiastic over the way the picture is going over. Among the successful out of town runs was one at the Merrill Theatre, Milwaukee, where a number of tie-ups, including window displays, were arranged for by Manager Ralph Wettstein, of the Milwaukee branch, and Walter D. Nealand, Chicago publicity man for Goldwyn; and at Ascher's Palace Theatre, Peoria, where Roy McMullen is manager.

Three high class salesmen have recently been added to the sales force of Universal and assigned to country territory under the management of Sales Manager I. L. Leserman. They are W. H. Tracy, who had been connected with Vitagraph for a long time, who will cover northern Illinois; T. Stover, formerly of Paramount, who will also work Illinois territory; and H. O. Hullinger, who comes from Universal's Pittsburgh exchange.

Clyde Eckhart, manager of Fox's Chicago exchange since 1917, in point of service the oldest exchange manager on Film Row, will end his Chicago duties on November 6th, having been appointed assistant to General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan of the Fox Film Corporation. Sidney Myers, manager of Fox Omaha exchange, has been promoted to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Eckhart's advancement and will take charge next week. Mr. Eckhart will leave to assume his new duties in New York about November 17th, after intalling his successor. Both are veterans of the Fox organization, with which Mr. Myers has been connected for five years and Mr. Eckhart for eight, the latter having come to Chicago after seeing service at Pittsburgh, where he was exchange manager, and at the home office.

---

Manager Klein of F. B. O. recently has added three men to his sales staff; they are J. J. Lynch, brother of Vincent T. Lynch of the new Tiffin, who will cover the west side; J. M. Duskin, who has been operating a state right exchange at Cleveland, O., who will travel northern Illinois, and Fred Swanson, a former Indiana exhibitor, who has been assigned to central Illinois territory.

---

F. R. Martin, Vitagraph's Milwaukee manager, was at the Chicago exchange this week and reports theatres in his territory are doing much better business than for some time past, with the exception of the smaller class of theatres, where attendance is still poor in spots. Mr. Martin is well known in Chicago where he formerly made his headquarters.

---

L. R. Nelson is now selling film for United Artists in the Indiana territory. He for some time past has been connected with the Chicago office of Select and also covered Milwaukee territory for Select.

Clay Roberts, who has been working country territory for Vitagraph, has been assigned to cover Chicago's north side.

One of the largest audiences to attend a trade showing in many months filled Orchestra Hall last week where "Oliver Twist" was given its first Chicago screening. First National had Belaban and Katz Riviera orchestra on hand to play the picture and the musical setting was most effective.

Although, of course, much was expected of Jackie Coogan, he surpassed himself in the role of Oliver Twist, which was played with a sincerity and pathetic appeal which puts young Jackie on a par with the greatest actors. Nor were comedy touches lacking. Lon Cheney and the rest of the fine cast gave the diminutive star splendid support.

The exhibitors present were practically unanimous in declaring this one of the most remarkable and powerful pictures they had ever witnessed.

Murray Rathner, representative of Sol Lesser and Frank Hall, were among those present at the showing.

Following the screening Publicist Lazarus, of First National's Chicago exchange, was host to a group of representatives of the press, at Congress Hotel luncheon.

---

Julius Stern, president of the Century Comedy Company, accompanied by David Bader, his west coast publicity representative, passed through Chicago en route to their Pacific Coast studios this week. Mr. Stern had just returned from an eight months' tour of Europe and is returning to his headquarters full of new ideas for Century pictures, and carried a trunk full of photos and notes for furthering the interests of Century's product.

---

Manager Carl Harthill has moved the offices of the Cosmopolitan National Exchanges from 806 South Wabash to the main floor of 732 S. Wabash. Starting the middle of November, Mr. Harthill states that his company plans to release a feature picture each month, the first of the series to be "Just a Mother," in five reels.

The opening of Vincent T. Lynch's New Tiffin theatre, at North Avenue and Karlov, was an important event of Monday night, and Chicago now has another beautiful and commodious neighborhood house, which ranks with the best. A great crowd thronged the streets about the new theatre throughout the evening and the house was filled three times, and many were unable to gain admittance. 2,600 seats is its capacity and its architecture is impressive and the interior well arranged, beautifully decorated and equipped with the best throughout. Mr. Lynch will continue the policy which made the old Tiffin a success in this rapidly growing neighborhood and will show high class feature pictures and provide his patrons with splendid orchestra and organ music. Walter Kipkowski has been engaged as director, and the music of his orchestra was given hearty applause on the opening night. Ambrose Larson, organist of ability, presided at the magnificent Wurlitzer organ, which has been installed. A large delegation from film row and many exhibitors were at the premier of the New Tiffin, and united in con-

Buffalo Chatter

Elmer C. Winegar, well known western New York exhibitor, has been appointed manager of the Elmwood theatre, succeeding Bruce Fowler, who leaves Saturday, November 4, for Terre Haute, Ind., where he wil manage the Indiana theatre. Mr. Winegar was formerly manager of the Central Park and Premier theatres. He is Pathe News cameraman in these parts and has been engaged in the production of industrial films for the past few years.

Mrs. Eli T. Hosmer, New York state's woman censor, is actively lending her support to the campaign of Governor Miller for re-election. Mrs. Hosmer is vice chairman of the Erie County Republican county committee and general chairman of the women's committee of 2,000 members. She is taking a very active part in the work of gathering in votes for Miler—and the continuation of censorship.

The Olympic theatre is now under the control of Universal Pictures corporation. The house will be used for the presentation of the company's Jewel productions. T. C. Leonard of the Universal exploitation staff, will manage the theatre. "Human Hearts," is the attraction for the week of Nov. 5. The new management will give special attention to presentation, elaborate prologues being planned by Mr. Leonard for the various special attractions of his company.

The new Shea Hippodrome Wurlitzer organ will be dedicated Sunday, November 5. Albert Hay Malotte who has been connected with several of the largest houses on the coast will preside at the console.

The Buckley-Ferguson Productions, Inc., of Binghamton, N. Y., have arranged to have their first feature, "Her Own Story," released by American Releasing corporation, according to Edward Ferguson, director of the company. The producers are now planning for a second picture which will also be filmed in the Southern Tier.

Associated Theatres, Inc., have taken over the Park theatre in Bath, N. Y., and the Strand and Andrews in Salamanca, N. Y. O. T. Schroeppel, formerly of Buffalo, will manage the latter two houses.

Bill Van Dyne, the Lafayette Square assistant manager, is now a full fledged Elk. Together with a brother exhibitor, H. Minuse, manager of the Elk theatre, he was taken into the order at the last ceremonial session.

In the Canadian Film Centres

VARIOUS changes have been made recently in the personnel of moving picture exchanges in Western Canada. Joe Hunter, who was, for some time, on the road for Fox Film Corporation, is now the manager of the Fox exchange at Calgary, Alberta. Announcement is also made that George Kohn has been appointed manager of the Goldwyn exchange at Calgary, this being under the jurisdiction of the Famous Players Film Service. Norman Smith is also making good headway as the manager of the Calgary branch of Regal Flims, Limited.

Leslie Lamb, formerly manager of the Osborne theatre, Winnipeg, Mantioba, is now identified with the Winnipeg office of Regal Films, Limited.

Perry Wishart, who was manager of large moving picture theatres in Winnipeg for some years, is now on the sales staff of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, at Winnipeg.

"Izzy" Allen, manager of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, office at Winnipeg, is interested in the organization of a new chain of moving picture theatres in Ontario.

E. E. Harris, representing the Perkins Electric Company, Limited, at Winnipeg, Manitoba, recently completed a business trip through the Canadian West to the Pacific Coast. He reports that the theatre business is picking up wonderfully in the Western Provinces. New theatres have been opened at Shellbrooke and Willow Bunch, Sask.

Clair Hague, general manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, Toronto, has been elected president of the Moving Picture Bowling League which has been organized at Toronto for the present season. Jack Droy, general manager of Vitagraph, has been elected vice-president, and L. J. Haag of the Famous-Lasky Film Service, Limited, is secretary-treasurer. Teams have been entered by Fox, Vitagraph, First National, Universal, Famous-Lasky, Famous Players Film Service, Famous Players Canadian Corp., and the Allen Theatres executive staff.

Buffalo's Film Row News

CHARLES HUSBAND, formerly with Niagara Pictures corporation, is now representing Nu-Art in the Southern Tier. Fred M. Zimmerman, president and general manager of Nu-Art, is tickled to death over the reception given "Sure Fire Flint" in Rochester last week.

Bob Murphy, manager of the local Filkins & Murphy office, distributors of Merit products, has received a number of prints of the new Bill Fairbanks features. The first, "Peaceful Peters," he is taking on the road this week for screening.

"Hub" Taylor who is now plugging Pathe pictures writes Manager W. A. V. Mack that he is coming toward Buffalo in a new sedan. The one question on everybody's lips is "Where did he get it?" He may have bought it at that! It is reported that he has ordered a large magnet attached to the rear of the car so that it will pick up the parts as they leave the chassis.

Irvin Zeltner, who has been doing exploitation for the Goldwyn home office, especially for "Remembrance," which was shown at the Capitol, has arrived in town to take charge of exploitation for the local exchange. Mr. Zeltner before entering the film business was on various New York newspapers. He has been in Syracuse, Utica and Niagara Falls on exploitation work the past week.

Jack Berkowitz, manager of the First Graphic Exchange, announces the acquisition of the upstate rights on "The Door That Has No Key," a feature based on Cosmo Hamilton's story of the same name. In the future all the Aywon product will also be released in these parts by First Graphic.

Sydney Samson of Grand & North reports "The Jungle Goddess" going big in Rochester. The following Kodak Town houses have booked this serial—Lyndhurst, Hudson, Empire, Lincoln and Lyric. Mr. Samson has received a print of "Shadows," which he will screen for local exhibitors at a big party in a few davs.

Chester A. Saunders, manager of the local United Artists exchange, is anxiously awaiting a print of "Tess of the Storm Country," about which exhibitors are inquiring daily. Mr. Saunders has closed "A Tailor Made Man," for showing at Shea's Hippodrome.

Jesse Weil, formerly in charge of exploitation in the local F. B. O. office, has been transferred to Detroit. Jesse says it's too cold in Buffalo for him. Wait till he gets in Detroit. He'll wish he had been assigned to the Congo Free State. Harry Dixon, F. B. O. salesman de luxe, is cleaning up in the city and surrounding territory these days. Debonair as ever, there is no exhibitor who can resist this young man. His latest one, "A Broadway Madonna," is making a hit.

Canadian Paragraphs

The new Gaicty Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, was re-opened for the week of October 23 in a highly auspicious manner, the re-constructed house making a hit with large crowds of patrons. Manager Henry Morton chose "One Clear Call" as his opening attraction and this was followed by "Trouble," starring Jackie Coogan. The policy adopted is to change programmes twice weekly. General admission for evening performances is 25c with children 15c; afternoon prices are 10c and 15c, including tax.

Manager P. D. Egan of the Lyceum Theatre, Winnipeg, Manitoba, received a fine letter of appreciation a few days ago from Her Excellency, Lady Byng, wife of Lord Byng of Vimy, Governor-General of Canada, the letter being sent by Capt. the Hon. O. H. C. Balfour, secretary to the Governor-General. Lady Byng recently witnessed a presentation of "Orphans of the Storm" at the Lyceum. The letter was as follows:

"I am desired by Her Excellency, Lady Byng of Vimy, to write and tell you how very much she enjoyed the extremely interesting production, 'Orphans of the Storm' which she saw at your theatre. I am also to express Her Excellency's thanks for the comfortable arrangements that were made to allow her to see the film."

Exhibitors of Winnipeg, Manitoba, decided at a meeting of the Manitoba Moving Picture Exhibitors Association on October 24 to hold a special Moving Picture Theatre Week starting Monday, November 13. A feature of the week is to be a popularity contest for Winnipeg young ladies, three of whom are to be entered by each theatre or for each residential district. Patrons at each theatre will be given the opportunity to vote and prizes will be awarded to the leading girls. The ladies will have their pictures flashed upon the screens. Special speakers are to give short talks on appropriate subjects at various theatres during the week. The movement to hold the special week was started by G. de Grandcourt, representtive of the Fox Film Corporation.

Cleveland Bulletins

Bellvue and Bucyrus, Ohio, have been the hotbed of contention against the Sunday moving picture show for the past year and a half. The ministers of these towns, near neighbors, have been fighting the Sunday show. Mayor C. F. Picking of Bucyrus is opposed to shows on Sunday. The federal prohibition officers are dead set against Sunday shows. And still one exhibitor of Bucyrus, who also has a house in Bellvue, keeps open on Sunday. He has been arrested for breaking the law. In fact, he has been arrested for this offense no less than ten times. The other day the case of his first count came up and the Judge fined him $50 and let him go. It is thought the other nine cases will never come up. This exhibitor says that if they ever do close him on Sunday, he will put on concerts and keep the people in the habit of coming to his theatre. "It's the theatre habit that counts," he says. "Keep 'em coming, whether for music or pictures, only keep 'em coming, and you'll be all right."

Cleveland Motion Picture Company, 219 Film Exchange building, a newly formed company for the purpose of making news, industrial, educational and social films, pulled a real scoop last week when it showed Saturday's Michigan-Ohio State football game on the screen in Cleveland, Detroit, Columbus and Ann Arbor Sunday afternoon. Twelve hours after Jack Flannigan, cameraman for the Cleveland Motion Picture Company got back to Cleveland from Columbus, the prints were showing at the Majestic Theatre, Columbus; Capitol Theatre, Detroit; Circle Theatre, Cleveland, and at Ann Arbor. The Ann Arbor folks saw the picture of the game before the boys got back home. Special interest in this game was aroused because of the opening of the new $2,000,000 stadium at Columbus.

The Cleveland Motion Picture Company will specialize in things other than speed. It is doing social films in great numbers, showing that motion pictures are taking the place of the old family album.

The Film Board of Trade of Cleveland is now an incorporated body, papers having been filed in Columbus last week.

E. J. Flesher has just taken over the management of the Glenside Theatre, Buckeye Road, Cleveland, and has re-opened it after giving it a new coat of paint, and a complete new lighting installation. The Glenside has been closed for several months. A daily change policy has been adopted.

The Regent Theatre, Cleveland, a well known neighborhood house, has added vaudeville to its regular feature picture policy. No advance in prices with the added entertainment.

Scoville, Essick and Reiff have added the Gordon Square Theatre to their present string of eight motion picture theatres. The Gordon Square is one of the largest theatres on the West Side and has always been successful. The theatre was formerly owned by G. C. Sharp.

With the Cleveland Branches

J. A. KOERPEL, central western division manager for Goldwyn, was back in Cleveland for a few days this week, after a fortnight tour of his exchanges, which since last week, includes Indianapolis. The Indianapolis office is open for business but there's to be an official opening in the near future, which will include eats, n' drinks n' congratulations and a good time for everybody in and around Indianapolis.

E. Mandelbaum, president of Associated First National Exchange of Ohio, is in New York serving his time on the rotating executive committee of the company.

First National office manager Walter Lusk forsook his comfortable desk chair last week and personally pursued the lion in his den —meaning that Lusk was out in the territory grabbing off contracts.

H. A. Bandy, First National district manager out in these parts has been reported missing from Cleveland for some time, but was located in Cincinnati where he has been quietly but efficaciously, putting the final periods to a lot of interesting contracts.

Cleve Adams, personal representative of Art Schmidt, general manager for Universal, is on the last lap of a two-weeks visit in Cleveland. Adams has been getting into personal touch with local exhibitors and local conditions, with a view to meeting both exhibitor and conditions fairly in order to hasten the return-to-prosperity that is slow in arriving.

With the Washington Exchanges

ED McSHANE, veteran film manager of the Washington branch of the Federated Films of Baltimore, handling sales and shipments to the south and west, resigned as of Saturday, October 21, Manager Simon Feldstein of the Baltimore office of Federated Films has come to Washington and is in charge of the affairs of this office. Mr. Feldstein confirms the announcement that his exchanges would be consolidated into the Washington branch in the Mather building, and that Louis Fleisher will continue as city salesman in the Baltimore field. After the change has been made effective November 1, a manager for the Washington office will be selected.

Rumors that the Strand Film Service, owned by D. M. Thomas, has been for sale, were denied by Mr. Thomas last week.

The recent policy of the Hodkinson Independent Exchanges has been to give bonus checks to the offices showing the best collections for and during each current month. Sam Galanty, manager of the Washington exchange, carries a broad smile, having secured 100 per cent collections for October.

Special Representative Ossermann of the Universal Exchanges is handling the duties of Laemmle men, off the road temporarily, out of the Washington office.

The recent promotion of Mr. Gillespie of Hodkinson's to the New York office has caused a re-arrangement in the local office. The new sales force as announced by Mr. Galanty, branch manager, includes Dan Dolan and Clarence Eiseman. Both the above film salesmen are popular hustlers in the territory and give reason for Galanty to expect big things from their efforts.

Harry Hayner is special representative of President Arthur Kane of Associated-Exhibitors for the Washington territory, George Schwartz being in charge of the Virginia field as aide to Mr. Hayner. Where this work was formerly handled by W. E. Bush, it is now taking the time of two A. E. representatives and the distribution service of the Pathe exchange and sales force.

The showing of Connie Talmadge at Baltimore in "East Is West" has taken Crandall executives and First National chiefs over to the Maryland metropolis several times recently. Baltimore was one of the three cities chosen for the pre-release premieres.

A gay Hallowe'en party was held October 28th at 1731 Eye (I) street, by the First National social club in the form of a costume-masquerade.

Dr. Joseph Friedman, local dentist, has decided to enter the film business, and is going to New York to invest $25,000 in product, to be handled in the South by Sidney Lust of Super-Films.

Sidney Lust, who was called on by the city officials for the proposed safety drive, is to be instrumental in securing a safety film from the United Railways of St. Louis for showing with trailers at local theatres, forty-five of which are to be asked to run the film, or trailers. It is estimated by Mr. Lust that 365,000 fans will see these safety pleas and films. The Metropolitan shows to at least 35,000 people weekly. Other houses show to 25,000 a week each, second-class houses run from about 6,000 to 20,000 and night houses in neighborhoods will average five thousand spectators. These figures presented at the meeting in the commissioner's board room of the District building clinched the exhibitors' part in the proposed drive.

Miss Violet Widenmyer is now acting as secretary to Mr. Claflin of the Southern Motion Picture Corporation of Washington and College Park, Md.

Ben Lust, equipment dealer, has recently sold to Harry Jarboe of the Gayety a lobby Baloptican and the contract to supply slides for the unique projector. It is used to advertise the current attractions and photo slides are changed weekly.

Washington Brevities

Sol Rosenberger, theatre constructor, was a visitor at Loew's Palace this week. Rosenberger is associated with Harry Crandall and architect Lamb in the construction of the new Ambassador of the Crandall chain. It is understood that Mr. Rosenberger will spend the rest of 1923 supervising the erection of the Ambassador.

Charles N. David announces that his projected Congress Heights studio will start immediate filming of a series of five two-reel comedies. Miss Margaret Gorman, formerly "Miss America," will be featured in these films.

Announcement was made this week that the Regent Theatre, 18th and California streets, had been taken over by Eddie Phillips, well-known film row figure, and will be reopened early in November, after being dark during the summer and fall.

The October meeting of the directors of the Crandall Theatre Company was held at the office of Harry M. Crandall, Thursday, October 26.

The Laurel races temporarily diverted the sporting proclivities of Harry Crandall, John J. Payette, Joseph P. Morgan and Nelson Bell from golf to the ponies. Owing to the handicapping and profound sporting wisdom of these gentlemen, they won on every race out of the seven, but six.

N. Mirskey and the Metropolitan Symphony Orchestra played such a spirited rendition of Hosmer's Rhapsody, as an overture to "The Bond Boy" that at each evening performance they were encored vociferously.

Fritz Hoffman, Crandall theatres auditor, returned to Washington, Monday, after a week's visit to New York.

The new $20,000 Hope-Jones orchestral unit, recently installed in the Apollo Theatre is giving Stanley W. Rhodes the opportunity of furnishing Northeast theatre-goers with excellent recitals accompanying the picture-presentation.

Mrs. Locher, directing Crandall's Public Service Department, devotes her Saturdays to personal supervision of the juvenile matinees in the Savoy, Avenue Grand, Apollo and York theatres of the Crandall chain in the city. The neighborhood reaction has been so favorable that the residential patronage has been greatly increased and the class of audiences improved, incidentally.

The Washington Photo-Play Company, backed by local business men, has as its producer, L. K. Holland. Associated with him is Charles N. David, a veteran of the film business, sometime director for the old Essanay Company. They have started work on the Margaret Gorman "Classic Comedies."

Kansas City Jottings

Three theatres in the Kansas City territory reopened their doors last week in anticipation of a prosperous winter season, the Alamo and the Roanoke theatres in Kansas City being reopened by Robert Leonard, while the Grand Theatre at St. Joseph, Mo., was reopened by Herman Cook.

William H. Branch, former manager of the Lyle theatre, San Antonio, Tex., and press representative for all the Lyle theatres, has accepted a position as exploitation manager for the Kansas City Goldwyn office, according to W. E. Truog, district manager. Branch formerly was an exploitation man for Artcraft and Fox in Minneapolis and St. Paul. .

Pete Morrison, a star in western pictures, will arrive in Kansas City in time to make personal appearances in conjunction with his latest production, "West vs. East," prior to going to New York where he will compete in the Western Sports tournament in Madison Square Garden, according to B. C. Cook, manager of the Standard Film Company exchange in Kansas City.

Motion pictures of "The Mayor in Action" have been advertised as a part of the program of the Third Ward Democratic Club of Kansas City at a meeting this week. The picture will show Mayor Frank Cromwell at the mayor's picnic and other events of interest to the political gathering.

William Andlauer, official cameraman for Pathe News in Kansas City, as well as the Newman theatre, who sold his interests recently to G. R. McGeary, with the intention of entering business in New York, has decided to remain in Kansas City and has taken over his former interests.

Carolina Close-Ups

Ralph H. DeBruiler, former manager of the Howard Theatre, Atlanta, Ga., and one of the most prominent theatre managers in the Southeast is now directing the destinies of the Broadway Theatre, Charlotte, N. C.

It is reported that R. D. Craver, First National Franchise Holder, who has been using the theatre for showing of these pictures for some time, has sold his lease on same to A. A. Anderson, who has only recently disposed of a string of seven theatres in and near Hamlet, N. C., so that he could take over the Broadway.

H. C. McLain, former owner and manager of the Auditorium Theatre, Winston Salem, N. C., has sold his theatre and is now connected with a firm in Washington, D. C., which is in the exterior decorating business. Mr. McLain is now in Wilmington, N. C., supervising the decoration of the streets for a forthcoming affair.

Contrary to the official announcement issued by company officials and published in last week's News to the effect that their Royal Theatre would close, this Howard-Wells Amusement Company house remained open and will continue as in the past.

In Kansas City Film Row

AT last the Paramount office in Kansas City has an exploitation man to fill the vacancy created when Howard Kingsmore was called to manage the Strand theatre at Pawtucket, R. I. He is John J. Friedl who comes from the Paramount office at Des Moines, Ia. Friedl formerly was a member of the Fox exploitation staff in Omaha and for three years was with the Hostettler Amusement Company.

Julius King is the latest addition to the F. B. O. sales force in Kansas City. Mr. King recently was with Goldwyn in St. Louis and formerly was connected with the Kansas City First National office.

Harry Weinberger, former representative for Southern Enterprises out of Oklahoma City, now is selling American Releasing product in the Kansas City territory, while Robert Calvert, formerly a "Big U" representative in Missouri and recently with the F. B. O. office in Omaha, has joined the sales force of the F. B. O. office in Kansas City.

W. E. "Marty" Williams, who for sixteen years has been identified with the film industry in the Kansas City territory, is the new manager of the Vitagraph office in Kansas City.

St. Louis Film Row News

CHARLEY WERNER, local Metro manager, burst a minor blood vessel in his throat a few days ago and has been confined to his home. His doctors promise him that he can get back on the job in a day or two.

Universal had an interesting sales conference Saturday, October 28. Barney Rosenthal presided.

Floyd Lewis of Select landed some nice contracts on a trip to Quincy, Hannibal and vicinity.

Pat Collins, manager for Exhibitors Service says the past two weeks set a new sales record for his office. Sounds promising.

C. L. Hickman is back with F. B. O. and is making the Southern Illinois territory.

Joe Bryant of C. B. C. is in St. Louis lining up the distribution of his features, comedies and short subjects in this territory. Sam Werner of United Film has obtained the new series of Hallroom Boys comedies. Sam knows their worth. He will handle "More to be Pitied Than Scorned" in this section.

Joe Storey was the guest of manager Sam Harris of Pathe the past few days.

C. B. Howe, traveling auditor of Universal, is in St. Louis and plans to remain here for about two weeks.

Fred E. Walters, of the Indianapolis exchange, goes to St. Louis, relieving A. Mike Vogel, who goes to the Pittsburgh office.

Around Carolina Film Centres

C. E. KESSNICH, division manager for Metro, was in Wilmington N. C., last week, stopping off on his return to Atlanta from Washington, D. C., after a trip to New York on business.

E. F. Dardine of Universal and C. E. Peppiatt of Southern Enterprises are two Charlotte exchange managers who were out in their territory last week. They also met Jim McCormick of the Charlotte Select office.

A. R. Elliss, a newcomer in the film business, is covering the Carolinas for the Charlotte Educational office.

A. S. Dickinson, Atlanta branch manager for Hodkinson, spent last week on important business for his concern in North Carolina.

Rufus Davis, manager of the Lichtman exchange in Atlanta, was another busy man in the Carolinas, lining up exhibitors on "Rich Men's Wives."

S. A. Lynch, Y. F. Freeman, Dan Michaelove of Atlanta and A. C. Cowles of Spartanburg met Carl Bamford and Fred Kent in Asheville and went to Washington, D. C., to see the Navy-Georgia Tech football game.

Jack Elwell, who has been Metro's representative in the Carolinas, has been sent to the Florida territory to succeed Dan Webster, who recently died, and has been succeeded in the Carolinas by Fritz Friend. This has made it necessary to send Roscoe Gann, former booker, to the Tennessee territory.

F. A. Leatherman spent several days of combined business and pleasure with Tony Sudekum in Nashville.

San Diego Squibs

Following up the strike of operators musicians and stage hands employed by some sixteen of the local motion picture houses, the managers of the theatres joined in a court proceeding to secure a permanent injunction against the picketing of the houses or the publication in the union workers' organ anything derogatory to the managers or their present "open shop" employees. Damages in the sum of $30,000 are also asked in the suits now pending against the union men and their official paper.

So great was the demand to see "Grandma's Boy" that Manager Russell Rogers of the Plaza Theatre ran the picture for three straight weeks, with big attendance at every show. Rarely has a picture been held here for a run longer than two weeks.

St. Louis Snapshots

Frank Tate, owner of the Columbia, Strand, Grand Opera House, Rialto, Orpheum and American theatre, has given Missouri University $50,000 for a memorial to his son, Lee H. Tate, who was killed in an automobile accident October 20, 1921. The University plans a $150,000 law library to be known as "Lee H. Tate Hall."

The Aubert Photo Play Company, which is erecting a theatre at Aubert and Easton avenues, has been authorized to increase its capital from $30,000 to $50,000. It has assets of $45,000 and liabilities of but $5,000. The additional $10,000 stock will be subscribed this week.

The Chippewa Theatre, Broadway, near Chippewa will reopen November 12. W. H. Beckers and A. Bronley purchased the house several weeks ago. They plan to put in new equipment and improve the house generally.

The Missouri Theatre, the big Paramount first-run house, has reduced its mezzanine floor seats from 50 cents to 35 cents and the rate for children from 25 cents to 15 cents at matinees. The Sunday and evening price of children will be but 25 cents instead of 35.

C. C. Jones opened his handsome new American Theatre, Cambria, Ill., on November 1. This house seats 400 and cost $25,000. Jones will run high class pictures.

Visitors to St. Louis the past week included: George Newsum, Plaza Theatre, Mount Vernon, Ill.; Harry Thornton, Geyety, Springfield, Ill.; H. J. Lowry, Opera House, Highland, Ill.; Teddy Yemm, Duquoin, Ill.; C. M. Luttrell, Majestic, Jacksonville, Ill.; Harry Frazenda and J. Spalding, Taylorville, Ill.; I. W. Rodgers of Poplar Bluff, Mo., and Cairo, Ill.; and C. J. Law, New Palace, Pana, Ill.

The Missouri Theatre, St. Louis, purchased two Powers C. E. high tension lamps from the local Fulco-Schaeffer Sales Company store.

Mrs. Frank Paul of the Marvel Theatre, Carlinville, Ill., who was a visitor of the week states that business has shown decided improvement the past few weeks.

"The Storm" reopened the Court Theatre, Paris, Ill., on November 2, when the new owner, O. L. Jarodski of Danville, Ill., took charge. E. Kerns was the former owner. This house seats 500.

The Wilson Theatre, 1417 Cass avenue, was purchased the past week by W. Goldstein.

Bryant Washburn, popular screen star, made a personal appearance on the stage at the Spreckels Theatre during the week of Oct. 15th. The Spreckels is now using Meiklejohn & Dunn's vaudeville program four nights of the week, offering a motion picture as one item on the bill.

HAL ROACH presents

"Snub" Pollard Comedies

Two reels

FIRST with Harold Lloyd in the famous one-reel comedies that people still talk about, they were so good.

Next in the Harold Lloyd two-reel comedies, that set new marks in comedy success.

Then star in one-reel comedies that have played in more theatres than any one-reel comedies ever made.

Hal Roach made Pollard the star of two-reel comedies on proven merit. "Snub" earned it; he didn't just get it.

New England Flashes

The Imperial Theatre, located in the Old Gray's Hall Building, South Boston, was damaged by fire to the extent of $10,000 last Friday in a two-alarm blaze that gave the department a hard fight and tied up Broadway traffic for more than an hour. No one was in the building at the time, the fire occurring shortly before the afternoon show began and before the house force arrived.

The theatre takes up the second and third floors of the building and the fire is believed to have started in the heating plant under the stairway leading to the theatre. The flames mushroomed up to the gallery as soon as they broke through the floor. The building was erected in 1886.

The Merrimack Theatre, Lowell, will close its doors after the last performance next Sunday for an indefinite period of time, though not a long one. Extensive alterations are planned. A new entrance will be built, together with a new balcony. The entire house will be reseated after the latest methods, and that with a new operator's booth and an extension on the auditorium, will result in a new and spacious picture play house. Work on the extension has been under way for some time.

---

Lowell's "Loop," the center of its picture houses, will soon be a completely lighted white way, present plans of the board of public service calling for an extension of the white way lighting system around the entire section. With new pavement in that section it is expected that constructive improvement in other ways will follow.

---

Sol Bernstein, for many months acting manager of the Broadway Theatre, Chelsea, Mass., has returned to New York, leaving his job in the very capable hands of David F. Perkins, holder of a splendid record in other New England cities, of accomplishments in both theatrical and advertising fields. Last Monday night, his first on the new job, Manager Perkins delivered a knockout blow to any "knocker's camp" that may have existed in the city. He had "Manslaughter" booked for his premiere night, and with it he introduced personally Miss Leatrice Joy, George Fawcett, and Raymond Hatton, all members of the cast of "Manslaughter," who are now working on exteriors for "Java Head" up at Salem. They all spoke to the audience, and were recipients of a royal welcome.

---

Boston has never had a film opening here so widely heralded weeks before its appearance as was "When Knighthood Was In Flower," the new Cosmopolitan production starring Marion Davies. Publicity galore, full page ads in many leading dailies, a huge hand-painted portrait of Marion in the North Station terminal of the Boston & Maine Railroad, the picture flanked by grim knights mounted on red steeds. The Park Theatre, which is housing the film during its stay in Boston, came very close to being made over for the showing, which opened Thursday night, with $1.50 top. Joseph Urban supervised the revamping of the house, and Victor Herbert personally conducted the orchestra for the first few nights. The opening was more or less of an invitation affair, among the guests being Gov. and Mrs. Cox, Lt.-Gov. and Mrs. Fuller. Others characterized by the press as the entire Boston "Who's Who," made up the list.

---

The Women's Club of Dorchester, Mass., is going in for "movies." They presented last Tuesday, Wallace Reid, in "What's Your Hurry," in the Sarah Greenwood School Centre, and have promised many more programs equally good during the rest of the season.

Connecticut Briefs

The Community Playhouse on West Main street, Meriden, Conn., recently built by N. E. Derecktor and P. F. McMahon, has been sold to Corbin Wheeler and Harry L. Hedger of New York City, who announce they will discontinue the presentation of vaudeville for a time and utilize the house for high-grade Motion Picture Programs. The new owners conduct a chain of motion picture houses in the vicinity of New York City. Mr. McMahon, present manager, will continue his present duties for about a week and then return to his home at Glen Cove, L. I.

---

The new Rialto theatre in the Viola-Alfano building at Windsor Locks, Conn., which has been under construction during the summer, has been opened for the season. It occupies the second story of the post office building. Provisions are made for a seating capacity of more than 600.

---

Joseph I. Flint, proprietor and builder of the recently completed theatre at Fairfield, Conn., credited with being one of the model "small town" motion picture houses of the country, died last week of typhoid fever and pneumonia. For several years he had been Fairfield's town clerk, prominent fraternally and a power in the town's political and civic life.

Providence, R. I., Notes

The Providence premiere of "Down to the Sea in Ships" will be given at the Shubert-Majestic Theatre, instead of at the Modern as stated last week, Saturday evening, Nov. 4. This picture was taken in New Bedford, Mass., and is described as an authentic historic-romantic love story of the chivalrous days of whaling. The theatre has been rented for three weeks by the owner of the film, who will charge 25, 50 and 75 cents and $1 admission.

---

The Strand Theatre is making quite a hit over the radio by sending out organ concerts. The theatre has been connected with the Shepard Company radio station and programs are rendered by the Strand's organists every Monday and Thursday night.

---

The part motion pictures may or may not play in politics is being graphically brought out here this fall. Political parties are engaging theatres in the nearby towns for the evening, and to collect a crowd they have the regular show run off free of charge. Some politicians who have been attracting small crowds without the trimmings are meeting with a considerable degree of success by trying out the free motion picture idea.

Eastern New York News

Schenectady's motion picture theatre, to be known as "The State," and forming one of the Strand chain, will open on November 30, according to an announcement made here today in Film Row, following word from Max Spiegel. The house represents an investment of about $400,000, and when opened, will be found to be one of the most beautiful theatres in the state. The feature, "Grandma's Boy," has been chosen for the opening week.

---

John Angelo, owner of the Family theatre in Utica, was in town this week.

---

A pre-release screening of "Oliver Twist" at the Mark Strand, Albany, here, under the direction of the First National Exchange, attracted a large number of out-of-town exhibitors. Among the number were William Benton, of the Congress, in Saratoga Springs; Paul Alberts, of the Albany, in Schenectady; George Davids, of the Stratford, Poughkeepsie; Fred Mansert, of the Rialto, Glens Falls; William Shirley of the Schenectady Strand, and Al Elliott, of the Playhouse, in Hudson.

---

Lew Fisher, of Fort Edward, has just sold the Alpine in Troy, to Professor Judges, of Mechanicville. The house seats 400.

---

William Smalley, who is booking for the new theatre in Oneonta, opened the house Monday.

---

"Buffalo Bill" as a serial is proving one of the biggest bets from the exhibitors' standpoint, according to Manager Halligan of the Universal exchange. Out of nine possible bookings in Schenectady, Mr. Halligan nailed seven, and what is more exhibitors are wiring him for dates, he declares.

---

H. Russel Emde, who has just resigned as manager of Proctor's Fourth Street house, Troy, was presented with a complete set of wearing apparel, including a number of silk shirts, a few nights ago by employees of the house. Mr. Emde goes to Mount Vernon.

---

Split weeks will no longer prevail at the Lincoln, Troy. From now on, week runs will be featured. This week marked the last split.

---

There are three former members of Sousa's band playing in the orchestra at the Lincoln. One of these is Frank Catricola, a cello player, whose name was heavily featured in the Troy newspapers this week, in connection with solos. The house maintains a large and talented orchestra, and is making a bid for patronage because of this feature of its program.

---

Troy motion picture theatre owners say that they will be glad when the political campaign is over. There have been innumerable parades and the houses have suffered a let down in audiences. The week's Industrial Exposition, also played havoc with the business.

There will be a fashion show at the Lincoln during the week of Nov. 5, when "If I were Queen" will be shown. The department stores of the city are cooperating, and will supply the models.

The annual meeting of the Albany Theatrical Managers' Association is scheduled for next week. It will be held at the Majestic. George Roberts, president of the association, announces that he is not a candidate for re-election.

Indianapolis Items

Manager Ralph Lieber of the Circle was married last week to Miss Elizabeth Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Wright of Indianapolis. They are on a honeymoon.

---

Defective wiring caused $50 fire loss at the Gayety theatre last week.

---

The dearth of legitimate road attractions caused English's Opera House to book the picture "After Six Days," last week and hold it over this week. The Murat, the other legit theatre, has had only one attraction, "The Hairy Ape," for three days last week, out of the twelve showing days last and this week.

---

Coincident with the opening of new exchange quarters in a new building at Illinois and Michigan streets, the Goldwyn Motion Picture Distributing Corporation qualified with the secretary of state to do business in Indiana.

Florida Notes

To assist in the celebration of "Navy Day" the Government sent the U. S. S. Coghlan to Tampa, and to do his bit towards the entertaining of the crew, C. D. Cooley, general manager of the Consolidated Amusement Co., issued passes for the entire crew, to the Victory Theatre. The passes were given to the Red Cross canteen committee for distribution.

---

The report comes from Leesburg, Fla., that prospects for a new house looms up good there, as prominent business men are considering the erection of a modern theatre.

---

Jumping from Nova Scotia to Tampa, Florida, is some jump, and some change of climate too, but the long ride is being made by Gavin Young and his company of eighteen players to complete a picture they are working on. The Tampa Board of Trade has secured a schooner for them, and has arranged for hotel accommodation for the company.

---

Frank Rawlins, who with John Pope was convicted of the murder of George H. Hickman, manager of the Arcade Theatre at Jacksonville in September, 1921, has issued a confession, in which he exonerated Pope from all connection with the crime.

---

Manager Hickman and his cashier were checking up the day's receipts, when Rawlins entered the room and demanded the surrender of the cash. Hickman made a jump for him, and Rawlins shot, killing Hickman instantly. He then rapped the cashier over the head, grabbed up the cash and ran. He was caught with the money and confessed, but claimed that Pope planned the robbery. Both men were convicted and sentenced for life.

C. D. Cooley, of the Victory, Tampa, comes to bat with another big tie-up stunt. This time it is on "The Old Homestead." Page spreads in the papers are headed, "Let's Brighten Up the Old Homestead." Under the big heading, in the center of the page, is the house ad of four columns in width and ten inches deep. On each side and below are the ads of the merchants, all of which call upon the people to "Brighten up," or "Paint up," or "Drape up," The Old Homestead.

Seattle Slants

Leo Potter, a film man of wide experience, and formerly a special exploitation manager for the Universal campaign on "Foolish Wives" and "Outside the Law" in the Middle West, has just been engaged as short products manager at the Universal exchange in this city.

Before coming here he was engaged in advertising, exploitation and publicity work for several large film organizations.

James Q. Clemmer, former Seattle veteran theatre manager, is now in New York City, according to reports received here by friends. Mr. Clemmer is said to be interested in a motion picture proposition for the Orient, but at the present time no definite information is available in regard to his plans.

William Cutts, formerly manager of the Columbia Theatre, and at the present time Eastern manager of all Universal theatres, spent last week in this city investigating local conditions, in conjunction with Edward Armstrong, Universal's Western district manager.

Cutts came here after a tour of his territory, including Pittsburgh, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland and other larger cities, and is en route to the East again.

Jack Darrock, a special feature writer for the United Press in New York city, was a recent visitor here, spending two days on film row. Darrock is on a two months' leave of absence, and is visiting all film centers, exchanges and studios, getting items and ideas for stories for the United Press.

He arrived here from California, where he spent several days in and around the studios, and was en route to New York and the East again via Vancouver and the Canadian Rockies. Since his departure from the East he has collected many pages of theatre items, and material on exchanges, studios and theatre work of all kinds.

Wallace Rucker, salesman for the Seattle branch of Educational Film Exchanges, returned to town recently. He arrived from his territory east of Washington, around Montana cities, and reported very good business conditions in the districts that he visited.

Accompanied by Louis Rosenberg, of the De Luxe Film Company of this city, handling Al Lichtman pictures, Rucker left again for the southern part of Washington, and from there will proceed to his territory in and around Portland and other Oregon cities.

Spokane Notes

Louis B. Christ, field publicity man for the Pantages theatres, is temporarily in charge of affairs at the Pantages theatre in Spokane until a local manager is appointed to succeed the late E. Clarke Walker. Mr. Walker's sudden death left the theatre without a manager. A check of the books by E. G. Fisher, of Seattle, who came over in response to a call by Mr. Christ, showed that every cent of the theatre's money carried on the books was in the banks, refuting current rumors that Mr. Walker had committed suicide because he had brooded over discrepancies in his books.

Manager Charles W. York, of the Auditorium, gave a week's showing to "The Ruling Passion," a George Arliss picture. The inauguration of the 10-cent matinee admission for women and children has brought large afternoon patronage to the house, and this price schedule will be offered continuously with the exception of special productions. Manager York has contracted for many of the biggest pictures of the season, including Mary Pickford in "Tess of the Storm Country" and "One Exciting Night," Griffith's latest picture.

Wesley Barry, the freckled-faced youngster of "Dinty" fame and his more recent success, "School Days," is scheduled for Spokane in person, freckles and all. "Rags to Riches," his latest picture, is booked for an Auditorium showing late in November. Wesley comes with the show. He is now playing an engagement over the Orpheum circuit, the lead of a juvenile cast of 10. The entire act will be brought to Spokane and used as a prologue in the Auditorium's presentation of the picture.

Southwestern Chips

Strand Theatre is new name for the Princess Theatre at Grandbury, Texas, with Jack Keith as house manager.

Melba is the new name of the Hope Theatre at Dallas, Texas, which opened last week after having been closed for some time past. Feature pictures and Pantage vaudeville will be the policy.

Henry G. Stein has been appointed manager of A. D. Baker's new theatre, now nearing completion at Luling, Texas.

The Victory Theatre Co. of San Augustine, Texas, has purchased the Timpson Theatre at Timpson, Texas. M. L. Moore will manage the San Augustine house and M. K. Moore, his son, the Timpson house.

The Orpheum Theatre at Waco, Texas, hos opened with pictures and stock.

The Happy Hour Theatre at Lometa, Texas, was destroyed by fire and will not be rebuilt.

The Lyric Theatre at Ennis, Texas, has reopened, following its closing from a recent fire.

The Garden Theatre at Shamrock, Okla., a strictly modern house, will be completed and ready for opening soon. Dimensions, 25 by 100. Seats, 1,000.

The Supreme Court of Oklahoma, in a decision handed down at Oklahoma City, Okla., this week, involving the Lubin, Selig, Essany and Vitagraph companies, held that an exhibitor could not recover damages for the failure of a film to arrive on time, and at the same time collect damages for the amount he expended in advertising. The suit was brought by W. S. Billings, manager of the American Theatre at Enid, Okla., on account of the failure of the film "Over the Top" to arrive for a showing on July 4, 1918, when the scenes it depicted were of great current interest.

Mr. Billings claimed that he lost more than 3,000 admissions on account of failure to receive the picture. The trial court awarded Billings damages for both amounts he spent for advertising and also the money that he lost on admissions. The defendant took the case to the higher court, which gave a verdict for the plaintiff in the sum of $721, but refused to allow any claim for advertising expenses.

The film company's claim as defense was that another exhibitor had retained the picture a day longer than his contract called for, which made it a day late in reaching Enid, Okla.

E. G. Stellings of Wilmington, N. C., was seen around the Eastern part of the state last week, looking up friends and seeing how others conducted their theatres.

The Ideal Theatre, Columbia, S. C., will be closed temporarily, effective October 30.

Alex P. Roberts, who was manager of the Strand Theatre, Salisbury, N. C., until sold to H. B. Varner, has been appointed manager of the Imperial Theatre, Columbia, S. C., temporarily, to relieve C. W. Irwin, who is ill with dengue fever.

San Francisco Briefs

Bringing to a close one of the most unique contests ever staged in San Francisco, the California, Imperial and Granada theatres have awarded approximately $10,000 to the successful entrants in the popular "Bank Account Club" which has been going on since the middle of August. The moneys were given in the form of bank accounts with a local bank.

With the official signatures of Mayor James Rolph, Chief Daniel J. O'Brien and G. C. Warren, local newspaper man, some 200 San Franciscans were declared the successful contestants among about 5,000 entries, approximately an entire third of San Francisco being drawn in the contest through the efforts of the entrants for the financial awards accuring. Miss Irene Holland was credited with the highest award of $1200. Eugene H. Roth and J. A. Partington, associate managing directors and R. D. Brigham of the Anglo-California Bank, were enthusiastic in praise of the interest manifested through the results of the contest. George Shean, who recently staged similar contests in the East was in charge of the Rothchild theatre contest, with his large staff. Approximately 200 awards were given.

The Larkin Street theatre property, has been sold to Henry Reynaud for $40,000.

Film men have taken additional steps to co-operate with the fire department to reduce the fire hazards in local film exchanges. A committee has been named by the San Francisco Film Board of Trade to assist in drawing up a new ordinance. Those on the committee are H. J. Sheehan, M. A. Walsh, M. A. Nathan and W. A. Crank.

With the addition of Loew's Warfield to the list every big downtown motion picture theatre has been converted to the policy of Saturday change of program.

Studio Brevities

Eileen Percy has been engaged to play opposite Herbert Rawlinson in "Prisoners," adapted from "Castle Craneycrow," under the direction of Jack Conway.

George Archainband is beginning "The Power of a Lie."

Hobart Henley has selected Rignald Denny as the lead for "The Abysmal Brute," by Jack London, with Mabel Julienne Scott, opposite.

Nat Ross is directing an all star cast in a Sinclair Lewis story, screen title undecided.

Edward "Hoot" Gibson is playing in "Alias Sebastino" under the direction of Edward Sedgwick. King Baggott is casting a Gladys Walton subject, "The Madonna of Avenue A." Edward Kull is directing "York Norrey," detective series, featuring Roy Stewart, while two serials are still in the making, "The Oregon Trail" and "Around the World in Eighteen Days."

On the Goldwyn Lot

Rupert Hughes has finished his screen version of "Souls for Sale," his novel of motion picture life, which will be his next Goldwyn production. He will direct, edit and title it himself. No members of the cast have been announced.

Hugo Ballin has partially cast "Vanity Fair" in which Mabel Ballin appears as "Becky Sharp," Harrison Ford as "Osborn," Willard Louis as "Sedley," Eleanor Boardman as "Amelia Sedley," Earl Fox as "Captain Dobbin," Robert Mack as "Sir Pitt," Crawley and others. In the cast are William Humphrey and Tempe Piggott.

June Mathis is to come west to complete the 'script for "Ben Hur."

Christie Comedy Bits

Charles Christie is home from a tour of the exchanges.

Scott Sidney has completed "Hazel from Hollywood," featuring Dorothy Devore.

Al Christie began "The Shirtwaist Factory Strike" story, featuring Neal Burns.

Harold Beaudine has been assigned to direct Bobby Vernon in "In Dutch," at Federal studios.

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

"Sun Maid" Girl Is Now "Mermaid Girl"

IOLET OLIVER, known as the "Sun Maid" girl of California, is changing her title to that of "Mermaid girl," since she is making her screen debut in the Mermaid Comedy "High Power," which Jack White has just completed for Educational for December release.

Miss Oliver was selected by twelve thousand raisin growers of California as the prettiest and most typical girl of the San Joaquin valley and traveled sixty thousand miles in eighteen months, visiting every state in the Union with one exception, and visiting every important city and town in each of these states, as the subject of photographic contests held under the auspices of newspapers for the best photographs taken of her during her visit.

A likeness of Miss Oliver is on every package of 'Sun Maid" raisins. She was born nineteen years ago at San Jose, Cal., educated in a convent at Stockton after having appeared as a child singer and dancer in vaudeville.

Educational Offers New "Holmes" Subject

"The Priory School" and "The Solitary Cyclist" are current releases in Educational's series on The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. The next picture in this series of two-reel subjects from the stories of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle will be "The Resident Patient." Eille Norwood continues his portrayal of the detective.

Pathe's Nov. 12 Releases Ready

Pollard Comedy and Leo Maloney in "The Drifter," Head the List

TWO two-reel productions of widely differing appeal head the list of ten subjects which Pathe announces for release on Nov. 12. These are the comedy, "Hook, Line and Sinker," starring Snub Pollard; another of the Range Rider Series presenting Leo Maloney in "The Drifter." Pathe News Nos. 92 and 93, and Topics of the Day No. 46.

In "Hook, Line and Sinker," the comedy carries out with the acme of absurdity the idea of a free-for-all fishing contest. While the solemn judges sit around the scales with foot-rules handy, all sorts and conditions of contestants rush forth to the dock and the angling adventures that ensue, with anglers and fish wildly invading each other's natural element. Every angler's hand is against the hero; even the fish are equally cruel.

"The Drifter" presents Leo Maloney as the down-and-out champion of a mother and daughter who are being victimized by a crooked real estate dealer who is also an assayer of precious metals. When the hero, without the price of a meal for himself or his horse, presents some ore specimens to be assayed for gold he learns enough about the land shark's plot against the mother and daughter to plunge him at once into the thick of hand-to-hand encounters. The shark has found gold on the women's land, and their champion has to fight every inch of his way to a final scene in which he is able to turn the tables on the conspirators. Incidentally, he comes out of the affair no longer a "drifter."

The Patheserial "Speed," with Charles Hutchison, reaches its fourth episode, called "The Quagmire," in this release program. "Speed," himself lost in the storm, hears Lucy's cries, but in riding to her aid he is prisoned under his horse when a bolt of lightning crashes a tree down upon them.

In the Hal Roach Comedy, "Washed Ashore," Paul Parrott has adventures among the "South Sea Whooplesnips."

The Harold Lloyd re-issue of this program is "Bees in His Bonnet."

Pathe Review No. 181 includes a pictorial interpretation of William Cullen Bryant's famous poem, "The Crowded Street."

Latest Hallroom is "Dumb Waiters"

"The Dumb Waiters" is the title of the sixth of the new Hallroom Boys Comedies, which has been received at the New York offices of C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation for distribution to the State Right market.

In this new comedy, which was directed by Noel Mason Smith, and features Sid Smith and George Williams, "Percy" and "Ferdie" answer to the description given them, for they are just about the dumbest waiters anybody ever saw. The boys are broke as usual, and they find themselves ultimately engaged as waiters in a restaurant.

Being ambitious, they aren't content to remain waiters and decide to stage a roller-skating act in the restaurant. They skate on about everything except their feet.

According to producer Harry Cohn, this comedy proved one of the most successful of the Hallrooms ever pre-viewed on the Coast.

Showmen and Clergy Endorse Sacred Films

At the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, held at Portland, Oregon, in September, 1922, Ernest Van Pelt, Manager of Sacred Films, Inc., accompanied by Rev. Dr. Harwood Huntington, President and Sponsor of said organization, took to Portland the Abraham Series of the Bible Pictures as produced by that Company, and gave a showing before the House of Deputies, with the result that a resolution was adopted commending and recommending these pictures for the teaching of the Bible and their use in the public picture house.

This means that 4,000 Episcopal Ministers will boost Sacred Films throughout the country, thus accomplishing what heretofore, according to the general showman's idea, was impossible, i. e., that of bringing the church and theatre together.

Century Comedy Titled "American Plan"

The comedy and tragedy of life in a boarding house are travested in Lee Moran's latest Century Comedy release "American Plan." As the landlady's pet Moran leads a hectic life, because he does not like her cooking and will persist in making culinary messes in his room, which is against the rules. When the landlady accuses him of this, even the friendly offices of "Rosie," the monkey will not save him, and when you add to the list of his misdeeds that he is in love with the prettiest boarder, the plot unrolls itself.

Sunshine Comedies for Fall Distribution

As an indication of what is being done in providing exhibitors with a line of comedy subjects Fox Film Corporation calls attention to Sunshine Comedies which will be released in the next three months. According to a statement from the Fox office, the company has in hand six two reel Sunshine Comedies which include "The Haunted House," "The Ranch Romeo," "Cupid's Elephant," "The Fresh Hair," "A Poor Fish," and an unnamed comedy scheduled for release Jan. 7.

Fox Completes Comedy Releases

New Series Starring Al St. John Are Scheduled Up to First of Year

Al St. John, has completed the first four of his comedy specials for release during the current season, according to announcement by Fox Film Corporation.

"All Wet," was the first of the new series, with a story that is said to hold the interest and abound in thrills. The theme of the farce is based on a young couple who purchase a "home by the sea," and who awaken the first morning in their new home to find themselves drifting rapidly out to sea.

"The City Chap" is the second comedy of the new series in which Al St. John discards his usual portrayal of the bucolic youth and "steps out in the big town."

"Out of Place," the third of this season's Al St. John productions, leaps from the fowls of the farm to the chickens of the cabaret.

No definite release date has been set for the first of the new series, the title of which is "False Alarm," but it probably will be published about the first of the year.

Detective Series Under Way at Universal

One of the most popular series of modern detective stories is "The Further Exploits of Yorke Norroy," by George Bronson Howard, noted novelist and playwright.

These stories now are being filmed at Universal City as two reelers with Roy Stewart as the star. Duke Worne is directing the series and is now well started on the first story in which Stewart has a supporting cast of well-known players consisting of Lucille Ricksen, Fontaine La Rue, Jack Perrin and Hayden Stevenson.

Bray Magazine for Independent Market

A careful canvass of the exchanges in each territory is being made by Mr. A. Canter (in charge of sales of the new Bray Magazine on the screen), who will shortly leave on a coast to coast trip to arrange for the distribution with the exchanges selected.

"State Right Exchanges all over the country are displaying great interest in the new Bray Magazine just announced for release on the independent market," so reads an announcement from the Bray Studios.

J. R. Bray, President, is a pioneer in the production of high class short reel entertainment.

"Just Dogs" Features All Animal Cast

Since the success of "Mutts," a dog comedy made by Century, according to Universal, exhibitors have been asking for another. The answer is "Just Dogs," directed by Al Herman, with an exclusively canine cast except for "Little Joe," the monkey.

The story opens with a hobo, played by "Pal," asleep under his blanket which "Joe," his monkey comrade, drags from over him. In order to awake "Pal," "Joe" performs a number of tricks. Finally, both friends cook breakfast. "Joe" milks a goat, in spite of many buttings, and "Pal" catches a fish. Than they start off on their adventures, Joe riding on Pal's back. A beautiful white dog flapper gets mixed up in their lives, her father owns the biggest grocery store in "Barktown." The happy ending wedding ceremony is conducted by a black dog minister, while the bride and her bridesmaid wear white satin and tulle to match their fluffy white coats.

Live Frogs as Models for Wax Replicas

In the issue of Pathe Review No. 181 announced for release on November 12, there is a section picturing live frogs serving without injury as plaster-mold for life-like reproductions in wax, in studies of animal life pursued at the American Museum of Natural History. This process is used at the Museum as a means of securing absolutely exact replicas in the study of small living creatures.

Arrow Will Distribute "High-Speed Lee"

From the home office of Arrow Film Corporation comes an announcement to the effect that they are to distribute "High-Speed Lee," a society drama made by Atlantic Productions and featuring Reed Howes.

One of the unusual features of "High-Speed Lee" is the fact that from start to finish there is not a studio scene in the production. The entire action has been photographed either in the open or in the various homes of the Roslyn, Southampton and Newport smart set.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

"A Game of Graft"

(Garsson—State Rights—Two Reels)

FIRST of a new "Nick Carter" series, detective stories with a live American in the role of the great sleuth. In these "Carter" is characterized by Edmund Loew, who gives a splendid performance, as appealing from a standpoint of good looks to the feminine patrons and to the men from the standpoint of being "all wool and a yard wide." One is immediately impressed with the cast assembled for a two-reel subject. In this we find Diana Allen as "Patsey," the detective's able assistant; Henry Sedly, Vincent Coleman and others. Camera work by Al Lagouri speaks for itself. The direction is assured, the actual work being that of Alexander Hall, under the supervision of John J. Glavey. The latter has seen to it that the right kind of material has been used, with noticeable results. For instance, this story is one regarding the questionable associates of a young man of good family, engaged to the daughter of a careful father of obvious means. A few scenes take place in the drawing room of the girl's home, requiring a pretentious set; another is the interior of a smart dancing club, as well as the luxurious apartment of a professional dancer who has designs upon the bank roll of the engaged man. All of these show marks of care and expenditure. "Carter" is engaged by the father to verify his suspicions that the young man is deceiving his daughter. It is discovered the boy is being lured into blackmail. Before the detective unearths sufficient evidence against the society crooks to prove the boy their victim there are exciting moments, including a realistic fire and a corking good fight.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Chop Suey"

(Educational—Two Reels)

A BURLESQUE upon "East is West," "The Sun Daughter" and other Chinese-American plays. Mary Brown, an authoress endeavors to interest the playright, David Tobasco, in producing her play, one that requires a woman who can characterize a Chinese ingenue. He refuses to go any further without such an actress and the authoress conceives the idea of sending an S.O.S. to her friend, an actress who is due to return from the Orient. The message advises her to dress and impersonate a Chinese actress and await explanation. A brother of the playwright is in love with the actress. He objects to the ruse, but when complications start in, lends his help in righting the wrongs and culminating a romance of long standing, in a marriage. There are some good fights; splendid sets and rapid action.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Hodge Podge" No. 2600

(Lyman H. Howe-Educational—One Reel)

THIS starts with inverted and side-shown views of Niagara Falls and then goes into scenes showing the Falls as they appear in the heart of winter. There are some wonderful scenic views in this part of the reel. Follows a cartoon, burlesquing the making of inexpensive automobiles, ending with a stab at the careful driver of a new machine and the gradual development of carelessness.—LILLIAN GALE.

A scene from "Hook, Line and Sinker," Snub Pollard comedy for Pathe

"Unseen Foes"

(Garsson—State Rights—Two Reels)

"NICK CARTER" would hardly be called to the room of a wealthy mine owner stopping in a prominent New York hotel, find the man dead upon arriving there, then let a mysterious death, indicating possible murder, solve itself. Instead, characteristic of the American detective, he enters upon an investigation which involves a number of supposed reputable business men, solves the mystery and brings all to justice. In this subject only one woman appears, "Patsey," the detective's assistant, played by Diana Allen. The balance of the cast, however, includes some well known screen actors, Anders Randolph, J. Thornton Baston, Charles Eldgedge, Bernard Siegel, and others. It depicts one of those baffling situations detectives are often up against, and while the suspense holds out through the two reels, in the end "Carter" does the trick, the real murderer is found and the motive proved. This one also offers a good fight when the guilty men endeavor to escape from a rendezvous in a lonely suburb, leaving "Patsey" to die. "Nick" gets there just in time, however, to save his able assistant for another case. This subject is well directed, ably photographed and altogether satisfactory, telling its story with direct continuity, making it thoroughly entertaining.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Choose Your Weapons"

(Christie—Educational—Two Reels)

BOBBY VERNON is particularly well fitted to his comedy role in this travesty. It burlesques two popular feature costume dramas in each of which occurs a duel and wherein knights are privileged to "choose their weapons."

"Jimmie," portrayed by Vernon, was a soldier. We find him, first, as he came home from France and then as he went back in "civies" to enjoy a pleasure trip over the territory where he saw "service." A great deal of the comedy takes place aboard ship, when, sitting in his deck chair, "Jimmie" is disturbed by a German delicatessen owner who is bound for his native land. Following which "Jimmie" dreams that the German is about to marry a beautiful princess, who does not know about the wife and three children belonging to the prospective groom. In the dream "Jimmie" endures all the heart "trouble" depicted in a more serious form in the feature dramas, waking up in time to find the "princess" on board and waiting to be asked in to dinner. Considerable slap-stick; a number of good laughs; clean and inoffensive, which should appeal to low-comedy enthusiasts and amuse the younger set.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Fire Fighters"

(Plum Center Comedies-F. B. O.—Two Reels)

HERE we have old-fashioned rural hokum, showing Dan Mason as Pop Tuttle acting up as the village fire chief. It is broad burlesque and releases some laugh-provoking moments, particularly when the old fellow answers the fire bell. The idea here is similar to what is often shown in the "Toonerville Trolley" sketches. Even the powerful Katrinka is present to lift the hose-cart and carry the hose. Pop has a troublesome time getting the cart out of the fire house. The fire has to wait until he finds his helmet and puts on his shirt. Then having no nose for smoke the "boys" and girls (Katrinka again) lose their way, until Pop scales the ladder and looks over the landscape. "Yep, there it is, down back of Lem's house."

When the fire fighters attempt to put out the flames the spectator is in for some snappy burlesque. The stream is about the size of that which spouts from a soda fountain. The bucket brigade is formed and the line starts at the old well. But it isn't water that has been pumped on the fire—it is real hootch—real fire-water. The owner of the house knowing his kitchen is on fire, carries his liquor and the still to the well. And he falls in after them. It's a good little filler, even though it is exaggerated and packed with "by heck" hokum.—LAURENCE REID.

"The Spirit of Evil"

(Garsson—State Rights—Two Reels)

HERE we have the American detective "Nick Carter" intent upon investigating the mysterious death of a man attending a Spiritualistic seance held in the home of a psychic scientist, friend of the man who suddenly died. While Nick is questioning the men assembled for the "sitting" his assistant, "Patsey," sees a strange Hindoo leaving the house. She pursues, leaving marks which only the detective can read in following her. The discovery of "Patsey" in the Hindoo resort leads to her torture. The Rajah is interested in knowing why she has intruded into the sacred domain. Finally, when almost too late, "Nick" arrives upon the scene, fights his way through the treacherous brown-skins, rescues his aide and solves the mystery.

The sets showing the interior of the Rajah's abode are lavish; the cast splendid and the direction very good, resulting in two reels of entertainment of value, being assembled in such a way as to hold the interest. An addition to any program.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Drifter"

(Maloney-Pathe—Two Reels)

A VERY good western melodrama without a great deal of horseback riding, but with sufficient action so that the usual horsemanship is not missed. Leo Maloney gives a splendid performance as the "drifter," who hits upon ore containing gold and in the nick of time saves the "mother" of the western town from losing her life's savings which she has invested in a worthless piece of land, through fraud. There are plenty of hand to hand encounters to supply the needed "thrills," a quaint love interest; an altogether satisfactory short subject of its kind.—LILLIAN GALE.

BOOKINGS CASTS RELEASE

Live News From Producers

Conducted by EDMOND F. SUPPLE

Philadelphia Reviewers Praise Arliss

BOTH public and critics were highly enthusiastic as to the George Arliss photoplay, "The Man Who Played God" when this United Artists release was played recently at the Stanley theatre, Philadelphia.

"The picture is sure to arouse sympathetic understanding among spectators, no matter what their interests in life may be," said the critic for the Public Ledger. "George Arliss plays a role very different from those in which he is ususally seen, but he does this role full justice. 'The Man Who Played God' is excellent, intelligent diversion."

"The artistry of George Arliss combines with a theme in which he is at his best to make a picture that will be long remembered," said the reviewer for the Inquirer. Mr. Arliss portrays his difficult role with inimitable sincerity and realism."

Real Indians Figure in "The Covered Wagon"

Under the guidance of Mayor T. J. McCoy, of Wyoming, now associated with Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in making "The Covered Wagon," James Cruze's Paramount production, a half dozen train loads of Bannock, Crow, Shoshone and Arapahoe Indians have passed through Salt Lake City during the past few days en route for Milford and Meek Ranch.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" Cast Exploited

IN order that exhibitors throughout the country may acquaint their patrons with the importance of the cast which will interpret the leading roles in "Quincy Adams Sawyer," a special booklet will be issued in conjunction with the release of the picture. This is the latest S-L Special to be released by Metro Pictures Corporation and presents a wonderful array of stellar players. Among the stars who will be seen in the picture may be mentioned Barbara La Marr, Lon Chaney, John Bowers, Blanche Sweet, Elmo Lincoln, Louise Fazenda, Joseph Dowling, Hank Mann and many others.

The booklet in question will give a brief biographical sketch of each star, setting forth the biggest pictures of recent years in which each player has been seen.

F. B. O. Current Release Timely

"Good Men and True," with Harry Carey as Candidate, Is Election Story

AN election day story is the timely current release of the Film Booking Offices of America, which announces its second Harry Carey production, "Good Men and True," presented by P. A. Powers, for the second week in November. "Good Men and True" is adapted from a published story by Eugene Manlove Rhodes and gives Carey the role of a nominee for Sheriff in a Western town.

F. B. O. states that this production will be distinctly different from any other Carey picture, inasmuch as the star has incorporated an equal number of thrills and laughs. The comedy relief is supplied largely by Tully Marshall, who plays the role of a henpecked husband sent into the West by his spouse to establish a homestead. The leading feminine role is played by Vola Vale and Noah Beery is cast as the "heavy," the opposition candidate for office. Others in the cast are Thomas Jefferson, Charles J. Le Moyne and Helen Gilmore. Val Paul, who is responsible for previous Carey successes, directed the picture.

Another feature of "Good Men and True" in addition to the cast is the presentation of the West in a thoroughly modern setting. The story, states F. B. O., will be far more appealing since it will not only have all the picturesque ruggedness of a Western story, but will in addition ring true to those who wish to see the West pictured with some degree of realism.

Jackie Praised In "Oliver Twist"

N. Y. Critics Marvel at Intelligence of Youngster in Difficult Role

JACKIE COOGAN in "Oliver Twist," a First National Attraction presented by Sol. Lesser, received praise of the highest character from motion picture critics of the New York newspapers after its opening at the Strand Theatre on Sunday, Oct. 29.

Following is a synopsis of what the critics had to say:

Allan Dale in the American: "This time we have little Jackie Coogan as Fagin's pupil, with his queer little astonished face, his wonderfully trained gestures, his almost uncanny intelligence and his moderate sense of humor. I think I know my Dickens backward. Therefore I may asert that the picture at The Strand is perfectly legitimate, that it does not swerve from Dickens to filmland, and that the Dickensenian element may see it without any fracture of the visualizing apparatus."

P. W. Gallico in The Daily News: "'Oliver Twist' is a good picture, first because of Jackie Coogan as Oliver, and second because of the fine production."

Robert E. Sherwood in the Herald: "'Oliver Twist' as a movie is everything that an intelligent adaptation should be."

J. O. Spearing in The Times: "All things considered they've done a good job, an excellent job, with Dickens in the picturized 'Oliver Twist.'"

Quinn Martin in The World: "We have never seen so lovable a figure in motion pictures as the Oliver Twist of Jackie Coogan at the Strand."

Helen Pollock in the Morning Telegraph: "Chief honors in 'Oliver Twist' go where they naturally belong, to Jackie Coogan for his incredibly comprehensive portrayal of one of the most pathetic characters in literature."

Don Allen in the Evening World: "At the Strand theatre this week they have in 'Oliver Twist,' with Jackie Coogan as Oliver, a screen masterpiece of human interest."

"Pawned" Accessories Go to Exchanges

Select exchanges throughout the country are receiving daily shipments of advertising accessories on the J. Parker Read, Jr., picture "Pawned" which the Select company is about to release. Prints will be in the branches within the next few days and soon after will begin the business of passing the photoplay along to the general public.

Posters, heralds, slides, etc., which have been prepared all give abundant indication that "Pawned" is being offered for just what it is, a high class photodramatic thrill feature. The vivid action in the picture is being stressed at every turn.

"Pawned" is from a story by Frank L. Packard, author of "The Miracle Man." Irvin V. Willatt directed the filming of the production in which Tom Moore and Edith Roberts are the feature players.

Pathe Sales Conference Shows Optimism

A PATHE Home Office sales conference called by General Manager Elmer Pearson brought four district managers together and held them in New York nearly all of last week.

"We found ourselves to be of one mind on main essentials," said Mr. Pearson. "In practically every section of the United States evidences are plentiful justifying our consistent optimism and preparation for the full resumption of exhibitor business this fall. The few exceptions are due solely to local disturbances, which are rapidly disappearing."

In a series of consultations between General Sales Manager E. A. Eshmann and the District Managers, sales plans were completed in detail and quotas definitely fixed.

The Pathe district managers attending the Home Office conference are: W. S. Wessling, Western; W. T. ("Bill") Yoder, Southern; Robert S. Shrader, Central Western; and Robert Smeltzer, Eastern District.

Larry Semon as Country Counter Jumper

Larry Semon's latest comedy, "The Counter Jumper," as the title suggests, deals with a country general store. Larry has for a long time been "rarin" to make a comedy along these lines.

A. B. Frost, the portrayer of "Country folks" had a keen appetite for the fun that is to be had in a country store, and some of his best work was done with that subject. It was patterned after a store Semon once saw in the northern section of Oregon.

Lucille Carlisle is the boarding school-polished daughter of the proprietor, and of course everybody in the surrounding territory is in love with her.

"The Counter Jumper" is said to be of the high standard established by this populard comedian.

Final Scenes Are Shot for "Outcast"

Final scenes for Elsie Ferguson's latest Paramount picture, "Outcast," which will be released soon, were filmed at the Delaware Water Gap last week and the picture is now ready for cutting and titling.

Appearing with Miss Ferguson are Daid Powell, in the leading male role; Mary MacLaren, Teddy Sampson, William Powell, William David, Charles Wellesly, George Stevens and Frank Dekum.

Owen Moore Special Is Making Progress

WORD from the Coast reports splendid progress being made in the filming of the special, starring Owen Moore, which was started while he was away from the Pacific Coast "lot."

The special is being made under the title of "A Dollar Down" with story and direction by Victor Heerman. The principal feminine role is in the hands of Alice Lake.

"A Dollar Down" is a motion picture farce comedy. The working title suggests the nature of the story which will get pretty close home in every family where many a purchase is made these hectic days on the basis of "'A Dollar Down'—and a dollar when you catch me."

"If I Were Queen" Gets First Run Bookings

First run bookings in all parts of the country are the proof offered by the Film Booking Offices of America that "If I Were Queen," their first Ethel Clayton picture, is the type of picture which is now in demand by the public. It was directed by Wesley Ruggles.

"If I Were Queen" has already been given first runs in seven key cities and others are scheduled for the near future. In New York, Charles Rosensweig, manager of the New York F. B. O. branch, reports that the picture will play 100 days on the Loew circuit in the Metropolitan district.

"The Curse of Drink" Timely Picture

The approaching elections for City, State and National Candidates throughout the country have brought into more prominence "The Curse of Drink," the five-star melodrama state-righted by L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North. This is due to the fact that the title of the picture represents the most heated question of the day—Prohibition.

The sentiment of the two political parties in every state in the Union is concentrated on the Prohibition question more than on any other topic of the times.

Universal Has Strong Releases

Features Starring Gladys Walton, Rawlinson and Gibson on November Schedule

UNIVERSAL'S Five Reel Attraction release schedule for November calls for four of that company's best feature productions, including outstanding pictures by Herbert Rawlinson, Gladys Walton, and Edward (Hoot) Gibson, and an all-star picture of unusual strength featuring Marguerite de La Motte, Matt Moore and Ralph Graves.

The list is as follows; in the order of release: "Another Man's Shoes," starring Herbert Rawlinson; "The Lavender Bath Lady," starring Gladys Walton; "Ridin' Wild," starring Ed (Hoot) Gibson, and "The Jilt." They are scheduled for release November 6th, 13th, 20th and 27th respectively.

"Another Man's Shoes," is said to be one of the most unusual Rawlinson pictures ever made. It created a sensation among Universal executives when first shown in the East.

This picture was adapted from a novel by Victor Bridges. It was directed by Jack Conway. Rawlinson was surrounded by a cast including Barbara Bedford, Una Trevelyn, Joseph Swickard, Harry Carter, Nick de Ruiz, Jean de Briac, Nelson McDowell and others.

"The Lavender Bath Lady," is said to be an able successor of "Playing With Fire," "Second Hand Rose," "Top O' The Morning," and other Gladys Walton successes. It was adapted from a story by Shannon Fife, and was put into screen form by George Randolph Chester.

King Baggot, made "The Lavender Bath Lady."

Among the members of the cast are Edward Burns, Charlotte Pierce, Tom Ricketts, Albert McQuarrie, Earl Crain, Harry Lorraine and Mary Winston.

The third Universal release for November is another of Gibson's rollicking comedy features. "Ridin' Wild" was directed by Nat Ross. The cast includes Edna Murphy, William Welsh, Gertrude Claire, Wilton Taylor, Wade Boteler, Otto Hoffman, Burton Wilson and Jack Walters.

"The Jilt," was directed by Irving Cummings from a story by R. Ramsey. The cast includes Marguerite de La Motte, Matt Moore, Ralph Graves, Eleanor Hancock, Ben Hewlett and Harry De-Vere.

Novelties Offered for "Dr. Jack"

Pathe Offers Wealth of Exploitation Accessories for Harold Lloyd Picture

PATHE announces that every exhibitor playing the Harold Lloyd feature comedy, "Dr. Jack," will be supplied with a wealth of exploitation accessories that will enable him to live up to his best showmanship ideals. These include standard aids and novelties as follows:

Beginning with posters, there will be an augmented supply in two 1-sheets, two 3-sheets, two 6-sheets, and a distinctive 24-sheet. These are in addition to the stock 1-sheet and 3-sheet, which are especially well adapted for cut-out purposes.

Coming to the "Dr. Jack" campaign book—its front cover and inside of cover will be available in either cut or mat form. It will contain many exploitation suggestions in picturized form. There is a colored lobby display and 22 by 28 that will be found most attractive and stimulating to the imagination.

Sixteen black and whites are furnished for newspaper layouts, as well as an augmented array of newspaper advertising cuts and mats, size 1, 2 and 3 columns, plus two quarter-page and one half-page ads; also an extra press sheet besides the regular stories, on which will appear two half-tone illustrations, available in mat form, and a large pen and ink combination available in the same way.

A genuine novelty in the form of cabinet size photographs of Lloyd, autographed by him and is to be made available.

Police Picture Breaks Ohio Town Record

"In the Name of the Law," the Emory Johnson special on the F. B. O. program has the honor of breaking a record in the city of Fremont, Ohio. Fremont is a three-day run town and "In the Name of the Law," in completing a solid week at the Jewel Theatre, of which George Geyer is manager, accomplished a feat which has never been equalled by any picture heretofore.

A tie-up with the police and carte blanche permission to exploit the picture was partly responsible for the new record.

Xmas Shopping Tieup for C. B. C. Picture

Following the announcement a week or two ago of a tremendous campaign tying up local merchants on the exploitation of "Only a Shopgirl," the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation received many inquiries as to just what lines could be followed in such a campaign.

That these are many and varied is proved this week by the announcement of only one way in which the promised cooperation of big stores in many of the cities is to be utilized for the good not only of the C. B. C. and the feature but for the community as well.

This is to take the lines of a "Do Your Christmas Shopping Early" campaign and the wheels have already been set in motion and definite practicable tie-ups being made.

Production on this feature has been completed, and its scheduled release within a very few weeks, offers unlimited opportunity for such a tie-up with possibilities that are tremendous in scope.

Wide Exploitation for Metro Picture

TWENTY-FIVE thousand dollars will be expended by Sawyer and Lubin in an exploitation campaign for "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the forthcoming Metro-SL special production translating to the screen this famous novel by Charles Felton Pidgin, according to their announcement.

Their programme for the campaign includes: National advertising; a special photoplay edition of the novel; publication of a condensed version in over 500 newspapers; distribution of effective advertising novelties, and of autographed photographs of the cast, oil paintings for lobby display, and huge banners, large enough to carry names and photographs of all the players.

Many novelties have been devised, among them a movie booklet showing one of the biggest scenes from the picture in remarkable animation.

Huge banners, too, will be distributed. Their size will be sufficient to permit of space for the names and photos of the entire cast.

Extended Bookings for "Tailor Made Man"

Charles Ray's initial production for United Artists Corporation, "A Tailor Made Man" is having a triumphant march up and down the motion picture world, with many extended engagements and repeats, according to United Artists.

"This picture," said the reviewer for the Detroit Times, "has again placed Charles Ray as one of the most popular players of the screen."

In Portland, Oregon, "A Tailor Made Man" met with such unqualified success at the Blue Mouse Theatre that the management held it over for two weeks.

In Sacramento, where the picture played a week during the hot weather, so many requests were made by persons who did not see it, that "A Tailor Made Man" was rebooked for another seven days.

Doug's Pictures Triumph in Switzerland

That Douglas Fairbanks' photoplay version of the famous Dumas story, "The Three Musketeers" and his characterization of the equally famous D'Artagnan is sweeping Switzerland in an almost unbelievably big triumph is the word that comes to Douglas Fairbanks from Mr. A. Ador, manager of the Switzerland Moving Picture Show, which organization controls a chain of theatres there.

Mr. Ador cabled that not in the last five years has he seen any motion picture that has played to the box-office figures that "The Three Musketeers" draws, declaring that people come long distances from all sections whenever and wherever the picture is announced.

"Sin Flood" Wins Approval

Goldwyn Picture Favorably Criticised by Reviewers at Capitol Opening

GOLDWYN'S film version of Henning Berger's drama, "The Sin Flood," is the week's attraction at the Capitol theatre, New York.

The New York Herald critic wrote: "A fine picture and a distinct credit to the Goldwyn corporation, which sponsored it. There is some splendid acting in the picture. Richard Dix, Helene Chadwick and James Kirkwood are all thoroughly sincere in their attempts to interpret the characters that Henning Berger has created, and they do their work well."

The reviewer on the Tribune said: "Done in a way that we consider extremely satisfactory. Frank Lloyd has directed it with marvelous understanding and humor and the cast is fine."

The motion picture critic of the New York Times said in his review of "The Sin Flood" that it "stands up well and as motion pictures go is far superior to the general run of stuff. Sharply realistic. All of the parts are well played. Frank Lloyd has done remarkably well as the director."

The critic on the World wrote: "Here is a corking good idea for the screen. Gripping film melodrama."

Eve. Telegram: "One of the most absorbing and gripping photoplays of the year."

Eve. World: "Even more gripping on the screen than it was on the speaking stage."

Sun: "Likely to draw floods of patronage. Was keenly appreciated by audiences."

Mail: "From the play a surprisingly strong picture has been evolved. An interesting story, a good motion picture."

Philly Sees "Prisoner of Zenda"

Marcus Loew, Accompanied by Stars Sees Premieres; Picture is Well Received

THE Rex Ingram Production, "The Prisoner of Zenda" was given its Philadelphia premiere at the Aldine Theatre, on the evening of October 23d, at which time was celebrated the taking over of the theatre by Marcus Loew, president of Metro Pictures Corporation. Twenty-five motion picture stars accompanied Mr. Loew in a private car from New York, and they made the evening a notable one for the throngs which attempted to gain admittance into the theatre.

Mr. Loew and his party left on Monday morning, arriving in Philadelphia at noon. There they were met by a band, which took its place at the head of an automobile parade to the City Hall. The company was next received by Mayor Moore, and Mr. Loew was given the key to the city at the reception which took place. Rex Ingram, maker of "The Prisoner of Zenda," and Alice Terry, Princess Flavia in the film and Mrs. Ingram in real life, were also presented to the Mayor. Luncheon followed the official reception.

The photoplay duplicated the tremendous impression it has registered everywhere. Philadelphia critics bestowed upon it the lavish praise that it received when it was first seen at the Astor Theatre in New York, where it enjoyed a lengthy run. A few of the newspaper excerpts are appended:

"This is an unusually fine picture deserving of great praise. It approaches perfection and creates a new standard for motion pictures which it will be difficult to maintain throughout the picture."—The Inquirer.

Barthelmess Wins Critics' Praise

Work of Young Star in "The Bondboy" Commended After Los Angeles Showing

LOS ANGELES, the home of motion pictures, hailed Richard Barthelmess in "The Bond Boy," a First National attraction, when it was shown at the Kinema Theatre. Here is what the Los Angeles newspaper critics had to say of "The Bondboy."

Record: Outside of the incidental fact that Barthelmess epitomizes wholesome boyhood as no other actor can do, he is also an actor. For a good picture, taken all in all, we thank Henry King, the director; we thank Barthelmess, worthy of premier position among the youths of motion pictures, and we thank Mary Alden.

Gug Price in the Herald: Teeming with human interest and scintilating with dramatic qualities, "The Bond Boy" will win untold popularity for Richard Barthelmess.

Charles Goss in the Express: "The Bond Boy" brings Richard Barthelmess, one of the best of our youthful screen actors, and deservedly one of the most popular to the Kinema screen.

Examiner: Richard Barthelmess makes no concessions to traditional motion picture "hokum" in his latest First National attraction. The intense, tragic note of "The BBond Boy" at the Kinema, is scarcely for a moment relieved until the end. Nevertheless it will be a very popular picture. It is human as life.

"Third Alarm" Release Date Put Forward

"THE THIRD ALARM," the second Emory Johnson production for release through the Film Booking Offices of America, and a companion picture of "In the Name of the Law," has been put forward on the F. B. O. schedule and tentative plans call for a release of this production early in 1923. "The Third Alarm" is a story built around the life of a fireman in a large American city, with the leading roles played by Ralph Lewis, Johnnie Walker, Ella Hall and Virginia True Boardman.

It is the intention of F. B. O. to release this production only after complete exploitation tie-ups have been prepared. It was first estimated that arrangement for dedicating the picture to fire chiefs and mapping out the campaign which will be carried on in every city with the aid of the local fire departments, would not be complete, until late winter, but by high pressure work and with an enlarged force, F. B. O. will now have its campaign ready early in January, and the picture will be issued at that time.

Ontario Crowds Flock to "The Rapids"

Ten thousand people trying to crowd into a one thousand seated theatre demonstrated the successful opening of "The Rapids" at Saultest Emarie, Ontario, Monday, according to word from there.

The drama in six reels is described as a dignified, highly entertaining and impressive reproduction of The Romance of the Sea. The directors of Saultest Emarie Films, Ltd., moved a vote of thanks to David Hartford, claiming this picture surpasses his "Nomads of the North" and "Back to God's Country." He was tendered an invitation to make other pictures in the Algoma districts during the coming Summer.

"The Power of a Lie" Now Fully Cast

"The Power of a Lie," Johann Bojer's story which Universal is filming under the direction of George Archainbaud, has been fully cast and presents an impressive array of well known film artists.

Mabel Julienne Scott is portraying the chief feminine role in the story of New York social intrigue. Opposite her is Earl Metcalf. In principal roles are June Elvidge, formerly a star in her own right, Maude George of "Foolish Wives," Phillips Smalley, once a featured Universal director, Stanton Heck, David Torrence, Winston Miller and Ruby LaFayette.

Charles Kenyon, author of "Kindling" and many stage and screen successes, prepared the scenario and is supervising the production.

Associated Release Due Oct. 9

May Allison and Robert Ellis Featured in "The Woman Who Fooled Herself"

OCTOBER 9TH will witness the official release by Associated Exhibitors of "The Woman Who Fooled Herself," the six-part feature in which May Allison and her husband, Robert Ellis, are featured. It is the first production made by Edward A. MacManus at his studios in Porto Rico, and his first for Associated Exhibitors.

Cast in a part said to be particularly suited to her charms, that of a New York "Follies" girl, who is engaged to dance in a cafe in the tropics in order to win the sympathy of a Spanish landowner whom Yankee capitalists are trying to interest in a property deal, and who proceeds to fall in love with the handsome young Don, Miss Allison wears in some of the scenes rich Spanish shawls and other robes which are destined to delight the feminine, as well as the masculine, eye.

Robert Ellis, as the young lover, also is said to play his part admirably, and the featured players are capably supported with such popular actors as Robert Schable, Louis Dean, Frank Currier, Rafael Arcos and Bessie Wharton.

Charles A. Logue, well known as a dramatist, short story writer and director, wrote "The Woman Who Fooled Herself." and with Mr. Ellis directed the production, besides cooperating with Mr. MacManus in general supervision of the company's activities. He has evolved a moving plot, replete with action and of deep dramatic interest.

An atmosphere charged with the genuine tropical charm pervades the entire picture, as was assured from the moment Mr. MacManus, acting with a group of Spanish capitalists, secured possession of a large estate near San Juan and built modern studios thereon. An open-air carnival, staged in the streets of San Juan itself, and a real tropical storm are among the realistic scenes depicted.

Warners Complete Cast for Picture

The addition of several other screen players has completed the cast for the Warner Brothers production, "Little Church Around the Corner," the picturization of which was started last week at the Warner coast studios.

The new additions to the cast include Claire Windsor, George Cooper and Tom Kennedy. Other players are Kenneth Harlan, Hobart Bosworth, Bessie Love, Walter Long, Alex Francis, Margaret Seddon, Winter Hall and Cyril Chadwick.

"Little Church Around the Corner," is an original story written by Olga Printzlau, and it is based on the novel and stage play of the same name by Marion Rus-

"Snooky" Heads All-Star Cast from Zoo

JOHN ROUNAN, owner of Snooky "The Humanzee," makes an announcement this week of a new series of six 2-reel comedies featuring Snooky, the amazing chimpanzee screen player. Although Snooky plays the "star" part in the animal comedies, he will be ably supported, for he will be assisted by Tom and Jerry, other monkey actors and the entire zoo owned and controlled by John Rounan Productions, Inc.

The first production in the new series, it is stated, is "A Jungle Romeo." A unique feature of this production is the fact that Snooky plays nine different character parts in it.

Labor Picture Release Arrangements Made

The Contrast Photoplay Company has made arrangements with E. Marks Behrman, General Manager of Smart Films, Inc., New York City, to release their first picture "The Contrast" which tells a thrilling dramatic story of man's fight for better living standards.

Dorothy Bernard, late of Famous Players and co-star with William Farnum, has the title role.

Warner Release Prints En Route

"The Beautiful and Damned," Featuring Marie Prevost, Scheduled for November

THE completed print of the Warner Brothers second release, "The Beautiful and Damned," featuring Marie Prevost, is enroute to the eastern offices of the Warner organization, according to an anouncement. The story was adapted by Olga Printzlau from F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel of the same name, and it was directed by William A. Seiter.

In expediting the print east, the Warners are said to be complying with the urgent requests of the exchanges that have contracted to handle the entire series of seven productions being released this season by the Warner Brothers. It is declared that the exchangemen have received many advance bookings on the feature, and from present indications the production is expected to surpass the popularity of the current Warner attraction, "Rags to Riches," featuring Wesley Barry.

The definite release date of "The Beautiful and Damned" is announced for November. Miss Printzlau's adaptation of the novel is said to reveal a cross-section of American society in all its glitter and color, showing in particular two wealthy young people, Gloria Gilbert and Anthony Patch, portrayed by Miss Prevost and Kenneth Harlan respectively. These two people are cast upon the shining sea of a thoughtless, luxury seeking population, and the resultant climax is declared to drive home a significant phase of modern life hitherto unrealized.

The cast supporting Miss Prevost includes Harry Meyers, Louise Fazenda, Tully Marshall, Emmett King, Cleo Ridgeley, Kathleen Key, Parker McConnell, Clarence Burton, Walter Long, George Kuwa and Charles McHugh.

Dillon Joins With Independents

Makes Bow to State Rights Ranks With Production of "Women Men Marry"

EDWARD DILLON, whose name has been for several years connected with the biggest and best productions from the studios of Goldwyn and Famous Players is the latest screen celebrity to cast his lot with the independent wing of the picture industry.

With "Women Men Marry" Mr. Dillon makes his bow in the state rights field. This picture, which is a study in social and matrimonial problems, is the result of a year's preparation and active studio work.

The long cast is headed by E. K. Lincoln in the role of a modern knight errant, while the leading female character is assumed by Miss Florence Dixon.

Other leading members of the cast include Julia Swayne Gordon, Hedda Hopper, who in private life is the wife of the distinguished comedian. Cecil Chadwick, who made a decided impression in the stage version of "Three Live Ghosts," essays the leading character part. Charles Hammond, who will be remembered for his portrayal in David Belasco's "Gold Diggers," is also prominent. Mrs. Margaret Seddon, Richard Carlyle and Maude Turner Gordon have all been highly commended by the critics of the trade press for their excellent work.

The story tells of the efforts made to marry a falsely educated young American girl into the British nobility. The settings of the production are said to be extremely lavish.

The distributing of this and projected Edward Dillon productions will be through the organization of the Truart Film Corporation, of which M. H. Hoffman, General Manager of the Tiffany Productions, Inc., is the advisory head.

Willard Mack Returns in Own Story

FINAL arrangements were this week made for the filming of "Red Bulldogs," an original screen story written by Willard Mack in which the well-known actor-author will return to the screen. Mr. Mack is the author of "Kick In," "Tiger Rose," "Smooth as Silk" and a number of other stage successes, and in "Red Bulldogs," written expressly for himself, he is said to have provided a strong vehicle, of the Mounted Police in which organization Mr. Mack is an honorary Sargeant-major.

Tom Gibson will direct the production from a continuity written in collaboration with the author. Mr. Gibson has just completed the production of his first independent market venture, "The Web of The Law."

A strong cast has been selected to support the star, in which are Sylvia Bremer, George Sherwood, George Morell and Sidney Creighton.

Audience Applauds Actors in "Success"

The unique spectacle of an "audience" working for the actors on the stage, was presented last week when more than 500 extras filled the auditorium and boxes of the Lexington Theatre and for hours applauded, commented in asides, in fact conducted themselves as the ordinary audience on a first night performance would be expected to behave. The occasion was a reproduction from "King Lear" to be incorporated in a screen version of "Success," being made by Ralph Ince for Murray W. Garsson, Inc.

The members of the cast, including Brandon Tynan, Mary Astor, Naomi Childers, Dore Davidson, Stanley Ridges, Lionel Adams and Gay Pendleton, enjoyed lengthy respites from their work while the cameras ground on the "audience" for long periods.

Elinor Glyn Story for Dorothy Phillips

DEFINITE announcement was made this week by Irving Lesser, eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation, that the first feature release of the newly formed producing and distributing company, will be Elinor Glyn's latest story, "The World's a Stage," starring Dorothy Phillips, in a role, which, according to Michael Rosenberg, production manager, who arrived on the Coast late last week, will be the greatest in which she has appeared.

The story on which the picture is founded, is the latest work of Miss Glyn.

"The World's a Stage" Print Shipped East

Irving Lesser, eastern manager of Principal Pictures Corporation, this week announced the receipt of a telegram from Michael Rosenberg, Coast manager and production director of that company, that the concern's super special, "The World's A Stage" based on the latest story written by Elinor Glyn and starring Dorothy Phillips, had been completed.

A print of the production, which already has aroused considerable interest among exhibitors, was shipped to New York this week and will be available for screening shortly after its arrival, fixed for next week.

"The World's a Stage" is a November release of Principal Pictures Corporation. It will be followed with "Chicago Sal," the Irving Cummings picture starring Alice Lake.

Many Novelties for "Notoriety"

Weber and North Prepare Unique Accessories for Latest Will Nigh Production

DEPARTING from the beaten track, the advertising department of L. Lawrence Weber & Bobby North have this week come forth with a full line of novelties and accessories on their first Will Nigh photodrama "Notoriety" that they claim will set a new mark for originality and effectiveness.

The herald is angular cut, the front cover showing a fac-simile of a front-page of a newspaper, with a snappy streamer reading "Tenement Girl Gains Notoriety." The synopsis of the picture follows, written as if it were reported by a newspaperman. A photograph of Maurine Powers, star of the picture, covers the wording. Her hand is shown folding over the front page and pointing to the inside. The inside pages are patterned after a typical Sunday magazine story, with headlines and photographs.

A newspaper broadside, newspaper size, written up in imitation of the front page of a daily, with a headline reading "Innocent Girl Swears To Crime," and the title of the paper "Notoriety," makes a striking street give-away. The story and the photos all stick faithfully to the theme of the picture.

An attractive booklet, vest-pocket size, with brown cover, entitled "Famous Victims of Notoriety," and carrying eight pages of stories on Cleopatra, Mme. Du Barry, Anne Boleyn and Mata Hari, all historic characters who suffered because of their desire for fame, forms an unusually desirable souvenir that will be read and preserved. It is imprinted by the theatre. A sticker and double post card are other novelties on the picture.

C. B. C. Reports Features Selling

"Only A Shopgirl", Second of Series Brings Additional Sales in Territories

THE final closing up of territories on the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series of six features is close at hand, and before the second feature, "Only a Shopgirl" is released in a very short time, it is announced that 100 per cent territory throughout the entire country will be closed solid.

As production has already been completed on "Only a Shopgirl" and the picture is now in process of titling and editing and will be at the New York distribution offices shortly, this is proof that negotiations in the few territories still open on the series are already pending and will be definitely settled within the week.

That this is so is evidenced by the fact that two more of the largest territorial buyers signed this week for "More To Be Pitied," "Only a Shopgirl" and the rest of the six features on the series—disposing of territorial rights to five entire states.

The first sale was to Friedman Film Corporation, of Minneapolis, through its head, Ben Friedman, who acquired rights for his company to handle the whole six features throughout Minneapolis, North Dakota and South Dakota.

The second sale was to Liberty Enterprises of Omaha, which contracted for rights to the Iowa, and Nebraska territories.

Warner Picture Booked Before It Is Made

WHAT is probably an unparalleled incident in the annals of booking feature productions is furnished in the statement that Mack Sennett has booked the Warner Brothers feature, "Main Street," for the Mission Theatre, Los Angeles.

According to Harry M. Warner, actual production of the picture will not be started until Sam and Jack Warner complete "Little Church Around the Corner," which is being directed by William A. Seiter. The booking of "Main Street" by Mr. Sennett at this early date is said to be due to not only the popularity the Sinclair Lewis novel has enjoyed with the reading public, but also to the fact that it contains unlimited avenues for publicity and exploitation.

Hyperion Productions Show Activity

Selling activity for the Hyperion Pictures Corporation's series of six productions for the independent market, is maintaining the rapid pace set since the first of the series, "Finger Prints" was completed and shown recently, according to word from that office.

This week Hyperion closed for the series of six with the Imperial Pictures Company, of Philadelphia. Imperial has bought the rights on "Finger Prints" and the other five pictures to follow it, for the territory of Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey.

George H. Wiley, of Hyperion, will start shortly on a business trip in the interests of the series, which will take him to all the important key cities in the East and middle West.

Special Course Inaugurated for Motion Picture Organists

Great Need of Industry Fulfilled by the Eastman School of Music

THE importance of the organ in the motion picture theatre has brought recognition by George Eastman through the incorporation of a special course at the Eastman theatre devoted to training motion picture theatre organists. In a letter to William A. Johnston, editor of the NEWS, Mr. Eastman discusses this latest project:

Mr. William A. Johnston, Editor,
MOTION PICTURE NEWS,
729 Seventh Avenue,
New York City.

Dear Sir:—

Your attention is invited to the enclosed circular giving full information about the course in Organ Accompanying of Motion Pictures offered by the Eastman School of Music. The course itself, the equipment provided to make it of practical value to the student and the teachers who will conduct the course, make this enterprise one to interest the entire motion picture industry.

Importance of Organ

Recognition of the importance of good musical accompaniment for motion pictures needs no argument; the demand of the public for good and constantly better music is an established fact. The organ is already installed in almost all motion picture theatres of size and permanence; it its pre-eminently the single instrument upon which motion picture accompaniment relies as its stable means. Organ builders are constantly enlarging the capacity of their product for equivalence to orchestral effects. The modern organ furnishes the means for varied musical interpretation of motion pictures that is a proven asset to their success.

There is a present and growing demand for a type of organist prepared to use the modern organ of the motion picture theatre to full advantage. Such an organist must be more than a skilled performer on the organ; more than a master of modern organ mechanisms. He must be prepared both by lively music memory and by ready and intelligent improvisation to follow with his accompaniment the kaleidoscope of scenes and moods of the picture to which his music must be adapted intimately, if the proper result is secured. The organist accompanying motion pictures cannot serve properly by performance of compositions by rote; he must himself be prepared to select from appropriate music such material as will be suitable to the needs of the picture; he must in a way become a composer.

THE organ for use in the motion picture theatre has become a most important element and offers an excellent medium through which a picture can be presented to the public in the most effective manner. The quality of the instrument used is of utmost importance yet no instrument of the most excellent design can be expected to secure the desired results unless the artist operating this instrument is likewise expert. It therefore should prove of great interest to the industry to know that the Eastman School of Music has incorporated a course for the training of motion picture organists. The effects of this school should have a very beneficial result for the motion picture industry.

Recognizing the needs of this comparatively new profession, the Eastman School of Music has made preparations of full adequacy to furnish the training called for. Mechanically its equipment is unrivalled. The organs of the Eastman theatre and of Kilbourn Hall are two of the most important instruments built thus far; they represent the latest and most comprehensive thought of modern organ engineering and musical development. The studio for the course in motion picture accompanying is located in the Eastman theatre and is equipped with an orchestral organ with all modern instrumental equivalents; the regular organ department of the School has for its use two three-manual teaching organs and nine two-manual practice organs. The motion picture organ studio has complete facilities for screening pictures; lessons given there put the student in the environment of the theatre itself; properly prepared by technical and theoretical training, he there accompanies motion pictures under supervision of the teacher.

Teachers Are Past Matsers

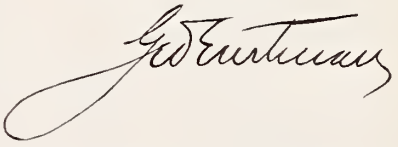
The teachers of this course in the Eastman School of Music are the organists of the Eastman theatre. They are past masters of the art they teach. The student has constant opportunity to profit by example as well as by precept. In the working routine of this theatre there is constant preparation of musical material for use, continual scoring of a comprehensive weekly program of motion pictures. On occasion the student is given opportunity to witness this scoring.

In a music school furnishing complete education in music, of university standard, special opportunity is herein provided for an intensive training preparatory to the demand of motion picture theatres for skilled organists.

This letter and circular are sent you in the thought that the enterprise will appeal to you as worth the notice of your publication.

Very truly yours,



Excerpts from the circular referred to in the above letter read:

The Special Course

This is a special course, offered to a class limited to twelve students, whose preparation is adequate to make intensive study of organ accompanying of motion pictures immediately possible. It should be considered as a post-graduate course if considered in relation to the regular organ course of the school. In addition to proficiency as a player of the organ, the candidate for this course is required to have a fundamental knowledge of harmony, modulation, transposition, and some knowledge of counterpoint.

A studio fitted with facilities for screening motion pictures, and in which is installed a Wurlitzer organ having all modern orchestral equivalents has been provided in the Eastman theatre for use by this department. This insures to the student the advantage of an equipment that makes instruction under practical working conditions possible.

The course consists of two one-hour lessons per week for a term of twelve weeks. In addition to the lesson periods each student will be given opportunity for two hours of practice each week on the studio organ. Students of the course will on stated occasions be allowed to witness the scoring of the music for the accompaniment to the motion picture programs of the Eastman theatre.

Students who are qualified will be permitted to play occasionally on the great organ of the Eastman theatre at regular performances in the afternoon.

Additional hours of practice may be arranged for by students in the organ practice studios of the school. (See last page.)

Preference will be given to organists who

Device Makes Talking Motion Pictures Possibl

Apparatus Will Also Increase Scope of Radio Broadcasting Entertainment

An ingenious apparatus for recording sounds upon a photographic film so that the sound may afterward be reproduced in ordinary telephones, loud speakers, etc., has been developed in the General Engineering laboratory of the General Electric Company, and brings immeasurably nearer the day of the practical talking movie.

It also means a boon to radio broadcasting studios. For from a central studio, say in New York City, the world's greatest artists can perform before this machine which produces the film. Copies of this film may then be made and sent to other stations and reproduced with exactly the same clearness as if the artist were himself present.

It makes possible the talking movie, for on a film of the normal width, can be the picture of the voice of the actor, as well as the photographic record of his action, both voice and action absolutely synchonized because they are part of the same film.

C. A. Hoxie is the man credited with the invention of the device which is called the Pallo-Photo-Phone.

The record is made by causing the sound waves to produce vibrations on an exceedingly minute and very delicate mirror. A beam of light reflected by this mirror strikes a photographic film which is kept in continuous motion. The film when developed shows a band of white with delicate markings on the edges which correspond to the sound which has been reproduced. On account of the exceedingly small size of the mirror, its low inertia, etc., it is possible by this means to produce a sound record which includes the very delicate "overtones" which give quality to speech and musical sounds. This has not been so successfully accomplished by any other method of recording sound waves.

The reproduction of the sound from e film is accomplished by moving the film i front of an exceedingly delicate electrical vice which produces an electromotive fo which varies with the amount of light wh falls upon it. In the past attempts have be made to produce these results by means selenium cells, but a selenium cell, though responds to the changes in the amount light which it receives, does not respond w sufficient promptness to produce good sults; there is a sluggishness in the respor which seriously interferes with the quality sound which is produced.

By an ingenious combination of vacuu tubes there has been produced an apparat which responds to variations in the lig falling on it with a speed which is so hig that it can only be compared with the spe of light itself, or with the speed of propag tion of wireless waves in space. Therefor when this film is moved continuously in fro of such a device, the device produces an ele tric current which corresponds very accu ately to the original sound wave. This ele tric current may be used to actuate a tel phone or loud speaker. It was actually use recently to operate the radio transmittin station WGY of the General Electric Con pany. The well known voice of the WGY an nouncer "KH" was recorded on a photo graphic film and sent out by WGY with suc accuracy that it was impossible to distinguis it from his voice as ordinarily directly trans mitted from the station.

Design for Small Town Theatres in Australia Follow New Lines

MR. CHARD, of the firm of Kaberry & Chard, Theatre Architects, of Sydney, Australia, discussed motion picture theatres throughout Australia during his recent visit to Motion Picture News office in New York City. Chard for the past year has been making a tour of the world inspecting various architecture, particularly that dealing with theatre design.

Describing the country town motion picture house in Australia, Chard expressed his opinion that in these localities pictures hitherto have been shown at a great disadvantage, generally in an ill-ventilated, old-fashioned hall of the barn type, with a flat floor.

However, at present there is a strong tendency to follow the lead of Sydney and other capitals in having small modern theatres complete with every comfort.

The theatre illustrated on this page is a typ designed by Kaberry & Chard, architects, wh specialize entirely in this class of work, for small town, the seating capacity to suit th population, and simplicity of design and decora tion essential to the financial success of th theatre.

Contrary to the custom in this country, th front stalls are seated with a cheaper class o chair, but a good type of seats are used in th rear stalls and comfortable and even luxurious ones in balcony and boxes.

The Taree theatre, New South Wales, illustrates the modern, cheerful type of houses now being built in the suburban towns near Sydney. The architects are Kaberry and Chard, Sydney

"People Like COLOR"

Mottled and polychrome Terra Cotta — JOHN EBERSON, Architect
NEW MAJESTIC THEATRE
DALLAS, TEXAS

THESE are the words of the managers of the New Majestic Theatre of Dallas, Texas. Experience has shown these theatre owners that the architect's skillful use of Terra Cotta gives their theatre a daylight advertising value similar to that given by illumination at night—that a colorful theatre front draws the attention of the "man on the street" and brings in bigger audiences.

On the New Majestic, decorative details are touched with vivid shades and tones that contrast attractively with the lighter body of the facing. The result is a theatre building that is its own permanent "herald," no matter what picture is being shown.

Terra Cotta is, without question, the most competent material for producing artistic and striking effects. It possesses a practically unlimited color range, and at the same time is so adaptable to form that with it you can build a theatre front of severe simplicity or one of rich ornamental detail.

And the theatre front built of Terra Cotta is, to quote again the management of the New Majestic, "very ornamental and very lasting." For in addition to its artistic qualities, Terra Cotta is permanent. It is resistant to fire, weather-proof and waterproof; fadeless and easy to clean. We shall be glad to give you further information about Terra Cotta which may save you time and money when you decide to build. Address National Terra Cotta Society, 19 W. 44th St., New York, N.Y.

Completely Equipped Modern Studios Open in Portland, Oregon

The Kiser Studios, Inc., a newly organized company of Portland, Ore., has launched into the moving picture producing field and has established, it is claimed, the most modern plant on the Pacific Coast outside of Los Angeles.

The company is capitalized at $100,000. In addition a financing company to meet the cost of producing several films has been organized and financed. Headquarters have been established on a large tract of ground in the residence district of Portland and buildings for studios, offices and laboratories have been provided, and a company of experienced players organized.

The main studio building is two stories high and is equipped with the most modern studio appliances and conveniences. The main studio floor is 50 by 100 feet in dimensions with a height of 30 feet to the roof without a single post or other obstruction.

The lighting equipment is in accordance with the latest accepted principles of studio lighting. There is a 150 k.w. motor generator and illumination is provided by 20 Creco twin arcs, one Creco scoop and one Creco arc dome, all of which are supplemented by Cooper-Hewitt banks. In addition there are several 120 ampere and "baby" spots.

Fred H. Kiser, organizer and head of the company is one of America's prominent outdoor artists. He long has contended that moving pictures of superior quality can be photographed in the light and atmosphere of Oregon in spite of failures of other producers.

It is the plan of the organization to utilize Oregon's wonderful scenery for the productions instead of photographic studio scenes. Within less than two hours by automobile from the studio are vast virgin forests, snow-capped peaks, living glaciers, innumerable mountain lakes, rushing streams, great waterfalls and a rough and rugged seacoast, all of which will be used by the players as a background for their productions.

The personnel of the staff follows: Fred H. Kiser, president and general manager; F. M. Byam, business manager; John V. Bennes, art director; Richard J. Grace, technical director; G. M. Vinton, sales director; Broderick O'Farrell, director; T. J. Fenton, chief cameraman; Charles Ammans, scenic and art director; Lewis L. Kiser, chief electrician; Fred Bauer, chief carpenter.

Brightest Sign Ever Built

The brightest electric sign ever built, which has made even blase Broadway gasp, calls attention to Marion Davies in "When Knighthood Was in Flower" at the Criterion theatre, New York.

The sign is 60 feet long and 35 feet high, covering almost the entire front of the Criterion theatre from the marquee to the roof. The letters spelling the name of the star are 10 feet high, while those in the title of the play, being much more numerous, are only half that height. But Marion Davies has the distinction of having her name inscribed in the largest letters ever written in incandescents.

There are 2,200 fifty-watt lamps in this front sign, the equivalent of 110 kilowatts; while the other signs on the 44th street side of the building and under the marquee brings the total electric illumination of the front of the Criterion up to 160 kilowatts. The border lights are frosted, while the letters are formed of nitrogen filled daylight lamps, giving them wonderful brilliancy, against the galvanized old copper background and the old ivory white border.

Brightest electric sign ever used on Broadway

The colors of the royal coat of arms are brought out by a clever device. Each lamp has half a color cap corresponding to the tinctures of the shield and supporters, while the white radiance from the inside of the bulb brings out the painted tints brilliantly.

New Powers Catalogue of Exceptional Merit

The Nicholas Power Company has just published a very complete and fully illustrated catalogue on Powers projectors and accessories. This booklet has been exceptionally well edited in that it treats in a comprehensive manner all the various complete models of the projectors, their individual parts and supplementary projection room equipment. For example, take the intermittent movement. A technical description is given in which four drawings are used in describing the workings and care of this part along with the text describing the adjustments, care, etc. It s also of interest to note that this company offers its service on recommendations for all phases of the projection department such as projection room construction, screens, etc.

Fulco Schaffer Sales Co. Changes Name

C. H. Fulton, president of Fulco Shaffer Sales Company, 24 East Eighth street, Chicago, Ill., announces that he has purchased the interests of S. E. Shaffer in the above organization, and accepted his resignation as vice president of the organization. At an early date the company's name will be changed to the Fulco Sales Company. The members are those who are partly responsible for the success of the old E. E. Fulton Company, formerly located at Lake and La Salle streets, Chicago.

Are Your Pictures Recommended?

How many people recommend to their friends what they see in your theatre?

That is the test of your entertainment—the word of mouth advertising you get. And your entertainment depends on two main things: the selection of the program and the way you display it. Are your pictures white, clear and steady?

Good pictures merit good projection. Indifferent pictures require good projection. In the early days of motion pictures, any kind of light for projection was accepted as long as it was constant, or nearly constant. Now defects in the projection are reflected in the attendance.

Fortunately it is possible to meet the demands of an exacting public. Good light for projection is the purpose of the Wagner White-Light Converter which converts the ordinary alternating current into the far more desirable direct. The light is white—powerful—steady—easily controlled and perfectly dissolving at change over.

Equipped with it you have gone half way toward making satisfied patrons. Your pictures will be given every advantage to make them successful.

While light is relatively a minor item in the operating expenses of the theatre, its importance is great. If you have a copy of our book entitled LIGHT FOR MOTION PICTURE PROJECTION you will see graphically why direct current arc light is superior to any other form of light. You will also learn the advantages of the Wagner White-Light Converter. The book is written in plain language with just enough of the technical to answer satisfactorily any questions that may arise. Shall we send you a copy? If so, simply fill in the coupon and foward it to us.

Wagner White-Light Converter, Type S. C. includes converter, transformer element and starting switch. Ballast resistance, polarity switch and ammeter are included as part of the equipment and furnished in separate units.

Sturtevant Issues Catalogue On Air Washers

A new 44-page catalogue on air washers No. 295 has just been issued by the B. F. Sturtevant Co., of Hyde Park, Boston, Mass. It is profusely illustrated and shows the various details of construction by which the air for any building or for any industry is thoroughly washed and tempered before entering the building. The motors and pumps are also described and illustrated. Installations are shown in a city hall, a chocolate factory, a customs house, a theatre as well as other types of buildings.

More than twelve pages are devoted to various tables giving dimensions, psychrometric charts, diagrams, relative humidities and other useful data.

A copy of this catalogue will be forwarded on request.

Electrical Illuminating Society of the Motion Picture Industry

IN 1920 nine electricians employed in West Coast studios of the motion pictures met in Los Angeles to talk over the advisability of forming an organization to promote the welfare of their profession, with the result that then and there was born the Electrical Illuminating Engineers Society, with nine members.

The names of eight of these original organizers were Fred Mills, president; Harry D. Brown, first vice-president; Walter Strahm, Louis Kolb, W. L. McPheeters, Louis Hauck, E. V. Morris, Bert Wayne.

The object of the Society as set forth in Article 1, of their by-laws is: "The advancement of electrical illumination in all its branches, and the furthering of electrical and mechanical science in connection with the motion picture industry. A further object shall be to cultivate, establish and maintain a closer co-operation between the members of this society and the executives of the motion picture industry in order to create a more economical and efficient organization."

After organization the Society grew rapidly and the membership now stands at thirty-one, every important producing organization on the West Coast being represented and the membership being composed of the leading lights of the profession.

The complete roster is herewith printed:

Harry D. Brown, Universal Film Manufacturing Co.; E. Brewer, Ambassador Pictures Corporation; Ed. Christ, unassigned; F. G. Carpenter, unassigned; H. E. Collins, Garson Studios, Edendale; P. Coates, Vitagraph Studios; R. F. Daggy, unassigned; A. C. Helvey, unassigned; R. Hostetter, Cinema Studio Supply Company; R. E. Houck, Thomas H. Ince Studio; W. L. Harmon, King Vidor Productions; L. Johnson, unassigned; L. Kolb, Goldwyn Studios; Wm. Johnson, Pickford-Fairbanks Studio; W. Linahan, Marshall Neilan Studios; L. Meyers, Russell Production; F. S. Mills, Lasky Studios; W. L. McPheeters, Universal Film Manufacturing Co.; E. V. Morris, Hal E. Roach Studios; F. Murphy, Warner Brothers Studios; G. E. McCormack, President, Charles Ray Studios; Mr. McClaren, unassigned; R. E. Nauman, Louis B. Mayer Studios; J. Reynolds, Secretary, Orpheum Junior theatre; W. T. Strohm, United States Studios; H. Sylvester, Chamberlain-Reynolds Company; G. Shour, unassigned; B. Wayne, Pickford-Fairbanks; Wm. Whistler, unassigned; Howard M. Ewing, unassigned; George M. Breslin, attorney for the Society.

All these men are experts in their line and that means that they are not merely mechanical scientists, but that they have developed the artistic side of the motion picture lighting to the highest degree, and those who have followed the immense development in the lighting of sets during the past few years will appreciate how great the value of the work and researches of the E. I. E. S. has been to the pictures.

They have created many new appliances which make for efficiency in production as well as for artistic effects and their work seems destined to be one of the most important elements in the development of the motion picture of the future.

Transactions of the E. I. E. S. and articles by members of the Society will appear frequently in the columns of The American Cinematographer, which hereby congratulates the members of the E. I. E. S. upon the achievements of their organization.—American Cinematographer.

Twenty Cameras Trained on Forest Fire Scene Set New Record

Twenty cameras, the largest number ever trained on one scene, were employed by Reginald Barker to record the spectacular forest fire which was staged especially for the big climax in "Hearts Aflame," the first of a series of all-star special which the director is making for Louis B. Mayer.

Working under the supervision of Percy Hilburn, chief photographer on the production, the cameramen were stationed in pairs at various points along the twenty-acre stretch of pines set afire for the picture, many of them being so close to the flames that they had to have sheet iron blinds to protect the cameras from the fire. In spite of this provision, two of the cameras were put out of commission entirely by the terrific blaze and intense heat, and five of the cameramen were so severely burned in the experience that they had to report for medical treatment when the scene was completed.

Half the number of cameras employed could probably have covered the necessary angles just as well as the twenty used, but the cost of the forest fire sequence reached such an enormous figure and the thing was such a tremendous undertaking, that it was decided on the greater number of cameras to insure getting the full value of the spectacle for the screen. And an even better reason was the importance of catching Anna Q. Neilsson at the cab of the locomotive which she drove through the flames—a daring feat that nearly cost her her life. With all her luck in the wild ride through the fire, she was so badly burned about the neck and shoulders that she required constant medical care for a week.

National Anti-Misframe League Forum

Gentlemen:—

I have been reading the letters and all other helpful hints given in the columns of the News under the N. A. M. L. heading and find that they are a great help to any one in a projection room and as I am not a member of the league I would like very much to be, as I am always for anything that will help me and others to make the projection of motion pictures better as we all can readily see that there is plenty of room for this.

I am not acquainted with the rules of the league, but found a coupon in the News and am filling it out and sending it in and if there is anything else to do please let me know, as I am anxious to receive my membership card and button, which I am enclosing 25c. for and would like to have a slide also if you have them and would appreciate getting some of your labels as I have run several pictures that were inspected by some of the members and they were in perfect order.

I am employed as a projectionist at the Star theatre of this place and have a very poorly built booth with two Power machines, one a 6-a and one 6-b. They are in A-1 condition and I am striving to keep them that way and to improve the booth as well. I have only been here about nine months and, as you know, it takes time to accomplish anything.

Hoping to get my membership card and button at an early date and that I can be of some help to others as well as they are to me, I am

Yours for better projection,

Dear Sirs:

I am mailing application blank for membership in your association. I am assistant projectionist at the Alamo theatre at Newman, Ga. Have been in this capacity for some time, almost a year, in fact. At present I go to school five hours a day and operate the machine for two hours each day. Mr. R. F. Milner, chief projectionist of this theatre, is already a member of your organization, and he speaks so highly of it that it must be a very good thing. In fact, we try to follow all your views on how to fix film and so forth. It is a nuisance to get hold of a picture that has been punched and cut up.

I thank you very much and hope to get my button soon.

Yours very sincerely,
H. F. Taylor.

---

Enclosed find 25c. in stamps for the N. A. M. L. metal button, which I think is a great improvement on the old button. In regard to the punching and disfiguring films, my opinion is that the exchange should put a stop to it. The best way I find is to make my own cue.

I should like you to send me a new membership card, as I have misplaced mine.

Very truly yours,
Gustave Shaw, No. 1467,
Red Hook, N. Y.

IN the mail of a recent date for this department was received an application for membership in the National Anti Misframe League filled out in the name of one, Clifford Paris whose home address is 107½ N. Summit Street, and business address, the Strand Theatre, but which did not contain a sign of either the city or state in which Mr. Paris lives. Attached to this membership application was twenty-five cents in stamps to cover the charges on the bronze N. A. M. L. membership button which we are keeping in a pigeonhole of our desk awaiting the time when we shall hear further concerning the correct address of our prospective member. In order that Mr. Paris' application may not be unnecessarily held up we ask that he advise us at once his correct address.

Dear Editor:

In the issue of October 14th I read of the light rays and I agree that the light rays cross in front of the objection lens and where it crosses is the proper place for the shutter. I am sending you diagram of how the light rays cross to the best of my knowledge. If you find any mistake in it please let me know what it is.

Yours very truly,
J. G. Butts, No. 1646,
Trigg Theatre,
Glasgow, Ky.

The light rays do not cross at one place as is shown in J. G. Butts' diagram, though in a great majority of cases there is a place in front of the objective lens where the light beam is smaller in diameter than at the objective lens itself. The light rays cross all the way to the screen. A further discussion of this subject will appear in a later issue and give a more detailed account.—Editor.

Diagram submitted on light ray crossing by J. Butts

Dear Mr. Abbott:

Have not written to you in some time: hope that the N. A. M. L. is increasing in all respects.

With reference to the slide I wrote to the Unique Slide Corporation they made the slide but it isn't anything like the slide that I wanted, and besides they charged $1.50 for same.

I am glad to say that since I have been a member that I have seen lots of N. A. M. L. labels in cans, but I have my first to see that corresponds with the picture in the can. The film exchanges don't seem to be co-operating with us. In my estimation this organization should be a wonderful help to them. On the other hand I realize that it's hard for them to send the same picture in the same can all the time.

Realizing this, I see nothing but that we get a label that will fit the band that comes on the film. This will enable the reports to go with the picture at all times.

I am at present working on an automatic slide changer, which, if I can perfect, will be a great help to all projectionists.

In some way we didn't get this week's Motion Picture News. I have failed in some way to see my letter in any of them. If you have copy of same, will thank you if you will send me one.

Assuring you that the league is my first consideration, and at any time I can be of any assistance don't hesitate to call on 1819 a 100 per cent member.

Yours very respectfully,
E. E. Rawl,
1819 Batesburg Theatre, Batesburg, S. C.

---

Dear Editor:

Have been reading the Motion Picture News for some time and after seeing what other projectionists are doing, feel like I ought to get in line with the rest. I just finished hooking up my films for tonight's shows and I patched over two hours on the films and cut out a bunch of punch marks. It was a First National film. We always get rotten films from them. I think that if a few more projectionists would practice the same thing as the N. A. M. L. teaches we would receive better films.

Enclosed find 25c. in stamps for a membership button and also send me a few labels, if you please.

Yours truly,
Donald Weigman,
Degraff, Ohio.

Dear Editor:

I received my membership card by this morning's mail. I have been watching for it a long time.

I am now employed at the Strand Theatre and have one of the largest and best equipped booths in the state, having 2 Powers with high intensity arcs, a booth cabinet, 2 motor rewinders, G. E. set and running water. I guess we couldn't want anything better. Am I right? And also we have plenty of good fresh air, the ceiling having skylight and room containing door and window leading into a good cool airshaft. Drop up and see me if you get a chance. You'll always be welcome.

Yours,
F. W. McClain, No. 1804,

Dear Sir:

Some time ago another projectionist told me that you have an Anti-Misframe League agoing. He also told me to join and get the benefit out of that organization. Will you please send me full particulars and membership outfit. This city is not very large and I could not afford to become a union projectionist. At present there are a number of things that I would like to have answered. Also send me the price of Motion Picture News. The more you read trade papers the more you know about the profession as there is a little in every paper that you don't know. Will you please see to it that I get the outfit or membership blank. Thanking you.

Very truly,

ANOTHER GREAT THEATER EQUIPPED WITH THE MAJOR SYSTEM

When the historically named "New McVickers" Theater, of Chicago, opened its doors to the public, another magnificent achievement was recorded to mark that photoplay progress, and again the Major System of Pre-Selective Remote Control of Theater Lighting fulfilled every ambitious expectation.

Jones, Linick & Schaefer, owners of the New McVickers, far-seeing showmen with years of experience, know the value of good lighting, and know that the Major System is the only way to have it.

With over a hundred of America's finest theaters Major Equipped, it is becoming a matter of everyday theater lighting, to say Major System, of course. Yet smaller theaters, and old ones that need new lighting equipment, can be Major Equipped, as well as the most magnificent new one. Sectionally constructed, its cost is only that of an adequate installation to fit your needs.

A new book, "The Control of Lighting in Theaters," will be furnished free to theater managers. It has been prepared at great expense and will be of unquestioned interest to you; write for it.

Many Claims For Automatic Motion Picture Projector Safety Device

IT is claimed after a thorough test, during which it was in daily use at the Fox theatre, Aurora, and was demonstrated to be of the greatest practical value, Fyre-Gard, the new automatic motion picture projector safety device, has been put on the market by the Fyre-Gard Manufacturing Company, of Aurora, Illinois.

Further description of the Fyre-Gard states that it stops the motor and cuts off the light instantly if the film breaks at any point above or below the aperture plate; if the lower reel fails to pick up; if the mechanism of projector binds or breaks; if the lower loop is lost, or if the sprocket holes are stripped from film, and also positively prevents film from packing in machine from any cause.

At the end of the picture, the device also functions and cuts off light and motor.

During the three years it was operated at the Fox theatre the film did not plug once, and what this means will be best appreciated by the operators and managers interested in perfect operation of their theatre and safety from fire.

It is undoubtedly a practical and efficient fire protection device.

The manufacturers have arranged for the distribution of Fyre-Gards through the following well-known moving picture supply concerns: Exhibitors Supply Company, Inc., with stores located as follows: 128 Grand Avenue, Milwaukee; 3315 Oliver Street, St. Louis; Produce Exchange Building, Minneapolis; 128 W. Ohio Street, Indianapolis; 84 S. Wabash Avenue, Chicago; The Argus Enterprises, Inc., with stores at 21st and Payne Avenue, Cleveland; 1519 Glenarm Street Denver; 836 S. ## Grand Theatre Being Remodeled

The Grand theatre which in June was partially destroyed by fire, is being remodeled and redecorated by E. C. Weber, the present owner, at a cost of $14,000 and is now nearly completed. It will be renamed and hereafter known as the "Columbia Theatre." Sullivan, Helling & Company are lessees and Sullivan and Helling will be the managers of the theatre. It is a combination house, showing road shows, vaudeville and pictures.

Oak Theatre, Seattle Reopened

The Oak theatre, one of Seattle's downtown second run houses, will reopen this week after having been closed for repairs for the past two weeks. Upon reopening the theatre management will feature second run photoplays in conjunction with a new musical revue company under the leadership of Ted Howland. The house has been cleaned and renovated inside. It was primarily built for stage plays but has not been used for anything but motion pictures for several years. The new name chosen for the house was "The Olympic."—Prager.

St. Louis News Notes

It is also reported that Fred L. Cornwell plans to erect a 2,500 seat house at Eighth and St. Charles streets. This location has been suggested for a theatre site on several occasions and is not a bad one. It is directly opposite the Mercantile Trust Company and backs up against the Orpheum theatre.

It is known that an architect in the Chemical Building has prepared plans for a combination theatre and office building to cost upwards of $1,000,000, but has declined to reveal either the names of the parties interested in the project or its location as the necessary options had not been obtained on the site in view.

In the meantime negotiations for the theatre and office building on the Midway theatre site are still hanging fire. The International Life Insurance Company has offered to finance this project under certain conditions, one proviso being that the structure should be known as the International Life Building. This is an ideal location for a high-class picture house.—Barrett.

Trained Bull Frogs latest screen stunt. E. R. Gammage of Westlake, La., field representative for Fox News and his trained frogs are making quite a hit on the "movie" screen. Frogs are trained to wear high hats, smoke cigarettes and cut many capers

Radio Apparatus for U in Theatres

Joseph H. Hallberg, the well known mot picture electrical equipment designer, has b holding a good deal of his time with the velopment of radio apparatus and has p fected a very excellent design of radio receiv instrument and cabinet which is well adap for use in theatre lobbies and rest rooms. T apparatus not only is very attractive in appearance but required no antaenna ground connections, thus making it unusua convenient for use in the theatre. The sou reproduction is perfect. Mr. Hallberg has a developed various other radio outfits which has placed on the market.

Announcement is made that C. E. Walker of the Princess and Lyric theatres, Santa Ana, Cal., will commence construction of a $100,000 motion picture house with a seating capacity of 12000.

New Theatre Opens

"The Garden" is the latest venture into the theatrical and moving picture field in Rockingham, N. C. Some weeks ago, Mr. M. H French leased from T. C. Leak and H. C. Wall the opera house, and with Wm. G. Atkinson as manager the place has literally been turned upside down. The interior, the decorations, fixtures, scenery and general tone to the place must be seen to be appreciated. Summed up, it is said by many to be the prettiest picture house in Piedmont, Carolina.

PERSONAL ATTENTION

AN independent producer said the other day: "The thing I like best about THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES is that you men give the same personal attention to small accounts you do to the work of the industry's biggest producers. The man making one picture at a time receives the same splendid service and courteous treatment extended to a studio with six or eight units working all the time."

THIS producer could appreciate through experience what the camera-to-screen service of THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES means. He realized that the magnitude of our plant and the efficiency of our organization permit individual attention to every order heretofore impossible; that our superior facilities assure quicker and better work; and that we are personally interested in every picture we help give to the screen.

Heart-Throbs Clothed in Magnificence!

HERE'S a picture that combines two of the greatest appeals in the world—mother-love plus Paris gowns.

The story is one of the strongest, in pathos and drama, that Miss Swanson has ever had. The magnificence of the gowns and sets excels all her past productions.

The New York Globe said:

"Not since 'Don't Change Your Husband' has Gloria Swanson had such an excellent vehicle. One of the best casts of the season. Mr. Lasky has outdone himself in an effort to give theatre-goers their money's worth."

Cast includes Conrad Nagel, Robert Cain, June Elvidge.

I have laughed at Larry Semon. It was in the semi-dark. Nobody who knew me personally was near. No one who knew me caught me at it. Surrounded by total strangers—misguided people like myself—common people like myself—ordinary people like myself—I have also laughed at that funny man. And for years I have been posing as a highbrow. I read Moliere, and Chaucer, and The Atlantic Monthly. Yet I laugh in secret, away from my friends and family, at Larry Semon.

"When Danger Smiles"

Ray Chapman, packing house executive, and young, went to the far west to study cattle raising.

On the night of his arrival at the ranch of his friend there was a neighborhood cowboy dance. He decided to attend. On the way to the dance, a bewitching figure, dancing in the moonlight, to the music as it floated up from the cabin, intrigued him. A few steps of a delightful waltz, with a girl he did not know, and who was heavily veiled, a kiss in the dark, and Chapman forgot all about the cattle business. But he did become the storm center of some of the most exciting adventures that ever befell a man.

The victim of a fiendish set of untoward circumstances, he is whirled out of one narrow escape into another, until by sheer force of an unconquerable will he succeeds in clearing the atmosphere of suspicion that has settled about him. And he wins the girl.

A splendid Duncan picture, with the punch that gives this popular star full rein.—Five reels.

"The Fighting Guide"

"Tubbs, instruct the guide person that immediately awfter my bawth, I wish dinner to be served. He will then proceed with the washing."

This from Lord Chumleigh-Winston—and to Ned Lightning, two-fisted, hard fighting son of the North Woods, guide and boon companion of millionaire regular fellows. Oh Boy! You just naturally rise in your seat. You know things are to happen. And they sure do, for Bill Duncan is Ned Lightning, and he's in his element—the big outdoors, with plenty of elbow room.

Briefly, Ned Lightning has undertaken to conduct His Lordship through the Canadian Rockies to his syndicate possessions in the far north. Ned "blows up" before the contract is completed, and decides to do a bit of lording himself. In the process, he finds time to run down a number of crooks, and unravel a whole skein of tangles.

Once in a blue moon will you find a picture with as wide range of appeals. It is galloping action, with a strong plot, sustained to the end; scenery of the most magnificent sort, the most excruciating comedy, and a sweet little love story.

Harry Lonsdale, as Lord Chumleigh-Winston, and Wm. McCall as Tubbs, his valet, are excellent back ground for Duncan's best work. And it contains one of the most daring horseback stunts ever screened.—Five reels.

"Steelheart"

The vivid, colorful, turbulent life of a Western railroad construction camp forms the background for the stirring action of "Steelheart." "Bill" Duncan proves that he knows how to act the part of a two-fisted, clean-hearted hero. Beating up a roomful of outlaws in a pitch-dark house, engaging in a hand-to-hand fight in which both contestants are carried over the edgs of a precipice into the rapids below, facing death from a dynamite explosion, rescuing a young colt from the current of a mountain torrent, and subduing an enraged grizzly with his bare hands, Duncan goes from one piece of dare-deviltry to another.—Six reels.

"The Silent Vow"

Perhaps William Duncan has never had a production which was more trying, or which brought out the effectiveness of his acting as does "The Silent Vow," in which he assumes a dual role. He plays father and son and presents a picture with some double exposure which has been heretofore regarded as impossible—that of a character crossing the center line in a double exposure scene.

The dynamiting of a river, three men and a canoe being carried over great falls to destruction, fist fights, intense dramatic seenes, a stirring love story of the great outdoors, daring feats of horsemanship and massive sets in which spectacular scenes are enacted, are a few of the high lights in this great story of the Northwest.—Five reels.

"No Defense"

The thrilling action of "No Defense" leads up to a fine climax. Ethel Austin goes to the home of Hulst, the lawyer, to recover the stolen certificate of her first marriage. Blackmail was the lawyer's little game. As Hulst faced the helpless woman triumphantly, the curtains at one end of the room slowly parted, revealing a battered, ragged, unshaven man. Ethel screamed, for she recognized in this derelict her first husband, John Manning, who has been reported as dead, but whom, in spite of her second marriage she still loved. This is the dramatic situation in which the suspense of "No Defense" culminates. And then Hulst is killed!—Six reels.

"Where Men Are Men"

"Where Men Are Men," as the title indicates, is a stirring story of the West, and is a typical Duncan production, presenting that accomplished and sturdy actor in the type of character in which he is at his best. Nearly all the action takes place in the Death Valley gold section of California during the gold fever. The beautiful scenic backgrounds and melodramatic story, together with a splendid supporting cast make "Where Men Are Men" one of the best plays of the year. Edith Johnson appears with Mr. Duncan as co-star.—Five reels.

"Little Wildcat"

"There is a divine spark in every woman which needs but a breath to burst into flame. Surround her with clean conditions, give her proper environment, the CHANCE that Christ gave the Magdalen, and she will become as good—as my mother!"

This thesis, pronounced by Robert Ware, wealthy samaritan and psychologist, with warm conviction to his friend, Judge Arnold, elicited the invitation from the Judge, cynical justice of a criminal court, for a practical demonstration of the theory.

Robert Ware accepted the challenge.

Fate decreed that seventeen-year-old "Mag o' the Alley," child of the slums, should be the subject of the test. Standing at the bar like a beast at bay, eyes wide and breast heaving, this piteous little creature instinctively yields consent to a parole to the kindly Robert Ware.

Four eventful years completely prove the soundness of Ware's conviction, in this case, at least, and Margaret emerges a well-poised, beautiful woman, after a baptism in experience which comes to few girls.

The scenario was especially written for Alice Calhoun, and the picture has been produced with elaborate trappings, and with a large and able cast. The action, which is incessant, runs almost the whole range of human society. "Little Wildcat" is a stirring picture, built upon an age-old but always fascinating question—Heredity or Environment—Which? It is a favorite plot in fiction. "Little Wildcat" treats it from a refreshingly new angle, and exceedingly well.—Five reels.

"The Little Minister"

All the lovable characters of James M. Barrie's whimsical novel of the Scottish lowlands have come to life in Vitagraph's charming production of "The Little Minister." Rob Dow, the village drunkard; Nanny Webster, the proud old pauper; Gavin Dishart, the plucky but diminutive pastor of the kirk and all the rest have taken on human form. And, above all, one must not forget Lady Babbie, the "Egyptian," as portrayed by Alice Calhoun. This dainty star has caught the spirit of Barrie's delightful madcap heroine. The quaint, old-world atmosphere of the little village of Thrums, created by the artistic touch of Director David Smith, makes a fitting background for this splendid picture.—Six reels.

"The Angel of Crooked Street"

"The Angel of Crooked Street" is a picture that will appeal to the lovers of action and thrills. It is a story that moves rapidly, and deals with a young girl who has been unjustly imprisoned, and who seeks revenge. She learns, however, that vengeance is not hers to take, and after several complications into which is woven a pleasing love story, the girl emerges a bigger and better woman because of her adventures. It is a story that appeals to the masses because it is intensely human and presents Alice Calhoun in a role to which she is exceptionally well fitted.—Five reels.

"A Girl's Desire"

What to do with a million dollars or so has stirred the imagination of those without the millions since time began. The problem is little less serious to these who have secured the coveted wealth suddenly. Otherwise sensible people seem often to be at once bereft of all sense of proportion. H. Jerome Brown, late "Hank Brown," while yanking his millions from the oil fields, kept a tight hold on his oldtime horse sense, but the oil money went to Mrs. Brown's head, and thereby hangs a tale with many a smile, a chuckle, and a sigh of understanding.

How Mrs. Browne drags the new H. Jerome Browne to Europe in search of a crest and a titled husband for Elizabeth, and becomes involved in a maze of curious adventures, provides action plus, with a suspended climax to the last few feet.

One of Alice Calhoun's best pictures, with a supporting cast including Warner Baxter, James Donnelly, Victory Bateman, and other favorites.—5 reels.

"The Girl in His Room"

One of the pretty little stories which are always welcome to the admirers of this young star. The plot is not a heavy one, but just a plausible story of what sometimes happens that makes truth stranger than fiction.

Plenty of action of the milder sort, and a wealth of the sort of interiors and atmosphere most popular with women and girls.

Myra Pendleton has never seen her father. From infancy she has had only the care of nurse and boarding school. She receives frequent and loving messages from the parent. Then, of a sudden, she finds herself the mistress of a strange mansion, and the possessor of wealth,—the father has disappeared. How she unravels the mystery and finds both the father and a husband supplies many tense moments and suspends the denouement until the last hundred feet.—Five reels.

PRODUCTIONS

"Divorce Coupons"

"Divorce Coupons" is the story of the transformation of a fortune-hunting adventuress into a loving dutiful wife... When Linda Catherton married Roland Bland, she wrote to her friend: "I'LL HAVE DIVORCE COUPONS ON MY BONDS OF MATRIMONY." In other words, she intended to risk a few years of married life for the sake of a big alimony. In spite of her cold-blooded plans, however, she found herself falling in love with her husband. The picture has been lavishly produced and its cast includes Corinne Griffith, Holmes E. Herbert, Vincent Coleman and Mona Lisa.—Six reels.

"A Woman's Sacrifice"

Thrills abound in the territory north of 53, wherein the action of "A Woman's Sacrifice" is laid. Drama is part of the daily routine in the land of ice and snow. It is a spectacular film of the far north. Wolf-dogs, snowstorms and real fights are part of the action. The destruction of the outlaws' cabin is one of the high lights. Real Indians and a Chinese character are human interest touches. The latter especially provides what little comedy there is in the film.

The story deals with a man who agrees to marry a girl in order to save her from a great danger, the nature of which is not disclosed. The youth fights his enemies in the dark, aided by an Indian and half dozen wolf-dogs. His faith in the girl never falters, although circumstances indicate that she is unfaithful. His love goads him on into new dangers and adventures, every one of which is thrilling and spectacular. It is a film that will hold the attention from the first flash—one that you will never forget.—Five reels.

"Moral Fibre"

Corinne Griffith as Marion Wolcott, a little country miss who sees her idolized brother made the plaything of a sophisticated woman of the world and who a few years later, as a beautiful young girl, goes to New York to "get even;" Catherine Calvert as Grace Elmore, the young society matron who didn't really mean to harm the boy. What a combination! These stars, both beautiful, but of different types, famous for their gowns and their ability to wear them, both actresses of marked ability, make "Moral Fibre" one of the biggest pictures of the year.—Six reels.

"The Single Track"

"The Single Track" is a railroad picture, and it goes with all the vim and power of the Twentieth Century Limited on a straight-away track. The story tells of a fight to build a railroad. If the track is not completed within a certain time Jenetta Gildersleeve loses all that is left of her father's fortune. Powerful interests are at work to hinder the construction. On the scene of action is Mallison, the ruffianly leader of a gang of outlaws that only he can control, and behind Mallison is a group of unscrupulous Wall Street financiers. The young girl goes west to help in the struggle. In the end her feminine wiles and more than masculine daring saves the day.—Six reels.

"Deadline at Eleven"

A newspaper story with all the real atmosphere of a newspaper office—a treat seldom accomplished successfully on either stage or screen. Miss Griffith is seen as a young woman of wealth, disgusted with the shams of society, who seeks to make her own way as a reporter. She clears up a murder mystery, finds a husband in a fellow reporter and quits her job.—Five reels.

"The Garter Girl"

One of Corinne Griffith's best pictures. The wide range of character play has given this beautiful, versatile actress full scope. From the humour and pathos of the country town to the glamour of Broadway and the atmosphere of the theatre, it runs the gamut of human emotions. Vivid, vibrating,—it is life as it is lived at the heart-breaking American pace. Naturally, the picture is gorgeously dressed. Many beautiful sets, and the costuming fully up to the high standard of this star.—Five reels.

"What's Your Reputation Worth?"

"This is a case in ten thousand; it is a tragedy," said Justice Tierney recently in the course of a divorce case before him in the New York Supreme Court, "and yet a few days ago I saw its exact parallel told on the screen. It was 'What's Your Reputation Worth?' and the woman deliberately endangered her reputation to help a friend." That is exactly what this new Corinne Griffith picture play is, one in ten thousand. Unusual, yet true to life; vivid and virile, yet clean and wholesome, it has stirred up interest and favorable comment throughout the country and Canada, and has been acclaimed as one of the best pictures in months.—Five reels.

"The Broadway Bubble"

Corinne Griffith has splendid opportunities to show her versatility in this clever picture, assuming two separate roles—twin sisters. One is high in New York's social life, respecting, but not loving her husband. The other is a small town stenographer. The latter goes to the city to impersonate her more fortunate sister while she has her "try-out" on the stage. The sisters meet frequently and some remarkable double exposures make this possible.—Five reels.

"Dollars and the Woman"

There is something decidedly human about this play, which a noted film authority called particularly timely in this era when living costs strike home to nearly every family. Alice Joyce appears at first as a young married woman who does not know the value of a dollar; later, through vicissitude, she learns her lesson only too well and goes a bit too far in economy for happiness. The picture ends happily; both husband and wife learn that through their sacrifices a greater love is made possible. Robert Gordon appears as Miss Joyce's leading man.—Six reels.

"The Prey"

Forced into a marriage with a man she detests, through fear that the man will expose an unfortunate act of her brother, the woman decides to pay—quietly. But Fate had decreed otherwise. The crashing scenes which follow the woman's quiet sacrifice prove that wrongdoers cannot permanently prosper. Beautiful sets, gorgeous costumes and a strong cast make this picture one of the best of its type. The cast includes Henry Hallam, L. Roger Lytton and Roy Applegate.—Six reels.

"Cousin Kate"

This is an excellent picturization of Charles Frohman's noted Empire Theatre success, in which Ethel Barrymore starred. The film excels the stage version in many respects. Scenes hinted at in the stage version are visualized in the screen presentation. It is a very pretty love story, deftly handled by one of the greatest woman screen directors. Its heroine is an author of startling books on love—which she doesn't know a thing about until, finally, she meets the right man.—Five reels.

"The Scarab Ring"

Circumstantial evidence, which depends entirely upon the ownership of an ancient Egyptian scarab, is the theme of this splendid Alice Joyce production. It is a play of high social life, presenting the star in the type of role in which she is at her best—one to wealth as well as to the manner born. It has mystery. It has love. It has big scenes and tense situations. It is unique. And it is presented in a lavish manner with an exceptionally well balanced cast. Unquestionably one of the biggest and best pictures Miss Joyce has made.—Six reels.

"The Inner Chamber"

Alice Joyce is a revelation in this splendid picture. Her beauty, her poise, her admirable restraint in scenes which might easily be overacted, have made her one of the foremost figures of the screen, but seldom has she risen to such emotional and dramatic heights as in this tense story which was adapted to the screen by C. Graham Baker. It is a powerful society drama, replete with action and requiring exceptional acting. Such noted actors as Holmes E. Herbert and Pedro de Cordoba are seen in the star's support and the production is on a massive scale. The story is new and unhackneyed and provides Miss Joyce with one of the best roles in her career.—Six reels.

"Her Lord and Master"

Another Frohman stage success brought to the screen with most successful results. Alice Joyce gives two distinct characterizations, each as different from the other as day is from night—the one, "Indiana Stillwater," a breezy athletic daughter of a Middle Western self-made man; the other, "Lady Canning," prim and repressed, as befitting the lady of one of the oldest mansions in England, Holmes E. Herbert is seen as her leading man.—Six reels.

"The Sporting Duchess"

This play was a sensation when produced on the stage, both in this country and abroad. It was the talk of two continents. In the elaborate screen version, Alice Joyce appears as the Duchess of Desborough, happy in her possession of perfect love, but finally trapped into unhappiness through her envious enemies. The climax of this picture, on which more than $200,000 was expended in production, is tremendous. The running of the historic Derby, in which Clipstone, the duke's famous thoroughbred wins victory for himself and happiness for his master and his mistress, climaxes a most unusual motion-picture. Six months were required to produce this epic of the screen.—Seven reels.

"You Never Know"

Those who are familiar with the excellent work of Earle Williams will appreciate what he is capable of in "You Never Know." In this picture he is a secret service operative assigned to the San Francisco water front, in the effort to apprehend the financial backers of a South American revolution.

There is a wealth of action of the most exciting kind, the scenes divided between a questionable Latin quarter cabaret, the home of a wealthy steamship owner, and the waterfront. High lights in the spectacular are the attack of "Muggsy's" gang on the Latin quarter dive, the fight between the gun-runner, Carlos Medina, and Eddie Manning of headquarters, who is masquerading as a chauffeur, and the seaplane chase of the filibustering yacht, and its capture.

An adventure story par excellence, with the kind of true love that doesn't run smooth, but has a lot of zest. Clothed in the elaborate manner in which it has been, it will be a particularly satisfactory picture to any audience.—Five Reels.

"A Rogue's Romance"

By H. H. Van Loan Directed by James Young
Earle Williams as Monsieur Picard
Rodolph Valentino as "The Ferret"

"She's mine—and what's hers belongs to me! Don't mix in the affairs of The Ferret, Monsieur Picard!"

Monsieur Picard, polished, suave, master crook of all Paris and the idol of the underworld, smiled contemptuously as he released the sinewy wrists of The Ferret.

"You'll pay for this! The Ferret never forgets!"

It was the beginning of a battle of wits between the two outstanding figures in the night life of Paris. Monsieur Picard, daring, self-possessed, always in the white light as he flitted between The Montmarte and the city's social heights. The Ferret, stealthy, cunning, handsome—the chief of the Apaches. Grey wolves that strike in the dark. It is a battle worthy two such leaders. And they are the despair of the prefect of the Police, until Monsieur Picard finds the Girl, who redeems him to society.

Two great stars in a great picture, each with parts exactly suited to them, splendidly produced. "A Rogue's Romance" will supply a new insight into the wherefore of Valentino's greatness. A new slant at his infinite variety.—Five reels.

"Restless Souls"

There is plenty of action and plenty of fun in this Earle Williams' production. Jimmy Parkington, played by Mr. Williams, gets it into his head that his wife, who really loves him devotedly, has fallen in love with Edgar Lynde Swetson, an effete lecturer on "Neo-symbolism." Jimmy fixes it up so that it appears that he has committed suicide. Then he is horrified to learn that the only will which can be found leaves everything to his aunt. When Jimmy sneaks back into his own home, his old dog "Pal" recognizes him and the trouble begins.—Five reels.

"Fortune's Mask"

"There is little consecutiveness along the Spanish Main. Things happen there intermittently. Even Time seems to hang his scythe daily upon the branch of an orange tree while he takes a siesta and a cigarette."

There. You have the setting for this bit of Spanish romance. Coralia, a little comic opera country along said Spanish Main, was quiescent, waiting for the intermittent things to happen, when one day in jogged a handsome lad astride a burro. He had a golden smile, and bright red hair, and every one cheered up at the sight of him. He said he was Dickey Maloney, and he was a particular friend of the whole wide world.

This mysterious young person spends money freely, opens a little shop, marries the most coveted senorita, and is the casus belli of a small revolution.

A colorful, cheerful peep into the life of the South American republics, with much picturesque scenery, and interesting types. Earle Willams, as Dickey Maloney, is seen from an entirely new perspective, and you approve of him. Opposite him in "Fortune's Mask" is Patsy Ruth Miller, whose brunette beauty exactly fits her role as Pasa Ortez.—Five reels.

"The Man from Downing Street"

Here is Earle Williams in a totally new type of role. He appears as Capt. Robert Kent of the British Secret Service, who is sent to India to find the cause of the leak in the government cable service by which important government messages find their way into the hands of the Indian revolutionists. In detecting the traitor he runs into a nest of baffling Oriental intrigue—incidentally falls in love with a charming young English girl. The end of the picture comes as a complete surprise. The production has been put on in the most lavish fashion, with sumptuous Hindoo interiors and luxurious cafes as the backgrounds for the action.—Five reels.

"Lucky Carson"

In "Lucky Carson" Earle Williams runs the gamut of human experience. At the beginning of the picture he is a down and outer just on the point of ending his miserable life. But "Lady Luck" takes a hand in his affairs. In a few short months he is known as "Luck Carson," the man who cornered cotton and made a fortune. Then Carson finds that, although successful in the world of affairs, he is unlucky in love.—Five reels.

"The Silver Car"

"The best Earle Williams picture since 'The Fortune Hunter,'" is the unanimous opinion of all who have seen this splendid photoplay. As Anthony Trent, international swindler with £5,000 on his head, who "goes straight" and saves the honor of a British statesman and wins his daughter as well, Mr. Williams is at his best. A spectacular, melodramatic play, just jammed full of love, romance and adventure and thrills galore.—Six reels.

BREAKING

"BREAKING HOME TIES" is a drama of life.

No matter what may stand between a man and his home, there is always that sweetly sympathetic yearning of the old folks for those who have left and the longing of the children for the protection of the home and the eternal strength of parental love.

In a moment of anger, this youth committed a deed that robbed him of his best friend and sweetheart—and tore him from home and parents. The old people lose all trace of him, but through the years of their loneliness and reverses their one bright hope is for the reunion of their family.

It's a story of rare beauty and strength, bringing smiles to turn tears into rainbows of happiness.

Inspired By The Heart Song of Centuries

EILI-EILI

"BREAKING HOME TIES" is an inspiring drama of hearts and the home, rivaling in its widespread appeal the strength of "Humoresque."

Its cast is nothing short of perfect to portray the various roles:

| | |
|---|---|
| Lee Kohlmar | Richard Farrell |
| Betty Howe | Rebecca Weintraub |
| Jane Thomas | Arthur Ashley |
| Maude Hill | Henry B. Schaffer |

Inspired by the opening words of the heart song of centuries, "Eili, Eili," the most poignant melody ever conceived of hearts, life and love.

Written, directed and produced by Frank N. Seltzer and George K. Rolands.

Recommended with enthusiastic confidence for all ages and classes of people, for it deals with life as we live it and concerns the things we all know.

"An Exciting Picture with a Romantic Plot, Liberally Spiced with Thrills, Well Directed and Handsomely Photographed—"

Motion Picture News

There are a number of thrills in the picture and some comedy relief. The capture of Trooper Ramsey (Earl Fox) by the gang of bootleggers; his forced return to headquarters and his disgrace and the scenes attending his expulsion from the Mounted are well worked out, Ramsey's finding of himself, his conquering of fear under the power of Fenton (Frank Losee) and his capture of two criminals forms the other highlight of the production. The shooting of one of the hootch gang by the villain is staged in fine manner.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

An exciting picture with a romantic plot, liberally spiced with thrills, well directed and handsomely photographed. "The Man She Brought Back" gives an entirely new twist to a Northwest Mounted story by making the hero a coward in the beginning of things, a very unusual angle and one that is cleverly developed; as under the influence of his fiancee's love and the burden of disgrace he bears, John Ramsey (Earl Fox) determines to conquer his fears, redeem himself or die in the attempt. The picture holds its interest from start to finish and should prove a likely box office asset.

Points of Appeal.—Apart from its adventuresome lure the film rivets one's attention by the psychological problem it presents in the unfolding of the hero's character and his manful struggle against the timidity with which nature has cursed him. He wins sympathy even in his weaker moods, for the impression is skillfully created that he is more to be pitied than blamed. And his final triumph makes all the bigger hit because he conquers fear, much more so than if he were of the usual type of leading man who over-rides all obstacles with careless ease from the first moment he appears on the screen. There is abundant suspense and a climax warranted to please everybody.

Cast.—Earl Fox gives a clean-cut, intensely dramatic performance as John Ramsey, Doris Miller is an attractive and thoroughly capable Margo, the support is excellent and the Canadian types are true to life.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are many beautiful exteriors, including a number of fine winter scenes, with admirable long shots and good lighting prevails. The continuity is smooth and the action travels at a brisk clip.

EXHIBITORS HERALD

As a photoplay of its type, this is interesting entertainment with Earle Fox playing the principle role; that of a recruit in the Northwest Division, who, after getting a perilous assignment is overcome by fear and later, through faith in the girl that loves him, he goes out into the wilderness and redeems himself by capturing the leaders of a gang of outlaw smugglers. The production is finely staged, abounds in good photography of the outdoor country and boasts an excellent cast for the various roles.

Mighty Flood Scenes; An Airplane Crash, A Railroad Wreck, Drama, Pathos, Romance, Luxury-and Boxoffice Value Unparalleled.

Lavishly staged perfectly directed and telling one of the most dramatic stories ever written, "ONE WEEK OF LOVE" will take its place at the top of the "Big Picture List" of 1923.

Here is one honest-to-goodness big special with plenty of heart appeal and a beautiful theme of mother love. Book it and boost it.—W. H. Trecker, Mutual Movies theatre, Cabery, Ill.—Small town patronage.

Universal

The Trap, with Lon Chaney.—It is one of the best we have run. Scenery excellent. Acting wonderful. A good picture to book and one your patrons should see.—W. E. Ruff, Storrs theatre, Storrs, Utah.—General patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—Priscilla sure is a dare-devil. One of the biggest and best pictures I have ever run, and it is a money getter. We ran this picture two days. Did good business.—G. D. Hughes, Liberty theatre, Heavener, Okla. —Smal town patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—Some picture, and patrons thought so too. Drew a good crowd for two days and my competition was a county fair at Bad Axe—Neale Clifford, Regent theatre, Dickerville, Mich.—Neighborhood patronage.

Once to Every Woman, with Dorothy Phillips.—Good. Dorothy Phillips always good. Business fair.—C. T. Winter, Eureka theatre, St. Louis, Mo.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—A very thrilling picture. The breaking dam scene is the finest thing of its kind I have ever seen—Charles Lee Hyde. Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—It is a wonderful production and something a little different It drew well here. Push it.—J. P. Doyle, New Academy theatre, Nunda, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean—Showed to very enthusiastic audience. One of the best pictures of the season. You can always figure on Priscilla Dean at the box office, and in satisfaction to your customers of 100 per cent entertainment—Glen W. Dickinson, Marshall Theatre, Manhattan, Kas.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—A truly wonderful picture with thrills aplenty. It pleases all classes and my business was very satisfactory on Conflict.—Susie E. Baxley, Star theatre, Arcadia, Fla.—Neighborhood patronage.

The Trap, with Lon Chaney—Good picture. Drew and pleased. Chaney gets over some marvelously good acting. Little boy deserves mention also—P. G. Estee, Fad theatre, Brookings, S. D—Neighborhood patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—Full of punch and pep. Pulls them in and no kicks on the way out. Special advertising. Business on this one good.—C. L. White, Arleta theatre, Portland, Ore.—Neighborhood patronage.

PRISCILLA DEAN and Noah Beery in a tensely dramatic scene from the Universal-Jewel Production "WILD HONEY"

WILD HONEY. Greatest water scene ever seen in pictures here. The scene of the water rushing on Miss Dean and her hero will make anyone sit up and take notice, and stay awake at night wondering how it was done without killing the star. It puts the real punch in the picture. Patronage, high class. Attendance, fairly good. M. F. Schnibben, Opera House, Florence, South Carolina

CONFLICT. Very good and gave good satisfaction. Log scene is great. Advertising; newspaper and handbills. Patronage; mixed, 3,500 population. Attendance; good. S. R. Peake, Pastime Theatre, Maquoketa, Iowa.

WILD HONEY. Excellent picture that satisfied everybody. A few parts were missing, but were not noticed much. Advertising; usual accessories. Patronage; mixed. Attendance; good. Jack Kaplan, Royal Theatre, South Fallsburg, New York.

REPUTATION. Did not see this one but our patrons were very well pleased and we did a fine business. Universal gives a fine line of publicity to work with. Advertising; slides, trailer, program, special lobby and scandal sheet, heralds. Attendance; very good. W. H. Pike, Majestic Theatre, Las Vegas, Nevada.

MAN TO MAN. An excellent western, pleased as well as "The Fox." Whenever we advertise Harry Carey we get them in. His pictures invariably please. Advertising; three sheets, heralds Patronage; rural. Attendance; good. D. B. Rankin, Co-operative Theatre, Idana, Kansas.

THE TRAP. Very good picture. Advertising: ones, photos, slides. W. H. Goodroad, Strand Theatre, Warren, Minnesota.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—One of the best jewels we have played. Played two days to good business. Patrons very much pleased—G. C. Arnold, Crystal theatre, Arena, Wis.—Neighborhood patronage.

Man To Man, with Harry Carey.—A high-class western in every respect, and we believe equally as good as his previous effort The Fox. The scenery in this will also please your patrons.—William H. Creal, Suburban theatre, Omaha, Neb. —General patronage.

No Woman Knows, with a special cast. —I have not shown a better picture in ten years. Universal-Jewels are really and truly jewels. This picture will live for years.—W. W. White, Jefferson theatre, Jefferson City, Tenn.—Neighborhood patronage.

Reputation, with Priscilla Dean.—One of the best the star has ever made. A 100 per cent production and should prove a box office attraction.—H. Green, Premier theatre, Buffalo, N. Y.—Neighborhood patronage

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—An A-1 picture. Pleased everybody. Book it and boost it.—J. M. Reynolds. Elwood Opera House, Elwood, Neb.—Neighborhood patronage.

Wild Honey, with Priscilla Dean.—Pleased all and is a good attraction. A colorful and rapid moving high class melodrama.—E. W. Werner, Warwick theatre, Kansas City. Mo.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—This is sure a great picture. Pleased 100 per cent. Boost it to the sky, for it will stand it.—D. F. Thornburg, Liberty and Overland theatres, Nebraska City, Nebr.—General patronage.

Reputation, with Priscilla Dean.—Here are a few of the remarks passed: "Fine." "Wonderful." "Great." "Best picture you have ever shown." Nuf sed. Book it, boys. It is there from every angle.—F. W. Horrigan, McDonald theatre, Philipsburg, Mont.—Mining town patronage.

Conflict, with Priscilla Dean.—Wonderful picture and drew good business due to advertising. Star not known here. Patrons report excellent. — George Vaughan, King George theatre, Port Colborne, Ont., Canada.

Once to Every Woman, with Dorothy Phillips.—This was an excellent picture for a small town and will do much toward the stopping of censorship. Would advise anyone to show this picture.—R. H. Stephens, Royal theatre, Sheridan, Ark.—Small town patronage.

No Woman Knows, with a special cast. —Wonderful picture Another one as good as Once to Every Woman and that's going some.—C. H. Smith, Electric theatre, Morning Sun, Ia.

Man to Man, with Harry Carey.—Book this one and boost it. Best crowd I'd had in months came out on this one—J. C. Johnson, Orpheum theatre, Haskell, Okla.—General patronage.

Once to Every Woman, with Dorothy Phillips.—A dandy story, and a well pleased crowd Star does not draw here. —Chas. Hyde, Grand theatre, Pierre, S. D.—Small town patronage.

BY OBSERVER.

This certainly is the day of the melodrama; every week or so a new one comes out. They are bringing back all the old stage thrillers and putting them into pictures, but making the pictures even more sensational than the stage productions were. And the public just eats them alive.

REGINALD DENNY

"The Kentucky Derby," the latest melodramatic offering, is adapted from Charles T. Hazey's oldtime stage success, "The Suburban." This is a thriller of the race track and all the usual accessories we have been taught to expect with it.

All Old-Time Features.

There is the crooked jockey who narrows the race, the horse that is tampered with, the poor but proud owner who will lose his home and everything if his horse does not win, the deep-dyed villain who is going to make a fortune and a getaway when the horse is tricked into losing the race, and the disinherited son, falsely accused of taking his father's money and returning just in time to discover the foul plot of the villain and win the race for father.

If you crave excitement you will get it in "The Kentucky Derby." If you like suspense, and thrills, and pathos, it is all there—and enough of each to satisfy you.

But our mothers and fathers who trembled with excitement over "The Suburban" weren't fed on half the sensationalism that we are given in "The Kentucky Derby," for they didn't have the big race. And it is some race in the picture—just the most realistic scenes you ever saw for they are real.

Filmed at Race Track.

They were taken at the Churchill Downs race track in Louisville when Morvich won the Derby. Perhaps some of you who did not win with Morvich may hate to be reminded of the fact.

But every true sportsman is going to thrill again and again as he sees the horses dashing around the track, and if you don't look out you will find yourself standing up in your seat at the theater urging the horses on.

Reginald Denny comes into his own in this picture and for the first time is starred in a feature. And from his performance we are glad to welcome him into the land of the stars and hope he will stay with us.

EXHIBITORS HERALD:

"Another winner! This ought to bring home the bacon. It has the atmosphere, the types and the acting of a well-made drama."

THE FILM DAILY:

"It is a good picture, will undoubtedly appeal to a good majority of picturegoers and will reach the 'fan' crowd particularly."

CHICAGO DAILY JOURNAL:

"'The Kentucky Derby' is sure-fire, straightaway . . . the sort of material to increase the popularity of its players and the company which produced it."

MOVING PICTURE WORLD:

"'The Kentucky Derby' should be a striking success. It will justify enthusiastic exploitation."

CHICAGO TRIBUNE:

"It's a thriller. There is plenty of action."

ORIGINALLY written a few months ago for the screen, Basil King's "The Dust Flower" has just been published as one of the late October novels. Within two weeks after its announcement it has become one of the BEST SELLERS—a rank that every one of Mr. King's novels have achieved.

As a story it is bound to have a tremendous appeal to women, and to men. As a motion picture it has everything. Beautiful Helene Chadwick, first as a child of the slums and then a wife of luxury; Claude Gillingwater and James Rennie.

There is a display of gowns that will dazzle.

AS A WHOLE.....Exceedingly artistic production
STORY.....Has tremendous theme based upon power of forgiveness
DIRECTION.....Generally very good
PHOTOGRAPHY.....Some splendid shots
LIGHTINGS.....Very good usually PLAYERS.....Lon Chaney gives probably the most superior performance of his long and important career. Something moved Harrison Ford. He never trouped as well before. Marguerite De La Motte satisfies. John Sainpolis gives unusual characterization as the villain.

"Shadows" is one of the most artistically made pictures and based upon one of the most unusual themes that has ever reached the screen* * * by their willingness to make and offer such a picture they deserve all the encouragement and support possible.

A SPECIAL TRIBUTE

George Blaisdell

Exhibitors Trade Review

THE premiere of "Shadows" at the Hotel Biltmore on the evening of October 27 was more than what conservatively may be described as a triumph for its producers. It was first-hand and first-class evidence of the growing importance of the independent division of the industry. As a production it will rank as a distinct achievement. It is a subject that will make the motion picture fame of some and fortify the position of others.

"Shadows" will do more than that. Its influence, its beneficient influence, will not be confined to the friends of the motion picture. It will reach into and confuse if it does not confound the ranks of the comparatively few but exceedingly voluble antagonists of the screen. It will hold up the hands and sustain the promises of Will Hays and his associates.

What is of major importance is that it may be seen and enjoyed by the legion of older screen patrons as well as by a host of new ones.

"Shadows" is a picture that will stand analysis—from the viewpoint of story, of preparation for the screen, of direction, of playing, and of final polishing. Its titles ring true—all the way. There are smiles for all and tears for the many, but the story strikes a deep human note—of respect for the conventions of society.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

Daniel Frohman remarked years ago in an after-dinner speech following a banquet attended by motion picture men that "No great actor was ever made except in great part."

In "Shadows" the actor and the part meet. Harrison Ford is the actor and the character of John Malden the Minister in this adaption of Wilbur Daniel Steele's "Ching, Ching, Chinaman" is the part. It is a great part and "Shadows" is a great story.

Two other characterizations rank alongside that of Mr. Ford's: Lon Chaney as "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," and John Sainpolis as Nate Snow, the capitalist of the New England seashore village of Urkey. But these two are older players and have had their day in court. No one who has seen Mr. Sainpolis in "The Great Lover" has any doubt of the artistry of which he is master.

Mr. Chaney has been seen in a number of great characterizations—as the Cripple in "The Miracle Man," to name just one of these. Yet it must be borne in mind that the role assigned to him in the present instance is one of unusual difficulty; and because of that fact his triumph will be conceded to be all the greater.

When writing of "Shadows" it is but a natural mental process to revert to "The Miracle Man." Not that the two subjects are allied in theme; for in the Schulberg production there is nothing of the supernatural, with its illusion dispelling tendency. There is, however, an abundance of the spiritual, which is greater or less degree finds response in every breast. But the two stories are as one in their major appeal.

Just a word as to the manner in which the mystery of the tale is sustained. The denouement in its quality of surprise is worthy of an O. Henry story.

roduction Highlights—The marvelous racterization by Lon Chaney The nan appeal.

Drawing Power—Should go big in ry community.

SIDE from the entertainment values of this picture, an adaptation of ilbur Daniel Steele's prize story which eared in the Pictorial Review under name of "Ching, Ching, Chinaman"— e from its spiritual quality, its human t, its pathos and sentiment, one must sider that it gives Lon Chaney, an op- unity to demonstrate his remarkable atility for characterization.

s strongest points are Chaney's char- rization, the atmosphere and the spir- quality.

The Morning Telegraph

REVIEWED BY HELEN POLLOCK.

Lon Chaney is at his best as the Chinaman in "Shadows." His sense of characterization goes beyond the mere outward adjuncts of make-up and one believes him really to be Yen Sin, the Mongolian.

For the producers of "Shadows" it may be said that this production is characterized by a rather unusual refinement of feeling. They have avoided the blatant and obvious wherever it was possible and thus have added much to the verisimilitude of the film. The audience will believe in the story by reason of the good taste shown in its development. The cast is a good one, and besides Lon Chaney in the principal role, includes Harrison Ford, Marguerite De La Motte and John Sainpolis.

The piece is a credit to its producers. Undoubtedly this film has the elements of popular appeal, and should prove a feather in the cap of its makers, as well as an extra plume in the head-gear of its chief actor "Shadows" is a worthy achievement

EXHIBITORS HERALD

This is an excellently made picture so filled with heart interest, romance and thrills as to make it a good attraction for any exhibitor. It abounds with exploitation angles and has an added value by being built on a widely read story. Directed by Tom Forman.

BOX office values were evidently carefully considered by B. P. Schulberg in selecting story, cast and title for "Shadows," his second production for distribution by the Al Lichtman Corporation. The picture was given its premiere before a critical audience in New York last week and judging from the reception it received, will go more than well throughout the country.

"Shadows" is a picturization of Wilbur Daniel Steele's famous story "Ching, Ching, Chinaman," appearing originally in Pictorial Review. The direction was given over to Tom Forman and he has completed a task that satisfies.

The cast is unusually good and shows in selection the same care which marks the making of the picture. As a Chinese laundryman-philosopher, Lon Chaney is the outstanding figure and he gives to the character in keeping with his well recognized talents in such a role.

Moving Picture WORLD

REVIEWED BY ROGER FERRI

Getting over such subtlety and delicacy as the entertainingly human plot on which this latest Preferred Pictures; Inc., production, "Shadows," requires, constitutes a task rarely undertaken by any producer; yet Tom Forman, with the financial and moral support of B. P. Schulberg, undertook it and accomplished the feat with such astonishingly wonderful results that should establish this super special as one of the truly few beautiful and magnificent pictures of the current season. Certainly it is an artistic achievement of rare excellence.

Artistry and box office requirements are not always synonymous, for the solely artistic offering usually develops itself into a single class attraction. Not so with "Shadows," however, for in a careful study of this brilliant offering, the keen showman—the exhibitor who is quick to grasp the possibilities of the certain elements that contribute in the making of a money-getting proposition—this production embraces certain features which, properly capitalized, should register it as a magnet of unusual power.

With "Shadows" one can go the limit in promises of fine acting—notable characterizations that make impressively permanent showings that will not die out with the flitter of the last flicker; a lavish production reinforced with spectacularly realistic settings emphasized with thrillers that force you to take a firm grip on your seat, a story that will appeal mostly to the lover of the classics and interest those who delight in seeing the sensational and melodramatic.

That the message so cleverly communicated gets over is a tribute to Tom Forman and substantiates the contention embodied in advance notices that Lon Chaney in the role of Yen Sin is seen at his best. One distinction that cannot be taken away from this production is the fact that it is out of the ordinary in story value. Artistically, it is one of the truly great achievements of the motion picture industry.

Photographically, "Shadows" is consistent with the high class tone of the production in general. Its settings are typical of the locale of the story, while the lighting is flawless and particularly effective during the splendidly staged storm scene.

Motion Picture News

The Public Speaks

THESE are days of victory for the motion picture.

The people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts have smashed censorship into smithereens.

Alfred E. Smith has been elected Governor of New York State.

And everywhere illiberality is on the wane.

* * *

It is a waste of space to tell any motion picture man what the Massachusetts victory means to the cause we all have at heart.

But this should be said—and Mr. Hays has been prompt to say it, in no uncertain way—

That just so surely as we have at heart the great cause of the motion picture and its free expression, just so surely must we who make motion pictures accept fully the solemn responsibilities of free speech.

Let this be recorded as flatly as has been registered the will of the people of Massachusetts.

* * *

The victory for the motion picture is not confined to Massachusetts or to New York. It is countrywide.

The election, in the writer's humble but sincere opinion, was not a vote for parties, politics, or even for men.

The sweep in it—as always—was an undercurrent.

And—as always—the undercurrent was a protest.

A protest against illiberality.

* * *

Let the professional reformer read the handwriting on the American wall.

For surely even a bigot must read it.

It says: we, the American people, insist upon the privilege of working out our own salvation with our Constitution as a basis and through laws and institutions that truly reflect the will of the majority.

The American public may have an intelligence as feeble as the reformer paints it and would prefer it to be, but the American public knows these simple and great truths.

And that's just what the American public said on election day.

Important Statistics

IN this issue MOTION PICTURE NEWS starts publication of the results of the survey of the motion picture theatres of the United States, conducted in co-operation with the Babson Statistical Organization and Columbia University.

Every person connected with the industry should find something of interest in these figures. They mark the first attempt to compile authoritative statistics covering the industry as a whole.

In 1916, the NEWS, in conjunction with Famous Players, made a survey of a simpler sort, which brought out many interesting facts about the size and admission prices of theatres. This time, the entire industry has been included.

These figures have been needed badly. With the expert assistance of Roger W. Babson's statisticians, plus the prestige of Columbia University and the resources of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the need should be fully met.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THE list of pictures reviewed and selected by the National Board of Review for the week ending Nov. 4 includes two First National features, "Brawn of the North," which is the new Strongheart picture, and "The Dangerous Age"; Metro has Clara Kimball Young's "Enter Madame," and Stan Laurel's "Mud and Sand," a burlesque on "Blood and Sand"; Fox is represented by "The Love Gambler," a John Gilbert vehicle; Alla Nazimova's "Salome" is on the list for United Artists; and "Pawned," a Select picture, completes the list of features. Short subjects include "Baron Bragg and the Ogling Ogre," a Tony Sarg Almanac release, and "The Split Outfit," a Bob Bruce Wilderness Tale, both from Educational, and two Pathe subjects, "Dig Up," a Snub Pollard comedy, and Pathe Review No. 186. The little asterisk denoting especial merit goes to "Brawn of the North," "Mud and Sand" and "Salome."

* * *

NOW that "Oliver Twist" is safely launched on what promises to be a brilliant career, Harry D. Wilson, publicity and advertising director for Jack Coogan Productions, who has been in New York for several months, will return to his desk in Hollywood next week. En route to the coast, Wilson will stop in several key centres, including Indianapolis, Louisville, Chicago, Kansas City and other points, to confer with First National exploitation men regarding plans for forthcoming "Oliver Twist" campaigns.

* * *

INCIDENTALLY, we wonder whether the scenario readers have started to receive a flood of scripts based on the Hall-Mills murder case as yet. It seems as if nothing can get itself prominently in the public eye, whether it be a coal strike, a murder or a race riot, but what the scenarios pouring into the poor script readers' offices show the effects.

* * *

YEARS ago the mothers and grandmothers of our irrepressible flappers saw a play, entitled, "Adonis." In this play was the actor, Henry E. Dixey, who achieved immense popularity through possessing a nifty pair of legs. Dressed as he was in tights, the ladies were not slow to remark that occasionally a man might be blessed with eloquent legs. Dixey bounded into fame on them. He is still hale and hearty and appearing regularly every season upon the stage. The ladies of the old school have not forgotten him.

It is quite possible that their daughters and grand-daughters and maybe a number of the old girls, themselves, will flock to see "Douglas Fairbanks in Robin Hood," the reason being that the inimitable Doug appears in a well fitting pair of tights as the gay robber and outlaw who turned a country upside down to save it for his king. And Doug's legs look very neat indeed. He is quite the niftiest romantic figure who has graced the screen in many a day. Certainly the girls will call him such.

* * *

SALEM, Mass., is all "hopped up" about motion pictures just now, and business is looking up there. The reason? George Melford and the "Java Head" company have just returned from several weeks spent there on location, and Salem exhibitors report business booming as a result.

CECIL B. DeMILLE received something like 25,000 ideas in the contest he recently conducted in cooperation with a Los Angeles newspaper. The winners have not been announced, but a preliminary canvass of the entries shows that business tales, historical romances, scientific yarns and married life dramas predominate very strongly. About 24,000 of them probably have a Babylonian orgy concealed in them at some point or another.

* * *

CECIL M. HEPWORTH'S historical production "Through Three Reigns," is without a parallel in motion pictures in that it records the events of the reigns of Victoria, Edward VII, and George V, all of which have been compiled from Mr. Hepworth's library of negatives, taken by himself in great part, with some of the shots twenty-four years old. Considering the development of reproducing pictures, the quality of the photography is astonishing. Some of the shots are the only pictorial records in existence, motion picture or otherwise. All of them have a historical value that is obvious. A few include the Paris Exposition of 1900, the Coronations of Edward VII and George V, the Kaiser reviewing English troops in Great Britain in 1902 and Queen Victoria's visit to Dublin in 1899.

The picture demonstrates the value of the camera as a historian. It behooves every producer who has a film carrying historical value to preserve his negatives. He should preserve every picture which has been catalogued as a real achievement. The world is making history every day. It is up to the screen to record these momentous impressions. The camera is always accurate—the camera never lies.

EUGENE H. ROTH, associate managing director of the California, Granada and Imperial theatres, San Francisco, contributes a column to the San Francisco Daily News in which he states that "we are now on the threshold of one of the most important steps ever made in the drama of the silver sheet. This forward step brings the era of greater stories in photoplays—the era of authors in motion pictures. The big producers of the country have listened attentively to the demands of the progressive exhibitor, who is daily pulsing the public requirement of bigger and better moving pictures. As a result, the authors have come into their own; they are now being adequately paid for their brains; therefore, they are concentrating on motion picture stories and confining the themes in perfectly rounded out scenarios that will better standardize the motion picture of the future." Mr. Roth certainly agrees with Mr. Shakespeare that "the play's the thing." And both men are absolutely right.

THE citizenry of Massachusetts journeyed to the polls Election Day and showed their disapproval of motion picture censorship by defeating the Referendum anent Screen Censorship. The Hays forces were indefatigable in their labor to repel the invasion of the fundamental rights of the people to choose their own kind of entertainment without censorship. The Committee of Massachusetts Citizens Against Censorship, of which Charles H. Cole is Chairman, were well organized. Precinct workers and field men cooperated with every exhibitor in the State.

The "machinery" was well organized through the cooperation of the Hays forces and the Massachusetts committee. And what was the result? 350.000 against Censorship.

Those who would place a yoke around our necks have doubtless learned something about the psychology of human nature. We might be led to the well, but we cannot be compelled to drink.

Statistics of the Motion Picture Industry

Methods Used in Making Babson-Columbia-News Survey of Film Situation Told

By L. C. Moen

ACCURATE statistics on the motion picture industry have been, since the first beginnings of the business, about as rare as snakes in Ireland.

At no time has any person in the industry really known how many theatres were in operation, how many pictures were made in the course of a year, how many patrons visited the theatres in the course of a year, what amount of capital was invested in the industry, or any of the facts so vital to the intelligent conduct of any business. As compared to the statistical material prepared by such associations as the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, for instance, this has been a pretty poor showing.

This condition has been all the more serious because of the fact that there has been a quantity of pseudo-statistics, based upon slight foundation, if any, which has been commonly accepted, both in the industry and out of it.

Such figures, for instance, have been to the effect that motion pictures are the fifth largest industry, that the annual income is a billion a year, that there are 25,000 theatres in the United States, that 20,000,000 people attend motion pictures every day—statements so absurd that it is difficult to understand their wide acceptance. Small wonder that the industry has enjoyed so little confidence from the public, and, more particularly, from sound financial interests.

The existence of these false statistics, and the absence of more correct ones, has worked the industry much direct harm, including the following:

1. Legislators, believing the motion picture industry to be abounding in wealth, have taxed it out of all proportion to actual earnings, in every branch.

2. The public, under a similar misapprehension, does not look upon the industry as cordially as it once did.

3. All manner of film swindles have been perpetrated on the public, such as local photoplay producing schemes, bogus schools of motion picture acting and scenario writing, and the like, all of which have been sold on the strength of the false notions current concerning easy money in the motion picture business.

4. It has been made doubly difficult to adjust conditions within the industry to new economic conditions, through lack of definite information; such a matter, for instance, as the matter of reducing film rentals.

It was with these facts in view that the Babson Statistical Organization, the world's largest concern dealing in business facts; Columbia University, represented by Rowland Rogers, head of the department of photoplay production, and MOTION PICTURE NEWS, represented by William A. Johnston, the editor and publisher, set out last March to determine, if possible, some of the salient facts concerning the statistical side of the motion picture industry

The survey was first mapped out along broad, general lines. This preliminary outline was then subdivided into groups of material, one portion to be gotten from exhibitors, another from distributors, still another from producers, and other miscellaneous facts to be gotten from special sources.

The next step was then the preparation of a suitable questionnaire to be sent to the exhibitors of the United States, from which information concerning the theatres of the country might be compiled.

This was a vital step, and took a considerable period of time. A questionnaire was mapped out roughly and submitted to the Sales Territories department of the Babson Statistical Organization, to the Industries department and to the Motion Picture division, for consideration from every statistical angle. Once these experts had agreed on a uniform questionnaire, it was submitted to various members of the staff of MOTION PICTURE NEWS to be studied from different angles. Rowland Rogers, of Columbia, himself a former exhibitor, made several additions. Then the questionnaire was submitted to a number of exhibitors, to get their point of view.

As a result of all this, a series of questions was finally evolved which seemed to cover the required ground, without asking for information which the exhibitors might hesitate at answering.

Copies of this blank were then printed and mailed to more than 10,000 exhibitors throughout the country. If he wished, the exhibitor had the option of mailing this to Babson's without filling in his name, theatre name or address—but in all the vast number of questionnaires returned, a mere handful, less than one per cent. were sent anonymously. This, in itself, added greatly to the value of the results, since questionnaires sent anonymously might not be absolutely bona fide.

Another gratifying feature, to those conducting the survey, was the painstaking and careful manner in which nearly all of the questionnaires were filled in. There was every evidence that the exhibitors co-operating in the survey had given the matter careful thought and had endeavored to make their questionnaires accurate and faithful reports of their theatres.

From every type of theatre, large and small, and from every section of the country, North, South, East, and West, the questionnaires poured in for weeks. The final result was an absolutely representative showing which, from a sound statistical standpoint, may be taken as entirely characteristic of all of the 14,000 theatres in the country. Had the questionnaires come mainly from one type of theatre, or from certain sections of the country only, they would not have mirrored the industry as a whole, but in this case the tabulated totals may be safely taken as an index of the exhibiting end of the industry.

Further corroboration of this was found in the fact that the questionnaires were tabulated in groups, as they came in, taken absolutely at random, and each group gave very substantially the same results, with only trifling variations.

The first two sets of figures, headed in the questionnaire. "Your Theatre" and "Your Admission Prices," are presented here this week. The remainder will follow in weekly installments, with charts illustrating the whole.

These figures, it must be remembered, are merely those on the first branch of the survey, and more far-reaching conclusions will be drawn when the information from other sources has been completely compiled, so that the industry as a whole can be analyzed.

Taking up first the matter of seating capacity, tabulation of the questionnaires showed the following percentages of houses of various sizes:

| | |
|---|---|
| 0 to 250 seats | 26.88% |
| 251 to 500 seats | 36.91% |
| 501 to 1,000 seats | 27.44% |
| 1,001 to 1,250 seats | 3.20% |
| 1,251 to 1,500 seats | 2.37% |
| 1,501 to 2,000 seats | 2.23% |
| More than 2,000 seats | 0.97% |

Applying these figures to a total of 14,000 theatres, (which figure is being used pending final data), we have the following:

| | |
|---|---|
| 0 to 250 seats | 3,763 |
| 251 to 500 seats | 5,167 |
| 501 to 1,000 seats | 3,842 |
| 1,001 to 1,250 seats | 448 |
| 1,251 to 1,500 seats | 332 |
| 1,501 to 2,000 seats | 312 |
| More than 2,000 seats | 136 |

The next set of figures relates to the number of days each week which the theatre is open, and gives the following results:

| | |
|---|---|
| Open 1 day | 6.87% |
| Open 2 days | 13.01% |
| Open 3 days | 10.38% |
| Open four days | 5.42% |
| Open 5 days | 2.33% |
| Open 6 days | 30.13% |
| Open 7 days | 31.87% |

Applying these figures to the total number of theatres, as in the former instance, develops the following:

| | |
|---|---|
| Open 1 day | 962 |
| Open 2 days | 1,821 |
| Open 3 days | 1,453 |
| Open 4 days | 758 |
| Open 5 days | 326 |
| Open 6 days | 4,218 |
| Open 7 days | 4,462 |

The total number of people employed, including manager, musicians, and others, resulted in the following percentages:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 person | 1.20% |
| 2 persons | 3.15% |
| 3 persons | 9.28% |
| 4 persons | 16.62% |
| 5 persons | 14.97% |
| 6 persons | 13.92% |
| 7 persons | 8.09% |
| 8 persons | 5.24% |
| 9 persons | 4.94% |
| 10 persons | 4.79% |
| 11 persons | 2.10% |
| 12 persons | 1.95% |
| 13 persons | 1.04% |
| 14 persons | 1.94% |
| 15 persons | 1.94% |
| More than 15 persons | 8.83% |

Reducing this to terms of theatres gives the following number with the various numbers of employes:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 person | 168 |
| 2 persons | 441 |
| 3 persons | 1,299 |
| 4 persons | 2,327 |
| 5 persons | 2,096 |
| 6 persons | 1,949 |
| 7 persons | 1,133 |
| 8 persons | 734 |
| 9 persons | 692 |
| 10 persons | 671 |
| 11 persons | 294 |
| 13 persons | 145 |
| 12 persons | 273 |

Censorship Is Defeated in Massachusetts

Referendum Results in Rejection of Measure by Immense Plurality

THE referendum on state censorship of motion pictures in Massachusetts has resulted in a sweeping and decisive victory for the opponents of the censorship measure. Early predictions were that the proposal for state censorship would be defeated by a plurality of from 350,000 to 400,000. The plurality of votes in favor of the rejection of the censorship measure far outnumbered the pluralities given in any of the other questions before the people, including such important issues as the election of Governor, United States Senator, state legislators, state enforcement of the Volstead act, etc. Early Thursday afternoon with returns in from 1386 voting precincts out of 1407 the figures on the question of state censorship stood as follows: In favor of adoption, 201,141; against adoption, 528,709.

Another feature of the referendum was that the only localities showing a disposition towards approving of state censorship were rural towns in which motion pictures are not shown. The big cities and larger towns were uniformly large in their pluralities rejecting the proposed measure. Boston voted "No" by a plurality of more than 80,000; Fall River by more than 10,000; and Springfield by about the same as Fall River's.

Only secondary in interest to the actual outcome of the vote on censorship is the fact that this is the first real test that has ever been given the matter of censorship before the people of any single state in the Union. That the people of Massachusetts have definitely and overwhelmingly put themselves on record as against the principle and practice of state censorship is hailed as of utmost significance in presaging like action in many other states where censorship is now practised as result of legislative enactment or where measures for state censorship are likely to be proposed in the future.

The news of the defeat of censorship in Massachusetts was the occasion of great enthusiasm among the executives of the various branches of the motion picture industry. Everywhere the rejection of state censorship of the screen was hailed as a splendid and smashing victory for the principle of freedom of expression in all lines of endeavor. The defeat of the Massachusetts proposal was characterized as by far the most decisive blow that has yet been struck at those forces who would shackle the screen by the bonds of arbitrary political control. The victory was also seen in a much larger and broader sense as a public protest against the growing spirit of restrictive governmental paternalism in all its many shades and forms. Nor was the enthusiasm confined to those affiliated with the film industry. Newspaper editors and people prominent in professional and political life took the occasion to congratulate the opponents of the measure on their effective work and to rejoice in this unmistakable endorsement by the people of Massachusetts of one of the fundamental tenets of our American democracy.

It must be said that the citizens' committee headed by General Cole turned the trick with the aid of ninety-two per cent. of the Massachusetts press.

Up to a month before the election exhibitors did practically nothing except to appoint Judge Brackett as counsel, but when the exhibitors got started they went strong in hand with citizens' committee.

The campaign wound up with a whirlwind fight. Speakers talked in every theatre in the state, practically. Propaganda was spread by word of mouth, circulars were used and outdoor shows on busy street corners in downtown Boston and other cities were utilized. News reels, etc., sandwiched with antifilms quoting Harding, Hughes and others.

John M. Casey, chief of Boston Licensing Division in the Mayor's office, a strong opponent of state censorship, and one of the sponsors of the Boston plan, cooperation between local authorities and the National Board of Review, worked out in New York two years ago, issued the following statement after the election.

"The result of the vote from all over the State as shown by the returns, proves that the theatre-going public can be trusted in the selection of their amusement. We have been told by the advocates of censorship that the public as a whole are demanding censorship of motion pictures, which statement we who opposed would not accept.

"The vote shows we were right in demanding that the amusement public be given the opportunity to vote directly on this question and determine the issue at once and for all time. The overwhelming plurality means, in my opinion, the death knell of State boards of censorship in the entire United States, and as usual Massachusetts leads the way in stifling legislation that means the curtailing of liberty, free speech, and free press whether printed or screened.

"Personally, I feel that every vote registered against censorship as proposed, was an endorsement of the plan which we have consistently followed in this city, and which has become known as the "Boston Plan." It has been adopted by many cities and towns throughout the country, and has been worked out on the most sensible basis possible, that of close cooperation between the local authorities and the National Board of Review."

The following statement was issued on Wednesday from the office of Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America:

"Censorship of motion pictures has been defeated in Massachusetts in a direct vote of the people by a majority of three hundred and forty thousand. This overwhelming vote against censorship is a splendid response to the appeal of the Press and citizens of that state that the Commonwealth of Massachusetts stand against this undue political aggression. Just as certainly is it a definite and unmistakable challenge to the motion picture industry to carry out its program for its own continual improvement in the full discharge of its duty to the public. This responsibility is accepted by the industry in the spirit of highest service and it will in grateful earnestness fully discharge this duty."

The following statement was also issued on Wednesday afternoon from the national headquarters of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America with the information that it had been forwarded to the theatre owners throughout the state of Massachusetts with the advice to have the local editors publish it as an indication of the gratitude of the theatre owners to the people of Massachusetts for s overwhelmingly rejecting state censorship o the screen:

"The defeat of Motion Picture Censorshi in Massachusetts at the hands of the voters i that state yesterday is a triumph for Ameri canism and the inherent right of free speec and free expression. Thinking American everywhere regard the censorship of the scree with mingled feelings of suspicion and disgust. They know that it threatens the freedom o speech and the freedom of the Press, so in separably associated with the founding an development of our Republic. They know that the Motion Picture Screen is the visualized development of the Press—The Screen Press of America. They know that the control of this great medium of expression which brings its visualized messages to millions of people daily, speaking through the universal language of the eye, is a menace to liberty and opposed to Jefferson's immortal expression that a 'Free Press is Liberty's Greatest Bulwark.'

"The American people will not submit to a political censorship of the Press in any of its divisions. They know it invites disaster. The open deliberate action of the People of Massachusetts yesterday in defeating censorship of the motion pictures proves this. This verdict for a free Press and a free Screen will have a salutory effect in all parts of the country and will eventually eliminate censorship everywhere and leave the Screen with its wonderful powers for public service free and untramelled in the service of the people of Nation, State and Community.

"We congratulate the People of Massachusetts on their sound American verdict on this question. The Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Massachusetts aided by the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of America, with the cooperation of other divisions of our industry and many freedom loving people and organizations in Massachusetts are responsible for this great victory for Press and Screen freedom, thus insuring the preservation of popular rights against all menacing influences."

The censorship forces already talk of reintroducing the bill in the next legislature, practically call General Cole dishonest, and predict an early passage of a national law.

E. Tallmadge Root, executive secretary of Massachusetts Federation of Churches, issuing a statement on the defeat, said: "The contest which is just ended is unparallelled in Massachusetts history. Catholic and Protestant have stood shoulder to shoulder, an achievement worth all the effort of the contest. Cleaner films are insured. It was only the assurance that the industry itself under Hays intended to correct the depths of indecency and vulgarity to which it is conceded the movie magnates had descended, that has led a majority of the voters to give the industry a longer trial. If this result is not speedily forthcoming, the enactment of the law is only postponed. We believe the voters have been misled. The law itself has been completely misrepresented. It has been impossible to secure adequate space for the corrections. We believe the reintroduction of the law in the next Legislature would be justified, and that the facts regarding the contest in Massachusetts render certain the early adoption of a national law by the Congress of the United States."

Rowland States His First National Policy

New General Manager Contemplates No Radical Changes; No Extensive Producing Company

THE announcement of J. D. Williams' resignation from the general-managership of Associated First National Pictures and of Richard A. Rowland's succession to that office, published in last week's columns of the trade press, has left the trade in a questionable state of mind as to just what policies the new general-manager would pursue. One of the most persistent rumors consequent upon the change in the general-manager's office was that under the new regime First National would launch an extensive producing organization. In a statement issued this week Mr. Rowland announces exactly what he contemplates doing as First National's general-manager and gives concise answer to the queries that have beset members of the trade during the past week.

Briefly, there will be no radical changes effected. The independent producer will remain, as in the past, First National's principal source of supply. It is not planned to build up any vast producing organization with studios but simply to assist directors and independent producers of promise to enter production. Several methods of national advertising are being tested with a view to determine just the sort of advertising which will produce the greatest results at the box office. Rowland also sounds a note of economy when he states "I am firmly convinced that care and intelligence in selection of story and production have more to do with successful pictures than a lavish expenditure of spectacular settings. Until negative costs come to represent less waste, there will never be the proper profit in motion pictures for producer, distributor or exhibitor." Mr. Rowland's statement follows:

"In accepting the position of General Manager of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., from which Mr. J. D. Williams has just resigned, I realize that I am assuming responsibility that few men can hope to fulfil so completely and satisfactory as did 'J. D.' If I can win the degree of confidence, loyalty and cooperation of the trade which he inspired I shall be more than content. In leaving First National to embark upon his more personal enterprises, Mr. Williams takes with him my own and my associates' best wishes for the success he so well deserves. There is ample room in this great industry for men with the vision and force to achieve which has distinguished his career with First National.

"Our company, with which I have been associated since its inception, is, as is well known, cooperative in nature. Briefly stated, my policy will be to execute the wishes of our Franchise Holders as crystalized by the board of directors and executive committee elected by them. There will be no radical changes because of my new conection with the firm.

"First National has reached its prominent place in the industry in five short years because the men who founded and built it realize the necessity for the service such an organization can and must render to justify its existence. The personnel of the Executives, Board of Directors and Executive Committee, who are: Robert Lieber of Indianapolis, President; J. B. Clark of Pittsburgh, First Vice-President; Jacob Fabian of Paterson, Second Vice-President; John H. Kunsky of Detroit, Third Vice-President; H. O. Schwalbe, chairman of Executive Committee and Secretary-Treasurer; A. H. Blank of Des Moines; Col. Fred Levy of Louisville; N. H. Gordon of Boston; J. G. Von Herberg of Seattle; I. H. Rubin of Minneapolis, assures the same continuity of ideals and service upon which our company was founded and has thrived.

"Associated First National is, first of all, a distributing organization absolutely devoted to keeping the market open to the independent producers of meritorious pictures. The independent production has been, is, and we hope, will remain our principal source of supply. Reports that we are going into production on a big scale have recently been widely circulated. It is true that we may produce some pictures in accordance with certain ideas formulated by our directors at the recent meeting, but such production will take the direction of assisting directors and independent producers of promise to enter production rather than for our company to build up a vast organization and studios and itself become a big competitor in the production field.

"We represent a great many fine theatres which offer a ready market. We cannot possibly produce enough pictures to supply these theatres, which require really big time attractions. Our experience has demonstrated that the individual producer who devotes his entire time and attention to the making of his pictures, one by one, will turn out a more artistic product than we could hope to do in mass production. Therefore the independent producer will always find an outlet through our organization for the very good reason that our future welfare and his own are dependent upon each other. For example, we have recently contracted with M. C. Levee, president of the United States, for two pictures to be directed by Maurice Tourneur, the first of which will be Crittenden Marriot's extraordinary novel of romance and adventure 'The Isle of Dead Ships.' Allen Holubar will also do 'The White Frontier' at the United Studios. Edwin Carewe is at present completing a picture at the Biograph Studios, the title of which has not been decided upon. Sam Rork and Jimmie Young left for the coast last week with a contract for several James Young Productions. Mr. Young has still to direct 'Trilby,' for Richard Walton Tully, before beginning upon his own series. Negotiations are under way with several other directors and producers, and while our company is interested with these gentlemen, it is upon much the same general lines as our former production affiliations. In a word, our policy will be to encourage capable directors to improve their production, for there is no doubt of the strong public demand for better and more intelligently made pictures.

"With the demand for a constantly improving grade of pictures, there has also arisen the necessity for some sort of national advertising and exploitation of these more expensive productions. Our company is seeking a way to spend money upon national advertising which will prove of real benefit at the box office. We realize the difficulty and complexity of the problem and are testing several methods with the object of ascertaining what kind of advertising to use and how much money to spend in order to benefit without burdening the exhibitor with increased rentals. After all is said and done, national advertising which does not increase theatre business is a loss and not a gain to the industry. The really good picture will, to a great extent, sell itself because of word of mouth advertising.

"Our exploitation staff has now been functioning for several months and the splendid energy and initiative of our field exploitation agents has brought many commendatory letters in response to inquiries we have made of exhibitors as to the value to them of this corps of trained exploitation men.

"In conclusion," says Mr. Rowland, "Associated First National will undergo no radical changes because of my connection with it. Any production experience I may have gained will be devoted to the assistance of our independent producers. I am firmly convinced that care and intelligence in selection of story and production have more to do with successful pictures than lavish expenditure of spectacular settings. Until negative costs come to represent less waste, there will never be the proper profit in motion pictures for either producer, distributor or exhibitor."

N. Y. Governor-Elect to Be T. O. C. C. Honor Guest

CONCURRENT with the announcement that S. L. Rothafel will personally supervise and direct the entertainment and divertissement of the Third Annual Supper Dance of the T. O. C. C., comes official word that Alfred E. Smith, Governor-Elect of New York, has accepted the invitation to be the guest of honor of the Theatre Owners on the night of December 2nd.

"Roxie" promises to outdo some of his most daring innovations in artistic conception in keeping with the season's social event. Something distinctively original and different is assured in lighting effects and the decorations, it is said, will be of an out-of-the-ordinary character.

It is understood that in the Governor-Elect's party, will be other personalities well known to the public.

Better Motion Picture Week Planned

The first week in December is National Better Motion Picture Week. The National Motion Picture League expects to cooperate in every way possible. The pictures endorsed by the League represent the very best efforts of the industry.

Any producer who will communicate with the offices of the League will be given full instruction as to how to participate in an exploitation parade. Each producer whose pictures have been endorsed may contribute banners, floats, ballyhoos and other tie-ups for the endorsed pictures in the line of march.

The League has representatives in practically all the large cities who will cooperate direct with exchanges in conducting similar parades, the only requisite being that all pictures entering the parade bear the endorsement of the League.

Information may be had at parade headquarters, National Motion Picture League, 1819 Broadway, New York City.

Iowa-Nebraska Exhibitors Hold Convention

Delegates from Two States Discuss Problems in Two Day Omaha Session

THE third annual convention of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners of Iowa and Nebraska was held at the Hotel Castle, Omaha, November 1 and 2. It brought out a large number of exhibitors and the sessions proved highly interesting and instructive.

Leonard Trester of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce officially welcomed the delegates at the opening session. He was followed in the afternoon by Mayor James C. Dahlman of Omaha. Others who addressed the convention were:

Dr. Thomas G. Patten of New York, representing Will H. Hays; Harold Horne, C. R. Osborne, vice-president Omaha Film Board of Trade; J. E. Kirk, secretary M. P. T. O., Nebraska; A. R. Pramer, president M. P. T. O., Nebraska; Dr. George E. Condra, State University of Nebraska, and A. J. Moeller of New York City, business manager of the M. P. T. O. A.

Mr. Patten said, in part:

"Our organization is viewing the motion picture industry from the exhibitor's standpoint. It is our desire to promote intelligent co-operation between the industry and the public. The producers and distributors are striving for harmonious relations with the exhibitors.

"I believe that the industry wants quality and I believe that every motion picture audience in this country will respond when quality is offered. We should be patient with those things which seem to be irremediable.

"Mr. Hays wants me to assure you that the organization which I represent is anxious to iron out the problems that cause friction. Active and hearty co-operation is what we desire and are willing to promote.

"There are possibilities and potentialities in the industry that none here can grasp. I venture to assert that ten years from now there will not be a man, woman or child in this country who will not be receiving some benefit through the medium of the motion picture.

"Speaking for the producers, I will say that neither effort nor expense will be spared to obtain better bills, better actors. The producers will accommodate themselves to any public taste.

"You as exhibitors are the real point of contact between the public and the producer, and I wish you would remember that you have the whole American public as a possible clientele. The exhibitor should lend a listening ear to comments of patrons. You can approximate the undercurrent of opinion as to what the public wants."

A. J. Moeller said, in part:

"The value of organization to the theatre owner is very manifest. This is the only business of any considerable size where the production end, or the manufacturing division, seeks to control that section which constitutes the outlet to the public. The manufacturer of rails and locomotives and railroad cars and other material entering into the construction and operation of railroads, has never attempted to control the railroad systems of this country.

"Yet, in some instances, the manufacturer of a motion picture film assumes the questionable right to dictate to the theatre owner what kind of film he should or should not present to his patrons—the American public—and in every conceivable way attempts to fasten upon the theatre owner an element of control that is obnoxious and un-American.

"The control of distribution has been the bugbear in the industry for some time, but through the powers of intelligent organization, operating along constructive lines, theatre owners have been able to prevent this trustification up to the present, and hope, by the introduction of new processes that will guarantee a freer and better distribution of pictures, to entirely avoid it and hold the theatres of this country absolutely within the service of the people."

A. R. Pramer of Omaha was re-elected president of the Motion Picture Theatre Owners' Association of Nebraska. Other officers elected were: C. E. Williams of Omaha first vice president; Frank Houston of Tekamah, Neb., second vice president; J. F. Kirk of Omaha (re-elected), secretary; H. A. Hayman of Grand Island, Neb., treasurer.

Brief News Notes From the West Coast by Wire

ARRANGEMENTS are being completed by Milton H. Hoffman, general manager of the Metro studios, and J. C. Jessen, for a film golf tournament to be held in the near future at a course near Los Angeles. All people identified with the film industry will be eligible to enter this handicap. Two permanent trophies and numerous other prizes will be awarded at a dinner following the tournament. A permanent organization for a semi-annual tournament will be made.

Sarah McLean Kerrigan, mother of Warren Kerrigan and W. W. Kerrigan, manager of the Mary Pickford company, died of paralysis Friday night, at the age of 70. Warren was called to Los Angeles from Milford, Utah, where he was playing in "The Covered Wagon."

Phil Goldstone has made a contract with Snowy Baker for a series of human interest features. The first goes into production this week directed by Howard Mitchell, late of Fox, and is to be titled "Pals." Baker will use his famous horse, Boomerang.

W. E. Shallenberger, president of Arrow, is expected in Los Angeles next week.

A dispatch to the Los Angeles Times stated that Louis B. Mayer and Reginald Barker productions would probably go to J. D. Williams' new organization. The story was denied at the Mayer studios. Mayer and Barker are now in New York.

Charles Chaplin will direct a feature starring Edna Purviance for United Artists distribution. The story will be by Chaplin. Eddie Sutherland, assistant, is casting.

William Sistrom is here as business manager for the next Frank Borzage production for Cosmopolitan, to be made at the Ince studios.

Albany Board of Trade to Reorganize

THERE will be a meeting of the Film Board of Trade of Albany, N. Y., this week for the purpose of reorganization. The Board has been rather inactive for the last several months, but now plans to function even more strongly than in the past and to establish a closer cooperation between the exchanges.

The Board was formed three years ago at which time it was known as the Albany F. I. L. M. Club, changing its name to the Film Board of Trade about a year ago. The Board has been of vast assistance in straightening out disputes between exchanges and exhibitors and in bringing about a closer unity throughout the entire section it serves.

J. H. Hallberg Enters the Consulting Field

J. H. Hallberg, known for the last sixteen years as one of the leading electrical engineers in the motion picture industry as well as distributor of motion picture theatre equipment, has resigned as consulting engineer of the United Theatre Equipment Company and will devote his time in future to the promotion and sales of the various products designed and manufactured by him. This line of equipment includes motor generator sets, economizers, electrical lighting plants for theatres on a small feather-weight plant for the generating of current for small portable projectors.

In his new work Mr. Hallberg will act as consulting engineer on all problems connected with motion picture work both in laying out projection rooms in new theatres and also in the designing of special equipment which may be demanded under varying circumstances. He is anxious to get in touch with various dealers and theatre men of the country and renew the old relationship. Mr. Hallberg's present laboratories will be enlarged and his experimental work increased so that he will be in a better position than ever to operate this special service department which has always been a feature of his work.

In additon to motion picture enterprises, Mr. Hallberg has been very active in developing radio apparatus. At the present time he has under construction a set which will be suitable for installation in lobbies of theatres and other places. His newest device needs no external antenna for gathering messages, the entire receiving apparatus being enclosed in a cabinet the size of an ordinary phonograph box. This instrument includes a loud speaker of wonderful power.

From time to time Mr. Hallberg will make announcements to the trade which will be of great interest to the entire industry.

Grauman Honor Guest at Semon Dinner

LARRY SEMON, comedian, was host at an informal dinner at the Plantation Club in Los Angeles Friday night, October 27, with Sid Grauman the guest of honor. Invitations were limited to dramatic critics and city editors of the various Los Angeles newspapers and to representatives of trade papers.

All of the Semon comedies will hereafter be seen on the screens of Grauman theatres. "Golf" was the first of the series shown.

Statistics of the Motion Picture Industry

14 persons ..... 271
15 persons ..... 271
More than 15 persons .....1,236

The next question asked was: "Have you exhibitor competition?" The replies were as follows:

Exhibitor competition .....47.68%
No exhibitor competition .....52.32%

In terms of theatres, this would be:

Exhibitor competition .....6,675
No exhibitor competition .....7,325

The following question related to the type of theatre; whether city, first run, city, second run, neighborhood or small town. For some reason, however, less than half of those sending in questionnaires checked this question and since the conclusions based on this might be misleading, this is being deferred until it can be checked further.

With regard to admission prices, very complete returns were obtained. First, as regards matinee prices, the following averages were arrived at:

10 to 24 cents .....83.79%
25 to 49 cents .....15.24%
50 to 99 cents .....0.73%
$1.00 and more .....0.24%

This, in terms of theatres, is:

10 to 24 cents .....11,731
25 to 49 cents .....2,134
50 to 99 cents ..... 102
$1.00 and more ..... 33

On evening prices, the following average figures were tabulated:

10 to 24 cents.....56.44%
25 to 49 cents.....40.30%
50 to 99 cents ..... 3.07%
$1.00 and more ..... 0.19%

Or, in terms of theatres:

10 to 24 cents .....7,901
25 to 49 cents .....5,642
50 to 99 cents ..... 430
$1.00 and more ..... 27

It will be noticed that the number rising above the 25-cent level is greatly increased in the evening, with a considerable increase also shown in the 50 to 99 cent range. The number over one dollar appears as slightly less in the evening than in the afternoon, due to the fact that several of these theatres, operating on one scale only checked these prices only against this matinee. This, however, does not materially affect the major items.

One of the most significant items in the entire survey, that relating to the number of theatres which have lowered their admission prices recently, follows. The results are:

Have lowered prices recently .....32.55%
Have not lowered prices recently.....67.45%

Or, in numbers of theatres:

Have lowered prices recently .....4,557
Have not lowered prices recently .....9,443

Another much debated question, that of raising prices on special attractions, was also included. This showed the following:

Raise on specials .....55.80%
Do not raise .....44.20%

Or, again, reduced to number of theatres:

Raise on specials .....7,812
Do not raise .....6,188

The next group of figures, relating to the number of paid admissions daily, as reported by these theatres, is particularly interesting when compared with the seating capacity of these same theatres. The figures are as follows:

0 to 100 patrons daily .....15.63%
101 to 200 patrons .....33.87%
201 to 300 patrons .....16.23%
301 to 400 patrons ..... 7.82%
401 to 500 patrons ..... 8.62%
501 to 600 patrons ..... 4.61%
601 to 750 patrons ..... 1.80%
751 to 1,000 patrons..... 4.01%
1,001 to 1,500 patrons..... 2.80%
1,501 to 2,000 patrons.....2.41%
More than 2,000 patrons.....2.20%

This, in terms of theatres, gives:

0 to 100 patrons daily..... 2,188
101 to 200 patrons..... 4,742
201 to 300 patrons..... 2,272
301 to 400 patrons..... 1,095
401 to 500 patrons..... 1,207
501 to 600 patrons..... 646
601 to 750 patrons ..... 252
751 to 1,000 patrons ..... 561
1,001 to 1,500 patrons ..... 392
1,501 to 2,000 patrons ..... 337
More than 2,000 patrons ..... 308

A further summary of following questions will be continued in Motion Picture News next week.

Marie Corelli Story Is F.B.O. Release

"THELMA," a Chester Bennett production starring Jane Novak, will be issued by the Film Booking Offices of America late in November. The story is by Marie Corelli.

Miss Novak's cast is worthy of the powerful story. Barbara Tennant is cast in an important role. Vernon Steele plays the leading male role, and the remaining members of the cast are equally well known. Gordon Mullen plays "Lovissa," the hag; Vernon Steele appears as "Sir Philip"; Peter Burke as "Lorimer"; Harvey Clark as "Dyceworthy"; June Elvidge as "Lady Clara"; Wedgewood Nowell as "Lenox"; Harry Lounsdale as "Neville"; Pert Sprotte as "Olaf" and Jack Rollens as "Sigurd."

Reviewers Examination Set for N. Y.

New York State, through its Civil Service Commission, will shortly hold an examination in connection with the appointment of eight inspectors or reviewers to the State Motion Picture Censorship Commission.

These inspectors will receive salaries ranging from $1,600 to $2,500. Each person must be at least 25 years of age, and possess good eyesight. The subjects on which prospective reviewers will be examined include a practical test in viewing and analyzing selected films, and making a written report on the same.

In addition to this, the Civil Service Commission will require an interview which will be taken into consideration along with the written examination before marks will be announced in giving the standings of applicants.

Buddy Messenger Signs for New Series

Twelve-year old Buddy Messenger who gained notice for his splendid work in "Shadows" and in the Universal Jewel production "The Flirt," has been signed by Julius and Abe Stern for several pictures of boy life. He will start on his new affiliation next week.

Rogall Pictures to Deal with Dope Evil

ALBERT ROGELL has joined the ranks of independent producers and has established production quarters in Hollywood, Calif., where work is to commence at once on his first story.

According to the company's plans, Rogell, it is said, will direct and produce a series of six stories of feature length dealing with the dope evil and subjects of a similar nature.

Rogell is being backed in the production of his first story by Mrs. Angela C. Kaufman, well known philanthropist worker of Los Angeles, who during the past four years has been working constantly among narcotic addicts and other prisoners brought into the Los Angeles County jail.

In addition he is receiving the hearty support, it is said, of virtually every woman's club in Southern California.

Missouri M.P.T.O. Has Many Activities

An unusual series of activites on the part of the M. P. T. O. Missouri in the next two months, according to officials of the organization, will eclipse any other period in the history of the Missouri body. At present, the calendar of the M. P. T. O. M. is fairly boiling over with events of much importance.

Changes in territorial supervision of the state organization, the formation of new service plans, an executive meeting November 15 at Jefferson City, Mo., the state capitol, the combating of injurious legislation and the formation of a working agreement with the ministerial alliance and women's organizations for the mutual benefit of both parties—these are but part of the hurdles in the path of the Missouri body.

Far East Favors American Made Pictures

The nine theatres in Rangoon, Burma, use American films almost exclusively, according to a report from Consul J. P. Moffit of the United States Consular Service. This is also true of the three theatres in Mandalay.

Native laborers, for whom entertainment is furnished by their employers, are pleased with the American serials and melodramas that have plenty of thrills and action. Europeans, in the cities, are inclined to favor society drama.

Calcutta, former capital of India, is the distributing market for the wide expanse of territory, which includes Burma on the East and Mesopotamia on the West.

Mabel Julienne Scott in Feminine Lead

Mabel Julienne Scott, who just completed the dominating role in "The Power of a Lie," at Universal City, will appear in the leading feminine role of "The Abysmal Brute," which Universal will film with an all star cast headed by Reginald Denny.

"The Abysmal Brute" is from the virile pen of Jack London. Its atmosphere is largely that of the prize fighting world. Hobart Henley will direct it.

Selznick Picture Given Preview

Guests Present at Private Showing Acclaim "One Week of Love" as Triumph

WHEN Lewis J. Selznick recognizes one of his productions as worthy of the description "a special," he does not hesitate to show such a picture to his friends and contemporaries. In consequence, after "One Week of Love," a product of the Myron Selznick unit put in its appearance, the picture immediately won its way to a "private showing" which was held at the Ritz-Carlton on Friday, November 3, and the picture presented before approximately two thousand people.

While invitations were said to have been distributed with due care, the crowd swelled to the extent that the picture had to be run a second time to prevent disappointing those who came too late to be admitted to the Grand Ball room in time for the first run at nine. These guests, be it understood, came to see the picture, for no news of the personal appearance of a Selznick star or other celebrity, was broadcasted. Nevertheless, in the brilliant assembly were recognized authors, playwrights, actors, directors, critics and film executives. In addition celebrities from varied walks of life graced the occasion with their presence, including Sir Thomas Lipton, internationally famed sportsman.

Nevertheless, the "punch" of the evening was the picture itself. Two of Selznick's most popular stars, Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle, played the leading roles and won new laurels by giving as perfect performances as is possible for stars even of their well known abilities, to deliver.

There was, also, the novelty of this stupendous production, which was admirable from many angles. There is an interesting and well told story by Edward J. Montagne and George Archainbaud, splendid handling of a truly adequate cast directed by George Archainbaud, and a musical score that set off "One Week of Love," as a picture of real distinction.

Following the first showing, guests continued to enjoy the evening by adjourning to the Crystal Room, where Paul Whiteman's celebrated orchestra played for dancing. For several hours the floor was crowded with guests of the Selznick organization, while afterward, private parties were formed and not until the wee small hours did the festivities finally cease.

It was one of the most successful occasions of its kind to date, and those who were fortunate enough to be present were unanimous in pronouncing the evening quite worth while, and "One Week of Love" was the subject of unlimited praise.

Information Given on China Trade Act

UNDER the "China Trade Act of 1922" the film distributor who wishes to increase his trade in China should incorporate as a District of Columbia corporation. Income tax exemptions apply to American citizens resident in China on such stock as well as to Chinese citizens, if distributed as a special dividend each year. American firms whose State charters force them to pay taxes at home are thus entitled to compete with British, French, German and Japanese competitors. Regulations, and other information is contained in a trade information bulletin entitled "China Trade Act, 1922," prepared by the Far Eastern Division, Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. All film companies in the China export field should take advantage of this new Federal protection.

Nine Companies Launched for N. Y. Business

Nine motion picture companies incorporated during the past week, according to papers filed with the Secretary of State at Albany. These companies show the following capitalization and directors: Astoria Theatre Corporation, $500, Marcus Loew, Nicholas M. Schenck, David Bernstein, New York; Sunrise Comedies, Inc., $20,000, Benjamin Reisner, Jonas J. Smith, Rosie Behrman, Brooklyn; Atlantic Features, Inc., $500, A. N. Mann, M. M. Ebbestad, R. W. Wood, Jr., New York City; Avery Hopwood, Inc., $100,000, Avery Hopwood, Cleveland, Ohio; D. C. Josephson, A. S. Levy, New York; Troy Palace Amusement Corporation, Brooklyn, $10,000, Nathan and F. E. Zvirin, Emanuel Chanin, Brooklyn; American Film Developing Machine Corporation, $1,250,000, H. H. Meyers, E. F. Murphy, New York; H. N. Trimble, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Premier Palace, Inc., $500, Samuel Lesselbaum, Max Plesser, Edward M. O. Pratt, New York; Seneca Photoplays, Inc., $500, Lester Blankfield, Joseph Rothman, George F. Mattuck, New York; The Irving Productions, $20,000, William Hurlbut, Joseph E. Shea, Harold Orlob, New York.

Oklahoma Fight Looms on Sunday Closing

With both sides organizing, a bitter fight is looming at Henryetta, Okla., between church members and those opposed to closing motion picture shows and prohibiting amusements on Sunday.

At a union meeting of all Protestant church members Sunday night the action of the ministerial alliance several weeks ago in petitioning the city council to close all pay amusements on Sunday, was endorsed unanimously. At that time a petition signed by 750 Sunday School members was presented to the city council.

In the mean time opponents of the Sunday closing proposition are busy circulating a counter petition, which will be presented to the city council.

Van Praag Succeeded by Liggett in Kansas

M. Van Praag, president of M. P. T. O. Kansas, has tendered his resignation to the organization and has been succeeded by Richard G. Liggett, owner of the Gauntier Theatre, Kansas City, Kansas, and vice-president of the body. Van Praag will become managing director of a new $200,000 theatre at Kansas City, Kansas, which will be built by business men of that city.

Members of the M. P. T. O. K. have pledged their unqualified support to Liggett in maintaining one of the strongest state exhibitor organizations in the middle west. The new leader has for years been an untiring worker in the Kansas association.

Plans Being Completed For F. P.-L. Convention

HERMAN WOBBER, west coast division sales manager, and Jerome Beatty, sales department studio representative, are completing arrangements for the Famous Players-Lasky convention which opens in Los Angeles on Nov. 21.

The delegates will be escorted to the hotel from the train by a big parade. A banquet will be held at the Ambassador hotel on Tuesday evening. A dinner dance at the studio will be attended by all stars, writers, directors and department heads on Friday evening. All other sessions will be purely business.

The Los Angeles and Hollywood chambers of commerce are co-operating to make the event an exceptional one.

The eastern delegation, headed by Adolph Zukor, Jesse L. Lasky and S. R. Kent and comprising the home office executives and eastern district and branch managers, will leave by special train over the New York Central Nov. 16. The train will run as the second section of the Lake Shore Limited to Chicago, where the delegation from the north central exchanges will be picked up. From Chicago the route will be over the Santa Fe, with a stop at Kansas City to take on the representatives from the Middle West.

The party will arrive in Los Angeles Monday, Nov. 20, and will be met at the station by Mayor Cryer, members of the city council, representatives of the chambers of commerce of Los Angeles and Hollywood and other prominent citizens.

Steffes Leads Move to Get N.Y. Back in M.P.T.O.A.

W. A. Steffes, head of the Minnesota unit of the Motion Picture Owners of America and a member of the board of directors of the national body, this week took the lead in a move to bring the New York exhibitor organization back into the national body.

Mr. Steffes issued a statement this week, in which he declared his intention of leading a group of national executive committee members to establish harmony between New York and the M. P. T. O. A.

The differences to be settled, he declared, are largely personal, and if necessary he declares his entire willingness to resign as a director of the organization, feeling that the interests of the organization are greater than those of any individual involved. Several others will do the same, should it prove necessary to bring about unity, he predicted.

Roy Crawford to Build Topeka Theatre

Roy Crawford, vice-president and treasurer of Associated Exhibitors, returned to New York this week after a business trip to the Middle West, filled with enthusiasm over conditions in the picture industry. So optimistic is he that he brought plans for a $300,000 film theatre which he is soon to build in Topeka, Kan., his old home town.

Mr. Crawford said that L. M. Miller and a number of other picture men in the West have joined him and his father, L. M. Crawford, in advancing the Topeka theatre project. According to present plans the new house will have a seating capacity of 1900 persons, or 700 more than are accommodated by the Grand, at present the largest theatre in the city.

One of the latest William Fox Production is "The Village Blacksmith," from which the above scenes are taken.

Opera Stage Director Signed by Lasky

FOLLOWING his policy of gathering together the most promising members of the theatrical profession to train them for special motion picture work, Jesse L. Lasky has added another recruit to the ranks of Paramount Pictures.

His newest "find" is Richard Ordynski, formerly stage director of the Metropolitan Opera House in New York and the man who used to assist Max Reinhardt in his spectacular European productions.

Mr. Lasky met Ordynski in Paris during the former's recent trip abroad and offered the latter an opportunity to master the technique of motion picture making, which Ordynski promptly accepted. He arrived at the Lasky studio shortly after the arrival of Pola Negri, and is now engaged in studying the production and directorial methods of such masters as the De Milles and George Fitzmaurice with a view to untimately directing for Paramount.

Jackie Coogan Will Do Famous Stories

The first of the new stories selected by Sol. Lesser for Jackie Coogan is the well known volume "Toby Tyler with the Circus" which was purchased from Harper and Brothers. Work on this picture is now under way at United Studios, Hollywood and Edward Cline, who was loaned by the Buster Keaton organization, is in charge of direction.

More world famous stories and books are being sought for Jackie's use and will be purchased for him in advance of his present film activities.

Chaplin's "The Pilgrim" Is Shown at Los Angeles

AN unannounced pre-view of Charlie Chaplin's new comedy, "The Pilgrim," was given in Los Angeles this week. In this picture Chaplin appears as an escaped convict who disguises himself as a clergyman.

No prints of this comedy have yet been received in New York, and nothing definite has been set regarding the date of release or the length of the production.

Review Board to Give "Shadows" Showing

On November 17th at the Town Hall, New York City, the National Board of Review will give a special screening of B. P. Schulberg's production "Shadows," to an invited audience of fourteen hundred people interested in better pictures.

The showing will be under the auspices of the Exceptional Photoplays Committee and according to the custom of the Board questionnaires will be passed around to determine the reaction of the group representing people from all walks of life who represent an average audience of picture-goers.

Loew Statement Shows Large Profits

Loew's, Inc., and its fully owned subsidiary companies, in a financial statement for the fiscal year ended August 31, show an operating profit of $2,267,871, as against $1,800,550 in the previous year.

The total current and working assets are listed at $5,854,732. Profit and loss surplus was $545,997, as compared with $100,413 on August 31, 1921.

"The Young Rajah" Is Paramount Release

RODOLPH VALENTINO in "The Young Rajah," an adaptation of the play, "Amos Judd," by Alethea Luce and the novel of the same name by the late John Ames Mitchell, is the Paramount feature scheduled for release November 12.

It was scenarized by June Mathis, and directed by Philip Rosen. The picture has been lavishly produced, it is said.

Wanda Hawley, as leading woman, and Charles Ogle head the supporting cast which includes Pat Moore, Fannie Midgely, Robert Ober, Jack Giddings, Edward Jobson, Joseph Swickard, Bertram Grassby, J. Farrel MacDonald, George Periolat, George Field, Maude Wayne, William Boyd, Joseph Harrington and Spottiswoode Aitken.

Scenes from "I am the Law" with Gaston Glass, Alice Lake and Kenneth Harlan in the leading roles. The picture was produced by B. P. Fineman, for Affiliated distributors

Ratings on Features Explained

Exhibitor Reports in Percentages is the result of giving figure ratings to word box office and entertainment value reports from exhibitors, and by arithmetic reducing the total number of reports to percentages.

The key ratings accepted for use are:

| Poor | Fair | Average | Good | Big |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| 20% | 40% | 50% | 70% | 100% |

To arrive at the rating of a picture, the number of reports at each individual rating are multiplied by the key rating percentage, the whole is totaled and the sum obtained divided by the total number of reports received.

The rating is applied separately to the box office and entertainment value related by each report.

No picture will be included in the list which does not receive at least ten reports.

Douglas MacLean Signs Up With Associated

DOUGLAS MACLEAN has joined Associated Exhibitors' galaxy of stars. J. C. Ragland, secretary of that organization, announced this week the closing of a contract under which the popular comedian will make four productions during the coming year for distribution by Associated.

When President Arthur S. Kane left New York for the west coast a few weeks ago there was much speculation as to the possible identity of stars who, according to rumors afloat, might be enlisted under the Associated Exhibitors' banner. Douglas MacLean is the first. It has now become known that Mr. Kane conferred with Mr. MacLean and the latter's associates in Los Angeles, and the contract was signed before his departure from that city.

Mr. Ragland's announcement contains also the information that Mr. MacLean's productions will be comedy specials of the type of "The Hottentot," picturizations either of successful plays or well known stories of noted authors. The star who is now to become producer also already holds options on two popular plays, and the name of the first feature to be produced will be announced at an early date.

In all his pictures for Associated, it is declared, Mr. MacLean will have all-star support. It is understood that he has completed the organization of Douglas MacLean Productions, which will make the several features. Bogart Rogers has been selected as general manager of the company, and Lloyd Ingraham will be the director. J. R. Crone will be production manager, and George Crone, who was with Mr. Ingraham three years, assistant director.

Scenes from "Pawned," J Parker Read, Jr.'s production for Select.

Scenes from "To Have and to Hold," a Paramount Picture in which Betty Compson plays the leading feminine role.

New Production Policy for Universal

Laemmle Motto Now Is "Stars to Fit Pictures, Not Pictures to Fit Stars"

A NEW policy in picture production has been established at Universal City by Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, according to a statement just issued at the Universal home office. A sharp trend away from the star system has resulted, and at present, Universal is devoting its efforts mostly to pictures with high quality casts but no featured players.

This innovation has come about as the result of several experiments with non-star pictures. In the last few months several of these have been made and inserted in the Universal Attraction schedule. Each of them was a decided success.

Universal now has six important non-star pictures in production. The new policy is based upon the motto "stars to fit the picture; not pictures to fit the stars."

"We are going to pay even more attention than ever before to the worth of the stories, and less to the individual star," said Mr. Laemmle. "The time for the public to decide who starred in a picture is immediately after the word 'finis.'

"It is my hope to give capable players a free-for-all chance to 'steal' every picture in which they appear."

The new policy does not mean that Universal has given up its stars. On the contrary, they are getting better stories than ever, it is pointed out. Priscilla Dean, Gladys Walton, Edward "Hoot" Gibson, Frank Mayo and Herbert Rawlinson will always stand out and the other Universal favorites are in the same demand.

Neither will there be any definite way to determine beforehand whether a story will go to the screen as a Universal-Jewel production or a feature of ordinary length. At the final screening a story that was intended as a feature may receive the pridemark of "Universal-Jewel" because of the excellence of the production.

Under the new system, players, who have heretofore been starred or featured by other organization, are playing important roles in Universal productions but in which they share honors with other notables in proportion to the value of their individual performances.

Goldwyn Employees Will Give Dance

The employees of Goldwyn Pictures Corporation are preparing for an elaborate dance and entertainment at the Roof-Garden of the Astor Hotel on Friday evening, December 15. A committee on preparation has been at work for weeks and is bending its energies to make this dance the finest event of the kind of the season.

Music will be furnished by an orchestra of ten pieces supplied by Jerome H. Remick.

The Committee on Arrangements is headed by Miss Ruth M. Alston who has enlisted as her aides Frank Rohrenbeck, Miss Mae Lewis, Maurice Adler, Miss Claire Wolin, Emile Montemurro, Max Kusel, Miss Fanny April, Miss Charlotte Moore and Miss Hazel Poppe.

The Goldwyn employees hope to raise sufficient funds through this dance to organize a Goldwyn club.

Buffalo Manager Takes Up New Duties

Bruce Fowler has resigned as manager of the Elmwood Theatre in Buffalo to become manager of the Indiana Theatre in Terre Haute, Ind. He was appointed to his new position by Harold B. Franklin, head of Paramount's theatre department.

Mr. Fowler has also managed the Olympic and Victoria in Buffalo and has been connected with the John Griffin Amusement Company in Canada as booking agent and with McMahon and Dee, a vaudeville agency in Buffalo.

Fowler was the guest of honor at several banquets before leaving Buffalo, where he enjoyed great popularity among the trade.

Around the Trade

GEORGE DE KRUIF, of Exhibitors Supply Company, is back at his desk, after a prolonged trip to western film centers. Mr. De Kruif spent several weeks in Salt Lake City and reports business there is beginning to pick up in good shape, as it is in Denver, Omaha, and other cities he visited in the mountain territory.

"When Knighthood Was in Flower," now in its fifth week at Balaban & Katz's Roosevelt Theatre, is continuing to pull such big business that it is planned to retain it for an indefinite time and future bookings for this house are being held up for the present.

The first of a series of get-together dinners, arranged by the Ways and Means Committee of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was scheduled for Ottawa, on Wednesday, November 8. Other meetings will be held from time to time in different districts of the state with the object of awakening interest in the organization and securing new members. Among the officials of the Theatre Men's Association, who expected to be present at Ottawa, at the Clifton Hotel dinner were Presitendent L. M. Rubens, Secretary Dibelka, Samuel Abrahams, Julius Lamm, John Silha, Williams J. Sweeney, L. H. Frank, L. Siegel, Adolph Powell, Sidney Selig and Joe Hopp.

Jimmie Ashcraft arrived in Chicago early this week to complete arrangements for the opening of D. W. Griffith's "One Exciting Night" at the Illinois Theatre next Monday evening. Mr. Griffith himself and two of the actors, who take leading parts in the picture, Messrs. Dempster and Strong, will be present, and it is expected that the Chicago premier of the picture will be a brilliant social event.

Publicity Expert Gordon, representing the home office of Distinct Productions, is in the city working on the publicity and exploitation for "The Man Who Played God," which opens at the Randolph theatre next week.

Clyde Elliott, head of the exchange bearing his name, is about to become an exhibitor, having purchased the Strand theatre at Evanston, which was damaged by fire some years ago and has stood idle ever since. Mr. Elliott plans improvement for the building, which will make it virtually a new theatre, and has engaged Architect J. E. Pridmore to make the plans. Work will be rushed so that the house can be opened some time in December. The former owners of the Strand theatre were the Evanston Amusement Company.

The public may have an opportunity to name Ralph Crocker's theatre at Elgin, which is now in the course of construction. At least this popular exhibitor has the plan under consideration in order to awaken advance interest in the new theatre. The new house will be a one floor structure with 1499 seats and will be of steel, concrete and brick construction, built somewhat along the architectural lines of Balaban & Katz's Roosevelt theatre. It will be a beautiful and ornate structure, containing within its walls all the latest improvements in furnishings and equipment. While no opening date has been fixed, it is hoped that construction will be completed in time to give the premier performance the early part of the year.

Hal Hodies, special representative of Ethel Clayton, star of "If I Were Queen," is in Chicago this week. He is touring the middle west in the interest of this big feature.

W. D. Burford made a flying trip to New York this week as representative of the I. M. P. T. O. to confer with President Cohen on plans for the national convention of the M. P. T. O. of America, which will be held in Chicago some time in May or June, 1923. It is understood that the holding of an exposition at the Coliseum during convention week was also discussed but no announcement is yet forthcoming as to the decision reached.

With the Exchanges

WILLIAM F. WENDELL has been appointed manager of short subjects at Universal's Chicago Exchange. Mr. Wendell has been connected with the organization for some time past as a salesman, and is popular with the exhibitors of the territory. Jack Denton is now covering the west side and Morris Henoch, formerly southside salesman, has been given the title of special representative.

The latest feature secured by Griever Productions for release in this territory, is "The Unconquered Woman," a five-reel picture featuring Ruby De Remer. The Lee Bradford Company is the producer. "More To Be Pitied Than Scorned," another of the features being handled by Griever Productions, has been sold to the Ascher and Lubiner & Trinz circuits, and will open in their houses the week of November 15.

Manager Danto, of Goldwyn, was absent this week, on a tour of the key centers in his territory. "Remembrance" is scheduled for general release in the Chicago district this week, and will be followed shortly by some of the important Goldwyn Fall and Winter releases. Very heavy bookings of "Remembrance" are reported.

Manager Eichenlaub, of United Artists, has added a number of salesmen to his staff, and is preparing to put on a strong selling campaign in the rural districts. The new salesmen are Jack Geier, who will have the Southern Indiana territory; T. H. Johnson, Western Illinois; John Predari, Southern Illinois; J. A. Scott, Indiana; and E. H. (Pop) Hoyt, Northern Wisconsin.

Creswell Smith, assistant general sales manager of United Artists, who now makes his headquarters in New York, was in Chicago this week, following a trip to leading film centers, including Minneapolis, Omaha and Kansas City. Mr. Smith reports that business is showing a satisfactory business revival in all the cities mentioned, with the outlook for the future bright. Hiram Abrams was scheduled to arrive at the Chicago office of United this week for a conference with Manager Eichenlaub, and expects to stay in the Windy City for several days.

Maurice Hellman left for New York on Wednesday. He will remain in New York for approximately two weeks, and while there expects to buy several new features for release in the territory served by his Reelcraft Exchange. His headquarters will be the Astor.

John J. Parent, well known as an exhibitor, is now an exchange man, having become associated with Maurice Hellman's Reelcraft organization, for which he will cover the Chicago northside territory. Mr. Parent operated the Pastime Theatre on the southside for nine years without missing a performance, which is a splendid record.

Richard Fox, well known in film circles, as he was formerly connected with Universal's local exchange, has arrived from St. Louis to take a position with Film Booking Offices as a salesman. He will cover country territory.

Sidney Meyers arrived from Omaha the first part of the week and assumed his duties as manager of Fox's Chicago exchange. He was installed by Clyde Eckhardt, retiring manager, who goes to New York to become assistant to General Manager Winfield R. Sheehan. Mr. Meyers, while young in years, being on the sunny side of thirty, is a veteran in the picture business, having started with General Film Company's Omaha exchange as a booker ten years ago. His promotions came rapidly and for the past five years has been manager of Fox's Omaha exchange.

Carl Laemmle was scheduled to arrive in Chicago on Saturday, November 11th, from the west coast where he was inspecting the studios at Universal City. It is thought that Mr. Laemmle will remain in Chicago until Tuesday, making his headquarters at Universal's local exchange.

Another film notable, who is due in Chicago this week, is Harry Berman, who has been in Los Angeles for the last few days.

F. B. O.'s selling force is making a fine record in the Chicago territory on the series of pictures being booked throughout the territory. "In The Name Of The Law," was released to first run houses throughout Chicago on November 12th and twenty prints were required to meet the bookings.

Chicago Paramount Pep Club held its anual meeting and birthday party on Monday night with over forty employees and friends in attendance. Dinner was served at 6:00 p. m., followed by an excellent musical program and dancing. An election of officers was held which resulted as follows: Dan Roche, president; J. M. Wolfberg, vice-president; F. M. Miles, treasurer; Miss Anna Sachs, secretary; Committees: Entertaining, J. M. Wolfberg; Athletics, Herman Busch; Membership, H. A. O'Brien; Refreshments, Miss Mary McGranahan and Publicity, Miss Irma Beck.

A. Tietel, whose film cleaning and restoring concern has been a Chicago film row fixture for many years, believes that the business done by his concern is a real barometer of moving picture conditions, and according to this barometer, business is very much improved as his concern has not had so much work to do in many months as at present.

F. R. Eddy, Publicity Director Hill's new assistant, is doing fine work for Universal and winning for himself a wide circle of friends among exhibitors by his exploitation and advertising campaigns.

LITTLE STORIES ABOUT PEOPLE ON THE LOT

With Paramount Units

The Sam Woods production, "My American Wife," has been completed. Woods will next direct "Prodigal Daughters," by Joseph Hocking. The continuity has been written by Monte M. Katterjohn, and Gloria Swanson will be starred. It is now being cast.

Will M. Ritchey has been assigned to prepare the continuity of "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine" for Mary Miles Minter, which Charles Maigne will direct.

George Fitzmaurice and the Pola Negri company have left for desert location.

Jack Cunningham has completed the continuity for "The Tiger's Claw," the next Jack Holt subject. The story is laid in East India.

Cecil B. DeMille's $1,200 contest for a new idea, conducted through the Los Angeles Times, brought about 25,000 returns. A canvass of them shows that historical, married life, business and science themes predominate. Few crook stories were included.

Paul Powell has finished all racing sequences for "Racing Hearts," starring Agnes Ayres, with Richard Dix as male lead.

Wires from James Cruze making "The Covered Wagon" near Milford, Utah, tell of big snow storm. One snow sequence was made on the set representing Fort Bridger, and will be made part of story. Storm did not delay production seriously. Lois Wilson, J. Warren Kerrigan and Alan Hale are the leads.

"Adam's Rib" is the title chosen for Cecil B. DeMille's present production. Final scenes are being made aboard DeMille's yacht, The Seaward.

Betty Compson, Julia Crawford Ivers and the "White Flower" company are leaving Honolulu this week for Los Angeles.

William J. Lorelle, one of the first leading men in pictures and who has been in retirement for the last three years, has been engaged for the role of Major Healey in Cosmopolitan's picturization of "The Go Getter," a Peter B. Kyne story, directed by E. H. Griffith from the scenario of John Lynch. Irene Owen and T. Roy Barnes are featured.

R-C Production Notes

Johnny Walker has purchased "The Fourth Musketeer," by H. C. Witwer, which will be filmed as soon as "Captain Fly-By-Night" is edited.

The DeHavens are making final scenes for "Baby Ben," their seventh comedy under their present contract, which is being directed by Henry Lehrman.

The Ethel Clayton company has completed "The Remittance Woman."

Mal Sinclair is making final scenes for "Knight in Gale" of the "Fighting Blood" series.

The Harry Carey company has returned after two weeks on location on Mojave desert and are making exteriors for "Canyon of Fools," at Carey's Ranch, 40 miles north of Los Angeles.

"Rock of Ages" is the title for the next Chester Bennett production, starring Jane Novak.

At Universal City

In production on the "U" lot are: "The Attic of Felix Bavu," under the direction of Stuart Paton; "The Abysmal Brute," directed by Hobart Henley; "Merry-Go-Round," now under direction of Rupert Julian; "The Social Buccaneer" being directed by Robert F. Hill, "Prisoners" being directed by Jack Conway, and "Alias Sebastino," directed by Edward Sedgwick. The serials: "Around the World in Eighteen Days" is still being made by Reaves Eason; "The Exploits of Yorke Norrey," being directed by Duke Worne, and "The Trail Blazers," by Edward Laemmle.

Two directors have been engaged, Herman Raymacker, directing a Brownie comedy featuring Ena Gregory and Harry Edwards, who will direct new series of six or twelve comedies featuring Muddy Messenger, who was placed under contract last week. Zion Meyers will be Edward's assistant.

Al Herman has completed "The Farmerettes," for which a cast including Jack Cooper, Jack Earle, Ena Gregory, Betty May, Jean Hope and Loys Boyd have been engaged.

Alf Goulding has completed the cast for a Baby Peggy comedy titled "The Senorita," which includes Joe Moore, Max Ascher, and Tommy Wonder, the Gus Edwards six-year-old dancer, Buddy Williams, Joe Bonner, Ernest McDonald and Lillian Hackett. Goulding's comedy "Peg o' the Movies" has been completed and shipped.

Baby Peggy Montgomery was four years old this week and in her young career she has appeared in 35 Century comedies and two Marshall Neilan features.

Bert Sternbach has been appointed as director of casting and purchasing department manager.

Dave Bainter, publicity director for Century has returned from a three months' trip covering the exchanges.

Around Metro Studios

Dot Farley has been engaged by Hunt Stromberg as leading woman in the current Bull Montana production, "Rob 'Em Good."

Director Harry Beaumont and the Viola Dana company filming "The Noise In Newboro" are making exteriors at Visalia.

Winifred Dunn has completed the continuity for "Your Friend and Mine," an S-L production from a Willard Mack sketch.

On the Goldwyn Lot

Hugo Ballin has added George Walsh to the cast of "Vanity Fair" to play Rawden Crawley.

Frank Mayo has been engaged for one of the featured parts in Rupert Hughes' "Souls for Sale," which is laid in the motion picture colony. Richard Dix and Lew Cody will probably also appear in this subject.

Paul Gangelin has been added to the scenario staff as a reader.

Marshall Neilan has not yet decided which production he will make first, "Tess of the D'Urbervilles" or "Teh Rear Car." He is now editing "The Stranger's Banquet."

Here and There

Jess Robbins is editing his third comedy drama featuring Edward Horton. The story is by Arthur Goodrich and the all-star cast is headed by Edith Roberts.

Maescher Productions is now filming "Rip Tide," story and continuity by J. Grubb Alexander. Jack Pratt is directing it at the Hollywood studios for Arrow release. The cast includes J. Frank Glendon, Rosemary Theby, Stuart Holmes, Dick Sutherland, Diana Allen and Russell Simpson.

McDonald Productions have just completed the seventh comedy featuring Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messenger for Pathe, titled "Stung." The other players include Gordon Griffith, Benny Alexander and Kenneth Green.

Malobee Productions have completed "Smoked Out," the eleventh two-reel Western starring Leo Maloney for Pathe. The supporting cast includes Pauline Curley, Bud Osborne, Ray Meyers, Pat Rooney and Harry Belmore.

Phil Goldstone is beginning production of "The Smoke Eater" starring Richard Talmadge. Charlotte Pearce will play opposite and Jack Nelson will direct.

"Spawn of the Desert," starring William Fairbanks, has been completed under the direction of Ben Wilson, with Florence Gilbert opposite and Al Hart in the cast.

"Vengeance of the Deep," a Frank R. Adams story, is being produced in Honolulu and vicinity by A. W. Barringer for American Releasing Corporation. The company which recently sailed from San Francisco included Ralph Lewis, Harmon MacGregor, Van Mattimore, "Smoke" Turner, Vera Lewis, Virginia Brown Faire, Mr. Barringer and Maida Vale.

Marion Fairfax, noted screen author and until recently, producer and director of her own pictures, has written the titles for the new Louis B. Mayer special, "Hearts Aflame," an all-star offering recently completed by Reginald Barker as his first independent unit production. Miss Fairfax is now working on the adaptation of "The Valley of Content," the Blanche Upright novel which will be Mr. Barker's second picture for Mr. Mayer.

Monte Banks has returned from Youngstown, Ohio, after complete recovery from a recent fracture of hip bone which was set by the famous specialist, "Bone Setter" Reese at Youngstown. He will immediately resume production of a series of comedies under the direction of Ward Hayes.

Eddie Lyons is preparing stories for a second series of comedies for Arrow release. Lyons has just completed a series of 12 featuring Bobby Dunn for Arrow.

B. P. Schulberg will make a sequel to "Rich Men's Wives" under the title "Poor Men's Wives," to be directed by Gasnier. Frank Dazey and Agnes Johnston, who wrote the script for the former picture, are preparing the story and continuity for the sequel.

Victor Schertzinger has finished "The Scarlet Lily" starring Katherine MacDonald.

Gasnier has finished "The Hero."

Tom Forman is making the final scene for his all-star production, "Are You a Failure?"

J. Stuart Blackton plans to make another film with Carpentier in the leading role soon after completing "The Virgin Queen," which he is now producing with Lady Diana Manners in the role of Queen Elizabeth.

Gene Stratton Porter has discovered a new boy star. Testing many of the well known boy actors of the screen, Mrs. Porter finally decided on True Boardman, as nearest approaching her ideal of her character, "Mickey," the little newsboy of her novel, "Michael O'Halloran," which she is producing and personally supervising at the Thos. H. Ince studios.

Maurice Tourneur has found a veritable graveyard of old ships for exterior scenes in "The Isle of Dead Ships," near San Francisco, where he will make the exteriors for this production. Michael Levee, President of United, has purchased two submarines, which will be used first by Tourneur. Casting will begin on this subject at once.

Victor Heerman has been assigned to direct "Rupert of Hentzau" for Selznick, for which Antonio Moreno has been engaged for the title role.

Allan Hollubar is casting "The White Frontier."

The fourth Lloyd Hamilton comedy is being directed by Lloyd Bacon, with a cast including Ruth Hiatt, Bobby DeVilbiss, child part; Tom Murray, heavy.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASE

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRE

FAMOUS PLAYERS

To Have and to Hold—
Good picture and very good business. (East.)

A very fine picture that went over big and was enthusiastically received. (East.)

Wonderfully made, packed with thrills that had them going. Mighty convincing swordplay. Very good business. (East.)

The Old Homestead—
Wonderful attraction. Filled our house all shows. (Middle West.)

This did almost as big business as "Manslaughter." Conventions in town helped to hold it over a ten days run with good business. (Middle West.)

Ranks with the best of season's features. Played to capacity business. (Middle West.)

Fair business on second week of run. (West.)

On the High Seas—
Picture made to order for Dorothy Dalton and she is splendidly supported by Jack Holt. Plenty of thrills and dramatic touches make this a strong picture. Good box office attraction.

Picture and business both bad. (East.)

Burning Sands—
The attendance for the week with this one was good. (Middle West.)

Fairly good picture. Average box office attraction. (Middle West.)

When Kighthood Was in Flower—
This one broke all records during the first week of its run. (Middle West.)

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow—
Good show, well liked and well patronized. (Middle West.)

The Impossible Mrs. Bellew—
About an average picture of its class. Attendance held fairly well. (Middle West.)

The Ghost Breaker—
Wallace Reid's popularity pulled this one over to satisfactory box office figures. Story nothing extra, said patrons. (East.)

GOLDWYN

Remembrance—
Fine production with good business. (West.)

Good crowds turned out for this one. (Middle West.)

Fair picture and attendance. (Middle West.)

His Back Against the Wall—
Mediocre picture and business way off. (East.)

The Sin Flood—
Very entertaining. Good box office value. (East.)

Sherlock Holmes—
Artistic production that failed to draw the business. Not a picture to attract the women. (Middle West.)

Yellow Men and Gold—
A thriller that packed the house. (Middle West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

Crossroads of New York—
Run with local feature "Crossroads of Des Moines," 450 feet of film in a burlesque of the feature, filmed here, this week did a good business. The feature gave general satisfaction as furnishing something different. (Middle West.)

East Is West—
Splendid. Constance Talmadge scores as great a hit in it as did Norma in "Smilin' Through." (Middle West.)

Love Never Dies—
Fairly well received. (Middle West.)

White Shoulders—
A pleasing little picture with a star who is very popular here. Attendance average. (Middle West.)

The Bond Boy—
Barthelmess scores again in this feature. Somewhat gloomy but big audience picture. (Middle West.)

Oliver Twist—
This is Jackie Coogan's great picture and a masterpiece of screen drama. Went over big. (Middle West.)

UNIVERSAL

The Kentucky Derby—
Fast moving melodrama with good acting and sets. Business excellent. (Middle West.)

Human Hearts—
Pleased 90 per cent. Good receipts. (Middle West.)

The Girl Who Ran Wild—
Didn't seem to draw. Stiff competition to blame. (East.)

Under Two Flags—
Very good picture and went over big. (East.)

Broad Daylight—
Fairly entertaining with average business. (West.)

FOX

Honor First—
Since John Gilbert hit the town in "Monte Cristo," his box office value has risen. Business was very fair on this one. (East.)

Nero—
A wonderful spectacle. Fine comments by press and patrons. Excellent patronage. (Middle West.)

Calvert's Valley—
John Gilbert gives good performance. Some situations weak. Drew fairly well. (Middle West.)

Silver Wings—
Poor business. Everyone liked the picture. Critics praised it. But public seem tired of sentimental stuff. (Middle West.)

Bad picture to begin with and there is a superfluity of "mother" pictures on the market anyway. Business off. (East.)

For Big Stakes—
Mediocre picture and business only fair. (East.)

METRO

Broadway Rose—
Business averaged well. Conventions in town and big football game brought good week-end crowds. Seemed generally satisfactory. (Middle West.)

Average Mae Murray picture. Drew good crowds on two weeks' run. (Middle West.)

Prisoner of Zenda—
Better than the book. Great audience picture. Excellent business. (East.)

The Hands of Nara—
Clara Kimball Young in a none too convincing bit of film story. A jazz band, however, pulled them in for capacity. (East.)

SELZNICK

Love Is an Awful Thing—
Fair picture but business not up to par. (East.)

Love's Masquerade—
This picture was advertised as a Winifred Westover and seemed to draw a goodly number who wanted to see Mrs. Bill Hart. No known reason why Conway Tearle wouldn't draw as the star. Business satisfactory. (Middle West.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

Queen of the Moulin Rouge—
Both picture and business considered good. (East.)

VITAGRAPH

A Rogue's Romance—
Fine picture. Business good. (East.)

HODKINSON

Slim Shoulders—
A very pleasant picture to see. Well liked, and played to excellent business. (East.)

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS

Grandma's Boy—
Great picture. Held up well on two week's run. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Fair Lady—
Average picture and box-office attraction. (Middle West.)

The Ruling Passion—
The first half of the week business was not good but the last half was fine. Audiences enthusiastic about the feature. Many, however were not familiar with George Arliss and mouth to mouth advertising was needed to boost the film. (Middle West.)

AL LICHTMAN CORP.

Rich Men's Wives—
Little bit draggy. Leading woman very poor. Business very bad the first three days but picked up the last three. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

For Your Daughter's Sake—
Melodrama of the first water. Business below average. (Middle West.)

Heedless Moths—
Good picture. (Middle West.)

Flesh and Blood—
Lon Chaney draws well here. The picture did a good week's business. (Middle West.)

Colorful Exploitation for "While Satan Sleeps"

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager DeSales Harrison, Howard theatre, used stunts, displays and a special advance showing to put over "While Satan Sleeps."

The week prior to opening a prologue ballyhoo stunt was worked. At the end of the feature picture the curtains parted; there was a red powder flash on each side of the stage, and two small ushers dressed as little devils emerged from the smoke. Each carried a herald banner, one advertising next week's feature and the other next week's prologue. Small spotlights were trained on the ushers for about twenty seconds while the audience got the message. While not on the stage these ushers strolled around the lobby.

The "red devil" costumes were made of tight fitting union suits dyed red. Small trunks, cape and hood were made from red cloth.

Three days before opening the picture was projected for an audience of ministers, club women and members of the Better Films Committee.

Several days before the first regular newspaper ad, the town was flooded with small white cards with the wording, "What Happens While 'Satan Sleeps'?" The same copy was used for small newspaper ads.

Cut-Outs and Bunting Help to Put "Fascination" Over

TAMPA, Fla.—Manager C. D. Cooley of the Victory theatre arranged a most attractive lobby display for the showing of "Fascination."

Four life size cut-outs of Mae Murray were arranged upon the marquee, two on each side of the electric sign. Pennants and streamers fluttered in the breeze, with the Spanish colors predominating.

In the lobby were more cut-outs of Miss Murray and the bull ring, with yellow and red bunting tastefully arranged about the entire front of the house. This made a very attractive display.

Mock Trial Held as Stunt for "Sherlock Holmes"

Pittsburgh, Pa.—Front page space in every newspaper was obtained on "Sherlock Holmes" by W. E. Kirsh, general manager of the Rowland and Clarke theatres, the Regent and the Blackstone, and William Robson, Goldwynner.

The law students of the University of Pittsburgh, through their fraternity, Delta Theta Phi, were induced, after attending a screening of the photoplay, to hold a mock trial of Professor Moriarty in the picture. They, in turn, induced Judge James R. MacFarlane to preside at the mock trial. It was held, through his influence, in a room in the county court. The participants were all law students and the trial was conducted with all the legal formalities attending a murder trial. The jury was unable to agree. Seven Pittsburgh newspapers carried stories on this stunt, most of them on the front page—two morning papers used double-column heads—and each story referred to the fact that the students had just attended a screening of "Sherlock Holmes" at the Blackstone theatre.

Another exploitation feature that attracted all kinds of attention was the distribution of 5,000 Bertillon finger print record cards, carrying on the other side a picture of Prof. Moriarty, his description and a record of his life.

Float Tied Up with Contest on "How Women Love"

New York, N. Y.—Jack Stebbins, exploitation man for the Merit Film Corporation, is using a special float to good effect in promoting "How Women Love" in Greater New York.

On the float is a reproduction of a set from the picture, "How Women Love," and in the scene there is shown a man and woman, the latter a Betty Blythe type, gorgeously gowned. On the other end of the float is a lad with inverted cap and puttees turning the handle of a motion picture camera. This float has never failed to attract attention, the more so as large, readable letters on both sides tell of the "Betty Blythe Moving Picture Contest." Below this caption is a sentence telling girls that this is a real bona fide opportunity to get in the movies and that actual tests will be made on the stage of their local theatres in connection with the showing of this new Betty Blythe picture, "How Women Love."

One girl is being selected for each of the five boroughs of New York City, and these girls will be guaranteed parts in future Betty Blythe productions. Also Mr. Stebbins is staging a fashion show at each theatre running the picture, and the young lady in each fashion parade wearing a gown most similar to that worn by Miss Blythe in the picture will receive a prize.

Effective use of large butterflies of compo board in lobby of the Princess theatre, Roswell, N. Mex., by Manager Henry J. Westerfield on "Rich Men's Wives"

Varied Exploitation Campaign Put Back of "Lorna Doone"

Los Angeles, Cal.—An exploitation campaign that utilized every possible angle was used in connection with "Lorna Doone," when that picture was booked to show at the Kinema theatre.

On Saturday two sandwich men began to parade the downtown streets of Los Angeles walking inside a big copy of the book. Six downtown windows carried window and store displays of the "Lorna Doone" song. Three downtown stores carried window displays of the "Madge Bellamy Edition of 'Lorna Doone.'" Every National Biscuit Company truck and wagon carried banners advertising "Lorna Doone Biscuit" and announcing the Kinema showing. Twenty markets and groceries had window displays of "Lorna Doone" biscuits and announcements of the presentation. Three jewelry stores carried window displays on "Lorna Doone" pearls. Three stores had window displays advertising "Lorna Doone" hats. An essay contest was in full swing among all high school pupils of Los Angeles with copies of the "Madge Bellamy Edition" of the book as prizes.

Window tie-up obtained on "Remembrance" by the Colonial theatre, Brockton, Mass.

Red Ink and Sand Used for "Blood and Sand" Herald

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—A novelty herald on "Blood and Sand" was gotten up by the Stanley theatre, in cooperation with Eli M. Orowitz, Paramount exploiteer, which carried the word "blood" in red ink and the word "sand" in real sand.

The process takes some time but is fairly simple and inexpensive. The herald naturally requires two runs through the press and on the second run the rollers were "inked" with glue. As soon as the word "sand" was imprinted in glue the printer sprinkled sand over the herald, some of the grains catching on the glue, and the rest rolling harmlessly off.

Noah's Ark Makes Novel Float for "The Sin Flood"

New York, N. Y.—When "The Sin Flood" showed at the Capitol theatre everyone in the "white light" district knew about it, thanks to a float paraded about the Rialto.

A small Noah's ark was constructed upon a flat-topped automobile truck and sent through the city's theatre and uptown shopping district for six days. The ark, about five by twelve feet, was built of wood and painted beaverboard.

The body of the truck was so camouflaged by beaverboard that it resembled the body, or hold, of an ark. Upon this was built a small cabin-like affair with three windows on each side. In each window was placed a mounted cut-out figure of the principal players in the film taken from the special painted portraits prepared for lobby display. On top of the ark was placed a large disc, four feet in diameter. Waves were painted upon the disc, with lettering which read: "'The FLOOD' will sweep you away." The disc was kept revolving by a boy concealed in the ark. Half a dozen pigeons were fastened to the top of the ark by strings tied to rings about their legs. At the rear of the float was a sign, in the form of a sail, which read, "Capitol theatre all this week."

"Under Two Flags" Heralds Go Out in 300,000 Loaves

Seattle, Wash.—Three by six-inch handbills containing a good sized photograph of Priscilla Dean and a little reading matter about "Under Two Flags," were placed inside the waxed paper wrapper of 300,000 loaves of bread without any expense whatsoever by Manager R. W. Case of the Columbia theatre here.

The stunt was put over in conjunction with the Columbia's policy of endorsing Northwest products whenever possible. In this instance, Manager Case tied up with a Seattle bakery and in return for including 300 feet of film showing the bread in all processes of baking in the short reels on his program, the bakery stood the expense of putting the dodgers in every loaf of bread it wrapped for three days.

The "bread reel" was absolutely devoid of any advertising matter whatsoever, with the exception of the title, which read, "The Columbia Theatre Is a Northwest Products Booster." It showed the process of making bread, pastries and other bakery goods.

Managing Director Joseph Plunkett of the New York Mark Strand had t his ballyhoo parade the streets of New York for the showing of "Oliver Twist"

Street Ballyhoo and Postcard Stunt on "Do and Dare"

Troy, N. Y.—The management of the American theatre exploited "Do and Dare" with a street ballyhoo and a novel postcard contest stunt.

The street ballyhoo consisted of a man attired in a cowboy chaps, evening coat, and a silk hat. On his back was a sign which read, "Tom Mix in 'Do and Dare,' at the American theatre this week." Canvas signs were also thrown over the sides of his horse.

Another feature of the exploitation was a contest conducted in connection with the newspapers of the city. Large display announcements were made in which the management of the theatre offered a number of cash rewards and free tickets to the show to the persons who could write on United States postcards the words, "Tom Mix in 'Do and Dare'" the largest number of times. Several thousand replies were received from people in Troy and the adjacent territory, and the winner who turned in a card with 751 repetitions received the $25 prize. Twenty-three pairs of tickets were given to the other successful contestants.

The progress of exploitation in far away Australia is exemplified by this float used by the Globe theatre, Sydney, on "Over the Hill"

Book Float is Used to Exploit "To Have and to Hold"

ATLANTA, Ga.—Manager De Sales Harrison, of the Howard theatre, used a giant float during an important football game to exploit "To Have and to Hold" to advantage.

A giant book, "To Have and to Hold," was placed on a low bodied wagon drawn by four grey horses, both wagon and horses being generously covered with streamers. The horses' blankets carried a welcome to the Notre Dame team to Atlanta. Romanticism was the keynote of the display. Three young boys dressed in swashbuckling uniforms stood out in bold relief on the float. One with arms akimbo and one foot raised on a little platform, stood with his back to the front of the huge book, while another stood in a like position at the side. The other handled the horses.

Old Settler Contest Works Up Interest in "Old Homestead"

Gadsden, Ala.—Manager A. L. Snell of the Imperial theatre aroused great interest in the showing of "The Old Homestead" through two newspaper contests.

The first of these was the awarding of free passes to the 100 oldest residents of Etowa County (the county in which Gadsden is located). On Friday before opening Monday the paper carried a front page story under two-column head announcing that they would give 100 passes to see "The Old Homestead" at the Imperial. Old residents were asked to send in their namse and the length of time they had been living in Etowa County. Another front page story followed on Saturday and on Monday the names of the winners were announced.

The other stunt was a co-operative double page contest offering prizes for the longest list of names of residents who had lived in Etowa County twenty-five years or more. The statement of the contest was split up, one or two words being placed in each ad on the double page. Contestants had to dig these out and put them together before they knew what they were supposed to answer. The center space was devoted to a display for the picture and to explanations and rules of the contest.

"Broadway Rose" Worked Into Fashion Show

Wilmington, N. C.—Taking his cue from the title of the picture, Manager Ernest G. Stellings of the Grand picture made a hookup with one of the big civic events of the year on "Broadway Rose."

Stellings made arrangements with one of the city's leading merchants to have an evening dress made out of a rose material which was boosted as the latest Broadway tint; "Broadway Rose."

A leading society girl was persuaded to wear the dress at the promenade at the Food and Fashion show and a little usher brought out a card at this time advertising the attraction at the theatre and explaining the tie-up. Thousands of people saw this stunt, and it being a novelty, were impressed.

Exhibitor Begins Campaign With Teaser Lobby Display

Spokane, Wash.—For the exploitation of "Grandma's Boy," Managing Director Ray Grombacher arranged a number of unique displays in the Liberty Theatre. One, which was used as a teaser, adorned one of the walls in the foyer. A picture of Lloyd laughing, cut from a twenty-four sheet, and mounted on a frame, occupied the central position. While at the right, a figure of the star, also from a twenty-four sheet and of "Grandma," from a six sheet, were placed.

Effective lobby decorations used during the run of "The Old Homestead" at the Southern theatre, Columbus, Ohio, a Libson house

Shadow-Box Built Below Screen for "One Clear Call"

Jacksonville, Fla.—Manager Albert B. Hill began his campaign on "One Clear Call" well in advance.

One week before play date the Imperial stage was converted into a shadow-box. His box was placed below the screen where he had about four feet to the good and with this good height it made his shadow-box very effective. The box effect was as follows: Silhouetted figures of riding clansmen coming out of the early morning riding through the day and on into the darkness of night. This effect was secured by lights, etc.

This shadow-box was illuminated during the running of house slides and through playing of the overture only.

Military Lobby Is Prepared on "The Dictator"

Sumter, S. C.—Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre figured that a warlike front was the thing on "The Dictator," so he turned the lobby into headquarters for a first-class revolution. Forty old guns were borrowed from the high school and stacked around in the lobby. The front wheels and axle of an old wagon formed the foundation for a very fine field piece, the barrel of which was made from three joints of stove pipe and a washer of beaver board. An ammunition box was built on the back and a few old cannon balls stacked in place as though ready for business. The entire lobby was brightened up with strips of colored crepe paper and a flashy banner.

The Rivoli theatre, Baltimore, obtained this high class window tie-up on "East Is West," with a display of Oriental costumes

Radio Broadcasting Tie-Up is Space Winner for Theatre

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Vincent McFaul, manager of Shea's Hippodrome, got a lot of free space in the columns of a local newspaper when he arranged with the Federal W. G. R. radio station to broadcast a program given by the Yerkes Flotilla Orchestra and Albert Hay Malotte, the new Hippodrome organist. The Courier came in on the publicity end and gave the event wide notice. The orchestra was an added attraction on the Hippodrome bill.

At the station where they were taken with their instruments in a large truck suitably plastered with large signs setting forth the fact that the band was on its way to entertain radio fans, the organization gave a jazz program. The stunt also served to introduce Mr. Malotte, who gave several piano selections.

Eggs 15 Cents Per Dozen—But Only in "Remembrance"

Milwaukee, Wis.—An attention getting one-sheet was prepared especially for the showing of "Remembrance" at Ascher's Merrill theatre, as part of the intensive exploitation campaign arranged by Manager Ralph Wettstein and Goldwynner Walter D. Nealand.

Block one-sheets were printed in green on white, bearing such messages as this:

"Eggs 15 Cents a Dozen—A few years ago but not now—just in 'REMEMBRANCE' at the MERRILL."

The first five words were in large type, as were "Remembrance" and "Merrill," and similar one-sheets were printed on butter and other products.

Forest Fire Effect Gotten in Lobby on "The Storm"

Montgomery, Ala.—A striking forest fire effect, tying up with the big scene in the picture, was gotten on "The Storm" by Manager W. A. Doster of the Strand theatre.

A silhouette forest was cut out of beaver board and mounted in a frame extending almost across the lobby. Several red lamps were placed back of the silhouette, all on flasher sockets. Strips of red and orange crepe paper were attached to the limbs of the trees and were blown up and out by fans concealed behind the frame. When the red lamps lit up it gave a realistic impression of a forest fire.

Diamond Shaped Lobby Stands Made for "Pink Gods"

Gadsden, Ala.—Manager Thomas G. Coleman, of the Imperial theatre, in his campaign on "Pink Gods" prepared for the lobby four large diamonds ranging from four to five feet in height. These were made from beaver-board tinted over with pink calcimine, and each was lettered in blue, giving the title and the cast. One was placed under the box office and the others were suspended in appropriate places from the marquee.

A tie-up was effected with a jewelry store for a display of diamonds. In this display a card telling the people that they could see how these "Pink Gods" were taken from the earth at the Imperial.

Special Lobby Display Used on "Days of Buffalo Bill"

Anniston, Ala.—Manager Roy L. Smart of the Theato put on an unusually intensive campaign at the opening of "In the Days of Buffalo Bill." Photographs were displayed in the lobby in advance and a small wigwam was erected on top of the box office, illuminated from the inside at night.

On the day of showing, a mounted six-sheet was placed in the lobby; also a display of about twenty old-fashioned guns and pistols, procured from a pawnshop, and a number of knives, spears and tomahawks. The street ballyhoo consisted of an old style carriage, covered with signs, driven by a cowboy, with two cowboys ahead and several Indians in the rear, yelling and waving tomahawks. During the showing the doorman and ushers wore genuine Western costumes.

Lobby display, with forest fire effect, arranged at the Queen theatre, Galveston, Texas, on "The Storm"

Full Page Co-operative Ad Is Used on "Confidence"

Seattle, Wash.—R. W. Case, manager of the Columbia theatre, when he played "Confidence" used a full page in colors to good advantage. The ad mainly featured a photo of Rawlinson with bags of gold, and stacks of paper money about him, but was surrounded with small ads of prominent retail firms of all kinds in the city.

From one corner of the ad to the other corner, diagonally across the page, extended a strip of white space, in which was announced the fact that the business firms whose names were printed on the page had become successful and representative because they had earned the "Confidence" of the buying public. Play upon the word "Confidence" was the dominant feature of the ad, which served as a constant reminder of the photoplay.

Timely "Hustle Sheet" Issued on "The Masquerader"

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—Residents of St. Joseph were made acquainted with the "Hustle Sheet" when "The Masquerader" began its run at the Orpheum theatre.

Manager William Reinke used 1,500 copies of the red inked specials which he christened the "Hustle Sheet" and featured the large heading that the English House of Parliament was in an uproar and that John Chilcote had been thrown out.

Coinciding with the cabinet crisis in England it made fertile reading and many citizens failed at first to connect the scare headline with the character in the picture. Using a head that was timely and had a fairly plausible connection with news of the day meant that the "Hustle Sheet" was studied before being thrown away.

Sagebrush Trail Built Up as Lobby Display

ATLANTA, Ga.—In his lobby display on "The Sagebrush Trail," Manager G. M. Phillips, of the Strand theatre, arranged a very attractive "Sagebrush Trail" of his own. The lobby floor was covered with sand and in advantageous places large cut-outs of cactus were placed.

At the entrance to the lobby was a pot hanging from three sticks over a fire, made with red paper and electric light, effected by running a wire under the sand to the pot stand. Back of this were three guns stacked together in pioneer fashion, and still farther back of this was a cut-out on beaverboard of a stone cross announcing the "Sagebrush Trail."

Jail Scene Used in Lobby on "Manslaughter"

SUMTER, S. C.—In his lobby on "Manslaughter," Manager Oscar White of the Rex theatre attempted to create an impression of the story. He had an automobile and a motorcycle cop in the lobby, arranging these to look as though the cop were stopping the car for speeding.

The automobile was a new one borrowed from a local dealer and driven about town with appropriate cards on the sides before being placed in the lobby. The motorcycle was also borrowed, and the "cop" was a clothier's dummy dressed in a policeman's uniform.

On one side of the lobby a jail was suggested by fencing off one corner with lattice strips painted black. The door of this "jail" was open and a cut-out of Leatrice Joy just emerging. A cut-out of Thomas Meighan stood to one side and pointed the way out. In the lobby was also another attractive cut-out of Miss Joy.

Effective Campaign Is Staged on "East Is West"

Des Moines, Iowa.—Manager A. G. Stolte of the Des Moines theatre put over an effective campaign on "East Is West," utilizing the oriental angle to good advantage.

For a prologue, the Love Boat scene was reproduced. For this occasion a soloist was imported from Chicago to sing the "East is West" song. The other two characters in the prologue who provided the atmosphere were regular attaches of the theatre. The back drop was made of translucent silk and the lighting was obtained by spots and electric lights playing through this drop.

The week in advance of the showing Manager Stolte used a rickshaw street ballyhoo. To carry out the atmosphere of the picture Chinese lanterns were kept burning outside and inside the theatre, an inoffensive incense was used and the usherettes were dressed in Chinese costume.

Artistic setting for "Blood and Sand" prologue at Fischer's Appleton theatre, Appleton, Wis., of which H. C. Holah is manager

The Rialto theatre, Enid, Okla., arranged this attractive lobby display on "The Eternal Flame" recently, the front being fenced in.

"Skin Deep" Gets Month's Aid from American Legion

Springfield, Mass.—Full advantage of the opportunity offered by "Skin Deep" for co-operation with the American Legion was taken by the Capitol theatre, which obtained a full month's tie-up with that organization.

The Legion accepted a proposal from the theatre whereby the posts will be able to raise money for their Christmas program. For the entire month of November the Legion will receive from the Capitol theatre a percentage on all tickets which bear the American Legion seal. These tickets are being sold by the Legionnaires. Tickets were good for any performance at any time and were sold at the regular admission prices. A special arrangement, however, was entered into whereby an American Legion ticket would be good for two admissions at any matinee.

The result of the arrangement was that every Legionnaire in the city of Springfield began selling tickets for the Capitol theatre.

In addition to the general arrangement with the Legion, the theatre put on a special Armistice Day celebration, the principal feature of which was "Skin Deep." During the run of "Skin Deep" the theatre gave the candy concession to the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Legion.

Window display obtained by Manager H. B. Clarke of the Strand theatre, Memphis, Tenn., on "The Storm," for two weeks in advance and during run

First 30 Mothers at Theatre Given Gingham Dresses

SPRINGFIELD, Ohio. — The management of the Majestic theatre used an ingenious exploitation angle in exploiting "Silver Wings."

Announcements were made early in the newspapers that 30 well-made and attractive gingham dresses would be given to 30 lucky mothers attending the first matinee. These dresses were displayed in the window of the department store from which they were purchased for several days prior to the opening, thus creating a demand both for the dresses and the picture.

The window contained a large framed poster-picture of Mary Carr and a placard detailing the plan of distributing the apparel. Stills from the production were also scattered about the window.

Chinese Lobby Effect Obtained on "Flesh and Blood"

Atlanta, Ga.—Manager G. M. Phillips of the Strand theatre prepared an effective display on "Flesh and Blood" recently.

The lobby was dressed in keeping with the atmosphere of the picture. The back and side walls of the lobby were inclosed with beaver board covered with wall paper of a Chinese design. On one side was a hand painted impressionistic Chinese scene. Special still frames were worked out in Chinese designs. In the center of the lobby stood an office desk with telephone, ink stand, etc. Behind this were cut-outs of two men, one seated at the desk and the other standing and forcing him to sign a paper. These cut-outs were made from the six-sheet.

Two Page Co-operative Ads Are Put Over in Brooklyn

Brooklyn, N. Y.—Managing Director Edward L. Hyman of the Brooklyn Mark Strand theatre put over what is believed to be an innovation in Greater New York recently, when he obtained a full page co-operative ad on "A Tailor Made Man," and followed it up the next week with one on "The Old Homestead."

For the Strand's share of the page Mr. Hyman took space four columns wide by eight inches deep, using this copy together with the theatre name, star and title and other features of his program: "Clothes, plus ambition make the man, and Charles Ray proves it in his latest and greatest picture sensation—a nine-act comedy drama—Fits him; will please you."

The rest of the page, with the exception of a shallow strip across the top, was taken by Brooklyn tailors, clothiers and haberdashers. The copy tied up either directly or indirectly with the star or the title of the picture.

The following week, also tied up with the Standard Union, a full page of advertisements from real estate dealers was gotten, with the Strand ad on "The Old Homestead" in the center of the page.

Window display of toilet preparations hooked up with "Blood and Sand" for its showing at the Palace theatre, Hamilton, Ohio

"The Love Gambler"

Fox—4682 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

IT seems to us that Fox has enough western stars without putting John Gilbert in a "sombrero" role. Yet he bobs up here as an adventurous disciple of the glorious West who is billed as a youth "from nowhere in particular and bound for the same place." The picture is based upon the familiar "taming of the shrew" formula and naturally offers no highlights. The spectator who has become a follower of Gilbert will certainly be disappointed in this opus—not only in seeing the star miscast but in the conventional development of the plot. Of course one sees the usual fighting between the hero and the villains—to say nothing of card cheating, stolen kisses and what not.

The cowpuncher tames a wild horse by whistling a certain tune and uses the same melody to win the kiss of the ONLY GIRL. But when they show this youth befriending a dying woman by offering to marry her in order that her child might have a name, the logic disappears. The heroine discovers the complications and it must be said that the rancher is in a tight place when the doctor says the dying woman will recover. However her little child overhears the conversation in which the youth tells his sweetheart he cannot marry her because he has sacrificed himself. So there is only one thing to do—eliminate the unfortunate wife. The rest of the plot concerns the heroine's parents determined to prevent their daughter developing her romance with the adventurous ranchman.

The star gives a pleasing performance in scenes which carry very little action. Consequently he hasn't much to do here. The director might have handled his material in more subtle manner giving a few twists to the conventional incident. Instead he has played safe and the picture suffers as a result. It's a type of picture which gives the onlooker a chance to anticipate the happy ending far in advance. With two authors on the job the story should have received some inspiration. But it is quite devoid of novelty. The atmosphere is first rate and the cast renders capable assistance.

| Cameo Colby | Edward Cecil |
| Ricards | Doreen Turner |

By Lillian Bennet-Thompson and George Hubbard. Scenario by Jules Furthman. Directed by Joseph Franz. Photographed by Joe August. Produced by Fox.

The Story—Youth wagers that he will not only ride wealthy ranch owner's horse but that he will also kiss his daughter. He succeeds and gets a job on the ranch. He is ordered off when he declares his love for the girl. Later he marries a dying woman to give her son a name. The other girl admires him for it and forgives him. Eventually they find romance and happiness.

Classification—Western melodrama based upon spirited youth determined to win girl against heavy odds. Typical incident.

Production Highlights—The taming of the horse and the taming of the woman. Good photography. Suitable atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing up star who has come ahead rapidly the past year. Would not suggest featuring the story as it is none too strong.

Drawing Power—Will probably draw in second and third class downtown houses.

"Pawned"

Selznick—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

FRANK L. PACKARD wrote the story of this entertaining picture. Therefore one expected something different. All expectations are realized. "Pawned," is one of the most absorbing filmplays of the past few months. It is chock full of action and the climax in which an automobile is driven off a ferry pier into the water, carrying its occupants with it, is a real thriller and to say the least, realistically staged.

The production is fortunate in its fine cast. Tom Moore has the leading role and invests it with his usual appealing portrayal. Edith Roberts is the attractive leading woman. Charles Gerard contributes another good characterization to his long list in the role of Dr. Crang, who has "Pawned" his soul to dope. James Barrows as "Old Hawkins" is one of the highlights of the picture. It's a splendid bit of acting. Joseph Swickard of "The Four Horsemen" cast, is seen as Paul Veniza, owner of a traveling pawn shop and Billy Elmer and Mabel Van Buren have minor roles.

The photography throughout, especially during the under-water scenes is especially artistic and clear. Irvin V. Willat's direction has had much to do with entertaining qualities of the offering. The story opens in the South Sea Islands, where there are some colorful as well as thrilling scenes and winds up in the heart of New York's East Side. There's something doing every moment and most audiences will be kept on the edge of their seats with the thrill of it all. Some of the fights that Moore puts up are all that could be desired. "Pawned" is out of the beaten path. It's worth while.

The Cast

|---|---|
| John Bruce | Tom Moore |
| Claire Veniza | Edith Roberts |
| Dr. Crang | Charles Gerard |
| Paul Veniza | Joseph Swickard |
| Old Hawkins | John Barrows |
| Hawkins' wife | Mabel Van Buren |
| Crang's aide | Billy Elmer |

By Frank L. Packard. Directed by Irvin V. Willat. Produced under the personal supervision of J. Parker Read, Jr.

The Story—A young American, stranded in the South Sea Isles, makes a bargain with a wealthy gambler to conduct a secret investigation for him. Landing in New York he meets up with a beautiful girl, daughter of a pawn broker whose trade is helped by the gambling casinos. The two fall in love. The girl is annoyed by a young doctor, a drug addict, who wants to marry her. He plots against the man he thinks is his rival. His plotting carries the hero through some stirring adventures. The hero and the girl find happiness.

Classification.—A good heart interest melodrama packed with action.

Production Highlights—The absorbing story by Frank L. Packard. The fine work of Tom Moore, Edith Roberts, James Barrows, Charles Gerard and others in the cast. The scene in which the hero, about to die, is saved by the drug-crazed doctor on condition that the girl promise to marry him. The thrilling climax when Old Hawkins drives his car with the doctor and the girl off a ferry pier into the harbor.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise playing up the fact that the author of "The Miracle man," wrote this story. Also boost the fine cast. The title will suggest various tie-ups with jewelry stores where window displays can be put over. Let your patrons know about the thrills in the picture.

Drawing Power—This one will please audiences in any house. It should be a box office winner.

"The Danger Point"

American Releasing—5,807 Feet

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

A SPLENDID program picture. Not out of the ordinary, insofar as it deals with a worn theme of the eternal triangle. However, it is presented with a rather new angle introducing some bits of drama in a gripping sort of way and tells its story with commendable directness. And one unusual point is that it does not make a villain of the man who coveted his neighbor's wife.

It's all about a young prospector, who, several years previous to the action in the story, struck oil and became immensely wealthy. Instead of going back to the city to spend his accumulated wealth, he remains among the people who have learned to trust and reverence him, so that when the settlement takes on proportions of a town. it is called "Benton."

At the zenith of Benton's career the arrival of an attractive girl from the east, changes everything.. Benton's friend and business associate cares for the girl, but she cares only for Benton and finally invites his proposal. Following their honeymoon, Benton plunges again into work, which does not please the young wife and the inevitable happens. However, the wreck of the train which is carrying her away from her home, sends her back on a relief truck. Meantime a great oil well has burst into flames and threatens destruction of the town. Benton's heroic efforts prevent. However, this introduces two spectacular sequences and gives the picture considerable distinction. It is not a masterpiece, but is thoroughly clean, well directed and photographed entertainment, offering a good cast and necessary background.

The Cast

|---|---|
| Alice Torrance | Carmel Myers |
| James Benton | Wm. P. Carleton |
| Duncan Phelps | Vernon Steel |
| Benjamin | Joseph J. Dowling |
| Sam Biggs | Harry Todd |
| Elvira Hubbard | Margaret Joslin |

The Story—James Benton, founder of the Western town which bears his name, falls in love with Alice Torrance, a girl from the city, whose high spirits and love of innocent amusement make it difficult for her to adapt herself to the big, quiet man interested in oil wells. Alice is proud and resents Benton's seeming indifference. Consequently, while the oil wells burn and Benton is absent, she writes a letter of farewell and leaves on the train. Duncan Phelps, an admirer of old, appears in her compartment and she repulses him just as a wreck overwhelms them with darkness. At the moment Benton reads his wife's note word comes of the disaster. He is torn with anguish and self-reproach. The relief train returns with Alice uninjured ,and Duncan Phelps who is dying. He exonerates Alice, which Benton understands and declares there is nothing to forgive.

Classification—Comedy drama of western rural type, although action takes place in a good sized town, which has grown from settlement to important oil center.

Production Highlights—When oil well ignites and the spreading of fire threatens destruction of entire town. The train wreck and arrival of relief train.

Exploitation Angles—Offers several suggestions for artistic prologue. Also, there is a blind "fiddler" of appeal, in the story which might interest music stores and dealers in violins.

Drawing Power—There are a number of well known players in the cast, including some who have been starred. It would be well to accentuate the cast in the advertising.

"The Village Blacksmith"

Fox—Eight Reels

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

THIS will probably look more like a screen version of a Lincoln J. Carter melodrama to the majority than a picture founded upon Longfellow's famous poem. At that there is very little of the schoolroom classic in it. One will look in vain for the spreading chestnut tree. In fact it carries none of the charming simplicity of the original, the scenario writer putting in what constitutes all the ingredients which compose the average screen rural melodrama. Some may call it a "father" picture in that the breadwinner is called upon to assume mother's place in the rearing of his family. The picture is thickly coated with sentiment, yet it tugs at the heart because of it. Then, too, the thrills have been gathered together in a goodly collection.

You will remember that Longfellow told no story in his poem. Paul Sloane, the scenarist, merely capitalizes the title here. Otherwise it carries all the accepted melodramatic tricks of the trade. One sees the mighty smith living his life in a God-fearing manner. He is happy until the shadows bring evil gossip and the villainy skinflint squire and his scapegrace son. The latter attempts to trifle with the affections of the smithy's daughter. Knowing that she holds a sum of money belonging to the church he succeeds in stealing it. Then the village gossip starts the native tongues a-wagging and the girl, becoming desperate over her plight, determines to drown herself. But her father saves her at the water's edge. Meanwhile the crippled brother, learning of the college boy's duplicity, crawls on hands and knees in a driving storm to the squire's house where he denounces the youth to his father. The reward is a horsewhipping.

The picture makes a bid for tears and aside from a few theatrical touches, such as the crippled boy crawling over the ground, succeeds in arousing much sympathy. The idea is familiar, isn't it? But it manages to entertain because of the even development of the story. William Walling makes a rugged figure of the blacksmith and plays his role with a great deal of earnest effort. Perhaps the truest part of the picture is in the early scenes of childhood.

The Cast

John Hammond, the Village Blacksmith ..... William Walling
The Blacksmith's Wife ..... Virginia True Boardman
Alice, his daughter ..... Virginia Valli
Alice, as child ..... Ida Nan McKenzie

Gideon Crane ..... Lon Poff
Aunt Hattie ..... Cordelia Callahan
A Village Gossip ..... Eddie Gribbon
The Flapper from the City ..... Lucile Hutton

Founded upon poem by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow. Scenario by Paul Sloane. Directed by Jack Ford. Photographed by George Schneiderman. Produced by Fox.

Classification—Original story founded upon Longfellow's famous poem. Melodrama of small town featuring heart interest, sentiment and pathos.

Production Highlights—The storm scene. The scene when crippled youth drags himself over ground in the storm to the squire's house. The good work of the cast, particularly William Walling, Virginia Valli, Gordon Griffith and Tully Marshall. The atmosphere.

Exploitation Angles—Would advise capitalizing the title, using the poem for a teaser campaign. Would suggest using an atmospheric plot, based upon poem. Picture suggests advertising as colorful melodrama. Also a colorful prologue.

Drawing Power—Will appeal in all downtown houses and throughout neighborhood theatres.

In the Pathe comedy "The Ropin' Fool," Will Rogers' famous lasso prevents a mouse from further intrusion.

"Good Men and True"

Film Booking Offices—5400 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

HARRY CAREY comes forward in his second F. B. O. release—a picture which may be classified as among the best he has ever made and far ahead of all his old time program offerings. This is largely due to the clever intermingling of laughs with thrills. They've been doing this same thing on the New York stage with such huge success that it does one good to see it on the screen.

"Good Men and True" is a Western election story. Yet it is not simply riding and shooting. Starting off in a conventional manner it soon shows its originality by introducing Tully Marshall in a comedy role. From this point the action develops a sure-fire touch. It carries sufficient romance, humor and thrills, ending with a ride-to-the-rescue that will have the enthusiastic spectator in a firm grip of suspense. And right in the middle of a fast-moving action the Carey personality is evidenced by a neat touch of humor.

The star is a candidate for sheriff in a western town. Noah Beery is his opponent. After bumping the hero off a high cliff in an effort to kill him, Beery does some kidnapping on election day so that Carey is suspected of making a getaway after a murder is committed. The rescue is affected in a unique way, and Carey takes his revenge by substituting for the "rubber" while Beery is taking a Turkish bath. One may well imagine the humor which is conveyed here—humor which is excellently balanced with the thrills. The final punch scene discloses the rescue of the girl with the star fighting a dozen from the head of the staircase, aided by a fire-hose. But his opponents turn off the water and things look bad until a dozen rescuers ride full speed into the dance hall and end it with a lively scrimmage.

"Good Men and True" carries all the qualities of sure-fire entertainment for the biggest and smallest houses. It is a thoroughly human picture—picture out of the ordinary. As a result it is lifted into the class of better westerns. Vola Vale is a winsome heroine.

The Cast

J. Wesley Pringle ..... Harry Carey
Georgie Hibbler ..... Vola Vale
Simon Hibbler ..... Thomas Jefferson
S. S. Thorpe ..... Noah Beery
Bowerman ..... Chas. J. LeMoyne
Fite ..... Tully Marshall
Mrs. Fite ..... Helen Gilmore

By Eugene Manlove Rhodes. Scenario by George Edwardes Hall. Directed by Val Paul. Photographed by Wm. Thornley and Robert DeGrasse.

The Story—Westerner running for sheriff discovers that he has several enemies determined to get rid of him. The candidate is shoved off a high cliff but he bobs up to execute revenge. The hero not only wins the election but the affections of the girl whom he rescues from several villains.

Classification—Western melodrama featuring story based upon candidate running for office of sheriff. Typical Carey incident. Plenty of romance, humor and thrills.

"The Young Rajah"

Paramount—Six Reels

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

FROM a comparative standpoint, this picture does not hold its own with previous productions from which Rodolph Valentino rose to the heights of his popularity. It is not the fault of the star, either, since his work is on a par with that he has done previously. But the story is illogical, the action slow and it would seem to have been concocted with a view to supplying the star with a vehicle in which he would be called upon to wear costume with headgear similar to that worn in "The Sheik." Therefore, with no evident regard for the importance of a well told story, "The Young Rajah" was employed.

There are some exciting moments and at times the star is decidedly appealing. There are some wonderful sets, some splendid staging, a superb cast and splendid effects, but the "punch" is lacking. It is tiresome.

Nevertheless, followers of Valentino's pictures, whose admiration for the star bring them in anyway, will find a great deal to gratify their desires to see him in the part of the young lover and in all the paraphernalia which he wears to extreme advantage. But it is not a story that brings his characteristic talents into good play and it is not likely that "The Young Rajah" will accentuate his success, or place him any higher in rank among screen stars whose increasing popularities depend upon good vehicles.

Among the younger set of women, the picture will possibly be acceptable. It will not, however, strengthen the star's value with followers of really worth while screen plays, nor with men.

The Cast

Amos Judd ..... Rodolph Valentino
Molly Cabot ..... Wanda Hawley
Amos Judd (as a boy ..... Pat Moore
Joshua Judd ..... Charles Ogle
Sarah Judd ..... Fanny Midgely
Horace Bennett ..... Robert Ober
Slade ..... Jack Giddings
John Cabot ..... Edward Jobson
Narada ..... Joseph Swickard
Maharajah ..... Bertram Grassby
Tehjunder Roy ..... J. Farrell MacDonald
General Gadi ..... George Periolat

Dr. Fettiplace ..... Joseph Harrington
Caleb ..... Spottiswoode Aitken

The Story—The peaceful life of a middle-aged couple, living in Connecticut, U. S., was one night interrupted, during a violent storm, by the coming of a pair of Hindus who brought with them a little boy. A note explained to the couple that a brother, located in Calcutta was sending them this boy to keep as their own. It developed that the child was heir to a throne, but he was brought up in ignorance of his identity until an opportune time arrived, when he was told in part by his foster father, how he happened to be in America and why. Having given the Hindu lad the name of Amos, he was known as Amos Judd and entered college under that name. There he won laurels for himself in many ways and eventually met the girl of his dreams. In time, the Hindu throne occupied by an usurper, demands the rightful Rajah, so Amos Judd is called upon to return to the Far East and assume his position as a ruler, the day before his wedding to the beautiful American girl. In the end, he has a vision of the re-uniting, and a part of the story introduces his marvelous sense of foresight so that he has a presentiment of happenings in future.

Classification—Spectacular love-drama, embodying college life, home life and life in the Orient.

Production Highlights—Boat race scene when Amos Judd makes Harvard the winner. Scenes in the mystic temples of India, presided over by Hindu forecast experts. Scenes in palatial home of young woman who gives a "reincarnation party" with the guests in fancy costume.

Exploitation—Many possibilities here. A picture that will tie up with most anything, and stand for any amount of sensational advertising.

"You Never Know"

Vitagraph—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Charles Larkin)

THE plot of this picture does not require much brain work to figure out, but it has its moments. Like "Fortune's Mask," Mr. Williams' last starring vehicle, this feature has a Central American flavor, much of the story having to do with intrigue to overthrow the government of one of the thousand or more fictitious republics which seem to exist in this land, according to motion picture authors.

The hero is a sort of mysterious cuss. Hence the title "You Never Know." That is no matter how bad a fellow may look, it's not much of a job for a picture writer to make him rise rapidly in the world. In this case our hero turns out to be nothing less than a secret service operative for Uncle Sam.

"You Never Know" is fortunate in having such an attractive leading lady as Gertrude Astor, who in addition to being a very acceptable heroine, wears some gowns that are a fashion show in themselves and are sure to please the feminine part of any audience. Then there is a young man named Coy Watson, Jr., who in the role of Muggsy puts over some original comedy of the Wesley Barry type. Coy's dog is also a splendid little actor. Mr. Williams is acceptable as Eddie Manning in which character he is called upon to put up some red blooded fistic battles.

The cabaret atmosphere has been transferred to the screen in adequate manner. In these scenes Claire DuBrey is seen in Spanish dances as well as some emotional antics. There is a novel scene in the picture. Our hero is captured by the plotters and thrown into a room. Muggsy's dog discovers him through a window. Muggsy rounds up his gang of kids and they clean up the place, helping Manning to escape. The attempt of Manning to rob Medina's room, his discovery and near shooting is a dramatic moment. Technically the picture leaves little to be desired.

Everything considered, it is a good program release which should please in the theatres for which it is intended. It has been attractively staged and should provide good entertainment of its sort.

The Cast

|---|---|
| Eddie Manning | Earle Williams |
| Miriam Folansbee | Gertrude Astor |
| Carlos Medina | George Field |
| Inez | Claire DuBrey |
| Muggsy | Coy Watson, Jr. |
| Jasper Folansbee | James Conway |
| Jose DeSilva | Louis Dumar |
| Miguel | Leonard Trainor |

Scenario by J. Raleigh Davies. Directed by Robert Ensminger. Photographed by Ernest F. Smith.

The Story—Deals with the plotting of a reactionary party to control the government of a South American republic and the efforts of a U. S. secret service man to thwart the plot.

Classification—A romantic drama dealing with the workings of the federal secret service and the time-honored South American revolution stuff.

Production Highlights—The beauty of the leading lady, Gertrude Astor, and the striking gowns she wears. A kid actor, Coy Watson, Jr., who gives us some Wesley Barry stuff. The good Spanish cabaret sets. The dancing of Claire DuBrey. The attempted robbery of Medina's room by Manning and the near-shooting of the latter. The motorboat-sailing vessel chase.

Exploitation Angles—The title. The popularity of the star. His attractive leading lady and the gowns she wears. A kid actor who you can play up. Advise playing up the secret service theme.

Drawing Power—Suitable for second class downtown houses that can show average program pictures. Good for neighborhood houses and in the towns.

"Through Three Reigns"

Hepworth—Five Reels

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

THIS is a novelty feature. It has no story and has been edited with a view to showing actual incidents in history, using the motion picture camera's accurate description of happenings as far back as twenty-four years ago. It is not generally known that the process of taking pictures of objects in motion was so perfect at that time. Nevertheless, the striking point of this offering is the splendid photography and preservation of the negative. Beginning with "Coaching, Twenty-four Years Ago," to which considerable footage is devoted, "The Henley Regatta on the Thames, in 1898,' follows. Then comes "Queen Victoria's Visit to Dublin." This was in 1899 and the festivities are as well and plainly photographed as similar occasions of today. The balance of the footage includes the Funeral of Queen Victoria with Edward VII and the German Kaiser following the bier; Coronation procession of Edward VII.

Departure of soldiers for South Africa during the Boer War is shown, and the return of the heroes of Ladysmith on H. M. S. Powerful.

Edward VII and Queen Alexandra visit Ireland. Kaiser Wilhelm reviews British troops at Shornecliff, England, on his celebrated white charger (1902). Kitchener of Khartoum returns after the winning of the Boer War. Field Marshal Lord Roberts unveiling statue of Queen Victoria. Then comes an amusing episode illustrating trick photography twenty years ago, introducing the first examples of 'the horseless carriage.'

The funeral procession of Edward VII with glimpses of the Kaiser, King Alfonso XIII of Spain, Manuel of Portugal, George V, the young Prince of Wales, the Dowager Empress of Russia and other celebrities in line, compiles another interesting departure, as does the coronation of George V and Queen Mary.

The balance includes launching the first battleship of the Dreadnought type. Motor-car races of twenty years ago; the Gordon Bennett race of 1902. State processions of other lands—India and Japan. Wheat harvesting in Egypt and Italy. Investiture of the Prince of Wales at Carnavon, Wales, 1911.

A surprisingly worthy issue of events worth seeing on the screen.

"One Week of Love"

Selznick—Seven Reels

(Reviewed by Lillian Gale)

MOTION pictures are often exploited as "adapted from an original." Which does not always mean that the story offers any decided originality. However, in "One Week of Love," Edward J. Montagne and George Archainbaud have hit upon a new angle that may safely be declared as "original." Therefore, the item of first value, in enumerating the merits of this production, is the story. It isn't melodrama, although it embraces all the thrills and dramatic moments necessary to keep the interest at the boiling point. It isn't a comedy, yet laugh provoking incident and scintillating sub-titles keep the humor at high. It isn't satire, yet there is present amusing travesty. It is at times spectacular, contains a dash of everything resulting in corking good entertainment delightfully new.

We find Elaine Hammerstein cast as an altogether frivolous heiress, who dwells in a palatial abode, surrounded with spacious grounds and every sort of diversion provided for. Her birthday party, to which guests are bid come in their bathing suits, introduces the plot. Interiors for this home required lavish sets and careful detail. Nothing is lacking in elegant realism.. Then comes the race in an aeroplane, the girl's hand in marriage to a man she is not quite sure she cares for, the stake. He makes a sucessful flight, but the heiress is lost in fog and finally chashes into a shack somewhere in Mexico, fifty miles from civilization. There she becomes the unwiling guest of a good "bad-man" characterized by Conway Tearle. The co-stars are at their individual best and their respective roles truly "made to order." Exteriors in the Mexican waste naturally add scenic value, while the climax depicts one of the most realistic train wreck disasters to date.

In conclusion "One Week of Love" is an unusually well directed picture, with a cast of extraordinary merit and pleasing photography. A microscopic view might unearth a few flaws, but it would be a nuisance to spoil a delightful motion picture trying to find them.

The Cast

| | |
|---|---|
| Beth Wynn | Elaine Hammerstein |
| Buck Fearnley | Conway Tearle |
| Francis Fraser | Hallam Cooley |
| Mrs. Wynn, Beth's Aunt | Kate Lester |

The Story—A spoiled and dangerously rich girl celebrates her twenty-first birthday by giving a party, the festivities beginning with the use of her private bathing pool and pretentious home. She owns and flies an aeroplane. So does a son of the idle rich who persistently proposes to Beth. They agree to race to decide the question of her answer. He makes a successful flight, but Beth is lost in a fog, and when "trouble" brings the machine to a rapid descent, it crashes into a shack located in an almost totally uninhabited waste in Mexican territory. There she finds three men, two "greasers" and an American renegade. They cut cards for her; the American wins, but instead of taking her back to civilization, leads her to his shack where she is made an unwilling captive. The "greasers" disappointed, follow. In a fight both Mexicans are killed and the American wounded. Then complications follow, which, after seven days, decides the American to report her whereabouts. His message brings the winner of the race to Beth's rescue, but her hatred for the American has undergone a change, which, following a great train wreck, with Beth and her friend passengers, the American to the rescue, turns to love. Circumstances have brought out his identity as a gentleman born, and changed Beth's idea of a good time from her former mode of living to a desire to be taken back to the shack in the open, on her honeymoon.

Classification—Variation of melodrama, comedy, satire, and "western." In parts, decidedly spectacular.

Production Highlights—Beth's party, which portrays a sort of millionaire's revel; Beth's fall in an aeroplane; the desert storm.

ITEMS OF THE EXCHANGES AND THEATRES

St. Louis Slants

The Sho-To-All theatre, Carthage, Mo., is dark. It will not open for several weeks unless the plans of the management are changed. The Caulkins Amusement Company has been operating the house.

The Callao, Mo., theatre conducted by Goodrich Brothers, has closed its doors. Poor business was the cause.

Alderman Edward Scholl, of the Second Ward, one of the early moving picture men of St. Louis, was laid to rest in St. Mathew's Cemetery on November 1. In the early days when O. T. Crawford was a power in St. Louis filmdom, Scholl was one of his associates. He built the Bremen theatre, and also was interested in the Montgomery, Novelty, Kings and Union theatres with Crawford at one time. He quit the movies in 1915 when he sold his Bremen theatre to Joe Mogler. But he was always friendly to the exhibitors and voted against censorship, Sunday closing, daylight saving, and other bills aimed at the movies. During recent years Scholl was interested in several street carnivals.

The Rivoli theatre, owned by Universal, opens on Saturday, November 11, a week ahead of schedule "The Storm" is to be the feature.

The new $1,250,000 Le Claire theatre, Moline, Ill., owned by Fred L. Cornwell, will be put in operation within the next few weeks. The house was dedicated several weeks ago, but is not quite complete.

Frank E. Jones, 76 years old, veteran of St. Louis theatre men and for twenty-five years manager of the old Pickwick theatre at Jefferson and Washington avenue, which was then the leading suburban house of St. Louis, was buried at Overland, Mo., on Wednesday, November 1. He retired in 1904.

A record attendance was reported at the sixteenth annual Movie Ball, given under the auspices of the operators organization at Arcadia Dance Hall, Friday, November 3. United States Senator James A. Reed was among those present.

The Apple Blossom theatre, Hardin, Ill., owned by A. S. Talley, opened on November 9.

Leon De La Mothe, production manager for the Mid-West Productions, announced that the company will commence work shortly on the first of a series of twelve two-reel Northwestern police pictures to be made for Canyon Pictures Corporation. The Company also will make "The Eyes of Mystery," a serial.

Buffalo's Film Row News

THE new Warner Brothers' Exchange has been opened on the fourth floor of the new Film Building in North Pearl street. It is in charge of P. H. Smith, formerly manager of the First National and United Artists' Exchange and recently connected with the Goldwyn sales staff. The first showing in Buffalo of a W. B. feature will be at the Strand soon when "Rags to Riches" will be presented for a week. Mr. Smith has signed up first, second, third and fourth runs in Syracuse and Fulton has closed for the W. B. product 100 per cent. Mr. Smith is now screening "The Dangerous Adventure" for local exhibitors.

E. J. Hayes, manager of the First National office, is already planning for First National week, February 4 to 10. The F. N. office staff had one big time at the Hallowe'en party held in the exchange, Saturday evening, October 28.

Harry Marsey, general manager of Niagara Pictures Corporation, has acquired the up-state distribution rights on "Below the Deadline." Ralph Mau, formerly assistant booker at Paramount, and Eddie Fisher are now members of the Niagara sales staff. Mr. Marsey is associated with Sol Myers in putting on Sunday shows at the Criterion, the local Shubert vaudeville house.

Ralph Myerson, of Macmy Pictures, who puts out the Local-Grams, journeyed to New York last week. Mrs. Bork in addition to her office duties, is also acting as saleswoman for Local-Grams. In Buffalo the following houses are showing this subject—Loew's State, Criterion, Happy Hour, Emblem, Elk, Kensington, Capitol, and all the General Theatres Corporation houses.

Sydney Samson, manager of the Grand and North Exchange, went to New York for the trade showing of "Shadows," accompanied by Charlie Hayman, of the Strand theatre, Niagara Falls, N. Y. Mr. Samson announces that "I am the Law" is now ready for distribution through Grand and North. Jack Krause is now covering the Syracuse territory for the Samson Exchange. He was formerly with Pathe. H. D. McCredie and Irving Weiss, newcomers in the business, have been added to the Grand and North staff.

Clarence Snyder, office manager for Goldwyn, was host at the Hallowe'en party for the young ladies of the exchange at his home. A large time was had by all. Oh, yes, the girls had their beaux with them. No chance for Clarence to have that bevy of beauty all to himself.

Buffalo Briefs

The Park theatre in Bath, N. Y., was destroyed by fire last week, just one day before Charles H. Thomas was to turn the lease over to Harold P. Dygert and Associated Theatres, Inc. The loss is estimated at $20,000. It is announced that the Comerford Amusement Company of Scranton, Pa., will build a new 1,400-seat theatre in the town on the site of the Bath National bank property. J. R. Cadeset is in Bath completing arrangements for the new theatre.

Albert Hay Malotte and the new Wurlitzer organ were introduced to Shea Hippodrome patrons the past week with the crowds breaking all records. Other music features at the Hippodrome include a 40-piece orchestra, vocal and instrumental soloists. It is announced that Mr. Shea is planning to bring Victor Herbert to Buffalo soon as guest conductor.

Goldwyn and the Mark-Strand have completed an arrangement whereby the distributing company will present its big productions for week runs in the Strand, commencing December 3, with "Remembrance."

Bruce Fowler, former manager of the Elmwood, has left town to assume his new duties as manager of the Indiana theatre, Terre Haute, Ind., and Elmer C. Winegar is on the job as the new Elmwood manager.

Eddie Weinberg postcards from Atlantic City that he is enjoying his first vacation in many years. The former Strand manager will soon go to Brooklyn and New York to study methods of operation at the Strand theatres in those cities before assuming the management of the new Strand in Troy, N. Y.

Virginia Pearson was at the top of the Loew State bill the past week and Manager Al Beckerick put over a lot of shopping tour stuff as a publicity stunt.

Films are now being shown in the Criterion theatre. Sol Myers, manager, and Harry Marsey of Niagara Pictures Corporation, are putting on the film bills.

Bill Callahan, general manager of the Regorson corporation of Rochester, paid his first visit in two years to Buffalo last week.

Cleveland Flashes

The Cleveland Motion Picture Exhibitors' League has moved from the Film Exchange Building back to its old location in the Colonial Hotel.

Fred Desberg, general manager of Loew's Ohio Theatres, spent several days of this week in New York.

Caldwell Brown, manager of the Liberty theatre, Zanesville, was seen on Film Row this week. Brown has closed with C. E. Almy for an early showing of Metro releases.

John Kessler, manager of the Alhambra theatre, Canton, is recovering from a serious illness which has kept him away from business for several weeks.

L. B. Cool, manager of the Feiber-Shea circuit of houses in Ohio, was in New York this week.

A new motion picture theatre with 1,000 seats is to be built in Cleveland on Madison avenue at a cost of approximately $75,000. Work is to be started at once on the building, which will contain stores and apartments, as well as the theatre. This is a newly developed residential section, and the theatre will be the only one in the neighborhood.

Des Moines Chatter

Albert C. Dunkel, better known as Punch, proprietor of the Pastime theatre at Iowa City, has received through the Deaton agency, a check for $100 representing rain insurance on "The Eternal Flame" featuring Norma Talmadge.

The picture was insured against rain on Saturday and Sunday, October 21 and 22, of one tenth inch rain. On Sunday it rained to twelve one hundredth inch, hence the payment of the insurance which is thought to be the first instance of motion picture insurance in Johnston county.

Ruth Burgum, daughter of Dan Burgum of the Garden theatre, broke her right arm when she fell on the high school stairway. So far she hasn't heard whether she'll get out of any exams thereby.

A Pathe salesman tells of an exhibitor in the heart of the farming district who advertised that he would take farm products in exchange for tickets to the show. He hadn't been able to get much business before, but he found a market for the butter and eggs and profited by this scheme.

Kansas City Brevities

Another new large negro motion picture house will make its debut in Kansas City soon. Kopoulos Bros. & Co., who operate the Princess theatre in Kansas City, Kas., and the Columbia theatre in Kansas City, Mo., have completed plans for a $45,000 house, seating 1,200, to be located at Harrison street and Independence avenue, Kansas City, Mo. The theatre will be known as the New Columbia theatre, the present Columbia theatre being doomed to be remodeled for store rooms upon the completion of the new house.

---

Topeka, Kas., is at last to have a first class motion picture house. Roy Crawford, vice-president of Associated Exhibitors, L. M. Miller, Wichita, Kas., exhibitor, and L. M. Crawford, father of Roy Crawford, are planning the erection of a $300,000 house, to have a seating capacity of 1,900. At present the largest theatre in Topeka seats but 700 persons.

---

The Kansas City Star "broke the ice" of conservation this week and ran the following article, "When Knighthood Was in Flower," now playing at Frank L. Newman's Royal theatre, as a news item:

"The film, 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' is playing to capacity audiences at the Royal theatre and spectators are receiving it with enthusiasm.

"'From our first three days' attendance it looks as though the picture is going over bigger than anything we have ever played at the Royal,' Fank L. Newman, owner of the theatre, said. 'People seem carried away with it, judging from expressions we hear in the lobby, and do not object to its length.'"

D. W. Griffith, director, has agreed to select from photographs of candidates, the cast of a 5-reel picture portraying life at the University of Missouri. The production, which will be made at Columbia, Mo., the home of the state university, will include an entire cast of students and will be shown throughout the state to advertise the university. The project is being promoted by the university alumni association and members of the student council and will be the first production to be released, dealing strictly with life at a state university, it is said. A group of photographs of university co-eds were sent to Mr. Griffith this week and from this group Mr. Griffith will select six who, in his opinion, will photograph best. Some time this month a professional casting director will come to Columbia to take interior and exterior shots.

Students in the school of engineering will transform Columbia and the surrounding territory into a miniature Hollywood. They also will erect a studio for the filming of the picture. The 5-reel film will be laid in Columbia and the hills and valleys surrounding the town for about ten miles.

In Washington's Film Center

ROBERT SMELTZER, supervisor for the Eastern district of the Pathe organization was a visitor, in mid-week. After a tour from New England to the local office, he expressed a feeling of satisfaction with things in general and the marked improvement in Pathe bookings. He was a former Washington film man himself.

J. Howard Beaver, manager of the Preferred Pictures Corporation here, returned from the Al Lichtman get-together, last week and was called on by special representative L. D. Netter of New York City. Mr. Netter seems favorably impressed by Washington and by the success of Tom Moore and Beaver in boosting the Al Lichtman product from Delaware to Virginia. The showing of "Shadows," impressed Mr. Beaver and increased his enthusiasm for the Schulberg product.

The temporary reorganization of the Goldwyn organization which brought George Hickey here as district manager for a while, in charge of Boston, Philadelphia, Buffalo and local exchanges has prepared the ground for a more permanent arrangement, and now it is anounced here that Felix Mendelsohn of Philadelphia, who called at th Washigton exchange last week, would relieve Mr. Hickey who has been put in charge of the Chicago Big Three district with Chicago, Milwaukee and Minneapolis exchanges in his care. Supervisor Mendelsohn will continue to make headquarters at Philadelphia, and paying the usual flying visits to Buffalo, Boston, Wilmington, Baltimore, Washington, etc.

Lou Bache of First National returned from a successful southern trip, on which he placed year contracts with Otto Wells of the Wells Norfolk chain for $125,000 worth of First National product. A big showing of "East Is West" in Cumberland was the result of the return of several salesmen from the Washington branch. During this trip the 26 points visited netted 90 per cent business.

Harry M. Crandall was complimented by his organization upon the graceful dancing he rendered as partner to his youngest debutante daughter, at the Hallowe'en party of the First National Social Club, a successful exchange organization, which helps the esprit de corps of the Washington office.

Young Benjamin Oletzky, college graduate, and son of Owner Oletzky of the Federated Films, is to break into the film business at the Washington branch of his father's states right house, now the chief office and shipping headquarters for the Federated.

Visiting at Manager Rosenthal's office in the Independent Exchange this last week was J. Louis Rome of Baltimore, and an associate in the Rome group of picture houses there.

Mr. Scherr, former owner of the Brodie Theatre, Baltimore, was a visitor here to introduce the new owner, Mr. Cleinman, accompanied by Mr. Fields, who will be house manager for Cleinman.

Logan Gain booker with the Independent Films, says he is resigning and leaving the film business. It is understood that the booking work will be handled by Miss Mathews, secretary and office manager for Mr. Feldstein of the Federated.

Eddie Phillips interested in local exchanges and well known to the local film row reopened the Regent theatre on 18th, near California street, this week. He already is operating the Revere on Georgia avenue.

Kansas City Film Row News

Sam Goldflam, a veteran salesman in the Missouri and Kansas territory has been employed to travel the key towns, while Fred McCoy is covering Western Missouri and Y. Darnell the northern part of Kansas.

Believed at first to have been fatally injured, Harold Horne, midwest exploitation manager for Film Booking Offices, is recovering from injuries received in a motor car accident in Omaha recently and has left the hospital in which he has been confined and now is convalescing at his home.

A contract has been closed by Thomas A. Curran, special representative of the Arrow Film Corporation, with Richards & Flynn of Kansas City for the distribution in the Kansas City territory of the William Fairbanks and Jack Hoxie western features.

Thursday, at a meeting of the executive board of the Kansas City, Kas., Federation of Parent-Teacher Association at the Chamber of Commerce, a motion picture committee was appointed to meet with the exhibitors in an effort to establish Friday night as "family night" in all theatres. As many school children attend motion picture shows on Friday night, the federation expressed its desire to insure the showing of pictures adapted for children on that night. The committee will include Mrs. J. W. May, Mrs. Clarence Waring, Mrs. O. O. Calflin and Mrs. Nancy Bishop.

Grand Prix Duplicated For Gloria Swanson

The famous Grand Prix, the feature race of the sporting year at Buenos Aires, Argentina, was duplicated by Director Sam Wood during the closing days of "My American Wife," Gloria Swanson's latest Paramount picture.

This story of life and love in a colorful Southern Republic was written by Monte M. Katterjohn, based on a story by Hector Turnbull.

San Francisco Briefs

Herbert L. Rothchild of the "Rothchild Entertainments," and managing directors Eugene H. Roth and J. A. Partington are being congratulated for the manner in which the fifth annual birthday of the California Theatre, one of their four, was celebrated. Special music and special dances brought crowds who went away pleased with the suecial attractions. The theatre opened in November 1917, and it is claimed by its managers to be the first modern moving picture house of its size in the United States. The orchestra, which is one of the largest in the United States, comprising seventy wonderful musicians, is also one of the most famous in the country and is led by Paul Ash. The special "Sunday Morning Concerts" conducted at this moving picture house by Mr. Ash attract music lovers from every section of San Francisco and its environments.

One of the interesting features of the 'California" is that there are just three members of the original staff still on the job. They are: Eugene H. Roth, managing director; Sanford Walter, secretary and Joseph Haigh, doorkeeper.

The post of house manager at the Coliseum Theatre, left vacant by the resignation of R. E. Byard, has been filed by George C. Rhodes, who will also handle the publicity. At one time Rhodes was head usher at that house.

---

Residents of the Old Ladies' University Mound Home were guests one afternoon at Loew's Warfield Theatre, when Mary Carr, famous "Mother" of the screen starred in "Silver Wings." The old ladies were escorted to the theatre in an automobile arranged by the Community Service Recreation League. The ladies especially thanked the management as did the Community Service.

---

The famous Ray Tellier "Syncopated Jazz Octette" has been employed by the management of the Portola Theatre and it will interpret music at that popular motion picture house from now on.

---

Another motion picture theatre has been announced for San Francisco. This theatre will be in the Sunset district according to J. R. Saul, theatre broker. The new theatre will be built at a cost of $150,000 by R. A. McNeil, W. G. Bailey, Charles Moser, and Mortimer Thomas, who have just purchased the Irving Theatre from F. R. Macauley. The Irving will be torn down, but pending the erection of the new building, some alterations will be made to that house and it will be operated as usual until the new theatre is completed.

Messrs. McNeil, Bailey, Moser and Thomas have been associated in the operation and ownership of a number of San Fancisco theatres. In 1920 they built the New Lyceum and a year ago sold it to the present owners. They own the New Broadway theatre in Oakland and the Palmer and Panama in San Francisco. The Panama will be succeeded in a few weeks by a new $150,000 theatre now under construction.

Atlanta Bulletins

At an enthusiastic meeting of the Better Films Committee of Atlanta last week at the Piedmont Hotel, Mrs. B. M. Boykin announced as a feature of her report to the committee that bulletin boards, carrying the names of all pictures endorsed by the committee and the theatre where they are to be shown will be placed in all hotel lobbies, rest rooms, department stores, Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., libraries and other public buildings. Mrs. Boykin and the Committee are urging the public to attend the pictures approved by the committee.

The Atlanta Committee is making the way of other film committees and is fast becoming a model for organizations everywhere. They are going to publish a little "sheet," calling it "The Bulletin," which is to be distributed in the southeast. May the good work go on!

---

Atlanta theatre managers are continually popping up in Atlanta's sporting limelight. First, Bill Kaliska, who formerly managed the Rialto Theatre, accepted a position as football coach at University School for Boys, and is now directing one of the best prep school football teams in Atlanta, believed by many to be the coming city champions. Now "Pup," or rather G. M. Philips of the Strand, former Georgia Tech Football player, announces he will coach a prominent Girl's Basketball Team. Pup's work as coach, however, will not interfere with his management of the Strand, where he is doing some notable exploitation work.

---

Ed Schiller, now representative of Marcus Loew Interests, but formerly Loew's Southern representative, was in Atlanta last week renewing old acquaintances, and incidentally, inspecting Loew houses in the circuit. While in Atlanta Mr. Schiller was the guest of Thomas James, manager of Loew's Grand.

---

Promenaders along Peachtree Street these days are lamenting the tearing down of the Criterion theatre, which has for the last few years been a rather prominent and popular movie theatre in Atlanta. The Criterion is well remembered as the theatre which Willard Patterson brought to life and prosperity.

---

Franklin Farnum made a personal appearance at Loew's Grand Theatre the last half of last week, where he was well received. His appearance was in connection with one of his latest productions.

H. Turner Jones of the public relations department of Southern Enterprises' Atlanta office, is the proud father of a new born son.

Cumberland, Md., Notes

The Crandall-Strand Theatre, through Manager Robert Slote, has leased the theatre to J. William Hunt, for a specified number of grand opera concerts. The concerts will be conducted by Hunt Concert Company, and will break in on open dates only. Two concerts have already been staged. This is the first picture theatre in Cumberland, to undertake presentation of operatic concerts.

Theatre prices were again slashed in this city, when the management of the Crandall-Strand, announced through the various local newspapers, that hereafter special admission prices would prevail. Fifty cent seats were cut to thirty cents, and the rest of the admission cut in proportion.

---

The Maryland Theatre management has anounced that a series of special feature pictures would be exhibited, in the near future. The feature pictures will replace dates that have been cancelled by regular traveling attractions.

---

Theatre managers in the following towns, within 36 miles of Cumberland, report an increase of business. Three theatres in Frostburg, Md., report large increase in attendance due to the mines being under ful steam ahead. Midland, Md., Opera House, reports a light increase. Lonaconing, Md., three theatres reports exceptional increase in attendance. Westernport, Md., one theatre, notes a noticeable increase. Piedmont, W. Va., Opera House and one theatre claims business has jumped considerably. Keyser, W. V., Music Hall and one theatrea show a remarkable change in the theatre business. Altogether taken the towns mentioned, comprise a greater part of the moving picture business in upper Western Maryland, and West Virginia.

---

Complaints have been received regarding the condition of films sent out by various Eastern exchanges. Projectionists and managers are of the opinion that the film is never inspected, hence arriving at the theatre in deplorable condition, and necessitating extra work and worry in order to give a passable exhibition.

According to reports from various managers of Cumberland, a film exchange is to be opened in this city. Persons identified in the film exchange could not be learned at this time.

---

Due to the fact that the coal mines and railroads are working steadily, theatre business in Cumberland, Md., has increased at least thirty per cent above the month of September.

Eastern New York Items

Announcement was made this week that the Goldwyn Distributing Corporation will shortly open a branch in Albany, with Victor Bendel as resident manager. With the opening of this exchange, which will be located in Film Row, Albany will have fourteen exchanges. S. Eckman, Jr., vice-president of Goldwyn, was in Albany for one or two days this week, looking over possible locations. Mr. Bendel, who will manage the exchange, has been associated with Goldwyn for some time past and is well known to the exhibitors over a good part of the state.

---

Fred Sliter, field manager for First National, was in Albany this past week.

---

The Hudson in Watervliet has just been acquired by Elmer Crowninshield, who also owns the Bijou theatre in Troy.

---

"Grandma's Boy" did very well for Fred Elliott of the Clinton Square in this city this week, although it was shown at Proctor's Grand a couple of weeks ago for a straight six days to capacity audiences. This is the first occasion when a first-run house, such as Mr. Elliott's, has taken over a feature for a second-run for an entire week, and exhibitors throughout the city awaited the outcome with interest. At Proctor's Grand, the picture was tied up with vaudeville at an 83 cents admission.

---

Elmer Griffin of Kinderhook was shopping along Film Row here this week.

---

The Pine Hills theatre, owned and operated for several years by Harry Lazarus of this city, was sold this week to C. L. Gardner of Shelburne Falls, Mass. The house was built in 1913, and is a strictly residential theatre in an exclusive section. It has a seating capacity of 600. Mr. Lazarus makes no announcement as to his future plans.

---

---

"Oliver Twist" has been booked by Manager Shirley of the Strand in Schenectady for an early run. The Albany in the same city is planning to show "East is West."

---

The Albany district is still leading the New York and Buffalo branches of First National in the sales contest being conducted over the entire United States at the present time.

News from Carolina Film Centers

W. A. BRANNON of Eltabran is now in Tennessee with some new product which his company controls.

R. D. MacDonald, who has been with First National in North Carolina, has taken a F. B. O. portfolio out of the Atlanta office. C. B. Whitehead, formerly with Eltabran, is also with F. B. O., covering the Carolinas.

Hank Hearn, after spending several days in the Carolinas after seeing the World series, is back in his office at the Southern States Film Company, feeling somewhat enthusiastic over the conditions in his territory.

M. J. Sparks has returned from a business trip through his part of Tennessee.

Joe Marentette has added A. B. Yardley to the staff of the Goldwyn office. Mr. Yardley is a newcomer in the film business.

Jimmy Carrier, Goldwyneer in this territory helped R. G. Allen of the Superba Theatre, Raleigh, put over "Sherlock Holmes" in great shape last week.

With Des Moines Exchanges

THE Famous-Players Lasky exchange moved at one o'clock Saturday. Everyone voted it some job. The new quarters, a new building just built for the exchange staff, are all spick and span. Shorgl, of the staff, says that everywhere he goes he helps move the exchange. He moved them at Minneapolis and Kansas City and now Des Moines.

John Kennebeck arrived on Tuesday to take charge of F. P. exploitation. He's been in newspaper business in Omaha. Right off the bat all the exchange folks voted they liked him, but no one has found out whether or not he's married.

Bill Wiley who has been engaged in film work at some other time though not recently in Des Moines, is acting as salesman for Paramount pictures. This week he went into the territory south. He hasn't any assigned territory, but is hitting the hard spots.

The Alhambra Theatre at Delta, Iowa, is quarantined. Scarlet fever is beseiging Delta, and the theatres are closed for from ten days to two weeks. D. W. Sterling is manager of the theatre.

Florida Flashes

C. D. Cooley, general manager of the Consolidated Amusement Company, of Tampa, Fla., has been in Atlanta the past week filling up the books for his five Tampa theatres.

Business is getting better every day in South Florida. All houses report substantial increase in the box office. Three openings are reported this week. The Sans Souci, in Ybor City, will open Monday, the 6th, with Boufas Cubanas, which means, in English, Comical Cubans, or words to that effect. The New Reliance Theatre at Clermont will open Saturday the 4th under the management of Mrs. Florence Moore Winston, and the Strand Theatre at Palmetto will open upon the same date under the management of Milton Edwards.

"Blue Water" is the name of the picture now being made in Tampa by the New Brunswick Films, Ltd. This company arrived in Tampa last week from Nova Scotia.

Film salesmen who visited the Tampa Exhibitors last week were William H. Wassman of the Film Booking Offices and J. A. McWhorter of the Hodkinson Exchange. Both placed a nice line of bookings with the local theatres.

Abram C. Pheil, the owner of the Pheil Theatre, St. Petersburg, died November 1 after a long illness. Mr. Pheil was one of St. Petersburg's greatest boosters, and the theatre which bears his name is unique, in the fact that it is the only theatre in South Florida with the screen in the front of the building. The theatre is now leased by the Lynch Enterprises.

San Diego News

W. W. Whitson, who has been operating the Plaza, Kinema and California theatres in San Diego, Cal., has now added to his chain the Rialto, which has been operated for the past year by Stout & Weir. This, with the other three, will be included in the recent merger arrangement with the West coast theatres.

The Broadway Theatre in San Diego, Cal., which has been operatted as a motion picture house for a number of years as one of the chain of Bush theatres, has terminated its career as a film theatre and will be remodeled and made into a house for a local stock company to be headed by Alfred Cross.

As an added feature to the showing of "Aloha Oe" at the Rialto Theatre in San Diego, Cal., the management engaged for the week an Hawaiian troupe, consisting of five male musicians and one girl, who gave native dances. This feature was presented at the point in the picture where the hero of the story is seen standing at the entrance of a cabaret listening to the Hawaiian entertainers. This novel innovation added much to the atmosphere of the play.

Monroe Salisbury, well-known motion picture actor, has been appearing on the Pantages' vaudeville circuit throughout thet West coast cities, offering as his number some dramatic readings, including "The House by the Side of the Road" and one of Robert W. Service's war poems.

Seattle Paragraphs

The Princess theatre, under the direction of the H. E. Woolley Theatres Company, Inc., has reopened after being closed for several weeks to undergo extensive remodeling. The house was entirely renovated, new seats put in, a Robert Morton organ installed, and general repairs were made throughout the interior of the house. The foyer was enlarged, and an entirely new lobby and marquee installed. The new marquee combines the name of the theatre with space for the program to be shown in electric lights.

The new policy of the house will be to show only big second run pictures, changing programs twice a week, and running a continuous show from 11 a. m. until midnight. The admission price is fifteen cents at any time. "One Clear Call" was the picture used to reopen the house, and it played to very good business despite the fact that it had finished a two weeks' first run engagement at the Strand only a few weeks previous. The theatre was previously known as the Union, the name being changed while the house was closed.

"Fun From the Press" the new Literary Digest reel being distributed through the Hodkinson corporation, has been booked in this city by the Pantages vaudeville theatre as part of its accompanying motion picture program. The reel is being played up in the theatre's newspaper advertising and is the source of much amusement at the playhouse each week.

Edna Wallace Hopper "the sixty two year old flapper" was the feature of the program at Manager Frank Steffy's Coliseum theatre during the past week. Miss Hopper made five personal appearances daily, telling how she was rejuvenated by modern plastic surgery. Miss Hopper was advertised as the feature of the week.

Oklahoma City Chatter

The Dallas, Texas, Film Exchanges move into new quarters at Harwood and Jefferson about Nov. 1. The ground floor 55x135 will house the Associated First National. On the second floor will be located United Artists and Metro.

The third floor will accommodate Southwestern Film Corporation while the Consolidated will occupy the fourth and top floor. Every modern unit is built for first class service while the building throughout will be strictly fireproof.

Joe Steel, exploitation man for First National at Dallas, Texas, has resigned to accept position as exploitation manager for Melba Theatre at Dallas.

E. S. Lowrey has accepted position as traveler for Paramount at Dallas, Tex.

Will R. Winch told the El Paso, Texas, Ad Club that the production cost of a film had very little to do with its commercial value. He cited some pictures that cost very little, but which became mammoth box-office attractions, due to good exploitation.

Herschel Stuart, formerly with Southern Enterprise at Dallas, Texas, has accepted a position with Famous-Lasky Players as publicity man at St. Louis, Missouri.

Work has started on the new exchange building to be occupied by Box Office Attractions Co., agents for Fox Films, located at Jefferson and Jackson streets, Dallas, Texas.

An unknown man snatched a roll of money from the ticket window of the Liberty Theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., Saturday afternoon, Oct. 28th, and made his escape. The roll contained about $10 in silver.

Robert L. Culley, former commercial agent for the Western Union Telegraph Co., has leased the Broadway Theatre at Oklahoma City, Okla., and will add a number of new improvements.

The First Baptist Church at Temple, Texas, has leased a moving picture theatre at that place for Sunday school meetings, and a class of 500 is expected to be organized by January 1st.

L. M. Ridout has purchased the Rialto and Star theatres at Denison, Texas, from Southern Enterprise, Inc.

Sam Russell has opened a picture show in the Odd Fellows building at Robert Lee, Texas.

The Palace Theatre at Corsicana, Texas, has raised prices from the cut prevailing for some time to 20-20 afternoons and 20 cents balcony to 30 cents orchestra evenings.

The Queen Theatre at Meridian, Texas, has been leased to S. E. Banton by Hornbuckle & Knight.

Tom Carraway has been appointed manager of the Palace Theatre at Breckenridge, Texas.

Under the management of Floyd Stuart, the Amuse Theatre at Corpus Christi, Texas, will reopen as a second grade house.

Springfield, Ill., Jottings

Weather that is more like June or July than October has been responsible for some of the poorest business recorded in a long time at local motion picture theatres. People simply will not attend as long as they can stay outdoors or ride in comfort.

The Madison Theatre of Peoria advertised in both Springfield newspapers for George Beban's engagement in "The Sign of the Rose." With paved roads all the length of the 75 miles, it is an easy thing for motorists to drive over in a few hours' time.

Harry Thornton, manager of the Gaiety, and Mrs. Thornton spent several days in St. Louis lately looking over the Missouri motion picture palaces and visiting with friends.

"Way Down East" was a good buy for the Lyric. The Griffith picture played seven days and it is reported showed a nice profit for the house. The last engagement was the third in this city and made a total of twenty-seven days in all here.

Louis Kerasotes, manager of the Savoy, is about to become a benedict. The wedding will take place about the last week of November. Gus Kerasotes, manager of the Strand, and Louis' brother, celebrated his fifth son's arrival recently.

The Capitol did well with "Why Girls Leave Home." Lee Burnstine had the picture booked for a long time, waited for cold weather, but it never showed up.

The Strand is announcing the coming of "The Storm."

Jackie Coogan, in "Peck's Bad Boy," made a hit with Empress patrons when shown October 29-30.

Johnny Hines, in "Sure Fire Flint," tickled the ribs of Springfield fans for a whole week at the Vaudette, starting October 29. Everybody liked it fine.

The town was full of sea pictures Sunday, October 29. The Gaiety had Betty Compson in "The Bonded Woman" and the Princess had Dorothy Phillips in "Hurricane's Gal." Both were extremely good.

Many local scenario writers have sent in scripts to the De Mille-Los Angeles Times contest. One famous writer wired her entry. The toll was quite heavy.

Pictures that are getting heavy billing for future dates are Marion Davies in "The Young Diana," "Pink Gods" and "The Valley of Silent Men."

The Chamber of Commerce is shortly expecting the Rockett Company here to film scenes of "Abraham Lincoln."

Unusual Contract Given for "Dr. Jack"

Pathe's guaranteed contract with the Mission theatre, Los Angeles, whereby that house secures an exclusive Southern California run of Harold Lloyd's new five-reel comedy, "Dr. Jack," is reported to be exceptional in the history of feature pictures off any type.

At the time of the execution of this contract all of the Los Angeles daily newspapers gave much space to the transaction. The following from the Los Angeles Express of October 20, is corroborated in its essentials at the Pathe Home Office:

"The Mission theatre has secured Harold Lloyd's next five-reel comery production, 'Dr. Jack,' at a figure which puts in the shade any monies put on record as having been guaranteed for the run of big feature productions. . . . This sum of money includes the rental guarantee with the stipulation that 'Dr. Jack' will be shown at no other theatre in Southern California during the entire season."

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

Export and Import Buy Reelcraft Negatives

EXPORT AND IMPORT FILM CO. announces the purchase from the receivers of the Reelcraft Pictures Corporation of all the former Reelcraft negatives. These comprise one and two-reel comedies, featuring Alice Howell, Texas Guinan, Milburn Moranti, Billy Franey, Billy West, Bud Duncan, George Clarke, and Matty Roubert.

Orral Humphrey with Lloyd Hamilton

A prominent California rancher has the peculiar hobby of drifting into Los Angeles motion picture studios once or twice a year to don the grease, paint and character costumes. This time he is playing an important role in Lloyd Hamilton's latest comedy, "The Educator," soon to be distributed through Educational Film Exchanges, Inc.

A few years ago, before the film vogue swept the country, Orral Humphrey was one of the favorite dramatic actors on the Pacific Coast. Later he was a star and director for five years with the old American Film Company at Santa Barbara.

It was after this that he retired to his thousand-acre ranch in Southern California, from which he travels to the Los Angeles studios occasionally when the call of the make-up gets too strong. Humphrey represents the "school board" of Angelville, while Hamilton is the new teacher.

Sir Harry Lauder in Starland Revue

One of Sir Harry Lauders first appearances, after arriving in this country for his 1922-23 season, was at Ward's Island, where he sang for the inmates and Starland Revue's cameraman. Sir Harry's songs and the filming of the scenes kept over 3,000 of the inmates entertained for two hours. These pictures are now appearing in issue No. 14, the current release of Starland Revue, produced by Jack Cohn and distributed by Film Booking Offices of America.

No. 14 exposes where the beautiful costumes for the Greenwich Village Follies are made. Show girls are being fitted and costumed for Broadway's musical show of the current season. Among other novelties are scenes from the Scotch play, "Hunky Dory" and William Seabury of "The Music Box" keeping his dancing girls limbered up for their nightly stunt in New York's intimate revue.

Eleven Pathe Subjects Ready

"The Big Scoop" with Juvenile Company Heads Program for November 19

JOHNNY JONES and his compact company of juvenile actors in the two-reel comedy called "The Big Scoop," heads Pathe's Nov. 19 release program of eleven subjects. This program also presents "The Price of Progress," a two-reel novelty from the Kiser Studios, producers of the Oregon Trail Series, and which is the subject of some of the most laudatory reviews ever printed in West Coast newspapers. Including Pathe News Nos. 94 and 95 and Topics of the Day No. 47, there are eleven subjects in the list.

"The Big Scoop" is said to be another juvenile business enterprise film of the sort which has lifted Johnny Jones and little Gertrude Messinger into the front rank of short subject stars and leading ladies.

All of the reviews of West Coast previews of "The Price of Progress" speak well of the exciting drama it presents.

The Patheserial, "Speed," with Charles Hutchison, reaches its fifth episode, called "Fighting Mad."

"Harvest Hands," with Paul Parrott, present sa new wrinkle in screen comedy, it is said.

"I'm On My Way," is the Harold Lloyd re-issue—with Snub Pollard and Bebe Daniels aiding and abetting in the comic consequence of the hero finding it desirable to go away from there.

Pathe Review No. 182 illustrates the "Majesty of Magnetism."

In Screen Snapshots No. 13 these screen favorites are seen in unconventional settings: Helen Ferguson and William Russell, Claire Windsor and Jack Mulhall, E. K. Lincoln and his dogs, Constance Talmadge, Ethel Clayton, Tom Meighan and kiddies, Bill Desmond, Priscilla Dean, Shannon Day, Frank Mayo, Bert Lytell, Lee Moran and Roy Stewart.

New Witwer Series Under Way

"The Knight in Gale" Starts Fighting Hero on Way to Championship

WITH the completion of "Fighting Blood," the first of H. C. Witwer's twelve stories which are now being filmed at the R-C Studios, production of the second, "The Knight in Gale" has been already started by Mal St. Clair, who is directing the series. The entire series takes its name from the first picture and will be known as the "Fighting Blood" series.

To date eight of the twelve stories have been published and it is probable that F. B. O. will release the first picture shortly after the appearance of the last story. The screen rights to these stories were purchased by P. A. Powers several months ago and production was started immediately after a careful search had unearthed the most perfect cast.

"The Knight in Gale" takes the young hero, Gale Galen, out of the small town drug store and starts him well on the road that leads eventually to the middleweight championship of the world. "Fighting Blood" tells of the young soda jerker who accidentally discovers his ability to handle himself in the ring and who is signed by a fight manager. The feature of the second episode will be a terrific ring battle in which Mr. St. Clair intends to excel anything ever filmed in the way of ring realism and excitement. The cast will remain the same throughout the entire series and George O'Hara who plays the leading role, will be seen as the rising young champion who wins his first professional fight in "The Knight in Gale." Judy Wilcox is played by Clara Horton and the remainder of the cast, William Courtright, Arthur Rankin, M. C. Ryan, Kit Guard, Albert Cooke and Mabel Van Buren, will appear in the second picture.

Baby Peggy on Location for "The Senorita"

Baby Peggy, the tiny star of Century Comedies, has been on location at the San Fernando Mission filming her newest Century Special Production, "The Senorita."

She has been surrounded with a bevy of beautiful girls for this production. Her principal supporting lady is Lillian Hackett, while Inez MacDonnell plays a dark-eyed vamp.

Among the new members recently added to the cast is Gus Leonard, who will be remembered for his excellent work in "The Old Homestead" and in several of the more recent Charles Ray pictures.

Christie Comedies Paid Fine Tribute

CHRISTIE COMEDIES and their producers have just been paid a fine tribute by Robert E. Sherwood, motion picture critic. After reviewing two Christie Comedies recently released by Educational, and declaring that one of them, "Pardon My Glove," featuring Bobby Vernon, "is one of the best comedies that Christie has yet offered," Mr. Sherwood says:

"The Christies are about the only comedy producers since Sidney Drew died who have been able to strike a happy medium between light farce and slap-stick, and it is to be hoped that they will continue the good work—for the field is limitless."

The early pictures of the 1922-1923 series of Educational-Christie Comedies, including "That Son of a Sheik," "Pardon My Glove," "Let 'Er Run," "Ocean Swells," "Choose Your Weapons" and "Chop Suey," are meeting with splendid success and receiving complimentary reviews all over the country, according to Educational.

"Queenie" Starred in "Farmerettes"

"Farmerettes," a picture starring the equestrian star, Queenie, supported by a cast of featured comedians and a bevy of Century Beauties, is being directed by Al Herman. Jack Cooper, Joe Bonner, Blanche Payson and Betty May are the principal actors. This is Miss May's fifth picture under Herman's direction.

Fred Spencer, the genial fat man of many Century comedies, is back again on the lot and is playing a prominent part in this film. Conrad Birk has been added to the Century comedy staff of gag writers and has been assigned to the Al Herman Company.

Prizma Picture For Special Program

In response to the many requests from members of the American Legion, Army, Navy and Marine Corps, S. L. Rothafel will present again the Prizma picture of the burial of the unknown soldier at Washington last Armistice Day, as a feature of the program at the Capitol Theatre next week. The unit will be called "Lest We Forget," and will be given a special presentation for the current Armistice Day Celebration.

Roumanian Ceremonies Shown by Pathe

UNIQUE events for display on the picture screen are a recognized Pathe News specialty. This fact is illustrated in the current isue, No. 88, in a way to pointedly remind audiences that kings are getting scarce nowadays. These pictures—the first to be screened in the United States — graphically depict the ceremonies attending the belated crowning of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Roumania. The great war, which threw so many royalties into the discard, caused Ferdinand and Marie prudently to defer the ceremonies now being shown in Pathe News.

That this sort of news-gathering enterprise is highly appreciated by the picture-going public has been acknowledged by many theatre managers.

Prizma Names New Releases

"I Know a Garden," "Old Glory" and "Time" for Early Release

PRIZMA announces three new color subjects for early release on its regular service. These are "Time," a study of methods of keeping time down through the ages; "I Know a Garden," a soft color following the theme of Teschemacher's "I Know a Lovely Garden"; and "Old Glory," which picturizes the history and making of the American Flag and the creation of the Star Spangled Banner.

Each of these subjects is described as having been assembled in such a way that any one of them could be used as a prologue for a feature or as the art unit in presenting programs. All have possibilities of providing unusual musical presentation.

"Time" is described as showing the earliest methods of computing time, including the Indian and his "moons," the ancient Chaldeans and their star calendars as well as early Egyptian sun-dials.

"I Know a Garden" is a number of selected scenes, arranged to bring out the theme of Teschemacher's well known favorite, "I Know a Lovely Garden."

"Old Glory" traces the history of the American flag from earliest days when Cabot first landed in 1497 with the Red Cross Flag of England, down to the present national emblem.

Committee Endorses Sacred Films

Atlanta Better Films Acclaims Biblical Series at Special Meeting

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, president of the Atlanta Better Films Committee, called a special meeting of her associates on the morning of October 30 for the purpose of previewing the Abraham series of Sacred Films which were brought to Atlanta by Larry Weingarten, of Sacred Films, Inc. After the screening of the series, Mrs. Boykin made a short talk to the assembly and asked for a rising vote from those who favored endorsing Sacred Films. The response was unanimous in favor of the motion and the exhibition of the films particularly in the public picture houses.

Mrs. Boykin said: "Sacred Films are to be congratulated. This unusual demonstration from our members bespeaks the fact that your films approach the highest standards for educational, inspirational and entertaining pictures. We pledge our entire support in the confident assurance that Sacred Films will prove to be a stimulus for cleaner and better pictures."

Larry Weingarten responded to the president's talk and said in part: "We are happy indeed to receive this ovation and commendation. It puts the finishing touch to the world-wide list of approval from the leaders of the great religious denominations, the universities, schools and theatres now exhibiting the pictures. There are serious-minded men who desire to make the films that you demand, but financial disaster makes for artistic ruin.

"You can approve and appraise films until the cows come home, but unless the producers are recompensed for the efforts, at least to the extent of production cost, which will come only through your efforts with the public, you will be sadly disillusioned. Sacred Films intend to carry out their program unhampered and will continue along these lines with your help. I believe I voice the opinion of all producers of educational films."

Pathe Contest Boosts Attendance

Claim Is Made that Exhibitors Will Profit by Serving Patrons' Interest

WITH sturdy insistence that exhibitors will directly profit from patron interests intelligently served, Pathe rests its latest sales contest on claims which are not often pressed in such a connection. This contest, which began at midnight on November 4th and will end at midnight on December 30th, is named in honor of E. A. Eschmann, General Sales Manager.

"From the beginning of this contest," says Mr. Eschmann, "every Pathe salesman becomes consciously a missionary for bigger and more stable picture attendance. That his services have operated in that direction for more than two years past is proved by the present enormous vogue of Pathe short subjects, which more and more are fattening box office receipts through their recognized drawing power. The result is that these men in the field now realize that in pushing their product they are performing a valuable service to the whole picture-loving public. And they know that the exhibitors realize it also.

"This contest, therefore, with its generous prizes, is largely in the nature of a reward for having in so great a degree consolidated exhibitor faith in the popular attractions contained in the entire list of widely varied Pathe subjects.

The prizes in the Eschmann Sales Contest will foot up a total of about $7,000—according to the number of salesmen competitors at each branch exchange. The first, second and third prizes are divided as follows: Manager—$750, $500 and $300; Asistant Manager—$400, $275 and $175; Each Salesman—$300, $200 and $125; Booker—$250, $175 and $100; Cashier—$250, $175 and $100. In case of a tie all branches so tieing will receive the same prize.

Mirror No. 2 in Fire Prevention Campaign

UNIVERSAL authorities in Chicago have effected an important tie-up with the fire insurance association in that city in connection with Mirror No. 2, the Special International Novelty Reel containing pictures of the San Francisco Fire.

The Novelty reel, which is released by Universal, is to be shown to the fire insurance men at a meeting in the Insurance Exchange Building next week. The story of the showing and illustrations from the film are to be printed in the Insurance Weekly, circulated throughout the Central States, and will be followed up so as to afford local fire insurance men in the various cities and communities the opportunity of capitalizing on the subject matter of the reel in connection with fire prevention movements.

"Xmas" to Be Offered As Holiday Comedy

"Xmas," the fifth of the Mr. and Mrs. Carter DeHaven comedies for release through the Film Booking offices of America, will be offered as a holiday comedy by that company. It is from a story by Mr. DeHaven and is directed by Mal St. Clair. The action revolves around a newlywed couple in an apartment house.

Carter decides to play Santa Claus to amuse his nephews and nieces. The idea works out splendidly until it is discovered that three other men in the house have decided upon the same plan, and the confusion becomes complete when a burglar uses a Santa Claus costume to obtain an entry into the apartment.

Old Classic Song is Presented By Vitograph

"Grandfather's Clock," from the quaint old song by Henry C. Work, is the latest number in the series of Urban Popular Classics, released by Vitagraph. It is a portrayal of the sentiment of an old song that was immensely popular many years ago, and has been accepted as an American classic. It exemplifies the wide range covered in this attractive series, which substantially approximates its happily chosen title. They are highly educational, as well as entertaining, and are fast becoming among the most popular short subjects.

Elks as Actors Help Bull Montana

Five hundred Elks and their wives, in Southern California for the annual State convention of B. P. O. E. were drafted into service as actors when they visited the Metro studios in Hollywood a few days ago.

After being conducted through the other parts of the huge film plant they were taken on Stage No. 1, where Bull Montana was working in his new Hunt Stromberg comedy for Metro, "Glad Rags."

Hodkinson Declares New Subjects Unique

"THE Sky Splitter" is announced as the second of the series of Technical Romances produced by Bray Productions, Inc., for release through W. W. Hodkinson Corp. This one was directed by Ashley Miller and J. A. Norling, and has for its theme, the question of the speed of light rays. It includes the presentation of a scientific projectile that can travel faster than light, and shows how a man who makes a trip in "The Sky Splitter" was able to visualize with the aid of a telescope, things that happened years ago. It is said that this novelty follows modern scientific lines in dealing with light, and how, if demonstration can be made, it will reproduce authentic historical happenings that have occurred in the past.

The third release entitled "Gambling with the Gulf Stream" as the title implies, deals with the question of the change in the Gulf Stream affecting the seasons of this country which scientists claim will make the coast of England and other North European coast lines that have been kept warm by the effects of the Gulf Stream, experience the cold of Labrador.

The Hodkinson Corporation feels that in presenting the second and third releases of the Bray series of "Technical Romances" they are supplying the exhibitor with something unique for the rounding out of their program.

Kiser Studio Cast Has Narrow Escape

President Fred H. Kiser of the Kiser Studios, Inc., of Portland, Ore., and Cameraman Jack Fenton, are the only members of the company figuring in the filming of logging camp scenes in "The Price of Progress" who escaped uninjured from those hazardous experiences. "All of the others," says Mr. Kiser—"directors, cameramen and players—were on the hospital list either before of after work on these locations had been completed.

"Lloyd Jones, assistant cameraman, received two cracked ribs when he came in contact with a rapidly moving wire cable. Edward Jones, leading man of the cast, was badly skinned and bruised when he had a race for life with a monster log which was rolling down the mountainside."

"The Price of Progress" is announced by Pathe for release on November 19 as a two-reel novelty feature.

Double First Run For "Shadows" in Boston

The Modern and Beacon theatres, Jake Lourie's big Boston houses, have booked "Shadows," the second Schulberg special to be released through the Al Lichtman Corporation for a joint run the week beginning December 11.

Royalty Displeased at Pathe Enterprise

Just as Pathe News No. 88 reached New York theatre screens with its clean "scoop" on the coronation of King Ferdinand and Queen Marie of Roumania, a cable notified Editor Emmanuel Cohen that the Roumanian Government had made other arrangements and was highly displeased at seeing them upset.

This displeasure was visited upon the head of Pathe News Cameraman Sozio, hero of the achievement, who spent three days in a Roumanian prison—but not until after his precious film was safely on its way to America.

Violet Mersereau Joins Johnny Hines

VIOLET MERSEREAU, the diminutive star, who has just returned after a year in Italy and Germany for the Fox Film Company where she was the only American cast in "Nero," has been engaged to appear opposite Johnny Hines in his latest feature comedy-drama titled "Luck," being produced by C. C. Burr at the latter's Glendale Studio.

The announcement of the addition of Miss Mersereau to a brilliant supporting cast for "Luck," which now includes, besides Johnny Hines, Robert Edeson, Charlie Murray, Polly Moran, Flora Finch and Joe King, caused great elation at the Mastodon Film offices, for it is felt that Miss Mersereau is ideally cast for her role as the female lead to Hines.

Miss Mersereau's work on the screen is familiar to the trade for she has been appearing ever since she was thirteen years old. Her work in "Nero" was so well liked that she was kept in Italy by Fox to make another feature drama titled "The Shepherd King," which is due for release this winter.

Hallroom Boys Comedy Is Completed

Another new Hallroom Boys Comedy has been completed and is ready for release to the state-right market through C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation. This comedy which is No. 7 of the series, has been titled "High Flyers," and was directed by Al Santell, featuring Sid Smith and George Williams as the popular Percy and Ferdie Hallroom.

The regularity with which these comedies are coming through from the West coast production centres is proof of C. B. C.'s announced intention to keep production schedule well in advance of release, Producer Harry Cohn believing that only in this way can innovations be introduced into the new comedies on the series, and constant experimentation be tried for

Van Loan on Scenario for "Drivin' Fool"

The scenario for "The Drivin' Fool," a special production being made independently by Regent Pictures Company, is being done by H. H. Van Loan, well-known author and continuity expert, who has been specially engaged for this new producing enterprise.

Van Loan is adapting the magazine story under the same title written by William F. Sturm and appearing recently in the Blue Book magazine. He has finished the continuity, and is in collaboration now while the production is being made with Robert T. Thornby, the director, and Wally Van, who is heading the cast of the picture.

Others playing prominent roles are Alec Francis, Wilton Taylor, Patsy Ruth Miller and Ramsey Wallace.

Reviews of Latest Short Subject Releases

Screen Snapshots No. 13

(Pathe)

THE screen favorites seen in this issue are Helen Ferguson, who appears to be "speeding" and is arrested by a bogus "cop," William Russell, who sentences the law-breaker to take luncheon with him. Claire Winsor and Jack Mulhall invited a few friends to the studio to watch them "do a scene." Not everybody knows that E. K. Lincoln is, in addition to being a screen actor, a dog fancier. With his prize-winning "chows" Lincoln is shown in some interesting footage. Other "stunts" employ Constance Talmadge, Ethel Clayton, Tom Meighan, who entertains orphans for a frolic; Bill Desmond, Priscilla Dean, Shannon Day, Frank Mayo, Bert Lytell, Lee Moran and Roy Stewart.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Harvest Hands"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

A SLAP-STICK comedy of "down on the farm" type. Paul Parrott is cast as the idle son of a rich father, who sends said son to his Uncle, a farmer, to learn to do something more difficult than society dance steps. The son arrives by a specially made vehicle resembling a tractor. He immediately gets in wrong with all the farm hands, but makes a killing with the pretty girl on the place.

The more the farmer tries to induce his nephew to work, the more opportunity presents itself for slap-stick variations. The action is fast, the direction of merit and the photography very good.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Price of Progress"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

THIS can be described only as a picture depicting the hardships and efforts of man to triumph over nature's obstacles in the far west, where men must be men to fight against odds of being miles away from ready helping hands.

In this instance, a soldier, discouraged with having failed to progress after his military career, seeks the far west. It develops that the paymaster in the lumber camp is a near relative, so that there is considerable story value. Essentially, however, the worth of this rather remarkable short subject is in the beauteous scenery and the able falling and handling of huge trees, which find their way down the river ultimately to lumber yards. This subject contains some of the most beautiful views ever picturized and is a valuable asset in adding distinction to any program.—LILLIAN GALE.

Leo Maloney in the title role of "The Drifter," of the Range Rider Series, Pathe

"Hodge Podge" No. 2601

(Lyman H. Howe-Educational—One Reel)

BEGINS with a pictorial review, taking in winter sports in Switzerland. Then comes "The Making of a Champion," a travesty upon the training of fighters, etc., followed by "The Admiral Pacheesa of the Swiss Navy" arriving in New York, showing how pictures are taken from the tops of skyscrapers, also travesty as is the entrance of Madame Aver Du Poise who appears wearing a hat of exaggerated circumference in a smart restaurant.

There is one item of educational interest which shows the capturing of sea elephants in the South Seas, ending with a review of thrilling military maneuvers.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Pitter Patter"

(Educational—Two Reels)

JIMMIE ADAMS as a prospective groom is discovered dreaming of his future happiness, when a leak in the roof grows larger and larger with the continuation of a steady downpour of rain. The bride is lamenting the rain on her wedding day.

The groom has a tough time of it arriving in time for a wedding at noon, gets there one minute before the hour when, if the girl is not married, she will lose a necessary inheritance. Low comedy, fast action, slap-stick variety, but with some laugh-provoking situations of an unusual value. It has been well directed and photographed, and has, in addition, some sparkling sub-titles.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Crash"

(Educational—Two Reels)

IN this we have Jimmie Adams as the unfortunate married man who hasn't the wherewithal to meet his rent and is therefore "dispossessed." His furniture, wife and baby are all thrown after him by an irate landlord.

A man who has invented a "house-aeroplane" sees an opportunity to get it tried out by offering a home to the destitute three. But he warns the husband not to attempt to "fly" the houseboat until he has further instructions. But husband is eager to "sail" with the result that the great propellor is set in motion and the family of three find out all about living "sky high." An amusing comedy, clean cut, well photographed, and with a commendable supply of action.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Hook, Line and Sinker"

(Pollard-Pathe—Two Reels)

A COMEDY that is actually funny and introduces some new twists. It will surely draw a broad smile from every man who ever held a fishing rod over the water, and is likely to send him into a hearty laugh. The angle is a travesty upon a fishing tournament, which every man is endeavoring to win, but that "Snub" envies more than the rest because the recognition of a pretty girl is at stake. At the crack of the pistol all contestants make for the dock, where they begin fishing. And while the hero's catch is enviable, the rival for the girl has cut the bottom of his "catch basket" with the result that the fish go right back where they came from, through a hole in the landing. In this one the comedy is rapid and while it borders on the ridiculous, is sure fire for those who go to a picture show with the hope of seeing something to laugh at. In addition, this is the best piece of work Pollard has done in a long time. A comedy that is also comparatively clean and not over-done in slap-stick.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Split Outfit"

(Bruce-Educational—One Reel)

A WONDERFUL scenic depicting the beauties of the country where two wanderers searched ten years for gold. They had shared their chances for fortune together, and been faithful to their friendship until a quarrel over nothing more serious than the method of making "flap-jacks" caused a breach of friendly contract. The incident of the quarrel is finally forgotten, when one seems to have almost drowned in shallow water and the other rushes to his rescue, forgetting their enmity for the moment. Having this thread of a story lends atmosphere and charm to the wonderfully photographed and interesting "Wilderness Tale," illustrating the mountainous splendor of the far west.—LILLIAN GALE.

Graphis No. 2546

THE introduction covers how bric-a-brac is made from Bazilian butterflies showing the process of corraling the beauteous insects and after they have ceased to flutter, the drying process, followed by the method of making beautiful ornaments from the fragile wings.

"Leading a Dog's Life" is an interesting topic. It shows dogs of all kinds, high bred and common curs, and illustrates how valuable animals are now innoculated against hyrophobia.

"Way Down Upon the Swannee River," makes this short subject stand out with distinction. Here we may see the much sung of River in its journey toward the gulf, with some of the most gorgeous scenic views possible to secure. It also includes a bit of comedy, with live, negro natives as the comedians.

Concludes with the usual Ollendorf cartoon.

Universal Calls "Flirt" Unusual

"THE FLIRT," Hobart Henley's Universal picturization of Booth Tarkington's well known novel, has been received in New York and reviewed bv Universal officials. They hail it as an extraordinary picture that will create a sensation as soon as it is shown to the public.

In the excellence of its acting, in the fidelity of its character portrayals and in the human touches which stamp Hobart Henley as one of the screen's leading directors, "The Flirt" is prophesied to take its place at the head of the year's screen productions, assert those who have seen it.

The title role is taken by Eileen Percy. Her work as Tarkington's selfish, trouble-making heroine is said to be the greatest of her career.

Of no less importance are the other members of the cast. As the "slavey" stay-at-home sister of the "flirt," Helen Jerome Eddy builds a screen character of great strength and of infinite sympathetic appeal. George Nichols takes the important role of the father.

Buddy Messenger, the 13 year old screen mimic, has almost alone to carry the humor of the drama.

R. H. Cochrane, vice president of Universal, who was the first to see the new Universal-Jewel feature after its arrival from the Coast, sees in it a great forward step in screen reality.

"Never has human life been so faithfully reproduced by the screen," he said in commenting on the Henley picture. "It is absolute in its portrayal of American family life. One can recognize every person in the picture and understand their thoughts, their actions and their motives."

Arrow Makes New England Sale

Independent Films Purchases Rights For "The Streets of New York"

W. RAY JOHNSTON, vice-president of Arrow Film Corporation, made a flying trip to Boston last week, and while there closed a contract with Messrs. Patten, McConville and Heffron for the New England rights to "The Streets of New York," for which, it is claimed, a record price was paid. In fact, it is claimed by Arrow that only one other independent picture—namely, Arrow's "Ten Nights in a Barroom"—has brought as big a price for the New England territory.

Patton, McConville and Heffron, who comprise Independent Films, Inc., of New England, expressed themselves as delighted with securing this big special.

They plan an elaborate advertising and exploitation campaign on this attraction; in fact, one of the biggest campaigns ever given a picture in the New England territory. They have scheduled this picture for early release.

This is the production which was made by Mr. King for State Pictures Corporation and which had its world premiere presentation at Frank Hall's three big New Jersey theatres this week. The picture boasts an all-star cast, as it has such established favorites as Barbara Castleton, Edward Earle, Dorothy Mackaill, Anders Randolf, Kate Blancke and Leslie King playing important parts.

Independent Films, Inc., is claimed to be one of the fastest growing exchanges in the New England territory. In addition to "The Streets of New York," they are handling the James Oliver Curwood productions, Grace Davison features and such Arrow specials as "The Innocent Cheat" and "Chain Lightning." They also distribute the Arrow-Eddie Lyons Comedy series.

"Only a Shopgirl" Print Due

Editing and Titling Is Completed on Second of C. B. C. Series of Six

EDITING and titling on "Only A Shopgirl" was completed this week, according to advices from the West Coast production center—and the print of this second of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation production is on the way to the Eastern distributing offices.

The finished print as it is being shipped East, according to Director Edward Le Saint and Producer Harry Cohn, has been edited and re-edited and subjected to title changes in accordance with the actual opinion of the general public—the picture having been given two showings in two different Los Angeles theatres following the regular night's performance.

"Only A Shopgirl" was run in as an added feature in this way so that the reaction of the audiences should be absolutely unbiased, the production staff believing that invited audiences, even unconsciously, are too anxoius to be kind, to be absolutely truthful.

Plenty of novelties on "Only A Shopgirl" are promised the exchanges and exhibitors by the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation.

Believing that one learns only by experience, this company has asked all territorial holders to tell them without reserve just wherein the press book on "More To Be Pitied" accomplishes the real purpose of a press book—that is, as an aid to the exhibitor—and just wherein it fails.

As a result of the answers to these requests the C. B. C. publicity department announces that most of the activities concentrated on the preparation of accessories of this feature will be turned toward the preparation of novelties for the exhibitors' use, and that there will be a large and varied assortment of these.

New Short-Subject Exchange Opens in N. Y.

The newest independent exchange to enter the New York field is the S-P. Film Exchange, which opens this week under the management of Samuel Pinkenfeld. The new organization will specialize for the time being in short subjects, and will handle the releasing of the new series of Shorty Hamilton pictures.

"Wildness of Youth" Is in Demand

The state rights territory on "Wildness of Youth," Graphic Film Company's latest production, seems to be in great demand, for word comes from the Graphic Film Company offices that the Baltimore territory has been sold to Milton Caplan & Harry S. Shapiro for distribution in Baltimore, District of Columbia and Virginia.

Frankie Lee Signs as Popular Star

AFTER playing in support of virtually every well-known star of the screen, Frankie Lee, one of the best known child actors, has signed a long-term contract with Popular Pictures, Inc. He will henceforth appear in pictures as a star in his own right.

Franklyn E. Backer, president of East Coast Productions, Inc., which will distribute this new series of two-reel comedies, states that the first comedy will be ready shortly after the 15th of this month. It is an adaptation of the American Magazine story, "Last Night When You Kissed Blanche Thompson." The title under which it will be released is "Robin Hood Junior."

Clarence Bricker, who has been identified with some of the biggest producers and directors in the industry, is staging this series of comedies. According to his contract, twelve of these pictures will be made within the year.

Frankie Lee is only nine years old.

Capitol Books "Brothers Under the Skin"

Goldwyn's picturization of Peter B. Kyne's story, "Brothers Under the Skin," is booked for a week's showing at the Capitol theatre, New York, the week of November 12. This is a story of modern marriage as it is practiced in New York on Riverside Drive, and near the Bowery. It is comedy of a superior sort with a tang of drama.

E. Mason Hopper directed the picture. In the cast are Helene Chadwick, Claire Windsor and Mae Busch. Pat O'Malley and Norman Kerry have the outstanding male roles.

"Country Flapper" Gets Extended Run

The great success of "The Country Flapper," Dorothy Gish's own production which is being state righted through Producers Security Corporation, is further evidenced by the booking of an indefinite run by Dr. Breckwedell of the Symphony Theatre, Los Angeles. The picture entered into its second week's run last Sunday and is reported to be doing capacity business.

Territories Closed on "Mysteries of Paris"

PENDING negotiations on territorial sales of C. C. Burr's "Secrets of Paris," adapted for Whitman Bennett by Dorothy Farnum from Eugene Sue's "Mysteries of Paris" give every indication that within a short time this melodramatic feature will have been 100% sold.

The latest sales announced include the entire New England territory to Major Fihus of Boston; Eastern Pennsylvania and Southern New Jersey to Metro Film Exchange of Philadelphia; Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico, Utah and Idaho to Mountain States Film Attractions, Inc., of Denver; entire states of California, Arizona, Nevada and Hawaiian Islands to Supreme Film Company of Los Angeles; foreign rights (excluding United States, Alaska, Dominion of Canada, Newfoundland and Hawaiian Islands) to William Vogel, New York City.

Warner Float Creates Enthusiasm

The Warner Brothers transcontinental float has met with an unusual reception from exhibitors along the route to Detroit, since its departure from New York about a month ago. The appearance of the float in many cities is said to have created a furore, and an indication of its acceptance by exhibitors as an unprecedented exploitation stunt in the interests of the seven Warner productions is evidenced in the many telegrams that are constantly being received at the offices of the organization.

Manager Steele, Rosedale Theatre, Chambersburg, Pa., wired as follows: "Your coast to coast float attracted as much attention here as a circus parade. Is best advertising stunt we have ever seen."

Lou Berman, Independent Film Corp., Phila., wired:

"Your float announcing coming attractions on tour coast to coast arrived here and creating sensation. It's the talk of Philadelphia. Exhibitors appreciate wonderful cooperation."

"More to Be Pitied" Sale Completed

Another territory was signed up this week on "More To Be Pitied," first of the C. B. C. Film Sales Corporation series, when J. J. Schrempp Feature Attractions of St. Louis, obtained territorial rights from Joe Brandt.

The Schrempp Company took over the Eastern Missouri and Southern Illinois franchise for this feature and announces that it is starting at once an extensive campaign to put it over on a big first run basis.

This is almost the last of the territories on which an option was taken a long time ago on the C. B. C. features, with the understanding from the C. B. C. officials that the buyer was not to sign finally unless absolutely convinced of the first run quality and possibilities of the pictures.

"I Am the Law" Holds Up Well

Affiliated Distributors Receive Many Favorable Reports from Exhibitors

REPORTS from Exchanges that have bought "I Am The Law" indicate that this all-star feature has been holding up remarkably well and doing big business. M. A. Klausner, general manager of Mountain State Film Attractions, Denver, Colorado forwarded the following to Affiliated Distributors: "Congratulations on 'I am the Law.' This picture is certainly a knockout. Stood them up for one solid week at the Princess Theatre, Denver, against heavy opposition. Patrons went away thoroughly enthused with the picture. Booked at the Coliseum Theatre, Seattle for one full week. Give us more pictures along these lines and State-Right Exchanges will not have to worry. We are with you one hundred per cent."

A. E. Fair, director of theatres for Southern Enterprises, the distributors in the South wrote: "When the contract was signed for the week's pre-release booking of 'I am the Law' at the Million Dollar Palace Theatre in Dallas, you predicted a generous profit for us. At that time I thought you were all 'wet,' but now that the week's run has been completed, I don't mind telling you that we topped your mark, which gave us the biggest profit of the year."

Newspapers have commented favorably on the picture, the Indianapolis Star, said: "I am the Law" is a rugged, virile film of the North, rich in sound melodrama with a most remarkable cast. We can't recall another picture with the same earmarks of legitimate drama."

In the Los Angeles Examiner, George Marion said: "I am the Law" is flecked with strong and thrilling dramatic situations, effective direction and superlatively good acting from an exceptionally capable cast."

Laurence Reid in Motion Picture News stated: "There is a vitality about this picture which keeps you on the anxious seat. It comes to the screen as an exceptionally vivid entertainment packed with adventure, action, romance and pathos."

Nigh Series Sold by Franchises

Weber and North to Sell Group of Four Will Nigh Films to Exchanges

WILL NIGH'S protodramas are being produced and distributed by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North on a franchise scale. Sam Sax, sales manager of this independent organization, has mapped out a "Will Nigh Series Selling Plan" that is declared to be rapidly winning over state-right buyers who are anxious to secure rights on all of Will Nigh's future product instead of merely his first production, "Notoriety," alone. By the terms of this selling plan a franchise holder is appointed in each territory of the country and has exclusive distribution rights of the quartette of Will Nigh releases for the year throughout his territory, declares the statement from the Weber & North offices. It is said that some of the buyers of the series will incorporate the name of Will Nigh in the name of their exchange.

The idea of selling Will Nigh's series as a whole instead of each release individually originated from the state-right buyers. For their own protection exchangemen who signed for local distribution rights on "Notoriety" have applied for the rights to Nighs' next three, in order to avoid the possibility of two or more exchanges in the same territory handling Will Nigh's output. Franchise holders for the Will Nigh series include Sam Grand of the Federated Film Exchange, New England; Ben Amsterdam of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, Philadelphia; Sydney Samson of the Grand-North Exchanges, Buffalo and Albany; James Alexander of the Columbia Film Service, Pittsburgh; George Montgomery of the Supreme Film Company, Los Angeles, and a number of others shortly to be announced, who have already bought the rights to "Notoriety" and have declared their intention to sign for the series.

The outstanding strength of Will Nigh's premier production for Weber & North and the director's reputation for turning out some of the biggest hits in the independent market, are considered responsible for the demand for his future releases. Nigh is now working on the second of his series, which will be completed within two months. A schedule of a two-month interval between releases is being followed.

"After Six Days" a Hit in Indianapolis

"After Six Days," the feature spectacle dealing with the Old Testament and sponsored by Weiss Brothers, Artclass Pictures Corporation has closed a successful engagement of two weeks at English's Opera House, Indianapolis, Indiana. The picture is said to have played to practically capacity audiences throughout the entire fifteen days of its run.

Due to its remarkable showing, Weiss Brothers have been in receipt of several requests from buyers in Chicago and Indiana regarding the purchase for road show purposes in Illinois and Indianapolis. It is the intention of Artclass Pictures Corporation to present "After Six Days" in several other key cities in the near future, including Cleveland, Pittsburgh, Philadelphia, Detroit and New York, following which the picture will be offered to state right buyers as a two-a-day attraction for the legitimate theatres, throughout the territories mentioned.

Sam Sax to Aid Independents on Nigh Products

FOLLOWING the principle of the producers and distributors of "Notoriety" that selling a picture to the state-right buyer does not end their part of the obligation, Sam Sax, Sales Manager for L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North left this week for an extensive tour of the Middle Western cities for the purpose of extending every posible co-operation to exchangemen who have bought the rights to the series of four Will Nigh productions for the coming season.

The cities on Sax's itinerary are Pittsburgh, Chicago, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Indianapolis and St. Louis. In Pittsburgh Sam Sax will, as the first item in his tour, confer with James Alexander, head of the Columbia Film Service, state-right buyers of "Notoriety" and the Will Nigh series for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. He will outline a program of advertising and selling co-operation for the exhibitors of the Smoky City section that is expected to make this year a banner year for that exchange.

Butler to Appear in Metro Picture

David Butler, a screen protege of D. W. Griffith, is to appear with Viola Dane in "A Noise in Newboro," her new Metro starring vehicle directed by Harry Beaumont. Mr. Griffith engaged Mr. Butler for his production of "The Greatest Thing in Life," after watching one off his performances with the Morosco Stock Company in Los Angeles. After other engagements with Griffith he was starred in eight pictures, was featured in "The Sky Pilot," "Don't Ever Marry," and recently completed playing a prominent part in "The Hero."

In "A Noise in Newboro," Mr. Butler will enact the part of Ben Colwell, a small town youth with political aspirations.

Baby Peggy to Work at Santa Barbara

As soon as Baby Peggy returns from San Diego, where she is filming exterior scenes for her current comedy, "TheTheatre," she will go to Santa Barbara where additionals shots will be made. Baby Peggy's supporting cast includes Lillian Hackett, Joe Bonner, Max Asher, Jack Henderson and Paul Stanhope. Alf Goulding is wielding the directorial megaphone with Baby Peggy's father, J. Travers Montgomery, acting as co-director.

Noted Artist Is Engaged by Selznick

Myron Selznick has engaged Ferdinand Pinney Earle, well-known artist and producer of Omar Khayyam, to do the art titles for the Selznick special production, "One Week of Love," in which Elaine Hammerstein and Conway Tearle are the featured players.

"Bulldog Drummond" Timely

Hollandia Production for Hodkinson Release One of Popular Melodramas

OWING to the increased popularity of the melodrama the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation considers the appearance of the feature "Bulldog Drummond" among the forthcoming attractions under the Hodkinson trade mark, as being particularly opportune. It further carries out the Hodkinson policy, it is said, of presenting varied subjects in order to give the exhibitor variety.

"Bulldog Drummond" in story form is from the pen of "Sapper." Owing to its exceptional possibilities the rights were secured for the stage with the result that three companies have been touring the United States and meeting with widespread success. During this drama's appearance in Chicago critics as well as public acclaimed it as one of the best melodramas seen for sometime.

The Hollandia Film Corporation purchased the film rights and made the production upon the exact locale as called for in the story, namely, Holland and England. It is understood that great stress has been laid upon the atmosphere with the result that, according to the producers, the drama itself has been enhanced in value to a marked degree.

"Bulldog Drummond" features two well known American stars, Caryle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley. This production was ably directed by Oscar Apfel.

"Rags to Riches" Wins Bookings

Survey of Rapf Production Convinces Warners of Its Popularity

A COMPLETE survey of the approval placed upon the Warner Brothers' picture, "Rags to Riches," a Harry Rapf production featuring Wesley Barry, by newspaper and trade paper critics, coupled with the box office receipts secured by many theatres throughout the country, has convinced the Warner organization that in this, their initial release, they have an attraction which will please any and all kinds of audiences, it is reported.

The twenty-eight exchanges handling the Warner productions are said to have secured a large number of bookings in their respective territories. In the roster of these exchanges there are a group of prominent theatre owners who are reported to have booked the feature with a great many circuits. The distribution plan of the Warner productions is said to be on a percentage arrangement, and all contracts are approved at the home office.

A number of theaters that have recently booked the attraction include the Astor, St. Paul; Blue Mouse, Minn.; Lyric, Duluth; Garrick, Winnipeg; Garden, Davenport, Ia.; U. S., Hoboken; Goddard's Jay Street Theatre, Sacramento, Cal.

"Rags to Riches" tells the story of a regular lovable youngster who, in his desire for adventure, grapples with man-sized situations. In the supporting cast are Niles Welch, Ruth Renick, Russell Simpson, Minna D. Redman, Richard Tucker and Eulalie Jensen. The picture was directed by Wallace Worsley.

Huge Setting Employed in New DeMille Film

Ranking in size and elaborateness of detail with the largest sets ever made for a motion picture, is the reproduction of the Chicago Board of Trade, the present scene of Cecil B. DeMille's activity in his new Paramount picture, "Adam's Rib," by Jeanie Macpherson. As there was not sufficient space at the busy Lasky studio for this setting with its thousands of square feet, the former Realart studio was reopened for its accommodation. Two complete stages were thrown together at the Realart plant to provide sufficient space.

It is in the Chicago Board of Trade that Milton Sills, a wheat broker, plays out strongly dramatic situations which also involve Elliott Dexter, Theodore Kosloff, Anna Q. Nilsson and Pauline Garon. The modernity of the Board of Trade is well set off by Mr. DeMills'c earlier settings in the production which shows a Natural History Museum and its towering skeletons of prehistoric dinosaurs which roamed North America something like fourteen million years ago.

"Last Days of Pompeii" to Take Nine Months

It will take Irving Cummings nine months to complete his production of "The Last Days of Pompeii," which will be his second production for the Principal Pictures Corporation.

The major portion of this time will be spent in Italy, where the scenes will be filmed in the exact locale of the story. Cummings, assisted by Mrs. Cummings, is titling his recently completed production of "Chicago Sal."

"Lorna Doone" Featured at Reception

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S production of "Lorna Doone," which was produced at the studios of Thomas H. Ince for release through Associated First National Pictures, was selected as the feature attraction of the entertainment for the second motion picture night of the National Vaudeville Artists Club.

The occasion was a dinner given by the National Vaudeville Artists Club to the Vaudeville Managers' Protective Association at the club house Oct. 31st.

As part of the evening's entertainment the singer furnished by M. Witmark & Sons, publishers of the "Lorna Doone" ballad sang "Lorna Doone." The song was accompanied by a series of slides illustrating scenes from the story. The chorus was flashed on the screen and the crowd joined in singing it.

"Java Head" Company Back from Salem

George Melford and his production unit making "Java Head" for Paramount have returned to New York from Salem, Mass., where for nearly a month they were making exterior scenes for the picture. It took three Pullman cars to bring the company and more than a score of extra people, a dozen technical experts on costuming, hair dressing and make-up, four cameramen, six property men and other assistants back to the Long Island studio where the interior scenes will be filmed.

"Java Head," being the story of Salem town in the late forties when trade flourished and the old Derby wharf was the landing place for ships from all parts of the world, requires careful handling and all the resources of the huge Paramount Long Island studio have been utilized by Director Melford.

Leatrice Joy, Jacqueline Logan, Albert Roscoe, George Fawcett and Raymond Hatton are the featured players in the picture.

Special Music Score for "Hearts Aflame"

Under the personal direction of Louis F. Gottschalk, a special musical score has been prepared for Louis B. Mayer's "Hearts Aflame," a new Reginald Barker Production. Among Mr. Gottschalk's many successful music scores are the accompaniments for D. W. Griffith's "Orphans of the Storm"

Laud Flood Scene in Fox Picture

N. Y. Critics Shower Praise on Big Storm Scenes in New Fox Special

NEW YORK reviewers agreed that the storm scene in "The Town That Forgot God," the William Fox special production that opened at the Astor last week, was one of the greatest spectacles of the kind ever seen in motion pictures. Harry Millarde, director of "Over the Hill," who staged the film, was once more hailed as a great director, this time in an entirely different field from the one that first won him recognition.

Paul H. Sloane, the well-known Fox staff writer, did the continuity for the picture. Bunny Grauer as the boy, and Warren Krech as the carpenter, received the highest praise for their acting, though Jane Thomas, Harry Benham, Edward Dennison, Grace Barton, Raymond Bloomer and Nina Casavant all were favorably mentioned.

R. W. Baremore in the Morning Telegraph said in part: "We have seen flood and storm scenes on the screen before, but never one that would equal in any way the remarkable series of views presented in the William Fox picture, 'The Town That Forgot God.' It is by far the most astounding thing of its kind ever photographed, and brought prolonged applause and cheers from the first night audience at the Astor last night."

"The most realistic storm and flood ever reproduced in any picture," says the Telegram, "furnishes the semi-climax to William Fox's latest cinema, 'The Town That Forgot God.' Not alone was it a real flood, but the photoplay and electrical effects are the best on the screen. An entire town is swept away. Buildings collapse, trees are uprooted and houses are swirled around like so many boxes. More than 4,000,000 gallons of water are turned loose, according to the announcement, but to the writer it would seem that ten times that body of water made up this magnificent scene, which at times appeared to be a vast lake. Joseph Ruttenberg is to be congratulated upon the finished photography."

"At the Astor Theatre yesterday," says Quinn Martin in The World, "we were face to face with a cinema storm so terrifying, so catastrophic, so beastily real that we shivered in our boots and actually forgot that such a thing as a motion picture camera had been invented. If ever there was a scene of fury pictured on a cinema screen, here it is! It is the storm of storms! It will get you too."

The Evening Mail's critic says: "There are two outstanding features in the new William Fox picture at the Astor. One is the superlative performance of a small boy, and the other is a marvelous storm and flood episode. The picture is worth seeing for either. Almost, if not quite, overshadowing the storm is the performance of Bunny Grauer. Rarely has there flashed across the screen so exceptional a boy actor as this one. He has a marvelously mobile, expressive face, and eyes from which gleam in turn the entire gamut of human emotions. He repeatedly

Preferred Program Set for Year

New Material Acquired for Production Round Out Attractive Schedule

B. P. SCHULBERG this week advised Al Lichtman by wire of the acquisition of a number of new properties for production. With material now in production and new stories acquired, the Preferred Pictures program for the year is entirely set.

At present, Schulberg maintains two units in Los Angeles. These are headed by Louis J. Gasnier and Tom Forman. Gasnier is at work on "The Hero" while Forman is making "Are You A Failure?" Future work for both of them has been mapped out.

The two pictures now in the making will round out Preferred's first five pictures. "Rich Men's Wives" has already been released. "Shadows" the second picture starts first run engagements this month. "Thorns and Orange Blossoms" a Gasnier Production will be released next month. "The Hero" will be the fourth release and "Are You A Failure?" the fifth.

The line-up for the entire year will then be as follows:

"Rich Men's Wives," "Shadows," "Thorns and Orange Blossoms," "The Hero," "Are You A Failure?" "Poor Men's Wives," "The Girl Who Came Back," "Mothers-in-Law," "A Mansion of Aching Hearts," " My Lady's Lips," and one subject to be announced.

"Poor Men's Wives," will be directed by Gasnier as soon as he finishes "The Hero." "The Girl Who Came Back" will be a Tom Forman Production. "Mothers-in-Law" which was written by Frank Dazey and Agnes Christine Johnston will be produced by Gasnier. No assignments have been made for "A Mansion of Aching Hearts" and "My Lady's Lips."

Illinois Exhibitors See "The Forgotten Law"

"THE Forgotten Law," which was produced for Metro under the personal supervision of Max Graf, was given a pre-release showing before a gathering of Illinois exhibitors at a luncheon party at the Blackstone Hotel, Chicago, recently. The consensus of opinion, as reported to S. A. Shirley, Metro's Chicago district manager, was that this picture version of Caroline Abbott Stanley's famous novel, "A Modern Madonna," which has in its cast such leading players as Milton Sills, Jack Mulhall and Cleo Ridgely, would prove a great attraction.

Among the exhibitors present at the luncheon and review of "The Forgotten Law" were: Harry Asher, of Asher Brothers Circuit; William Burford, Aurora Theatres Company; Charles Lamm, Palm Theatre, Rockford, Ill.; Max Balaban, of Balaban & Katz; E. C. Beck, Castle Theatre; W. L. Barbee, Barbee's Loop Theatre; H. O. Loper, Lyric Theatre, Springfield, Ill.

Press-Book Ready For "Headless Horseman"

Advance copies of "The Headless Horseman" press book have arrived in the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation and in the estimation of those exhibitors to whom it has been shown, it is one of the best books that this organization has ever put out. Special accessories to help the exhibitor in advertising "The Headless Horseman" or "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow" have been designed by the Hodkinson organization. They include additional lineads both large and small, a larger book and a clip sheet that carries suggestions for putting this exceptional feature over in a big way. Special stress has been laid upon the exploitation angles.

Universal Buys Wm. S. McNutt Story

"His Good Name" will be filmed as an all star special production at Universal City.

The William Slavens McNutt story that was published serially in Collier's weekly and later as a novel has been purchased by Universal and will be produced elaborately, according to an announcement from the Universal home office.

Raymond L. Schrock, scenario editor at Universal City, has engaged Frank Bearesford to prepare the continuity.

Fox Releases for Week of November 6

TWO features, a Clyde Cook Special Comedy, Sunshine Comedy, and a Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon, comprise the releases announced for the week of November 6th, by Fox Film Corporation.

"Shirley of the Circus" is the Shirley Mason publication. It comes from the pen of Robert M. Lee and was produced under the direction of Rowland V. Lee.

John Gilbert essays the role of a happy-go-lucky, courageous westerner in his vehicle, "The Love Gambler." It was directed by Joseph Franz and written by Lillian Bennet-Thompson and George Hubbard.

Clyde Cook comes in his new laugh-provoking special two-reeler, "Lazy Bones."

"The Ranch Romeo" is the title of the new Sunshine Comedy, and a Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon, "Wishing Ducks," is also on the week's release program.

Chaplin's "The Pilgrim" Full of Giggles

Charlie Chaplin's new First National comedy, the title of which he has switched from "At Large" to "The Pilgrim," was recently given an unannounced preview at a Los Angeles theatre to "try it on the dog." In this production Charlie portrays the role of an escaped convict who disguised himself as a clergyman. Circumstances force him into the pulpit and his pantomimic rendering of the story of David and Goliath, without subtitles, is said to be one of the funniest bits of the year. "Not much pathos in this picture, but beaucoup giggles," is the way the reviewer describes it. Edna Purviance, his perennial leading lady, again has the chief feminine role.

Home Town Folks Give Meighan Welcome

Thomas Meighan, like the hero in the George Ade story he is now making, was given a royal reception when he returned to his home town, Pittsburgh. He was greeted by a committee from the Allegheny high school, with a petition signed by 2,000 students, when he stepped off the train at Pittsburgh. They wanted him to head the parade which preceded the big football game between Allegheny and Schenley. Meighan did. He has never been known to disappoint the youngsters.

Meighan went to Pittsburgh to film oil well scenes for the latest Paramount picture, "Back Home and Broke." It was the first time that the popular star had gone back to his home to film scenes and the reception he got from his home town friends was proof enough of his popularity.

"Forget-Me-Not" Is Approved

Atlanta Film Committee President Gives Endorsement to Burston Production

TESTIMONIAL to the high quality of the Louis Burston production, "Forget-Me-Not" is contained in communications received at the New York Offices of Metro Pictures Corporation, distributors of this motion picture.

"'Forget-Me-Not' was the best picture ever shown in the town," writes L. D. Lammon, of the Eclipse Theatre, Coleraine, Minnesota.

"The people of Coleraine say that Forget-Me-Not was the best picture ever shown in the town, and we agree with them. Some time we are going to ask you to return this picture to our town. With little experience in the movie game we were not sure that we had done the right thing in ordering your series. We are sure that it was no mistake, now. We thank you for starting us out right."

Mrs. B. M. Boykin, President of the Better Films Committee of Atlanta, an influential organization in the campaign for photoplays' progress, endorses "Forget-Me-Not" highly. Her letter to the Southern District Manager of Metro is worded as follows:

"It affords the Better Films Committee of Atlanta great pleasure in heartily endorsing and recommending for exhibition in every theatre in the South your wonderful picture, 'Forget-Me-Not,' in which Bessie Love appears in the leading part.

"Bessie Love and Gareth Hughes have enacted, we think, their finest work in this production, and we do not see how it would be possible for the theatre owners in the Southeastern States to overlook presenting this picture to their patrons, because it is the type of picture in keeping with the general ideas of our committee at large and we trust that the picture will be presented in every community in the Southeastern States."

"Ninety and Nine" is Thriller

First of Vitagraph's Specials Completed and Turned Over for Revision

DIRECTOR DAVID SMITH has completed and turned in for revision the first of Vitagraph's big twelve special productions, "The Ninety and Nine." This picture is said to be a thriller, in which Director Smith made the most of his material.

The big thrill is the rescue of an entire countryside from the fury of the flames, as the forest fire races toward the surrounded town. Great stretches of burning forest are seen with whole towns in flames, hundreds of men, women and children running frantically to cover. The little telegraph office is besieged with shouting, cursing, praying men, demanding an engine to take the trapped inhabitants to safety. There is not an engine on the division. The dispatcher remembers that an official's engine, with a private car, is on the siding at the nearest station. But the official declares it is a fool's chance, and will not permit the use of the engine. Then the one man appears—the young derelict who chances to be on the scene. Without hesitation he thrashes the cowardly engine crew, commandeers the engine, rolls the steel monster out on the main track, and heads into the furnace of roaring flames ahead.

Warner Baxter is the volunteer engine driver in this production, and beautiful Colleen Moore is the winsome Ruth Blake.

'Grandma's Boy' Makes Record

Harold Lloyd Picture Being Booked for Longer Runs All Over Country

THE record-smashing career upon which "Grandma's Boy," the Harold Lloyd-Associated Exhibitors superattraction, produced by Hal Roach, was launched with its first appearance in Los Angeles, has extended itself far beyond the big first run houses of the large cities, according to word from Associated Exhibitors. In town after town, often in the community's largest theatre, it passed the high water mark for attendance, and exhibitors were forced to extend the duration of the showings well beyond the period stipulated in the original contracts.

Now comes an upset also in the neighborhood houses of the large centers, and in the smaller towns of the country. With only the locals and the capacity of the places of exhibition altered, the same conditions are being repeated. As "one-week towns" suddenly came into prominence as two, three, and even four week towns," so places where hitherto a run of three days was the rule for even a special offering have been elevated to "full week" rank.

A telegram received this week by W. E. Frank, general sales manager of Associated Exhibitors, from John C. Graham, owner of the Lyric Theatre, Butler, Pa., is char-

"When your Mr. Lamb approached me on running 'Grandma's Boy' at a price that seemed impossible, I turned it down, but later I took a chance, with the result that the Lyric did the greatest business in two years."

Big Houses Closing for "Oliver Twist"

"OLIVER TWIST," the Jackie Coogan production, has the distinction of playing three down-town houses in Chicago prior to its being presented in the theatres throughout the suburbs.

The initial engagement took place last week in the Chicago theatre, of the Balaban and Katz circuit and its next presentation will be at Barbee's Loop theatre after which it will be offered at the Castle. Jackie's offering will then be featured in all of the Balaban and Katz theatres in and around the windy city.

Similar contracts are now being entered into between the Coogan organization and heads of circuits in other territories. The West Coast Theatres, Inc., controlled by Messrs. Gore Bros., Ramish and Sol Lesser on the coast, have contracted for the feature for their entire chain of some sixty houses. The first opening on this huge chain will be in Los Angeles at the Kinema theatre.

"The Ghost Patrol" Is Ready for Screen

"The Ghost Patrol," by the author of "Main Street" and "Babbit," Sinclair Lewis, has been transcribed to the screen. The production of the Universal all-star screen version of it has just been completed under the direction of Nat Ross.

Some people thought "The Ghost Patrol" was too subtle a character drawing to be good screen material. Others said that very subtlety could be retained and would be its charm.

To preserve all its qualities and make the filming an assured success in advance, executives at Universal City assigned Raymond L. Schrock, scenario editor and E. T. Lowe, Jr., both expert continuity writers, to prepare the scenario. The cast includes Ralph Graves, Bessie Love, George Nichols, George B. Williams, Max Davidson, Wade Boteler, Dan Crimmins, Lydia Yeamans Titus, Danny Hoy, Melbourne McDowell, Gordon Sackville, John Cossar, George Cooper, Belle Stoddard Johnstone and others.

Hoot Gibson Completes New Universal Film

Under William Worthington's direction Universal has completed the filming of Edward (Hoot) Gibson's starring vehicle, tentatively titled "Kindled Courage."

A former Universal favorite, Beatrice Burnham, will be seen opposite Gibson. Miss Burnham played steadily at Universal City two or three years ago. She returned a few months ago to support Priscilla Dean in "The Flame of Life" and recently for this Gibson engagement.

Harold Goodwin, Harry Tenbrook, James Gordon Russell, Albert Hart and J. Russell Powell have other important roles.

"The Dust Flower" Is Big Seller

BASIL KING, who wrote an original scenario for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation, called "The Dust Flower," later turned the film into a novel because of its success as a picture. Harper & Brothers published the novel for the autumn book season, and it has become one of the best selling of this noted author's fictions.

In a letter received from the Harpers under date of November 3, 1922, Goldwyn is informed that the first editions of the novel had been exhausted and a new edition was then on the pres to meet the big and increasing demand for the story.

The publishers are co-operating with Goldwyn to obtain tie-ups with booksellers for window displays of Mr. King's various books in connection with all screenings of the photoplay.

Fox Co-operating with Nat'l Review Board

Through its educational division, Fox Film Corporation is co-operating with the National Board of Review in presenting praiseworthy films based on literature. New prints on these productions have been supplied to all Fox exchanges. The Fox Film headquarters declare that exhibitors in all sections will play during Book Week, November 12 to 18, these subjects, which include:

"Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves," from Arabian Nights; "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," by Mark Twain; "Evangeline," by Longfellow; "If I Were King," by Justin Huntley McCarthy; "Jack and the Beanstalk"; "The Lamplighter," by Maria F. Cummins; "The Last Trail," by Zane Grey; "Les Miserables," by Victor Hugo; "The Men of Zanzibar," by Richard Harding Davis, "Merely Mary Ann," by Israel Zangwill; "Monte Cristo," by Alexandre Dumas; "Over the Hill," by Will Carleton; "A Self-Made Man," by George Horace Lorimer; "A Stage Romance," by Alexandre Dumas, from the play "Edmond Keane"; "A Tale of Two Cities," by Charles Dickens, and "Treasure Island," by Robert Louis Stevenson.

"Hearts Aflame" to Be Ten-Reel Special

"Hearts Aflame," the all-star production recently completed by Reginald Barker, will go out as a ten-reel special, according to announcement just received from the producer, Louis B. Mayer. Adapted from the famous Harold Titus novel, "Timber," and filmed on a stupendous scale, the picture represents the perfect combination of spectacle and human interest drama, it is claimed. Louis B. Mayer and Reginald Barker will shortly leave for New York, taking with them the masterprint and negative of "Hearts Aflame."

Holubar Starts New Production

Next Dorothy Phillips' Vehicle for First National Under Way on Coast

ALLEN HOLUBAR'S new production, starring Dorothy Phillips and scheduled for distribution through Associated First National Pictures, has been started at the United Studios on the coast. The title of the new subject, according to words from the West coast headquarters, is "The White Frontier." October 30th, which marked the start of work on the new production, was also Miss Phillips' birthday, and the coincidence of the star's anniversary and the start of her next screen vehicle was hailed by officials of the producing organization as a most fortuitous circumstance.

The new picture is an adaptation of a novel by Jeffrey Deprend. The story is declared to teem with exciting incident, unusual situations and dramatic characterizations. A feature of the celebration marking Miss Phillips' birthday was the presentation to her by her director-husband, Mr. Holubar, of the completed scenario of the new story, which he had adapted with the assistance or Tay Garnett.

"The White Frontier" follows "Hurricane's Gal," recently released, which is winning the star and producer new laurels everywhere. The same producing organization which helped insure the success of the earlier photoplay will officiate on the forthcoming production. Harold Bucquet continues as assistant director, Byron Haskins as cinematographer, Frank Lawrence as editor, James F. O'Shea as business manager and Mrs. Agnes H. Hicks as auditor.

In addition to the intrinsic interest surrounding the new undertaking of Miss Phillips and Mr. Holubar is the fact that the entire company will travel into the wilderness of Northwestern Canada for the outdoor scenes of the story. Also interesting is the announcement that publication of the novel will be held up until the date of the first releases of the photodramatic version.

Strand Retains "Oliver Twist"

Business So Great in First Week Another Week's Showing Is Given

JACKIE COOGAN'S "Oliver Twist" production has enjoyed one of the greatest successes in picture history in New York. Opening to capacity audiences on Sunday, October 29th, the production has been the talk of Gotham ever since.

On the Tuesday following the opening, arrangements were made between Irving M. Lesser, representing the Coogan Productions in the East and Moe Mark of the Strand Theatre, whereby the production would remain in the big Broadway playhouse another week.

The New York showing was the world premiere. The New York daily press printed a series of glowing reviews, and Manhattan is paying tribute to Charles Dickens and the little star Jackie Coogan in droves.

According to Associated First National Pictures, Inc., who are to distribute this new Coogan classic, the release date has been definitely set for November 20th, but several of the larger cities have contracted for the feature for earlier showings.

"Oliver Twist" is an ideal holiday production and should sail over the top and into box office records with ease, declare Coogan executives.

In speaking of the retention of "Oliver Twist" for a second week's showing, a statement from the Mark Strand Theatre declares:

"The retention of 'Oliver Twist' brings to mind the fact that in the past only screen and stage artists of renown have been able to command such public attention and only upon them was bestowed the favor of a second week's performance. They have been Charles Chaplin, Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, George Arliss, Richard Barthelmess, Harold Lloyd and Lillian Gish. With his reappearance at the Strand, Jackie Coogan therefore begins to rank with the greatest of actors of today.

"A second week for 'Oliver Twist' also strengthens the impression that the picture is one of the greatest and most notable yet created. It seems to be as nearly perfect as a picture play can be, an entertainment for the young and matured as well."

"Kentucky Derby" Given Chicago Review

A unique and impressive midnight review of "The Kentucky Derby" was given at the Randolph Theatre for the motion picture exhibitors and members of the theatrical profession now appearing in Chicago theatres. Manager McCurdy, of the Randolph, Herman Stern, and his sales force from the Chicago Universal exchange were the hosts.

The enthusiastic reception given the picture and the Century Comedy "Just Dogs" which was also shown, was enough to gladden the hearts of those who sponsored the undertaking it is claimed.

Louise Lovely Touring with Production

In conjunction with J. L. Frothingham's production of "Shattered Idols," distributed by American Releasing, Louise Lovely, who plays a featured role, is touring the larger cities in an original entertainment. It opens with a vaudeville playlet, "Their Wedding Night," in which she appears with her husband, Wilton Welch, English comedian.

Buxbaum Week Drive Is Set for Dec. 3 to 9

DECEMBER 3rd to 9th inclusive, is again this year being inaugurated as Buxbaum Week at the New York, Albany and Buffalo Exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. Exhibitors have promised them their fullest co-operation in making this week a big success, according to word from the New York Exchange. The drive was started about a week ago, and the New York Exchange already has 100 theatres booked up solid. They expect to exceed last year's record by a big margin.

Hawaiian Scenes Shown in "White Flower"

Georgeous avenues of Hawaiian palms and banks of richly colored tropical flowers, caused expressions of delight as executives of the Lasky studio viewed the first prints of scenes taken by Director Julia Crawford Ivers in the Hawaiian Islands, where she is now making her own story, "The White Flower," as a Paramount picture, with Betty Compson in the stellar role.

Absolutely accurate to Hawaii and scenically marvellous are these scenes, Paramount says, and they fully justify the enterprise of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in sending Mrs. Ivers and her company to the exact locale concerned in the story.

Miss Compson is supported in this tale of modern Hawaii by Edmund Low, Edward Martindel, Sylvia Ashton, Leon Barry, Arline Pretty and Lily Phillips.

"A Dollar Down" Is Latest Heerman Work

Victor Heerman has added another work to his list of literary achievements for Selznick.

Besides having written "The Chicken in the Case," "A Divorce of Convenience," "The Poor Simp" and "Love Is an Awful Thing," Owen Moore productions, and "John Smith," Eugene O'Brien production, Heerman is responsible for the story of "A Dollar Down," which he is now directing for Selznick, with Owen Moore and Alice Lake in the leading roles.

"Remittance Woman" Filming Completed

Under the direction of Wesley Ruggles, Ethel Clayton this week completed the filming of "The Remittance Woman," which will be her second release through the Film Booking Offices of America. The story is by Achmed Abdullah. It was originally published in Everybody's Magazine in July, 1922, under the same name.

Miss Clayton's leading man is Rockcliffe Fellowes, whose first appearance with the star was made in "The Price of Possession." Others in the cast include Mario Carillo, Frank Lanning, Tom Wilson, Etta Lee, James B. Leong and Edward Kimball.

Practical Press Book for "Hungry Hearts"

What is declared to be one of the most valuable service books, from the exhibitors' point of view, ever issued by Goldwyn is that for its forthcoming release, "Hungry Hearts," founded upon Anzia Yezierska's volume of short stories. It is the same size and shape as Goldwyn's big service books for "Remembrance" and "Sherlock Holmes."

Every angle of the newspaper-size book is directed towards pulling patrons into the theatre. Every press story, every advertisement, every exploitation is aimed directly at prospective theatre patrons. The picture is a big, appealing theme, powerfully and dramatically, and it's appeal is set forth clearly and directly from the window card design in black and red, which forms the front cover of the book, to the small red hearts on the back cover. There is also a varied and effective list of exploitation features.

David Butler Protege of Griffith

David Butler, who is appearing with Viola Dana in "A Noise in Newboro," her newest Metro starring picture, is a screen protege of D. W. Griffith.

It was while playing with the Morosco stock company in Los Angeles several years ago that David Butler first came to the notice of Mr. Griffith. At that time the noted director was preparing to start work on "The Greatest Thing in Life" and after watching the performance of the young actor, he immediately went back stage and signed him for the role of Monsieur Bebe.

Mr. Butler filed this part so well that he was kept under the Griffith banner for a leading part in "The Girl Who Stayed At Home." After these two pictures were released he was showered with offers from motion picture producers and as a result gave up the speaking stage for film work.

Plan Big Newark Opening for "Shadows"

The Strand theatre, Newark, has booked "Shadows" for a week beginning November 17th. This picture, which is the second of the B. P. Schulberg series through the Al Lichtman Corporation will be launched with the co-operation of the Lichtman publicity and advertising departments and the Jans Film Service which distributes the Lichtman product in Northern New Jersey.

"Cardigan" Chosen for Atlanta Opening

The handsome new Woman's Club auditorium in Atlanta, erected at a cost of $110,000, will show a motion picture for the first time on December 1.

The subject chosen is "Cardigan," distributed by American Releasing Corporation, selected because of its historical and patriotic appeal. It is a stirring romance of the days of 1776, a picturization of Robert W. Chambers' novel.

"Bella Donna" Easily Adapted

Vehicle for Pola Negri Said to Lend Itself Perfectly to Picturization

PARAMOUNT claims to have discovered at last the novel that lends itself perfectly to screen adaptation. It is "Bella Donna," in which Pola Negri is to star as her first American-made picture. Moreover, Ouida Bergere, to whom was entrusted the task of scenarizing the famous Robert Hitchens' story, is the authority for the statement that it is the perfect novel for screen adaptation.

"Robert Hichens' novel maintains a perfect continuity," says Miss Bergere. "The characters are always interesting and they are consistently developed. You may dislike the character of 'Bella Donna' in the abstract but she interests you just as the author drew her. With the possible exception of 'Peter Ibbetson,' I have never scenarized a novel that offered as few obstacles or required as few changes as this one.

"Such changes as I have made are exceedingly minor but they were made with the best of reasons in each case. I made the husband, as played by Conrad Nagel, slightly younger. In the picture he is more the youthful idealist rather than the mature and therefore more inconsistent dreamer that he was in the book and in the play.

"I also added one character, a girl of the husband's age. To make her presence in the story logical, I have made her the ward of Dr. Isaacson. We suggest but do not show that she is fond of the husband before his marriage to 'Bella Donna' and we show her as a sincere friend during the tremendously tragic moments of his disillusionment. But that is the extent of her role. We know that she is there to comfort the husband; that she is sincerely fond of him and that, after he has recovered from his illness and the hurt of his wife's infamy, he may turn to her. But we do not show it; we merely suggest it.

"Beyond these small changes, I have followed the story almost without deviation. It is the one novel in my experience that would permit of such treatment."

Aside from the interest which attaches to Pola Negri's first American-made picture, this George Fitzmaurice production boasts of the unusual feature of two leading men playing opposite the Polish star—Conway Tearle and Conrad Nagel.

Goldwyn Gets Real Atmosphere

Directors and Players Sent to Foreign Lands for Six Super Productions

FOR no less than six of the super-productions to be included in the big twenty for the current season, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation has sent, or will send, directors and players to foreign lands. Regardless of expense or distances to be traveled, this company has determined to obtain a correct atmosphere in exterior scenes, even if it means a trip half round the world.

Plans are now being made for the sending of the "Ben Hur" company to Palestine and Italy in order that no time may be lost when the director and players for this greatest of all Goldwyn pictures have been selected. The continuity for Lew Wallace's great story is now being completed by June Mathis, who will accompany the actors on their foreign expedition.

Many of the scenes for the screen version of Thomas Hardy's "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," which Marshall Neilan will produce in association with Goldwyn, will be taken in rural England, in the "Wessex" of the Hardy novels. Frank Urson, Mr. Neilan's assistant has just gone to England to look out for the exterior photography.

Elinor Glyn, author of "Six Days," scheduled for early production by Goldwyn, has recently been in Paris where, on behalf of the producing concern, she superintended the photographing of many "atmospheric" scenes for the photoplay to be based upon her story.

Then, in making "Sherlock Holmes," a recent Goldwyn release, Director Albert Parker with the star, John Barrymore, and several of the principals went to London in the pursuit of realism.

Goldwyn sent Director Maurice Tourneur and three of the leading players in its screen version of Sir Hall Caine's novel, "The Christian," to England to make many of the big exterior scenes.

Director R. A. Walsh and the complete cast for Goldwyn's first Carey Wilson picture, "Passions of the Sea," were sent to Tahiti where almost the entire photoplay was made.

Willat Company is Back From Five Weeks Trip

Irwin V. Willat and the company of players he is directing in the Metro screen version of "All the Brothers Were Valiant," Ben Ames Williams' powerful sea story, have returned from a five weeks' location trip, a month of which was spent aboard a whaling schooner on the Pacific Ocean and a week in Paradise Cove, near San Francisco.

Hunting and kiling whales, a mutiny and battle at sea, and picturesque scenes at Paradise Cove were among the episodes recorded on celluloid and brought back to Hollywood.

Among those in this Irvin V. Willat production are Billie Dove, Malcolm McGregor, Lon Chaney, Robert McKim, William Mong, Bob Kortman, William H. Orlamond, Otto Brower, Curt Rehfeld, Leo Willis and J. P. Lockney.

George Beban Guest of Kansas Governor

George Beban, touring the larger cities with his stage and screen combination of "The Sign of The Rose," was received in Topeka, Kansas, for his appearance at the Orpheum Theatre, under unusual conditions.

Because of the political convention which overcrowded the city, hotel accommodations could not be provided for the star and his company. Whereupon a suite was placed at his disposal in the executive mansion by Governor Henry J. Allen.

Beban's arrival in the city was made noteworthy by the presence, on the capitol steps, of Mayor Herbert J. Corwine, and the Governor who presented the actor with a floral key to the city in sight of a great crowd.

Exhibitor Succeeds with Vitagraph Week

Harry F. Dunning, manager of the Juneau Theatre, Milwaukee, made a tremendous success of a Vitagraph week—playing that company's features as headliners for a seven-day showing, according to word from the Vitagraph office.

Beginning Sunday afternoon and evening, the feature was Earle Williams in "Restless Souls." The next three days "A Rogue's Romance," featuring Earle Williams and Rodolph Valentino, played to heavy business. He closed the week with Corinne Griffith in "A Woman's Sacrifice."

Rupert Hughes Finishes "Souls for Sale"

Rupert Hughes has completed the continuity for his next photoplay for Goldwyn, based upon his recently published novel of motion picture life in Hollywood, "Souls for Sale." Mr. Hughes will direct the production according to the terms of his contract with Goldwyn, and edit and title it.

Goldwyn's casting department has not yet made any engagement for "Souls for Sale," but several prominent players are under consideration for the two leading roles.

Two Fox Pictures Are Named Among Best

The moving picture editor of the New York Times has selected twelve films shown between July 1 and September 30, 1922, which, in his opinion, represent the best output for that period of time shown on Broadway.

The editor explains his standard of merit as pictures "which seem to him worthy of special mention as entertainment for grown people who do not object to motion pictures just because they are motion pictures, but who, nevertheless, impose a certain degree of intellectual censorship on anything offered for their pleasure."

Among the twelve pictures mentioned, which are the product of eight different companies, two are Fox pictures, "The Fast Mail" and "Monte Cristo."

Artclass Picture Nears Completion

Alfred Weiss, newly elected president of Artclass Pictures Corporation, announced this week that "Between Worlds" is practically ready for the market. This production has been in process of cutting and editing for four months by Katherine Stuart. While many innovations in the matter of photographic backgrounds have been worked out by John K. Holbrook and Mark Tobey under the supervision of Adolph Weiss.

The picture presents four distinct stories dealing in turn with Venice, Arabia, China and America. All of these stories have been woven into a closely knit narrative, of which the outstanding figure is the young girl who enacts in each story a totally different character.

Bert Ennis to Exploit "Between Worlds"

Bert Ennis returned to New York this week following an exploitation campaign in connection with the engagement of "After Six Days" at English's Opera House, Indianapolis. He will immediately begin preparations for the exploitation of "Between Worlds," the latest feature sponsored by Artclass Pictures Corporation and which is being handled under the direct supervision of Alfred Weiss, newly elected president of the organization.

Ennis will also handle a special campaign for the engagement of "Quincy Adam Sawyer," the S-L production released by Metro, which will be presented at the Capitol Theatre, New York, the early part of next month.

Loew's Southern Chain to Run Graphic Film

"Wildness of Youth," Graphic Film Co. latest big production with an all star cast was booked over Loew's Southern time opening at Loew's Grand Theatre in Wanta, Ga., November 16th and playing to the 19th.

In conjunction with "Wildness of Youth," Virginia Pearson who is co-starred, will appear in her own original vaudeville sketch with a talented company. It is the intention of the Loew Booking Offices to book "Wildness of Youth" through the West, Northwest and Canada together with Miss Pearson's appearances through this territory.

Campaign Planned for Barthelmess Film

The Producers Security Corporation is preparing a massive exploitation campaign for the latest Richard Barthelmess release, "Just A Song At Twilight," which is slated for distribution on the open market inside the next two weeks. The story was built around the famous music theme "Loves Old Sweet Song."

The supporting cast is headed by Evelyn Greeley and Pedro de Cardoba.

Valentino Re-Issue by Universal

"All Night" Made Several Years Ago with Carmel Myers Opposite Star

UNIVERSAL announces the reissue of "All Night," a feature production made several years ago with Carmel Myers and Rodolph Valentino as the leading players. It will be released as a Universal Special and will be accompanied by news print, paper, press sheets, slides, lobby cards and other accessories.

Universal recently reissued the "Delicious Little Devil," a feature production with Mae Murray and Rodolph Valentino. It met with instant success and exhibitors all over the country have cleaned up with it. "All Night" will be released under similar conditions. It is being put out as the result of a demand on the part of exhibitors for more Rodolph Valentino reissues.

Valentino did much work for Universal several years ago as a leading man. These pictures were the cream of the Universal program at that time and are distinctive in their excellence—the settings, the acting, the photography and the direction being of such quality that they are scarcely distinguishable from pictures made today.

"Once to Every Woman," another Universal picture, in which Valentino had an important role, and which has been shown in thousands of theatres throughout the country during the last two years, suddenly took a new lease on life about six months ago. The demand for it became so great new prints had to be ordered and new press sheets and accessories made up. It still is being shown in all sections of the country.

"All Night" was found to be of exceptional quality and of unusual note as regards Valentino. In it his acting is one of the outstanding features of the picture. He is shown as a perplexed lover in extraordinary situations with his temperamental sweetheart. The story was written by Edgar Franklin, a popular magazine writer, and was directed by Paul Powell.

In the supporting cast were Charles Dorian, Mary Warren, William Dyer, Wadsworth Harris and Jack Hull.

"Over the Hill" on Third Year

Fox Film Corporation Claims Big Record in Attendance and Houses Played

HAVING rounded out its second year of continuous playing "Over the Hill," now holds all records for length of continuous run, attendance, number of theatres played, and gross receipts, according to a statement from the Fox Film Corporation which first presented the play in New York City on September 17, 1920.

Entering its third year, the statement says, it has bowled over every record set up for it to shoot at, and is now sweeping the world with no let-up in sight.

With "Over the Hill," William Fox, has made screen history. Not only has it played to more people than any other picture, according to the Fox office, but it has drawn to the motion picture theatres men and women who never, or seldom, attended that style of entertainment. Exhibitors have reported to the Fox branch managers that they have seen among their patrons men and women well known in the communities who never visited their theatres before.

Beside playing continuously for more than two years, it has been the feature attraction in 7,813 houses in the United States. Canada has played it in 571 of its theatres and places of amusement where it went as big as it did in the United States. In England up-to-date it has been played in 1,628 public places of amusement.

Every country where motion pictures are known has played the Fox masterpiece, and it is now sweeping Andalusia, China, and the Far East where it is beinng received with as much favor as it is at home. Ninety per cent. of all criticism written about "Over the Hill" has been favorable, and it has received more favorable comment, according to the Fox scrap books, from persons in all walks of life than any other one picture ever produced.

It must be taken into consideration that these records have been established in a little more than a year, as the Fox special was not released to the general public until after it had completed a year's run on Broadway, New York City. Not only did it establish a new Broadway record, but it broke a well established Broadway tradition playing in six different theatres there, when all the wiseacres for years had said it was suicide to move a success from one theatre to another.

Striking Press-Book on "Notoriety" Ready

Weber & North have prepared a press-book of pretentious proportions for its Will Nigh release, "Notoriety." The book, which comprises thirty-two pages, combines the artistic with the useful. The services of Albert Vargas were employed to produce a collection of newspaper ads and publicity scenes that set a standard for punch and class. Four full pages of ads are supplied in varied assortment for the practical use of every type of theatre. An extra page of teaser ads playing on the title of the picture and eight pages of publicity stories for newspapers and Sunday magazines make the array of press material complete in every detail.

"Madonna in Chains" Ready for Release

With the final touching in the way of recuts and retakes the Amalgamated Exchange's first production, "The Madonna in Chains," is this week ready for release, and a private showing of the film to directors and distributors of the company's product may be shown next week.

The picture was made in the New Rochelle studios of the company under the direction of William P. Burt. The scenes in the majority of cases are all big ones, and on several occasions as many as four hundred people were used at one setting.

In the matter of time the production has set a new record. Exactly four weeks were taken in its manufacture. Because of the fact that the picture was the first of the new independent company, it was delayed in starting, and the day that Larry Williams, the camera man, turned the first crank the production was two weeks behind.

"I Am the Law" Booked Over Circuits

Bobby North of the Apollo Exchange announces that "I Am the Law" got off to a flying start this week when this all-star feature with Alice Lake, Kenneth Harlan, Gaston Glass, Rosemary Theby, Noah and Wallace Beery opened its New York run at the Broadway Theatre for a full week's showing.

Following this run it has been booked over the entire B. F. Keith, Moss and Proctor circuits, which means that it is under way with flying colors in this territory.

Forestry Department Aids Picture

In the staging of the big, spectacular forest fire scenes in his latest screen special for Louis B. Mayer's "Hearts Aflame," Reginald Barker, the director, secured invaluable aid from the forestry department. Working under the personal supervision of Los Angeles County Forester Stuart J. Flintham, one hundred deputies, or rangers, were constantly on duty with the Barker company during the five days and nights consumed in the making of the fire scenes which furnish the thrilling climax in the picture.

Associated Attractions in Detroit Houses

Associated Exhibitors' attractions packed two big theatres simultaneously in Detroit last week, according to announcement from that office. While Harold Lloyd in "Grandma's Boy," was playing its second week at the Fox-Washington, having been held over because the crowds could not be accommodated in the one week which had been contracted for originally, the Florence Vidor feature, "Dusk to Dawn," was appearing at Warren & Cohen's Colonial Theatre.

Masonry in Theatre Construction Requires Study for Economy

Walls, Piers, Foundations, Etc., Demand Engineering Conception

MASONRY work in any theatre represents a large percentage of its total cost. It is consequently an important element in theatre construction and justifies serious consideration.

From an economic point of view, it is susceptible to considerable study and lends itself to many different forms of design, both theoretical and practical. Very often the design is over-balanced theoretically, but more often it is badly over-balanced from a practical point of view. This is due to the fact that, generally the mason work, especially the walls, are designed by architectural draftsmen at the time the architectural plans are drawn. Little thought is then given to the fact that walls, piers, foundations, etc., are important elements and require engineering conception. As a matter of fact, walls of the average theatre are of such height and without lateral supports that they become highly distinguished as matters of engineering and should be thoroughly treated as such. Too much consideration cannot be given to their design. Usually theatre walls are of the wall-bearing type and hence support the entire roof structure. Any failure in the main wall construction would certainly be of a serious nature and would probably cause the ultimate collapse of the entire structure.

Types of Masonry

There are several types of masonry applicable to theatre construction and many different kinds are actually used. The most common of which is the all-brick masonry, from foundation to top of parapets above the roof which may be designated as type 1. These walls are usually unsupported for their entire height, of not less than forty feet for side walls and sixty feet for rear stage walls. From this it may be seen that these walls must be either thick enough to give sufficient stability to themselves since they are unsupported, or have piers or buttresses in sufficient number to provide the necessary stability. It is quite common practice to make walls, which are forty feet high or less, twelve inches thick and many theatres have been built in that manner, in accordance with the provisions of different building laws. These laws have been established, more or less arbitrarily, and are not susceptible to a theoretical analysis, especially if wind pressure is taken into consideration. Fortunately, theatre buildings are usually located in protected locations and consequently wind forces do not actually obtain. This probably explains why there have been few, if any, failures due to faulty wall design.

H. ROBBIN BURROUGHS, theatre specialist and constulting engineer, has prepared a thorough article on masonry work in the theatre. This particular phase of theatre construction is very important in that it represents a large percentage of the total cost and therefore justifies serious consideration. Mr. Burroughs points out that from an economic point of view this phase of theatre construction is susceptible to considerable study as there are many different forms of design. It is therefore recommended that theatre owners and builders read this treatment in view of the fact that very valuable recommendations and general information is therein contained.

Consequently brick walls having a high slenderness ratio and supporting only light vertical loads, may be regarded as satisfactory, provided they are laid up in good cement mortar and well bonded together. At points of heavy loads, supporting trusses or girders, piers should be introduced of sufficient size to reduce the slenderness ratio to a safe limit and provide sufficient bearing to safely sustain the imposed loads.

Masonry work, type two, is a combination of brick and plain concrete. In this type, the footings and foundation walls up to grade are constructed of stone concrete with the superstructure of brick, either of plain walls or with piers as in type one. This is superior to type one, for the reason that concrete is more homogeneous than brick and lends itself to reinforcement, where it may be necessary to distribute the soil-bearing pressure over soft places in the soil or where large openings obtain at the ground level, such as main exits, etc. In the latter case foundation walls directly under the opening are required to act as inverted beams, in order that the foundation pressure may be uniformly distributed. Therefore, it becomes necessary to reinforce the top of the beam or wall, immediately below the opening. This is a common source of weakness and needs to be emphasized. The writer has been called in on several occasions relative to the appearance of cracks in the brick walls adjacent to exit openings and he has found that, in practically every case, the source of the trouble laid in the failure to provide reinforcement in the wall below. The result being that this wall had also cracked, due to upward pressure from the soil. Unequal settlement has subsequently taken place, due to unequal soil pressure on the wall footings.

Another source of unequal settlement is often found to be due to faulty design of proscenium pier foundations. The problem here is analogous to that mentioned in the preceding paragraph; except in this case, which is more pronounced, usually some attempt is made to provide therefor, whereas in the case of exit openings, no provision is made, the subject being entirely disregarded. Proscenium openings are generally large and consequently the footings are discontinuous. Two independent foundations should be provided, one at either side of the opening, and they should be of sufficient size and proper design to distribute the entire superimposed load on the soil at the safe bearing values, which may vary from two to eight tons per square foot. If these footings have not this sufficiency, unequal settlement of the proscenium wall will obtain and cracks in the wall, radiating from the upper corners of the opening, will appear. The degree of seriousness indicated by these cracks, will depend on their magnitude and direction. If the foundations have been properly designed, settlement will be uniform and cracks will not appear.

Foundation Recommendations

Type three consists of plain concrete foundations, brick curtain walls, with steel and reinforced concrete columns and girders. Girders in this case are used only when deep foundations are involved. Generally, masonry footings are placed four feet below ground level, except where conditions require interior excavations, in which case they are carried down below this level. If sufficient soil-bearing values are not found at this depth, it becomes necessary to carry the foundation to a greater depth. In this event it is more economical to use individual piers with concrete girders just below the ground level to support the brick work. Steel columns are then used to support the roof steel work. This third combination of materials is not economical and is not recommended. For theatres in which the side parapet walls are not over forty feet high the writer would recommend using concrete foundations, with brick walls having buttresses and piers of proper size supporting roof trusses. In cases where the walls are over forty feet in height and architectural conditions limit pier sizes, it is recommended that steel columns be used in the walls. These columns should be properly braced against lateral displacement.

Type four may be classified as combination tile and brick masonry. This may be used

Theatre at San Diego, Cal., Follows Style of Indian Art

BEARING the name of the Ramona theatre, and with many novel features, the newest motion picture house in San Diego, Cal., has been opened by Euclid C. Wills, who has been operating for several years another film theatre, the Hillcrest.

The new house occupies a lot 40 by 100 feet, at Thirtieth street and University avenue, is of hollow tile construction and is practically fire-proof. The details of the house were designed by Mr. Wills, who engaged James W. Krebs of Arizona, an artist who has made a long study of Indian art, to do all the interior decorating, this being one of the most striking features of the theatre.

The walls are finished in plaster that looks like that used by the Zuni Indians. It is shaded from an Indian brown near the floor to a grayish near the ceiling. There are painted at various points different Indian designs, like the swastika and other distinctive characters. A series of large panels, depicting scenes of Indian life and western topography, as well as pictures of the old San Diego Mission, established in 1769, and "Ramona's Marriage Place," a popular scenic adobe in San Diego, have been painted by Mr. Krebs and his assistant, Wallace Hamilton, and occupy spaces on the east and west walls.

In the foyer, as well, Mr. Wills has carried out the same idea in his draperies, which are like Indian blankets, while Indian pottery contains flowers, and Hopi rain-gods, done in clay, stand on the brackets at the sides of either entrance to the main auditorium.

The Ramona has a seating capacity of 314 on the main floor and 106 on the balcony. The seats are painted in a gray-blue which harmonizes with the wall tints.

The house is illuminated by the Cove lighting system, and there is thus afforded the opportunity to give the various lighting effects as atmosphere for the picture that may be showing. For full lighting of the interior there are six fixtures, finished in opal glass, hanging from the ceiling. These were furnished by the San Diego Art Glass Works.

Bartola Musical Instrument Co. Predicts Increased Installations

As a result of the tour now being made by Dan Barton of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company, announcement is made of predictions of a number of organ installations in that territory. While being interviewed on the run, Mr. Barton stated that business was never better than at present and that even with increased factory facilities, the orders were crowding production. The renewed interest in the purchase of Barton organs is a good index of the prosperity the motion picture field is experiencing.

Another indication of the increasing business which should be indicative of prosperity in the theatre business is the addition to the sales staff of the Bartola Musical Instrument Company of William C. Huey, who is probably well known to many of the exhibitors as a film salesman.

Three Dimension Motion Pictures Produced by Means of the Teleview

FOR nearly twenty-five years various and sundry attempts have been made to produce a three dimension motion picture. That is, one having depth as well as length and breadth. Two young electrical engineers, Lawrence Hammond and William F. Cassidy, after two years' intensive effort, it is claimed, have at last solved the problem of producing a stereoscopic motion picture which can be seen from any seat in a theatre without strain on the spectators' eyes.

To produce these stereoscopic motion pictures two films are made at the same time by a special camera having two lenses two and five-eights inches apart, the average distance between a person's eyes. This camera operates in much the same fashion as would two standard motion picture cameras driven together and in perfect unison. The two films, after development and printing, are each one of them standard films, and if either of them were to be run in a standard projector it would give the regular flat motion picture. Run together and seen with the naked eye, they produce the effect of a double exposure photograph.

"Teleview" with front cover-plate removed, showing:

Where the pictures are to be shown with stereoscopic effect, both films are run simultaneously through double projectors which are placed in such a way as to throw the two pictures on the screen, first one and then the other in such rapid succession as to make practically one picture. Since the two pictures were taken from slightly different points of view they are, of course, not exactly the same and, therefore, the combined picture is not sharp.

The magic of bringing the objects forward from the background is accomplished by means of a simple device, known as the Teleview. Each spectator looks at the picture through his individual instrument, which is attached to the arm of each chair by means of a flexible bracket. This bracket can be moved at will and the Teleview adjusted to any comfortable position the spectator desires.

The Teleview consists of a small circular aluminum casing inside of which is an exceedingly small motor. On the shaft of this motor is a light aluminum plate, about the thickness of a sheet of paper, which spins continually at a high rate of speed (about 1,500 r.p.m.). This plate is shaped like a motion picture shutter and, owing to the peculiar properties of the motor which drives it, turns in exact step with the shutter on the projection machines which are throwing the pictures on the screen.

In the lower part of the case is a large hole covered with plate glass. The spectator, looking through this miniature window, sees the picture first with one and then with the other eye in such rapid succession that he is absolutely unconscious of the process. His vision is cut off by the constantly revolving shutter inside the case. The longest period of time through which either eye can see the picture on the screen without interruption is one one hundred and ninety sixth part of a second. The prolongation of the spectator's vision carries two steady impressions of pictures in his two eyes. Had the spectator witnessed the original scene, he would have had a different picture in each eye in just the same manner.

Therefore, remarkable as it may seem, in watching the picture one gets exactly the same effect as if he were watching the actual scene. The screen, as such, appears to vanish, while the characters appear life-size, and stand out from the flat plane in relief and appear to be as far away from or as close to the observer as the object originally was from the camera. Further, and most interesting, is the fact that a man in the audience may walk through the picture, appearing behind objects in the foreground and in front of the background.

The "close-up" of the ordinary movie is entirely eliminated by this Teleview process. Instead of a huge face, ten or twelve feet in length, appearing on a screen many feet from the spectators, one sees the actor approaching and it appears as if one's outstretched hand would touch his. The action seems to take place over the heads of the audience two or three rows ahead.

Since there are no lenses or prisms in the Teleview, there is no need for any adjustment. The piece of plate glass is merely inserted as a protection from the revolving shutter inside the casing. Further, since the films are run much faster than the ordinary motion pictures, there is less flicker and therefore the eyes do not grow so tired.

Underwriter's Laboratories Report on Safety Device for Projection Machines

THE Fyre-Gard was invented by Chas. R. Carlson, a projectionist, about four years ago, after he had the first film fire, in his ten years' experience as projectionist. Right then and there Carlson decided he would not have another film fire, not if he could do anything about it, and he did. He invented and perfected the Fyre-Gard and now claims it is next to impossible for a film fire to originate from within the projector.

The Fyre-Gard was tested for three years, 10 hours per day, Mr. Carlson says, at the Fox Theatre, Aurora, Ill., without even as much as a scorched film in that period. The device is marketed by the Fyre-Gard Manufacturing Co., an Illinois corporation.

The Absolute Con-Tac-Tor "automatic switch used in the "Fyre-Gard" apparatus.

The Fyre-Gard has been approved by the National Board of Fire Underwriters, also by the Electrical Department of the City of Chicago, after a thorough test.

Too much consideration cannot be given by theatre owners to fire prevention devices of this character as even a small fire may be the cause of a panic that may give the theatre a "black-eye" from which is may never revive.

Report made on this Apparatus by the Underwriters Laboratories

General Character and Use

This device is intended for attachment to a standard Simplex motion picture machine, and is designed to interpose a shutter between the lamp house and the film and to stop the driving motor should the film become broken at any point above or below the aperture plate or the lower reel fail to pick up, or the mechanism of projector jam or break. The same protection is given in the event that the lower loop is lost or that sprocket holes are stripped from film.

The general appearance of the device as attached to a machine in service is shown in the accompanying cut.

Assembly

The apparatus comprises a counterbalanced lever system and special form of switch, all mounted by means of brackets on the machine with screws already forming a part of the machine, and installed in such a manner as not to interfere with the normal operation.

The switch is enclosed in a metal box attached to the machine frame and connected through standard armored cable to the driving motor and supply circuit.

The operation of the device depends on the support by film tension of an additional roller which is permitted to fall in the event of failure of film to feed properly, thus operating the switch in the motor circuit and at the same time permitting the small shutter to drop in the beam of light, cutting it off from the film aperture.

Construction Details

Mechanical Connections—The accompanying cut, Fig. 1, illustrates quite clearly the system of levers which are pivoted by machine screws on supporting bracket or frame, as shown. The screws at A, B, and C, are employed in supporting the device, and these screws are fitted in holes already tapped in the machine. The cutoff shutter is shown at E. and the tripping lever at H. The extra roller, supported by the film tension, is shown at I. With the shortening of the loop at H or the release of tension at I the levers are permitted to drop shutter E and partially rotate the switch shaft at K to open the motor circuit.

These parts are made of brass strips secured by small machine screws with lock nuts and mounted on a castbrass frame or bracket.

Switch—The motor-control switch is made by the Absolute Contractor Co. The switch is rated at 8 amperes 110 volts, and in this machine is used to control a ⅛ h.p., 110 volt driving motor.

The switch is mounted on a spindle or shaft extended through a bearing box in the wall of the enclosing box which is of cast iron with a removable steel cover, No. 14 U. S. gauge in thickness, secured by two machine screws threaded in the bosses formed inside the box. The box is also provided with a mounting bracket at one end and with a separate compartment at the other end, also provided with a removable cover secured by two machine screws. This second compartment is employed to enclose the wiring joints between the wires in the circuit and communicates with the switch encloseure only through two small openings through which the standard rubber-covered leads project. The switch tube is connected to these rubber-covered leads by silk-covered stranded jumpers.

Plan of Investigation

The object of the investigation was to determine the nature of recommendation to be made relative to introduction and use of the device.

An examination was made of the construction details of a sample of this device furnished by the manufacturer, and the information thus derived has been given in the descriptive section of this report.

Operating tests were also made with the device installed on a machine in actual service, as described below.

Description of Sample

A sample furnished by the manufacturers and constructed as described in this report was used for this test.

The device was installed as intended on a standard Simplex Motion picture machine in the booth of a motion picture theatre at Aurora, Ill. In this series of tests a number of repeated observations were made with the film caused to fail in the following manner:

(a) The film was broken on the upper reel.
(b) The film was cut at aperture plate while in motion.
(c) The film loop was shortened, due to stripped holes.

Results

(a) As soon as break was reached the device immediately dropped shutter and stopped motor.
(b) Device operated as in (a), almost instantaneously and before more than 8 or 9 in. film had accumulated in the housing due to inertia of parts.
(c) Device operated immediately to cut off beam of light and stop motor.

The automatic switch was observed to function properly and to promptly open the motor circuit without undue sparking within the mercury tube.

This conclusion is based on the results of the operating tests described in this report, which showed that when installed and operated as intended the breaking of film, or slackening of film loop causes cut-off of the light beam and stoppage of motor as intended.

Motion Generator for Two Arcs in Series

A very commendable letter has been received from a projectionist who gives a detailed treatment of motor generators for two arcs in series. Also additional remarks are made concerning wiring, fusing, municipal regulations, carbons, etc. Letters such as this help out the other fellows.—Editor.

"These equipments are final product after ten years of experience in the designing and building control apparatus for motion picture projection by the G-E people and the Transverter. The arc lamps operate in series instead of multiple during the change-over or when dissolving a picture. No resistance is required when operated in series.

Remember that wherever resistance is used in series with the projection are, there is a loss of power in heating the resistance.

Circuit Voltage Used

These machines given an open circuit voltage of approximately 180 volts, which drops to about 60 volts when one lamp is burning. The two lamps are connected in series without any resistance whatever. Short circuiting switches are provided to close the circuit around the lamp when not burning, thus allowing the arc lamps to be trimmed without opening the circuit. When you strike the second arc the machine automatically increases its voltage to approximately 120 volts.

Wiring Diagrams Are Simple

The wiring scheme is very simple to wire these generators, complete wiring diagrams being sent with each outfit. The voltmeter and ammeter should be placed on the front wall of the projection room. Wire the voltmeter in multiple and your ammeter in series.

The generator automatically protects itself and the line fuses from burning out; in fact, the carbons can be left together indefinitely on direct short circuit without any trouble.

The projection arc circuit is completely insulated from the power circut, forming a valuable safeguard to the projectionist while handling the projection arc lamps.

Operation

The current can be varied over a wide range by means of a field rheostat. The first arc is struck in the usual manner. The second arc lamp is then short circuited by means of a switch on the projection machine. Now when the projectionist is ready to make a change-over to the second arc lamp the carbons Are Brought Together Until They Touch. The short circuiting switch is then opened by the projectionist, and then the carbons are pulled apart to the proper length. To shut off the first lamp the carbons are gradually brought together and the short circuiting switch closed.

The oil reservoir requires filling only once in three months.

Individual Parts of Equipments

A. C. to D. C. Motor Generator Set.

A starter for the A. C. motor that is used to drive the generator. One control panel for the generator to be placed on the front wall. Two-lamp short circuiting switches, these to be placed one under each lamp. Place the ammeter and the voltmeter and the panel board on the front wall of your projection booth between the two machines where you can keep you eye on it at all times.

Most all motor generator sets are furnished with a standard Induction Motor.

The Size and Ratings of Generator Sets

These machines are usually furnished in about four different sizes—rated on the basis of the current that is to be delivered to the projection arc.

| | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| 35 amperes,50 amperes,75 amperes,100 amperes, | For either | 110 volts220 volts440 volts550 volts | For either |
| 25 cycles,40 cycles50 cycles,60 cycles, | For either | single-phase.two-phase.three-phase. | |

These makes of motor generator sets use no resistance. They automatically adjust themselves to a "change-over" without any flicker or unnecessary noise.

The Polyphase Motors

The projectionist and theatre manager will find this type of motor to be slightly more efficient for driving the generator. Every set is supplied with a standard Induction motor, may be furnished for any commercial lighting or power circuit whether single, two or three phase. When ordering outfit you should be sure and state what cycle, phase and voltage you want the motor for.

About Fusing Circuit

In the fusing upon any electric circuit you must take into consideration the size of wire and the amperage your motor will draw. The fuse should be under the carrying capacity of the wire used for the motor with a sufficient margin to allow the required number of amperes to pass over without any overheating. The rating of the fuses are marked on them. Remember to never use a fuse unless it is properly marked with the amperage and the voltage plainly marked on the covering of the fuse.

The cartridge fuse is the kind the projectionist should always use for the motor generator set fuse block.

The efficiency of most generator sets is about 60 per cent. Some have more and some less efficiency.

Municipal Regulation

In addition to the regulations of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, it frequently happens that there are special regulations by the municipality concerning the number and the character of the general lights and generator sets in the picture theatre. It is always necessary, when installing a motor generator set, to know, not only the latest regulations of the National Fire Underwriters, but the regulations of the city or state where the electric light and power is furnished from. Be sure and secure all rules and regulations before you start installing your oufit and save yourself trouble later on.

Wiring

In securing the ends of the wires to the binding post, scrape them, and also twist the strands, use lugs for all connections for the motor end and also for the wiring to the arc lamp switches, etc. Use the correct size wires and have them plenty large enough to carry full load without any heating whatever.

Cleaning Bearings

Flush the bearings of the generator and the motor end with kerosene once a month and then refill with a good grade of dynamo oil which you can secure from the electric light company in your city. Now if you happen to use a Transverter just use the regular Transverter cup grease for the bearings of same. Be sure and turn down the grease cups about every other day.

Book of Instructions

With each outfit there comes a complete book of instructions. The projectionist should make a very careful study of the contents, after reading you should file same away for handy reference in case of trouble. If you ever do happen to have trouble you will no doubt find the remedy for same carefully explained in the instruction book. Wiring diagrams are also enclosed for the wiring of the set.

Carbons

The projectionist should remember that if carbons are too hard they will not form a proper crater. The projection arc will keep sputtering and the light will travel around the carbon, thereby losing a great percentage of the light that should go on your projection screen. Now, on the other hand, if the carbons are made too soft while the crater will form easily, the arc will need the continual attention of the projectionist which will greatly hinder him from doing his other work properly. The projectionist will see that the carbon should not be too soft or too hard for the use with motor generator sets.

The Best Sizes to Use

Carbons are made in various lengths and the different sizes in cross section, it is necessary that you use the correct size of carbon for the amperage drawn at the arc lamp. Use for 35 amperes direct current ⅝ cored in the top and ½ solid in the bottom, from 35 to 60 amperes use ¾ cored in the top and ⅝ solid in the bottom holder, and from 60 to 80 amperes use ⅞ cored in the top and ⅝ solid in the bottom.

Store all your carbons in a cool, dry place.

Remember that the resistance of carbons decrease with an increase in the temperature.

Clean Connections

All connections from the panel board of the generator set should be made good and rigid. Remember that all lug and the wire should be bright and clean when you start wiring same up.

If you want success with your equipment you want to keep your arc lamp in perfect running order, keeping all the connections tight and be sure the wire is not burnt out. Have arc lamp greased with graphite and cup grease. Clean out the carbon jaws every day.

With a generator set be sure and do not get the idea that a large picture is better because you can secure more light for same. A small brilliant picture has been found to be the best in most all cases.

Hoping this dope will help out the fellows.

Yours for good projection,

Wesley Trout.

Masonry in Theatre Construction

successfully, if great care is exercised in the construction work, and the tile blocks are well bonded in, forming composite masonry. The writer has used this material with satisfaction, but he has also seen very poor results from this type. The most conspicuous example of this may be seen in the Knickerbocker Theatre, Washington, D. C., which recently collapsed. Reports show that this wall was five inches out of plumb and very poorly constructed, also that this type of masonry may have contributed to the actual cause of collapse. It is not in general recommended by the writer. As a matter of fact, the economy involved is questionable and, therefore, there appears to be no justification for its use. In any event, any possible saving would be comparatively small and not sufficient to justify possible hazards involved from careless or incompetent construction.

The advisability of using substantial brick piers to reinforce exterior walls and to act as stabilizers against collapse, when subjected to disturbing stresses, was exemplified in the collapse of the American Theatre, in Brooklyn. In this case heavy buttresses were used about eighteen feet apart along the side walls to support roof trusses and to give lateral support to the intervening twelve-inch brick wall. These piers were two feet eight inches deep by three feet wide and about forty feet high. The entire roof collapsed, the steel work sliding off the wall, leaving the wall intact and practically plum except in two piers. The walls remained standing, while other parts of the structure completely collapsed. This applied to all of the main walls. An offset wall about thirty feet high, which was not so well designed, and which did not have substantial buttresses, collapsed, showing conclusively the importance of properly buttressing all walls having a height of more than twenty times the thickness.

Walls supporting balconies in addition to the roof above, should be increased in thickness at least four inches and this increase in thickness should follow the incline of the balcony.

Masonry should be well anchored to all floor and roof construction. This is important and should not be overlooked. A glaring example of results in failure to do this may be seen in the recent collapse of the Knickerbocker Theatre in Washington, D. C. No provision had been made there for anchoring the steel work to the masonry, and the result was that the steel was easily displaced and the collapse followed. Had the steel work been properly anchored to the masonry, it is doubtful if anything approaching a disaster would have occurred.

An important item in masonry construction to which should be given considerable attention, is the arch or girder over the proscenium opening. In the past this has often been built with a steel truss built in with brick or, more recently, of a steel truss enclosed with concrete. It is necessary to entirely cover the steel, for fireproofing purposes. This leads to a combination of steel and concrete. A steel truss enclosed in concrete was found to be uneconomical, for the reason that the enclosing concrete was not considered as effective in structural resistance, consequently the steel truss was doing all of the work, whereas if the girder was transformed into reinforced concrete, both the steel and the concrete would do duty. By this combination the concrete which lay dormant before now relieves the steel in compression stresses and lends a material reduction in the quantity required and hence in the total cost.

"The illustration shows a top view of the new standard automatic ticket seller with the top plate removed. Note the improved keyboard which is below the top plate thus leaving the entire counter free to make change. In theatres like the Rivoli, Rialto, Capitol and Strand (all on Broadway, New York City), this new keyboard arrangement has proven a tremendous help to the cashiers and enabled patrons of the theatre to get their tickets and change with the least possible delay."

New Standard Projector Demonstrated Before Visual Instruction Ass'n

THE Visual Instruction Association of New York gave an informal dinner at the Hotel McAlpin, Nov. 2.

In additional to speaking and a musical program, a demonstration of what is perhaps the newest standard motion picture projector on the market was made. It is the purpose of this Association, in addition to searching and surveying the field for all available slide and film material, to keep its members fully informed as to progress in the development of projection apparatus.

After some years of experimentation, the makers of the Superior Projector have just recently introduced to the public and placed on the market commercially their projector. This projector was inspected by a Committee of the Visual Instruction Association, their first model, and they reported that it gave promise of comparing favorably with the highest grade of standard projectors.

Now that this projector is being manufactured on a commercial scale, the Executive Committee of the Association was prompted to give it a public trial at the dinner.

While we have not as yet had time to receive an official report of the performance of the projector, on this particular occasion, an informal comment was made to the effect that it was entirely satisfactory.

Some of the advantages claimed by the makers of the Superior Projector are:

The elimination throughout of belts and chains, a direct motor drive, less parts than other machines, and general simplicity and strength of construction.

Optical Society of America Opens Seventh Annual Meeting

The seventh annual meeting of the Optical Society of America was formally opened by Dr. S. W. Stratton, retiring director of the Bureau of Standards, at the Bureau. The work of this society embraces all phases of the optical industry, including motion picture projection. Exhibits of the products of prominent optical manufacturers of all parts of the world were shown to the delegates. Papers on polarimetry, reflectometry, spectroradiometry, visual reflection and other phases involving optical laws applicable to projection and vision were read. The convention adjourns Saturday to meet in Cleveland next year.—Knappen.

Masonry in Theatre Construction

The question has been raised, as to the economy of reinforced concrete girders, compared with fireproofed steel trusses. The writer answers this question from an extensive experience with both types. He has compiled detailed costs both ways, even taking into consideration the element of time, and, as a result, reinforced concrete is recommended as being the best and most economical for proscenium girder construction. Care should be exercised in the execution as well as in the design work. Rigid and competent inspection is necessary in reinforced concrete and all masonry work. Masonry in all its branches should be designed by competent engineers, thoroughly experienced in theatre construction. It represents the back-bone of the building. It should be strong and straight in alignment containing good cement mortar and built in a workmanlike manner.

The writer would emphasize the importance of sound masonry construction. It should be economically and efficiently designed, and skillfully executed. Thousands of dollars may be utterly wasted for the lack of application of economics to this major subject. It is therefore recommended that careful attention be given to the design and construction of all masonry work.—H. Robins Burroughs-Eng.

YOU CAN'T SMELL FILM

YOU can't smell film in THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES. Yet thousands of feet go through our plant every hour. The odor of film in a laboratory means that prints are losing some of their original vitality, their wearing quality. Certain chemicals are being evaporated from the raw stock in developing and printing. The finished product goes out to the exchanges with its life shortened before its period of usefulness begins. Adverse air conditions in drying and dark rooms causes this evaporation.

THE odor of film means that some distributor is losing money. Throughout THE STANDARD FILM LABORATORIES the temperature and humidity are accurately controlled at all times. Every cubic foot of air admitted to our workrooms is thoroughly cleansed. Standard Prints retain 100 percent of the film's original vitality, because they are made under proper conditions. They look better and wear longer.

"Unlimited Facilities for Quality Work"

An Unparalleled Flood of Praise

AS we predicted, "To Have and To Hold" has been acclaimed one of the season's biggest. In the world's largest picture theatre, the Capitol in New York, it has done absolute capacity. Here are a few of the critical outbursts:

"A worthy member of the trio which includes 'Robin Hood' and 'When Knighthood Was in Flower,' which is no faint praise, for the other two have set a tremendously high standard. Few pictures are so consistently beautiful as this one. There is drama—literally gobs of it. Not even a Pearl White serial could offer more thrills."
N. Y. Herald

"It will thrill you again and again. Betty Compson does better work than ever." N. Y. World

"Interesting, pictorially exciting, as well as pleasing to the eye. Action, settings and photoplay unite to give it full value as romance." N. Y. Times

"We wonder why 'To Have and To Hold' wasn't put on for an extended run at some big Broadway house instead of being offered as a regular program feature at the Capital. It sure deserves it." Evening World

"Assured of instant success, thoroughly delightful." N. Y. Sun

"Better than one has a right to expect. Magnificent production of a dashing romance. Paramount has lavished its wealth of talent on this picture, and the result is a fine motion picture, one to stir the blood. Many superlatively fine scenes. It is decidedly one of the pictures you will want to see."
N. Y. Mail

"A thrilling picture. Good melodrama with lavish sets. Goes the original one better, and introduces more action." N. Y. Globe

"Like a five ring circus, with one thrill dwarfing the next." Daily News

The overflowing thanks of a grateful reviewer, and it is hoped many others, are extended to E. Mason Hopper and those responsible with him for the treatment given "Brothers Under the Skin," the photoplay at the Capitol last week.

Listen. The story of this film is about two married couples, two wives of different stations in life who, according to their stations, are equally frivolous and extravagant, and two hard-pressed husbands who have to bear the burden of their expenditures and the tyranny of their strategic tempers and suspicions.

Now, can you imagine what would have been made of this by most scenarists and directors? Think of the platitudinious moralizing, the false philosophizing, the solemn and self-conscious folderol that would have been served up. What a dreary thing it would have been. But Mr. Hopper and his supporting associates have done it differently. They have told a merry, careless story. They have spiced it with humor and painted it with pictures that mean something. Result: you never take the thing seriously, you don't have to, you are not expected to, you merely enjoy it. It's a neat job. Mr. Hopper. —N. Y. Times

Trade in Your Present Instrument

The Fotoplayer is very much better than I ever expected it would be. A noticeable increase in my box office receipts promises excellent results in the future.

Sunset Theatre, Tacoma, Wash.

Our business has increased at least twenty-five per cent since installing the Fotoplayer over that when we used an orchestra.

Alden & Robertson,
Globe, Arizona

Prior to the installation of the Fotoplayer we had tried an Orchestra and automatic instruments, none of them having given satisfaction.

Our opinion of the Fotoplayer is that it is the solution of the musical problem for picture theatres.

P. C. LEVY, Enterprises
Fort Worth, Texas

The Fotoplayer which has been in daily use at The Empress for the past three years, has been more than satisfactory. I would not think of exchanging it for an orchestra, and the expense is not to be compared.

The Empress, Oklahoma City

I feel that with the Style No. 15 in a small house, the combination is as near perfect as could be asked.

In the larger house I am using one of your big Fotoplayers without rolls for emergency use. My patrons say our music is far superior to that rendered on many of the more expensive organs.

Fotoplayer music appeals to people of good taste.

We have been able to operate the Fotoplayer at a minimum as compared to other theatre instruments. We have not experienced any difficulty with the Fotoplayer mechanically or otherwise, but have gotten ten hours service every day in the week, 365 days out of the year.

Bryant Photo Play Company, New York

We have two Fotoplayers for three years and have had no difficulty with either instrument from dampness or otherwise.

The Fotoplayers have stayed in repair and good tune, and we have not called on you for any service of any kind.

Liberty Theatre, Atlantic City, N. J.

We have been using a Fotoplayer for over five years, graduating from a Style 40 to a Style 50. We use player rolls exclusively and are able to fit a photoplay perfectly in accompaniment.

Faurot Opera House, Lima, Ohio

The Fotoplayer installed in my Acme Theatre is wonderful. I think it the greatest musical instrument on the market and fills the bill perfectly for both vaudeville and pictures and brings increased business.

Acme Theatre, Goldsboro, N. C.

The quickness of change from one theme of music to another by the double roll system makes possible a future for the Fotoplayer.

It fills the bill in such Theatres as the Century in Jackson, Miss., like no other form of music I know of.

WAITED

AN intensely dramatic Western photoplay, far above the average in plot, direction and punch. The highlights of the feature are: a series of desperate struggles with bare fists; a hair-raising race between the hero and his opponents to be first to file a claim; a sensationally realistic mine explosion and the imprisonment of the workers; the defeat of the hero when victory seemed sure, and the courageous exploit of the girl who saved the day in an eyelash finish.

Motion Picture News

Thrills, romance, mystery, a very fine cast, excellent direction, photography of a very high quality, elaborate settings, a stirring climax—these are the principal ingredients of this William Christy Cabanne contribution. If ever a picture boasted a wide variety of scenes, this one is it. The observer is carried through a maze of situations each more interesting than the big punch in a lot of average filmplays. In spite of this variety the continuity runs smoothly to the fadeout.

Mae Marsh is the star, and she does some of the finest acting of her career. As Marion Bates, who is tricked by her guardian, thrown into an insane asylum, escapes and finds refuge with a gang of crooks, Miss Marsh has ample opportunity to display some real emotional fireworks. Walter Miller contributes a convincing portrayal in the role of Jim Brennan, head of the gang. The remainder of the cast is adequate.

The picture has an overabundance of thrills. It starts with a leap and jumps along merrily right to the end, when there's one of the kind of climaxes that draw an audience to the edge of the seats. Marion's escape from the asylum, her adventures in the lonely house occupied by the crooks, the Spanish Inn moments, the attempt to kidnap her and the thrilling rescue at the end when a radio outfit is introduced to summon police aid are just a few of the dramatic situations. Its all very good and we predict for this entertaining picture real success at the box office.

IT IS A GOOD PICTURE. CAPABLY DIRECTED, WELL PLAYED & ALTOGETHER INTERESTING.

Variety

This is the first of the Dependable Pictures productions sponsored by Morris Kohn and directed by Wm. Christy Cabanne. It is a good picture. Just as good as a lot of those getting the big first runs. It is capably directed, well played and altogether interesting. The title seemingly is the only weak point about the picture from the box office standpoint.

The cast is a corking one, with Mae Marsh and Martha Mansfield featured. Miss Marsh runs away with the honors among the women, and Walter Miller, playing the secondary lead, does likewise with the men. Miller is a comer worth watching as a leading man.

The picture is effectively done with character bits contributed by Dick Lee and Tammany Young that stand out. The former does a "nance" crook that is a work of art. Cabanne has handled this portion of the picture most cleverly. Fred.

Moving Picture WORLD

Regional in News Value: National in Service

Observed from any one of its several angles of appeal, this Associated Exhibitors' production, "Till We Meet Again," has the popular note. It brings back a charming star, Mae Marsh, after a considerable lapse of time. It has an appealing story treated with pathos, humor and a dash of the melodramatic, pictured against a variety of interesting backgrounds. It has been produced with a definite understanding of what is generally liked on the screen and should be satisfying on any program.

The star in one of her most characteristic roles again expresses an art that is peculiarly her own. Her moments of pathos are handled as no one else succeeds in doing.

Showing a keen sense of showmanship values, the picture includes several of the tried-and-true angles of interest. The heroine who escapes from an insane asylum wanders into a deserted country house inhabited by a gang of crooks. The romantic interest begins. An attractive cabaret scene appeals because of a Spanish dance and a display of fine lighting. When the beautiful home of the girl's protector is invaded by burglars, the call for help via radio and the response is a big thrill. The cast includes Martha Mansfield and Norman Kerry.

IT HAS THE POPULAR NOTE. SHOWS A KEEN SENSE OF SHOWMANSHIP VALUES.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW

The numerous admirers of fast moving crook melodrama will find entertainment exactly to their taste in this picture. It is keyed up to top speed from the first to the final reel and punctuated with thrills enough to fill a serial. Not that "Till We Meet Again" is to be listed according to a serial standard of excellence, for it registers as an exceptionally high-class feature in point of fine direction; clever acting and skilled direction. Also, the plot, while furnishing constant surprises and a legion of totally unexpected situations, is so well constructed that it is easy to follow, in fact the perfect continuity achieved is one of the film's strongest points. Director Cabanne and his talented cast of players have done their work intelligently and with great effect, the result being an attraction which should win wide-spread popularity and bring the shekels streaming freely into the box office.

Points of Appeal.—It is seldom that such rapidfire action as distinguishes this production can be kept up for six reels without a jarring note or illogical sequence in the situations which arise. But there isn't a hitch in the progress of events, one incident blends into another with perfect smoothness, the tension never slackens and it is impossible to anticipate what is coming next. The persecuted heroine wins instant sympathy, the romantic phases and melodramatic punches are splendidly developed and a crashing climax is attained.

Cast.—Mae Marsh is excellent in the exacting role of Marion Bates, which calls for a dynamic display of energy and the star's ability as a forceful emotional actress has never been manifested to better advantage. Norman Kerry is a handsome and pleasing lover, Walter Miller, scores as Brennan, the outlaw chief, and the support is flawless.

Photography, Lighting, Direction.—There are some charming exteriors, the interiors are well filmed and the lighting effects admirable. No break occurs in the continuity and the action never falters.

The Morning Telegraph

A swift moving and absorbing crook drama revolves about Mae Marsh.

It teaches the valuable lesson never to sign on the dotted line without reading the paper.

The picture is most interesting and pleasing and has an excellent cast.

Martha Mansfield is very pretty and attractive as the girl friend and Walter Miller is a handsome crook, who meets with an untimely end, and Tammany Young is very amusing as another crook.

A SWIFT MOVING AND ABSORBING CROOK DRAMA. MOST INTERESTING AND WITH AN EXCELLENT CAST

DAILY NEWS

Title of picture, "Till We Meet Again."

Story and direction by Wm. Christy Cabanne.

Featuring Mae Marsh.

Released by Associated Exhibitors.

Presented by Loew's State Theatre.

This picture has to recommend it to moviegoers an excellent actress in the person of Mae Marsh, a delightful band of burglars of the Gilbert and Sullivan type, quite the jolliest crew of criminals we have seen in some time, some original war scenes and a thrilling fight in the final reel in which Mae, thanks to Cabanne, the director, does not stand around and register horror but takes an active part.

AN EXCELLENT ACTRESS IN THE PERSON OF MAE MARSH. A THRILLING FIGHT IN THE FINAL REEL

EXHIBITORS HERALD

This is the first of a series of Dependable Pictures Corporation productions for Associated Exhibitors and is a pleasing romance with a cast that should go far towards attracting patrons to the box office. The players included are Mae Marsh, Norman Kerry, Walter Miller, J. Barney Sherry, Martha Mansfield, Julia Swayne Gordon, Tammany Young and others.

The production is well staged and the tale it unfolds is told against beautiful backgrounds, well photographed. It will hold interest and should prove satisfactory to the majority of theatregoers.

The story tells of Marion Bates, who, betrayed by her guardian, is thrown in an asylum under the pretext of insanity. She escapes and falls in with a band of crooks, the leader of which is Brennan, who protects her and becomes infatuated with her. After escaping from the crooks she returns to the Carter family, her only friends, where she meets Robert Carter, son of the family. Her guardian, she learns, is also the trusted advisor for the Carter family and has mulcted them of their money as he has done her.

Upon learning that she has escaped the guardian, she employs the same gang of thieves which she had formerly met to obtain a paper in which she had signed over her rights to certain property. Brennan is delegated to perform the robbery. Confronting Marion in her room he discovers that he is in the home of his former buddy and Captain who had saved his life in France. His manhood is roused and he determines to protect the girl. There is a terrific fight with the gang and Brennan is killed defending the girl and his friend.

SHOULD GO FAR TOWARD ATTRACTING PATRONS TO THE BOX OFFICE."

"HEAD HUNTERS OF THE SOUTH SEAS"

Martin Johnson's Thrilling Adventures Among the Wild Tribes of Malakula

ASSOCIATED EXHIBITORS—PATHE

ENTERTAINMENT ..... Excellent
EXPLOITATION ..... Excellent
PRODUCTION ..... Good
DIRECTION.....Not directed in the usual sense of the word, but rather shows the tremendous nerve of Martin Johnson, who persuaded the natives to pose.
STORY.....A thrilling narrative of the adventures of a white man and his wife among head-hunting cannibals.
CAST.....Natives in their daily pursuits, also Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson; all are excellent
PHOTOGRAPHY ..... Excellent
TIME .....One hour

Seventy-five per cent of the complaint against the motion pictures is that one is too much like the other. Well, here is something different. It tells no story of a neglected wife, gives no pictures of the horrors of crime, and the players cannot be criticized, for the simple reason that they are not acting—they are just living their daily lives; and for real interest, for thrills and for the absolutely unusual, this feature can be recommended.

There is no plot to "Head Hunters of the South Seas." Martin Johnson, the young American explorer, who had his first taste of adventure when he accompanied Jack London on the cruise of The Snark, went to Malekula several years ago, and was almost eaten by the cannibals of that island. Only the timely arrival of a British patrol boat saved him. One would have expected that he would not care to repeat the experiment, but in spite of all dangers Johnson went back to Malekula to get the motion pictures which are now released as "Head Hunters of the South Seas." The picture shows him arriving at the island, his reception by the fearsome savages, how he accompanies them inland to one of their villages, and the strange rites and ceremonies that he was permitted to witness, always in danger, and yet never afraid. The picture has several outstanding incidents. The native dances are weird, but nothing compares to the shots that show the natives proudly displaying their trophies of human heads. The monkey men fascinate because they show how closely the lower forms of civilization resemble the apes. Also there are scenes taken among the pigmies, beautiful scenery, shark fishing and excellent views of a volcano in eruption. All in all it is one of the greatest screen novelties, and made more so by the fact that in the past year or two there has been a growing interest in the United States regarding the South Seas.

As this is the type of picture that is sure to gain you new patrons, it is well worth exploiting. Martin Johnson is well known among the better class of people and has a new book that has recently been published. Use the book tie-up. There is a great woman's angle to the feature, for Mrs. Johnson accompanied her husband. Run her photograph and use a good interview with her in your papers, it undoubtedly being possible to get this interview from the distributing office. Be sure and call the attention of the schools and clubs to this feature. They will endorse it, and it will help future business. For a ballyhoo dress a man in black tights and beads, and have him in front of the theatre. For prologue and lobby use tropical palms, and by cutting out posters you will probably make a most startling display. But the best bet is that the picture is a great novelty and one that will thrill as well as educate. Also watch your music—you need good music to put the picture over.

A feature that will bring patronage to your theatre and which will cause a great deal of favorable comment once you get them in.

—And It Has

This is a photoplay which was expected to be successful. In it was every ingredient of popularity.

The beauty and magnetism and dramatic skill of Miss Young; the unusual and absorbing nature of the story; the sure, masterly direction of Mr. Garson; the thorough excellence of the supporting cast, which includes Elliott Dexter—these each were auguries of achievement.

This combination of constituents has worked out in practice with the certainty of a formula in arithmetic. THE HANDS OF NARA has won greater praise from exhibitors, from the press and from the public than any previous presentation of Miss Young.

It was expected to prove the best Clara Kimball Young picture ever made—and it has proven so.

Uncommon

Without exception, critics have so classified THE FORGOTTEN LAW.

"Something entirely new in theme. That alone would make the picture worth while," is how the Exhibitor's Herald put it; the Motion Picture News named it "An eternal triangle story with a 'different' twist, filled with dramatic situations."

"A strong vein of originality," the Exhibitor's Trade Review noted, adding: "The feature is likely to win a high degree of favor with movie fans." The Morning Telegraph, too, found "An unusual theme" and "The production, direction and photography good."

Acting is of Prime Importance

One of the best directors in the movies once said: "Give me good actors, before everything. They've got to tell the story. If they can't do it, it never gets told."

The same insistence upon the quality of acting is evident in the case of THE FORGOTTEN LAW. The list of players is impressive: Milton Sills, Cleo Ridgely, Jack Mulhall, Alec B. Francis and Muriel Dana—to name a few.

"There exists no doubt that suggestion—that is to say, the human word, or, to go back to its origin, the thought, as a species of imagination and faith—can exercise a quasi-magical action upon not only the faculties of our moral being, but also the functions of our organism."

Emile Boirac
Academy of Dijon

"Let go your hold, resign the care of your destiny to higher powers, be genuinely indifferent as to what becomes of it all, and you will find not only that you gain a perfect inward relief but often also, in addition, the particular goods which you sincerely thought you were renouncing."

Dr. William James
America's Greatest Psychologist

This advertisement is intended for the Exhibitor who is tired of making after-the-performance apologies in his lobby, of wearily repeating over and over again, "I'm sorry; I know it's a poor picture, but it's what the public wants!"

The public no longer wants to hear this showman's alibi, for the public knows what it wants and isn't bashful about showing its feelings.

Just now, one of the uppermost thoughts in the public mind is the rapid acceptance of the doctrine that the Will exercises a more powerful control over the destinies of the body than science has heretofore been willing to admit. Call it "psycho-analysis," if you will, or "mind over matter," or any of the thousand-and-one names that have been given it, but the fact remains that millions of thinking people today open the door of their mind before they open the door of the old-fashioned medicine chest.

Clara Louise Burnham wrote a book founded on this very theory. Many thousands of copies of it were sold all over America. It was called "Heart's Haven" and Benj. B. Hampton and his associates have turned it into a motion-picture—a smashing good story of life, and love and little kiddies, with the big, new and moving impulse, the power of the human mind to direct our lives, back of it all.

Get into step with this new order of things by booking "Heart's Haven" and you'll escape lobby alibis. It's "what the public wants!"

"WILL ROGERS

always a favorite, scores heavily as Ichabod Crane"

NEW YORK REVIEW

NEW YORK REVIEW: "The Headless Horseman" does credit to the great story by Washington Irving.

It should be hailed with a good deal of delight by the lovers of the ever-fascinating tale of the "romantic Ichabod Crane."

Will Rogers, always a favorite, scores heavily as Ichabod Crane. His characterization is clever and his performance all one could ask for.

"The Headless Horseman" shows what can be accomplished when an intelligent and sympathetic director decides to undertake the picturization of one of the classics. Why can't we have more such directors as Mr. Venturini and such actors as Will Rogers?

"The Headless Horseman" brings to the moving picture world something new and something well worth keeping.

MOVING PICTURE WORLD: Will Rogers has achieved the unusual in picturing the loveless Ichabod. The characterization is one that presents extreme difficulties, in understanding the type of man who is not likeable enough to win your entire sympathy, yet preserving something that keeps him from being at all times ludicrous. Mr. Rogers has avoided burlesque even though there seems to be plenty of temptation. He is funny in a natural consistent way, as one can imagine the author intended.

The ride of the Headless Horseman is the dramatic triumph of the picture. It is comic and weird by turns. These scenes have been vivified by skillful lighting and shading, and some spectacular shots of the sky at night. The whole production shows great care, and unusual regard for detail and a faithfulness in the characters and settings that bespeaks fine directing.

HARRISON'S REPORTS: It is well directed and for the most part well acted and artistically and realistically produced.

EXHIBITORS HERALD: Will Rogers fits the role of Ichabod Crane about as perfectly as anyone could desire and he is given excellent support by Lois Meredith and others.

It is well staged, excellently photographed and on the strength of the author's name should attract attention and should win appreciation from varying types of audiences.

THE MORNING TELEGRAPH: Bringing one of the outstanding American classics to the screen is in itself a worthy achievement. "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," by Washington Irving, is one of the required pieces of literature in every school and should be seen in its screen version by all students, as it has been carried out with as much of the original charm of Irving as accurate settings on the actual location of the story can give it.

The picture remains a delightful record of the life of other days and will serve to stimulate interest in the reading of the Irving story.

FILM DAILY: Rogers does fine work in vivid picturization of popular Irving story.

An amusing and convincing Ichabod Crane will delight everybody with his work in this.

Exhibitors should have very little trouble to induce their patrons to see "The Headless Horseman." Everyone is familiar with Irving's story, "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," and they have probably all read it whether they wanted to or not—in school. You can promise an interesting presentation of the story and a good wholesome entertainment in C. S. Clancy's production.

EXHIBITORS TRADE REVIEW: "The Headless Horseman," adapted from Washington Iriving's "The Legend of Sleepy Hollow," will be a rare bit of entertainment. It has been beautifully produced and Will Rogers gives a screamingly funny portrayal of Ichabod Crane.

No picture ever made affords the showman so great an opportunity of appealing to his public from so many different angles

"PAWNED"—a six-reel melodrama, of the slashing, dashing type so much in demand today, replete with action and thrills—but new, novel and differently done.

"PAWNED"—written by Frank L. Packard, author of many notable screen successes, was read by millions, first as a magazine story and then as a novel.

"PAWNED"—personally directed by Irvin V. Willat, known everywhere as the directing genius behind "Partners of the Tide," "Behind the Door", "Below the Surface" and other successes.

"PAWNED"—produced by J. Parker Read, Jr., builder of screen attractions de luxe. "Sahara", "The Lone Wolf's Daughter" and Sex" are among his great achievements.

"PAWNED"—featuring a cast of stars famed the world over. Tom Moore, Edith Roberts, Charles Gerard, James Barrows, Josef Swickard, Mabel Van Buren and Eric Mayne play the principal roles.

"PAWNED"—supported by the greatest variety of advertising accessories ever issued will prove itself the biggest box-office attraction of the year.

"Shadows" stands out like the Woolworth Building

Now and then a picture is produced that stands out above the others, just as the Woolworth building stands out above all the buildings that surround it. It is such pictures as these that prove beyond any doubt that picture-making is an art. Such a one is "Shadows"—a picture that stands out above all others.

With a worth-while theme as its foundation, masterfully directed and artistically acted, with its settings and general atmosphere realistic, the story creates in the mind an impression that lasts many days and weeks after one has seen the picture.

Though tragedy, the sad fate of the principal characters does not leave an unpleasant feeling. On the contrary, their fate so arouses the compassion of the spectator, that he feels regret for not being able to help relieve their sufferings.

The acting of Mr. Chaney, who assumes the role of a Chinaman, is remarkable. Better acting he has never done in his life.

Every one of the other players, too, acts well.

The Crowning Achievement of Mary Pickford's Career

"The new 'Tess of the Storm Country' is the greatest picture Mary Pickford has ever made. It is more than that. It is one of the great pictures of motion picture history. It is the high water mark of the star's career. Miss Pickford seems the incarnation of eternal youth. She is wonderfully and profoundly satisfying."—N. Y. Evening Mail.

"Mary Pickford's re-creation of 'Tess of the Storm Country' surpasses infinitely most movies that are now in their first blush. It seems by far the best picture ever turned out by a film actress. For an extremely adroit fusion of comedy, pathos and melodrama it has all the other feminine pictures sinking for the third time. You will enjoy this picture."—N. Y. Sun.

'Tess of the Storm Country' is an excellent film, and one that cannot fail to please and entertain any audience. Your beloved Mary is there, charming as ever."—N. Y. Daily News.

"Miss Pickford is as winsome as ever in 'Tess of the Storm Country'—the last word in charm and attractiveness. Improved methods of filming have brought the new version up to the best standards of today."—N. Y. American.

" 'Tess of the Storm Country' is unquestionably a success. It is sure to be a highly profitable production. Miss Pickford herself is splendid."—N. Y. Herald.

" 'Tess of the Storm Country' was and Is the best thing Mary Pickford has ever done. Miss Pickford in her latest edition of the famous picture, far outshines the Mary Pickford of eight years ago. And that is the highest praise we can give."—N. Y. Evening World.

"The unusual Mary Pickford makes this an unusual picture. She is perfectly beautiful."—N. Y. Tribune.

"Mary Pickford makes 'Tess' real, for Miss Pickford acts. She scampers and skips in her old familiar way, but she also acts. She has intensely human moments. Her pantomime is subtle and finished."—N. Y. Times

"Miss Pickford probably has never acted a part more beautiful than she acts this one. The element of suspense is played upon with great effect and the plot so arranged as to arouse the utmost interest."—N. Y. World.

"Mary Pickford's beauty never has appeared softer or lovelier. The photography is superb. The direction ranks among the best. The production is splendidly cast. And Miss Pickford's characterization of the wild, madcap, tender-hearted squatter girl has been beautifully accentuated."—Morning Telegraph.

"The story of 'Tess of the Storm Country' is the kind of mixture of pathos, humor, drama and sentimentality which Mary Pickford always fits into perfectly."—N. Y. Call.

"Mary Pickford never has had, and probably never will have again so excellent a vehicle as 'Tess of the Storm Country' for the exploitation of her natural and dramatic talents. She, herself, was as effective as ever. She appeared more like seventeen than she did five or six years ago."—N. Y. Globe.

"The re-created 'Tess of the Storm Country is the finest achievement of Mary Pickford's career. The story is closely knit and the pictures as they melt before the eye, are rich in atmosphere and beauty."—Evening Telegram.

"Mary Pickford has a new success to her credit. One loves Tess for her sweet simplicity and unspoiled faith as much as for her spirit and spunk when viciousness peers in the window and villainy stalks through the door."—N. Y. Evening Journal.

The Greatest Love Story Ever Written

MAURICE TOURNEUR'S

Lorna Doone

The YEAR'S BIG ATTRACTION

TALK of Big Time attractions! Here is the Daddy of them all — a picture every audience in the land is eagerly awaiting. A classic of the screen in its unsurpassed artistry and rare beauty, it has an audience appeal so tremendous it is a veritable Box Office bonanza.

"Lorna Doone," the novel by R. D. Blackmore, has thrilled countless millions. Its throbbing love story is universal, striking a responsive chord in every heart. It is a story for all people for all time and will endure so long as love endures in the human heart—the greatest love story ever written.

The story abounds in tense situations, in swift, stirring action, in romance and adventure, in smashing climaxes. It has every element that makes for popular screen success.

Maurice Tourneur has a score and more great productions to his credit. But in "Lorna Doone" he has achieved his greatest triumph. The "poet producer" has grasped the spirit of this wonderful story with the sure sense of the master artist and has transferred it to the screen in pictures of life and fire — scenes that breathe and pulsate with love and action.

In order to make this the perfect picture, Mr. Tourneur gave a year to its production. Before even attempting actual production work he visited the famous Doone country in Exmoor, England, to get the atmospheric inspiration and to study every detail. He has staged the production with the lavishness of the master producer, sparing no expense to obtain smashing, spectacular effects. No more exquisite scenes, no more beautiful photography and wonderful lighting effects have ever been attained.

The cast is perfect in its ensemble. Madge Bellamy, as no other, typifies the loveliness, the radiant beauty and sweetness of "Lorna Doone." John Bowers commands, besides his screen talent, the huge stature befitting the character of the giant "John Ridd." And Frank Keenan, as the fiery old robber baron, "Sir Ensor Doone," is a masterly character. Others in the cast, all well known to your patrons, include Donald MacDonald, Jack MacDonald, Norris Johnson, May Giracci and Charles Hatton. The picture was produced at the studios of Thomas H. Ince.

In "Lorna Doone" we find every element of Box Office success—a 100 percent picture with which no exhibitor can go wrong.

TREMENDOUS EXPLOITATION

NO PICTURE ever released offers more opportunities for exploitation than "Lorna Doone." There is a most unusual line of accessories, including a 24-sheet by Eland, the famous portrait painter, and portrait posters by Henry Clive. There is an exceptional line of advertising and publicity material which you will find in the press book. The picture provides unlimited ideas for exploitation and the press book contains practical methods for putting the picture over BIG at small cost. Be sure to get press book from your First National Exchange.

The biggest national tieups ever arranged have been put over in connection with this production. Book stores, music stores, National Biscuit Company salesmen throughout the country, jewelers, shoe stores, furriers, department stores are all lined up. No chance to go wrong here. The live wire exhibitor will have the crowds standing in block-long lines.

Harrison's Report --- Extremely well acted, -- far exceeds one's expectations. -- Deserted at the Altar -- should appeal to all.

New York News --- It's a better picture than you expect to see.

Reeland Reviews --- Fast moving intelligent action --- your people are going to like it.

New York Globe and Commercial Advertiser: The charm which Deserted at the Altar possesses is unquestionably due to the simple, yet forceful way the story has been handled.

Variety — "Deserted at the Altar" furnishes a lot of action and a corking mob scene is staged just before the finish.

New York Morning Telegraph — Deserted at the Altar should be a big money maker throughout the country.

Trade Review — "Deserted at the Altar" is a remarkably creditable production. The atmosphere throughout is of the small town and is faithfully portrayed.

Moving Picture World: Scenically "Deserted at the Altar" is a beauty, the director having been unusually careful in the selection of his locations which are beautiful to look at.

Back to Normal

I ASKED a prominent and very successful producer of stage plays, the other day, how business was.

"It's the old story, isn't it?" I suggested. "The big hits have packed houses; the others are starving."

"No," he answered, "The hits are not doing as well as they might."

* * *

"Why is the amusement business off?" I asked.

"Well," he said, "I could answer you at length, but I'd just be talking. Maybe we're not giving the public just what it wants. That's always one answer."

"What is your guess—of what it wants?"

"I've got a dress rehearsal on tonight," he said. "Come and see it. It's my guess."

* * *

The play was a corking good one. The knowing ones present pronounced it sure-fire. The story had a good many successful ingredients in it: but one note was supreme, namely faith acquired by some human souls in the love and wisdom of God.

* * *

To an exhibitor who books for some seventy theatres; to a New York theatre manager; and to other keen and experienced minds I have recently put the same question:

"What does the present day public want?"

And we set down here, as a sum total, what seems to be the nucleus of their thoughts.

* * *

First of all, people everywhere want to get back to normal.

To normal living and thinking.

Bonar Law sounded the note in London, the other day, when as the new Prime Minister of Great Britain he walked to the king with a pipe in his mouth.

The great crash of the World War is gone, and with it its false prophets;—its shallow prosperity, wrong ideals, over-spending, luxury, poverty; over-patriotism, over-militarism —all the jumble of hectic living and emotionalism that makes the wake of a war.

* * *

People we repeat want to get back to normal and they want to—mighty badly.

Normal ways and normal people.

They want to, because they were happier in normal times. They want to feel something solid under their feet and over their heads—something of the hearthstone warmth of life and, yes, some of the happy uplift of religion, something of sanity, simplicity, sense, wholesomeness, goodness.

They want to see real people in real action again.

* * *

In pictures we have gone to the theatric about as far as we can go. There has been a vast straining after effects till the sublime has caught the tail of the ridiculous—in rain storms that sweep away the face of the earth, in bigness too big, in richness too rich.

We are not criticizing. Fine pictures have been produced. The intense effort back of them is admirable, to say the least. We know somewhat of and we have an intense respect for production—its guesswork, its courage, its cost, its tribulations.

But there's one sure thing—anyway, about the amusement business, about the public taste it strives to meet and that is that it moves in cycles. If it goes to one extreme you can be sure it will swing around the circle to another.

And, all in all, it does seem to us that the public has had enough of the hectic and is ripe for the simple and substantial; less of the hard flare, however gorgeous, is wanted and more of warm reality and humaness of everyday life.

Why not some dramas of the daily human chess-game with the finger evident on the board of the Supreme Deity.

* * *

Of course, it's just our guess.

But, anyway, here it is.

WILLIAM A. JOHNSON.

PICTURES AND PEOPLE

THAT was a fine, sensible statement that R. A. Rowland put forth about First National. It is characteristically frank. He says that the exhibitor owners of First National need "big attractions." That's their first and foremost consideration. And First National, as a producing concern, can't possibly supply enough. He realizes, moreover, that the individual is apt to supply a better creative product than mass production can give. All of which is to the effect that First National has, as always, a "welcome" sign over its door for the independent producer.

We also like his remarks on National advertising. It's complex, he says. You bet it is, Mr. Rowland; and equally true is your statement that the cost is misspent if it doesn't sell theatre admissions.

* * *

CHARLES H. CHRISTIE, the well-known dog fancier, film and realty man, is returning to Los Angeles this week from New York, bringing four more dogs to add to the rapidly growing Christie kennels. Mr. Christie is bringing a quartette of wire-haired fox terriers from the Wellwire and Prides Hill kennels in Massachusetts to exhibit in the show to be given November 17 and 18 by the Hollywood Kennel Club. The Christies already have a champion in the bull terrier class and expect to develop several champions in wires and other breeds. They've developed several winners, we might add, among the bathing girl entries.

* * *

BURR NICKLE, president and general manager of Burr Nickle Productions of Los Angeles and who represents Hepworth productions in this country, is in New York for a brief visit, combining business with pleasure.

* * *

THE screen barometer has shown considerable stormy weather the past season and there doesn't seem to be any indication at present that we are in for a touch of the justly famous California climate even though most of our pictures are made out on the Coast. The floodtide has brought us "Conquest," "Through the Storm," "The Sin Flood," "The Storm," "Hurricane's Gal," "On the High Seas," "Reported Missing," "The Old Homestead," "One Week of Love," "One Exciting Night," and "The Town That Forgot God."

Nature's elements have created havoc in these pictures. This unsettled weather or low barometer pressure has hovered over the territory of the United States and its adjacent waters. Reports from the Orient indicate unusually severe sandstorms in the land of the sheik. After the Johnstown flood and the mighty upheaval of the heavens, which drove old man Noah and the animals to the Ark, have been caught by the camera we may look for clear and balmy weather.

* * *

"THE play is the thing after all, whether placed upon the stage or upon the silversheet." Thus speaks Eugene Walter, rated one of America's foremost playwrights, whose stage successes embrace "Paid in Full," "The Easiest Way," "Fine Feathers," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "The Knife," "The Challenge," and other plays, who has formed a professional alliance with Charles Mortimer Peck for the purpose of creating original plays that will be adaptable for practical motion picture reproduction. Mr. Peck, with a technical knowledge of photoplay writing, will act as a guide to Mr. Walters. His duty will be to whip the completed story into picture form.

The author of "The Easiest Way" is disappointed with the screen versions of his plays. "The introduction of exteriors and action visualized between acts caused them to appear unreal—even strange—and I realized as I viewed them that a stage hit may not mean a motion picture classic." "I did reach one firm conviction," said Mr. Walters, "that the best motion picture plays will be those constructed by experienced dramatists." The playwright is convinced that his alliance with Mr. Peck will net results. He intends to write plays that will conform to highest motion picture ideals—plays that have positive dramatic quality back of them.

* * *

GEORGE BEBAN seems to have started something when he declared recently that eighty per cent of the screen actors could not act on the legitimate stage—that the profession is cluttered up with a lot of pretty women and handsome men whose ability to act is determined by their good looks. Mr. Beban is evidently indicting many of our so-called stars whose positions have been achieved by favor or the fact that they screened well. He must remember that as long as their voices are silenced the average fan is not worrying much whether one of them could give a correct dramatic reading of Hamlet's Soliloquy or Juliet's wail over the loss of her dear Romeo.

The public, however, is discriminating. It has already discovered the genuine from the imitation. And if some of the weak brothers and sisters are riding on the crest of popularity it is because they are either opportunists or possess something in the shape of personality. They will have their brief hour and then make a real FADE-OUT while the true artists will continue to have their following, which is certain to be increased once the public appreciates their real values. Time was when the "supes" of the big dramas were passed by the casting directors as potential stars. And there are a few damsels whose glory is found in their golden or raven tresses who are temporarily in popular favor. But with each succeeding picture their value is decreasing.

Meanwhile both stage and screen will continue to act as a magnet for those who imagine themselves blessed with personality, good looks and talent. The parade goes on and the ranks must be filled to make a decent showing. There are only a few great ones in the profession—there are only a few great ones in any line of endeavor. A man may be able to turn an electric light switch, but that doesn't make him an Edison; a man may be able to register pathos, but that doesn't make him a Mansfield. Some of the boys and girls are forced to play atmosphere. And a few are getting away with murder. But "murder will out" and the public, the Grand Jury, is gradually collecting all the evidence. It cannot convict where there is the least semblance of reasonable doubt. But when it casts thumbs down the player who does not belong, like Humpty-Dumpty, takes a great fall. And there you are.

FRED BEECROFT, the demon Little Neck commuter, who, aside from his golf and motoring activities, is advertising manager of the NEWS, has left for Chicago on a lil' business trip. Fred will make plenty of stops en route, but Niagara Falls will not be one of them. He is not a tourist and his honeymoon is a happy memory of yesteryear.

* * *

GORDON S. WHITE, who has been Major O'Mahoney's first assistant in the chair of advertising and publicity at Educational, has been elevated to chief command since the Major retired from the industry to take up his duties in another line of business.

IF you don't believe that Edmund Goulding is about the busiest writer for the screen take notice that he has just completed "Jazzmania" for Mae Murray—that his publishers are putting forth his 100,000-word novel, "Fury," which will also reach the screen soon as a Richard Barthelmess production—that Dorothy Dalton is making a picture from one of his stories, "The Chariot,"—that Lillian Gish has sailed to Italy to make "The White Sister," which he adapted—that Barthelmess will soon begin work on another story which he wrote called "The Beautiful City." Meanwhile Mr. Goulding is busy at work on several originals, to say nothing of a few adaptations.

* * *

MY word! The Talmadge sisters, Norma and Constance, have been photographed with Ambassador Harvey. At the charity performance of Constance's film, "East Is West," Colonel Harvey laid aside his pet theory of the moment that women are without souls and presented the sisters to the Duke of York, the Duke and Duchess of Somerset and Lord William Cecil. It's a prize publicity stunt to crash into the highest Anglo-American society. Cheerio!

E. W. HAMMONS of Educational is on his way to the Coast, accompanied by Sidney Brennecks. After spending a week or ten days visiting the producing units for Educational, Mr. Hammons will return to New York, while Mr. Brennecks will remain in California for some time as his representative.

* * *

AN incident without parallel in the Middle West occurred in Topeka, Kans., this week. George C. Jacques, a war veteran who had been shell shocked and gassed twice, was witnessing a film, "Flashes of Action," being shown in an American Legion post hall. The picture was that of the 139th Infantry, 35th division, advancing to capture a German machine gun emplacement. Jacques was a member of that squad. Recognizing himself on the screen, he displayed some excitement. Then the film depicted a flash as a shell broke over the squad. Jacques slipped from his chair in a dead faint and was removed from the hall to his home, where he recovered consciousness. You'll have to admit this a realistic human interest drama.

* * *

LOUIS B. MAYER and Reginald Barker gave a luncheon at the Ritz, last week. Harry Reichenbach was toastmaster and among the guests were R. A. Rowland, W. E. Atkinson, Harry Schwalbe and representatives of the trade press. A few shafts of oratory and wit pertaining to the fifth industry were indulged in by the speakers.

* * *

THERE is talk on the coast of admitting members of the Western Motion Picture Advertisers' Society, better known as the Wampas, to The Writers' Club. As writers of fiction, the press agents surely should not be discriminated against, as compared with mere scenarists, for the press agent takes the picture where the scenarist leaves off, and makes it something to marvel at.

* * *

THERE has been a wide demand for legitimate drama in New Orleans—drama of a high quality. So the Saenger Amusement Company announces that it intends to spend money enough to give the city an organization of players that shall measure up to or beyond the best standards of the past. So the stock company will come into its own again. Among the stars who were formerly identified with stock in New Orleans are William Farnum, Clara Kimball Young, Lester Lonergan and Bert Lytell. High dramatic art has become almost extinct in some American cities due to the multiplication of the picture houses and the swollen cost of travel which prevented road companies from touring the country. That a good stage play does not destroy patronage for a picture house is proven in New York. If you want to see the lines forming out in front pass by the Capitol, the Rialto, the Strand, the Lyric, the Criterion and the Rivoli any evening. These are picture theatres.

* * *

THE Strand was turning them away Sunday evening, the reason being the announced personal appearance of Mary Pickford to see the re-creation of her first real success "Tess of the Storm Country." The picture was prefaced with a little personal message from Miss Pickford to the effect that the new "Tess" was made in response to a demand among her host of friends—and that of all the characters she had portrayed, Tess was the most-loved. Audiences who remember the first production and witness the new version will admit that the screen has certainly progressed in modern equipment. The man who played opposite her in the original was Harold Lockwood, who died during the flu epidemic.

* * *

FRANK E. WOODS, who has been in charge of the scenario department and general supervisor of productions at the Lasky West Coast studios, will arrive in New York shortly. It is said that he will consider forming a company with Thompson Buchanan and Elmer Harris for the purpose of engaging in independent productions. Here is a dark secret. Frank Woods wrote the first criticism of a motion picture in the heydey of the Dramatic Mirror. That was many years ago.

* * *

CREDIT for one of the biggest publicity stunts ever put over in the film industry must go to the home office publicity force of Goldwyn, for the "Brothers Under the Skin" stunt put over in connection with the showing of that picture at the Capitol theatre, New York. Eddie Bonns, William R. Ferguson and Hugh J. Connolly incorporated the "Association of Brothers Under the Skin," defined as a league of married men opposed to petticoat tyranny. Robert McC. Marsh, Supreme Court justice, was asked to approve the organization's certificate of incorporation. The story strangely "leaked out," and the newspapers of New York devoted column after column to the bravery of these men who dared to rise up against matrimonial serfdom. Pictures of Bonns and Ferguson performing household duties were run, and even editorial writers commented, half seriously, on the association. The truth became known at the end of the week when advertisements for "Brothers Under the Skin," at the Capitol, were run, with reproductions of the stories, but tremendous publicity had resulted, and probably very few people in New York had failed to see it. The stunt can be worked almost anywhere, and even if a newspaper editor knows it is a "frame-up," he is likely to run it for the novelty and reader interest attached.

Statistics of the Motion Picture Industry

Additional Figures Gathered in Survey of Film Theatres Presented for News Readers

By L. C. Moen

WIDESPREAD interest and comment has followed the publication last week in the NEWS of the first portion of the statistics obtained in the survey of the motion picture theatres of the country by Babson's, Columbia University and the NEWS.

Judging from some of the comments, however, it is necessary to again call attention to the fact that the figures here presented are merely those from the first branch of the survey, with others to follow, and that the full value and significance of these figures will not develop until all the statistics are in. Due to the intimate inter-relation of the various branches of the industry, it is only through facts obtained from all branches that the full, accurate picture of the industry can be painted. Hence, too hasty judgment should not be passed on the figures in their present stage.

Continuing the tabulation of the questionnaire from the point at which it was left off last week, the next set of figures relates to the number of changes per week of the program at picture houses. This is important in a statistical analysis of this sort, since it is a question which bears an intimate relation to the average run given a picture, the number of bookings per month obtained by a print, the total number of features which can be absorbed by the market, and many other points.

The proportion of theatres making from one to seven changes of program each week proved to be as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 change per week | 9.90% |
| 2 changes per week | 21.54% |
| 3 changes per week | 24.60% |
| 4 changes per week | 17.76% |
| 5 changes per week | 7.28% |
| 6 changes per week | 15.43% |
| 7 changes per week | 3.49% |

It will be seen that the largest number change three times weekly, with the two change houses only a bit behind. Four changes and six changes follow, with one, five and seven changes at the end of the list.

The following question bears an intimate relation to that just analyzed—the number of shows given daily. This developed some rather surprising facts, and showed that comparatively few houses, taking the country as a whole, run continuously, a large number running but two and three shows.

The tabulated figures are as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1 show daily | 24.74% |
| 2 shows daily | 33.58% |
| 3 shows daily | 11.93% |
| 4 shows daily | 7.81% |
| 5 shows daily | 10.16% |
| 6 shows daily | 6.04% |
| 7 shows daily | 3.39% |
| 8 shows daily | 1.03% |
| 9 shows daily | 0.15% |
| 10 shows daily | 0.29% |
| 11 shows daily | 0.29% |
| 12 shows daily | 0.59% |

Arranging these in order of size, we find that more than one-third of all theatres run only two shows daily, with a fourth running one. Following, in order are: Three, five; four, six; seven, eight; twelve, ten; eleven, nine.

The number of reels to a program constituted the next question to be filled in, and unusually complete returns were obtained on this, hardly a theatre failing to answer the question.

As might be expected, the majority of theatres are grouped in the zone between six and ten reels to the program. The detailed figures are:

| | |
|---|---|
| 1-reel program | 0.13% |
| 2-reel program | 0.65% |
| 3-reel program | 0.13% |
| 4-reel program | 0.39% |
| 5-reel program | 4.30% |
| 6-reel program | 10.03% |
| 7-reel program | 25.39% |
| 8-reel program | 26.43% |
| 9-reel program | 14.33% |
| 10-reel program | 12.63% |
| 11-reel program | 1.82% |
| 12-reel program | 2.86% |
| 13-reel program | 0.39% |
| 14-reel program | 0.39% |
| 15-reel program | 0.13% |

As will be seen, the eight-reel program is in the lead, with the seven-reel program but a step behind. There is then a considerable gap between these and the next figure, the nine-reel program, closely followed by the ten and six. The remainder, in order, rank: Five, twelve, eleven, two, four, thirteen, fourteen, one and fifteen.

The next question concerned the nature of the material used on the program in addition to the feature, and each theatre was asked to check each item which it used regularly, in a list including one and two-reel comedies, news weekly, animated cartoon, and such added attractions. The relative value and extent of use of these has been a source of considerable discussion. While the answers reveal only the extent to which they are used, it is reasonable to assume that these figures also represent fairly closely the relative popularity with exhibitors and public of these various short subjects.

Most theatres checked several items in this list, and as a result the percentage figures in the following table do not total 100%, as in the case of other tables. Ranged in order of their relative strength, the percentage of theatres using various auxiliary attractions is as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Two-reel comedy | 72.78% |
| News weekly | 58.72% |
| One-reel comedy | 46.22% |
| Serial | 34.76% |
| Animated cartoon | 22.72% |
| Scenic or travel | 22.00% |
| Screen magazine | 21.09% |
| Two-reel drama | 13.54% |
| Vaudeville | 5.99% |
| Prologue | 2.47% |

Two-reel comedies lead the field strongl with the news weekly also making an excelle showing. The one-reel comedy falls consi erably below the two-reel.

The item concerning vaudeville, it must remembered, does not indicate that only 5.99 of all the theatres in the country run vaud ville, since this survey covers only those the tres which are primarily picture houses, wi vaudeville as a side line.

The sort of music used in the theatre w the subject of the next two questions.

The first of these related to whether t theatre used a piano, an organ or an orchestr Many theatres, of course, have more than o of these. The question regarding this was a swered by 85.28% of the theatres returni questionnaires, the balance leaving the que tion blank, leading to the assumption that considerable portion, at least, of the oth 14.72% run without music.

Among the theatres listing music, the fo lowing percentage prevailed:

| | |
|---|---|
| Organ | 45.95% |
| Orchestra | 29.47% |
| Piano | 24.58% |

Thus it will be seen that nearly half of t theatres reporting have organs of one sort another, slightly more than one-fourth ha orchestras, and nearly one-fourth rely upo a piano.

The second question regarding music relate to the number of pieces in the orchestr where the theatre had one. Practically eve exhibitor stating that he had an orchestra a swered this question, so the replies correla closely with the preceding table.

Tabulated in groups, the theatres havi orchestras of various sizes line up as follow

| | |
|---|---|
| 2 pieces | 11.05% |
| 3 pieces | 22.09% |
| 4 pieces | 13.26% |
| 5 pieces | 18.24% |
| 5 to 10 pieces | 28.73% |
| 11 to 15 pieces | 3.32% |
| 16 to 25 pieces | 2.21% |
| 25 to 50 pieces | 1.10% |

The five to ten-piece orchestra, it will seen, is the ruling favorite, with the thre piece orchestra following. The others, in ord of greatest frequency, rank: Five, four, tw eleven to fifteen. sixteen to twenty-five, twent five to fifty.

This completes the first two sections of t questionnaire, and makes it possible to go step further and present a statistical pictu of the "average American picture theatre."

The method by which this was arrived at that of "weighted averages," in which all the percentage figures are taken, together wi the figures with which they are connected, a a single figure arrived at which represents true average of all the figures in any one tabl through rather lengthy multiplication a division.

AS explained in the accompanying article by L. C. Moen, formerly of the Motion Picture Division of the Babson Statistical Organization, and now of MOTION PICTURE NEWS, the figures presented in the NEWS last week and this make it possible to compute the statistical description of the average American motion picture theatre.

The results of this calculation present the following cross-section of the American picture house:

| | |
|---|---|
| Number of seats | 507 |
| Number of days open weekly | 5 |
| Number of people employed | 7 |
| Matinee price scale | 12-28 cents |
| Evening price scale | 17-36 cents |
| Average daily patronage | 364 |
| Program changes every two weeks | 7 |
| Number of shows per day | 3 |
| Number of reels to program | 8 |

Arbuckle's Return to Screen Again Blocked

Press Account Quotes Unofficial Vote of Film Patrons as Adverse to His "Come Back"

ROSCOE ("Fatty") Arbuckle's career as a motion picture star on the American screen is irrevocably closed, according to a press report which appeared in the New York dailies on Tuesday of this week, November 14th. The press account states that this information emanated from the Famous Players-Lasky headquarters in New York and quotes officials of that company as declaring that the American public, and not any integral factor of the motion picture industry, is primarily responsible for the drastic and permanent quietus imposed on Arbuckle's ambitions to return again to his former status of a popular screen idol.

The registration of the public's aversion to Arbuckle's "come back" as a motion picture star is said to have been effected by quietly sounding out screen patrons in all parts of the country. Officials of the Paramount organization are reported by the press account as stating that managers of motion picture theatres in all sections of the nation have been asking an unobtrusive vote from members of their audiences with a view to ascertaining first how they felt towards the return of the rotund comedian as a screen player. The sentiment expressed is said to have been overwhelmingly against the exhibition of motion pictures in the future which presented Arbuckle as a member of the cast. Following "Fatty's" acquittal on the charge of second degree murder in connection with the death of Virginia Rappe, much discussion was precipitated as to whether or not the former star should be permitted to regain his lost status as a screen player. In several cities newspapers presented the question for the answer of their readers. The verdicts rendered were of a conflicting character, no complete unanimity being shown either in favor of his return or his rejection. The New York Globe proposed the question in its "The Inquiring Reporter" column, and the answers elicited showed about an even division of sentiment for and against. Many of the newspaper readers felt that despite his acquittal, his connection with the tragedy disqualified him from playing again before the picture-going public. Others expressed the opinion that he was but the victim of unfortunate circumstances and that his acquittal should close the chapter and not figure in the question of his return or absence from the motion picture screen.

The New York Globe in its issue of Wednesday, November 15th, commented editorially as follows on the decision to keep Arbuckle from resuming his former status as a screen player in America:

"It is thumbs down for 'Fatty' Arbuckle. Despite his legal vindication by a San Francisco jury, which declared him innocent of the murder of Virginia Rappe, the public is not to see his films. Will Hays' first important act since he became suzerain of the celluloid industry has been to secure agreement that they shall not be shown. Joseph M. Schenck, the producer, and Adolph Zukor, head of the famous Players-Lasky Corporation, which distributed these pictures, will share a loss of $500,000 already expended, plus the potential profits.

"The public itself cast the adverse vote which has resulted in the abandonment of this enterprise. Some months ago the Famous Players-Lasky organization sent out an inquiry to many thousands of exhibitors, who in turn secured the views of an even larger number of their patrons. The results were so overwhelmingly against the showing of the Arbuckle pictures that business judgment supported the decision of Mr. Hays that to exhibit these films would not be for the best interests of the motion picture industry.

"This is a demonstration of group-morality which has several interesting phases, to none of which is the guilt or innocence of Mr. Arbuckle pertinent. Apparently the public has decided that the spirit of comedy cannot survive close association with such a wretched affair as the death of Miss Rappe. This may seem illogical and unnecessary, but there are deep-rooted impulses in humanity to which it appeals as essentially right. We identify the actor with his part, and the atmosphere which surrounds the one spreads over the other. The producers have shown an intelligent understanding of the public feeling when they ruled that the career of the globular comedian must come to an end."

At the time of Arbuckle's trial in connection with the death of Miss Rappe three pictures with "Fatty" in the featured roles were completed and awaiting release. The three productions were titled "Gasoline Gus," "Freight Prepaid" and "Leap Year." These subjects were withheld from release pending the outcome of the trial. They were estimated to possess a potential value of two million dollars a year and much interest centered about their ultimate disposal.

When Arbuckle's third trial resulted in his acquittal steps were taken to issue the first of the belated releases, confidence being expressed in the star's favorable reception in view of his discharge from complicity in the death of the unfortunate screen actress. Adolph Zukor, president of Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, stated it to be his opinion that the American public would uphold the verdict of the court in establishing Arbuckle's innocence. At this juncture, Will H. Hays, president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, called a conference on the question of the Arbuckle releases, at which Mr. Zukor and Joseph Schenck, under whose auspices Arbuckle's stellar vehicles were produced, participated. While the details of the private meeting were never made public it was announced by Mr. Hays, through the public and trade press, that the officials had agreed to withhold the release of the Arbuckle productions despite the tremendous monetary loss involved. This was done in deference to opinions expressed that the screening of the Arbuckle pictures would be offensive to the majority of the picture-going public of America. The unofficial vote reported as having been taken by theatre managers throughout the country would seem to confirm the opinions expressed at that time and vindicate Mr. Hays' judgment of public sentiment towards Arbuckle.

Several weeks ago Arbuckle directed a special appeal to the public for an opportunity to re-establish himself on the screen, declaring that he had spent all his money defending himself against the charge lodged against him in connection with the death of Virginia Rappe, and that the only avenue by which he could rehabilitate himself was the screen, as he was unfamiliar with any other occupation than that of screen acting.

Young Women Take Quiz for Reviewers

WHEN the New York State Civil Service Commission held an examination at Albany this week, for the positions of reviewers on the Motion Picture Censorship Commission, nearly all the applicants were young women. Six or eight cities were represented.

Twenty-eight applicants for the positions were on hand. It was the first examination of its kind ever held in this State. It consisted of two parts, the written examination, which consumed an entire morning, and an oral examination which took place in the afternoon. If the Censorship Commission manages to exist under the coming Democratic administration, at least six reviewers are to be appointed.

Statistics of the Industry

This "weighted average" method has been applied to the total number of seats, the number of days a week the house is open, the number of people employed, including manager, matinee prices, evening prices, and the average number of patrons daily, all of which figures were presented in last week's MOTION PICTURE NEWS. From the statistics presented this week, the figures on the number of changes of program weekly, the number of shows per day, and the number of reels on each program, were selected, and also used in computing the specifications of the average theatre.

While such an "average theatre," of course, does not actually exist, any more than the Average Man, who consumes so many ounces of sugar each year, smokes so many cigarettes, and pays so much in taxes, and the like, has any real entity, none-the-less, such a computation is valuable as summing up all of the figures presented into a brief, concrete form, easily visualized.

It will be noted in the following table that the matter of the number of changes of program weekly has been changed to the number of changes every two weeks. This has been done for the reason that this figure came out 3.5 changes per week, and rather than employ a fractional figure, the item was altered to the two week period.

The average American picture theatre, as shown by the calculation described above, is as follows, as of the late summer of 1922:

| | |
|---|---|
| Number of seats | 507 |
| Number of days open weekly | 5 |
| Number of people employed | 7 |
| Matinee price scale | 12-28 cents |
| Evening price scale | 17-36 cents |
| Average daily patronage | 364 |
| Program changes every two weeks | 7 |
| Number of shows per day | 3 |
| Number of reels to program | 8 |

Next week statistics concerning present business as compared with previous years, whether the theatre can count on a good average business regardless of the feature being played, whether a super-attraction hurts business on pictures following, relative box office value of the feature, short subjects, music and vaudeville, and other questions will be taken up in MOTION PICTURE NEWS.

T.O.C.C. Discusses Collective Booking Plan

Marcus Loew Defends Expansion Policy; Senator Walker Addresses Gathering

At a meeting of the Theatre Owners' Chamber of Commerce, held on Tuesday, Novemher 14th, at the Hotel Astor, New York, the question of collective booking hy independent exhibitors was discussed. There was little else hut discussion. One resolution was adopted and that at the breaking up of the meeting when it was moved to admit the trade press representatives, who had been hitherto barred, and advise them of the proceedings. The only other features of the meeting were the presence of Marcus Loew and a straight-from-the-shoulder speech by Senator Walker, who took the opportunity to deliver himself of a few thoughts on "the politics of the industry." The senator's talk, in fact, proved the only high light of the gathering, despite the fact that it was an impromptu number on the program and given just before the close of the meeting, when the discussion on collective booking petered out.

The Senator was greeted cordially. He first stated that as the discussion on the floor was a technical one and since he had never bought or sold a piece of film in his life he did not feel qualified to speak authoritatively on the subject. But he did have something to say. The Senator left nobody in douht on that point. He had certain thoughts to express that had been in his mind for some time. He was glad of the opportunity to declare them as he might not have the chance to meet so large a hody of exhihitors again hefore January 1st. After January 1st, the Senator very strongly intimated, duties elsewhere would direct all his efforts into other channels.

As an opener, the Senator questioned the advisability of the T. O. C. C. "picking" on Marcus Loew alone. He told the body that Marcus Loew certainly was not the only offender. "Are you planning on calling the others in and picking on them one by one?" queried the Senator. "If so, you will never effect a remedy, for while you are picking on one fellow the others will be out devising ways of beating you.

"I was not present when Will Hays called the producers and distributors of his organization around the tahle and sat in with them for the first time, hut I can very well imagine Mr. Hays saying some such words as the following to them: 'Gentlemen, there are certain inequitable practices being carried on among you. Cut them out! Play the game on the square! If you don't there is a policeman outside the door who shall see to it that you behave.' Now, gentlemen, the cop that stood outside the door, cluh in hand, was none other than your national exhibitor organization, the M. P. T. O. of A. You exhihitors had built up the strongest exhibitor organization ever known in the history of the motion-picture industry. In its unity you wielded a power that every producer and distrihutor in the husiness was bound to regard and respect. Don't you suppose that Will Hays looked to you? Why do you think he made a tour of this country and sought to establish contact with the exhihitors in the various sections? I am sure that he looked to the strength and unity of your national organization to help him in establishing more equitahle business practices among producers and distributors.

"All this was before the Washington convention. It is a subject that we find regret in referring to. Gentlemen, you came hack from that convention shot to pieces. And with the passing of your unity went your strength."

Here the Senator reverted to the subject of Marcus Loew's presence. "The man you should have brought here and sat down in Mr. Loew's place to discuss your grievances with is Will Hays." The speaker pointed out that it was only plain business sense for Mr. Loew to protect his own interests and that it was futile to arrive at any remedy hy such scattered efforts.

Just before concluding his speech the Senator flayed the industry for its "politics." "I have been in the game of politics for a long time," said the Senator, "but never in politics have I experienced nearly as much of what is called 'politics' as I have in the motion-picture industry." The Senator declared that permanent remedies for present problems would never be attained as long as some "producers and distrihutors continued double-crossing one another" and some exhihitors persisted in playing unfair.

The matter of first-run bookings for independent houses in Greater New York has long heen a sore spot. Producer-distributor owned circuits in the Metropolitan district have been appropriating first-run bookings to the exclusion of the independent theatre owners, and this practice is alleged to have damaged the prestige and investments of the larger independent houses. Some time ago as a result of discussions in the meetings of the T. O. C. C. there was organized an incorporated body known as the Associated Booking Company, commonly referred to as the A. B. C. The purpose of the A. B. C. is to secure first-run bookings for its membership on pictures released from New York to the surrounding territories. One such contract has already been closed for United Artists' release of Mary Pickford's "Tess of the Storm Country," according to one of the T. O. C. C. members.

The purpose of Tuesday's meeting seemed to be to discuss this method of collective booking as practiced by the A. B. C. and to exchange ideas as to any other available way and means of securing first-run bookings fo independent theatre owners in the Metropol tan district. Marcus Loew was invited t sit in and listen to the discussion with a vie to ameliorate the situation for the indepenc ents, at least as far as the Metro first-ru product was concerned. Most of the meetin was spent in listening to various exhihitc members deliver their views on the difficult of meeting the first-run competition.

William Brandt, in the course of his addres concerning the subject, expressed it to be hi helief that the greatest evil was the double feature program for which the exhibitor themselves were responsible. He declared tha the practice of exhibitors in booking tw feature productions for a single progra tended to reduce the amount of availahl product for hooking and further created a artificial valuation on these pictures so hooked Mr. Brandt's remarks led to no tangible actio on the part of the body. Charles O'Reill referred to the introduction of the "doubl feature" issue as "a red herring being draw across the trail," and insisted that the rea question before the meeting was the matte of first-run product for the independent thea tre owner in the Metropolitan district.

Marcus Loew was next heard upon the sub ject. He said that he was open to any sugges tion of an equitable character which would no work harm to his business interests. He sai that dealing with individual exhibitors he wa ready to do all in his power to ameliorate con ditions but pointed out that there were th investments and interests of his own organiza tion to protect. He also cited an instance i which he had taken losses upon his own shoul ders to benefit an independent exhibitor in th matter of first-run privileges only to discove eventually that he had worked harm not onl to himself but to several other independen exhibitors in the district as well. He als stated that once he retired he would ceas further expansion, but as long as he remaine in business he intended to continue his polic of expansion. He later characterized. in a interview with the trade press representa tives, any man "a fool" who did not utiliz every honorable means at his disposal to pro tect his interests.

Many of the members started leaving afte Senator Walker had completed his speech, an it was at this juncture that the question o admitting the trade press representatives wa proposed. Those that remained and listene to the chairman propose the question expresse their wish that the press representatives b admitted. Some expressed a regret that suc action had not been proposed before.

Three Coast Companies Are Merged

WEST COAST THEATRES COMPANY, owning sixty-odd houses in Southern California, Western Pictures Exploitation Company and Principal Pictures Company have merged, according to word from Los Angeles. The new corporation of producing, exploitation and exhibiting will be known as Principal Pictures Corporation.

Sol Lesser is the president and executive manager, Mike Rosenberg, general manager; Irving Lesser, New York manager; Arthur Bernstein, studio manager; Harry Wilson, publicity director and Walter Anthony, manager of the scenario department.

The company will produce twelve subjects the first year, which will probably be distributed through Associated First National. They have purchased a fifteen acre site in Hollywood for a studio and will immediately build and equip two big stages.

Negotiations for merging Jackie Coogan Productions with Principal Pictures are now pending. The same men have financed the Coogan subjects.

Director Points Out Defects in Production

Gradual Divorcement From Reality Considered Among Leading Troubles

By Cecil M. Hepworth

ONE of the great troubles with the moving pictures today is their gradual divorcement from reality. Pictures depend for their value upon the strength of the illusion they produce. People go to the movies, broadly speaking, in order that they may forget for the moment their own comparatively drab existences and live in imagination the much more heroic, more opulent, or at least more interesting lives of the characters in the pictures. Everything which tends to break or mar the illusion; to bring them back to earth, is therefore bad and to be avoided.

The aim of every good director is to build up gradually, on the sure foundation of reality and experience, a towering structure of beauty, interest and entertainment peopled with living, breathing human creatures living such lives as real people live and doing such things as human beings do or may be believed to do.

But there are many directors who have left that sure foundation far, far below them. They built their first film stories upon reality, but each succeeding one has been erected upon the basis of the one before it, until now they are way up in the air, with reality and truth and human nature almost out of sight. This is the principal reason why moving pictures are losing their hold upon the people. We are not giving them what they want. They like to see beautiful dresses and grand homes —those things are interesting in themselves— but when they see ordinary people living in palaces which no king would occupy, they begin to feel that they are being lied to, and that is a thing which an American audience will not stand for.

The story itself must be true to life: That is to say, it must be recognizable as within the bounds of human probability, but it must also be of something which people want to know about. Truth to life alone is nothing— we have reality all around us: it must be intensely interesting and yet not improbable. The rest lies in the manner of telling.

In telling a story, whether in pictures or any other medium, the most important consideration is that it should keep moving. The story must move steadily on to its proper conclusion with never a drag or a halt anywhere. Even the bad directors and editors know this, but they do not know what it means. They mistake physical movement of character, rapidity of change and so on, for movement of story, which is a totally different thing. It often happens that the story moves most steadily, certainly and thrillingly when the characters are absolutely motionless, while in other cases it may halt entirely while the screen is a bewildering mass of hurrying figures. If a scene of Roman debauchery is dragged by the hairs into a story where it does not belong, the story—the important thing—just has to wait up and wait until it is over. The cutting room experts think that they can put movement into a story by cutting out those dramatic pauses which are among drama's most effective weapons. That does not quicken the movement of a story. It even retards it because, substituting a series of jumps and jerks instead of smooth, steady progress irritates the spectators and calls attention to the mechanism and, by so doing, breaks the continuity of illusion.

The frequent use of unnecessary close-ups is greatly to be deprecated. The close-up is the easiest shot in all photography—any fool could make them by the hundred. They look effective and startlingly realistic, and because it is so easy to cover ignorance by slamming in a close-up whenever you are in doubt, they leaped into vogue as soon as they were discovered. But they are terribly disruptive in their effect and break continuity more certainly than any other device. Any director who knows his job knows how to concentrate the attention of the audience upon any point he desires them to see. It is not necessary to hit them in the eyes with a sudden close-up. When you are arguing with a man you can produce a very striking effect by punching him full in the face with your clenched fist, but that is not the best way to make him see what you are driving at. I admit it is sometimes the only way—and that is about how often a close-up is necessary.

Smoothness in the construction of a story is one of its most important attributes. Directors will pay many thousands of dollars for a good continuity (which often goes for nothing in the cutting room) and yet will neglect continuity of movement and so force the spectators to perform unnecessary gymnastics in order to follow them. You will see a man walk out of a scene on the right-hand side into another room and in the next scene, which represents that other room, he will appear coming in on the opposite side from where you expected him. That is just sloppy workmanship. It is very little more trouble to watch these things and do them carefully. Continuity, smoothness, easy transition—these are the good director's watchwords, for he knows that if he can keep the people in blissful unconsciousness of the methods he is using he can do almost anything with them.

The best American directors are coming round to this way of thinking and in their work you now rarely find that jazziness which used to be regarded as the soul of high efficiency production. But, unfortunately, the lesser men and the so-called cutters and editors are still a couple of years behind the times. They do not study the work of the great masters of production. They formed their opinions years ago and think that they still hold good. They cut and trim the pictures which fall into their vandal hands into the same old dreary jerkiness and then say that they have Americanized them.

In theatre presentation some great effects are obtained by the use of colored lights smoothly blending one into another. Every exhibitor knows that if the changes were made abruptly all the beauty would be lost. The same principle is applied in my pictures. Instead of the snap change from scene to scene there is a short "fade," a blend from one scene to the next. This gives an easiness of transition which is pleasant and undisturbing and it also results directly in a saving of footage. When a man has to get up out of a chair and go from one room to another it is necessary, with a snap-change, to follow him right through the movement, because if you did not there would be an obvious cut which would be distracting and produce the effect of a trick. But with a short fade you can leave him as he rises from the chair and take him up again when he has entered the other room. With six inches of fade you can save six feet of film, and keep your story moving without halting it for unnecessary action.

In film production, perhaps more than in other forms of enterprise, sincerity is the keynote of success. The artistry in a Hepworth production is no mere matter of acting and make-up. Alma Taylor does much more than act; she lives the part that she is portraying—lives and suffers with the character she plays. And she uses no make-up at all. After all, picture acting is a matter of revealing one's thoughts through the medium of facial expression. Thoughts are shown through the movements of the minute muscles and almost invisible interstices in the skin around the eyes and mouth, and if you fill them up with grease paint, you might as well send an actor on the speaking stage with his mouth gagged. Make-up, particularly excessive painting, is a relic of the days of ignorance in photography and lighting. It is only necessary now in those studios where that ignorance still prevails. Its use, or rather abuse—for that is what it amounts to in many a modern studio—is the greatest destroyer of illusion that we suffer from today. The state prisons in this country do not permit female convicts to pencil their eyebrows and paint their lips and the people know it. And how can you believe in a hero with a beautiful snow-white face which finishes abruptly at the chin and merges into a neck like yours and mine?

Frank E. Woods Given Dinner by Coast Associates

FRANK E. WOODS, who is leaving Famous Players-Lasky to form Allied Authors, Inc., in association with Thompson Buchanan and Elmer Harris, left Los Angeles last Sunday on a three weeks' trip to New York to complete releasing arrangements.

Before his departure, it was announced that Clark Thomas, for two years general manager of the Ince studios, following a year as general manager for Metro, will serve in the same capacity with Allied Authors. Woods arrived in New York on Thursday. Harris is already in New York, and Buchanan is due to arrive early next week.

Associates of Woods from the Lasky and other studios, numbering one hundred, gave him a farewell dinner at the Writers' Club Saturday evening, Nov. 11. The committee on arrangements included Mary O'Connor, Aubrey Stauffer and George Foster Platt. Milton Schwartz was toastmaster.

Woods was presented with a sterling silver and bronze 12-piece smoking set.

"One Exciting Night" Has Chicago Premiere

Social leaders and persons prominent in local film circles attended the Chicago premiere of "One Exciting Night" at the Illinois theatre last Monday night. It proved a blood-curdling mystery drama, hilarious farce and love story all in one.

So enthusiastic was the audience that at the conclusion of the picture D. W. Griffith responded to curtain calls, expressed his thanks and introduced Carol Dempster and Porter Strong, who went to Chicago expressly for the opening.

Hays Outlines M.P.P.D.'s Accomplishments

In Letter Addressed to Publishers of Country He Tells of Steps Taken Towards Higher Standards

WHAT the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, headed by Will H. Hays, has done towards the realization of its avowed purpose to obtain and then maintain the highest possible standards of motion picture production and to develop to the highest possible degree the moral and educational character of the industry is set forth in a letter recently addressed by Will Hays to the publishers of the country. The letter again expresses Mr. Hays' appreciation of the cordial reception accorded him by the publishers of the country last April and their assurances of cooperation in the great work that he had at that time just begun as head of the producers and distributors' organization. In the letter he outlines for the publishers' and the public's information just what his organization has accomplished since it began functioning. Mr. Hays writes:

"The development of a new spirit of confidence and co-operation within the industry was the first essential because only from such a relationship can come the united action necessary for effective execution. That spirit obtains and it includes producers, distributors, exhibitors, authors, directors, actors, cameramen, mechanics and all the rest. The development of the right relation between exhibitor and distributor is a continuing problem, of course, with its solution based primarily on a continuing mutual fair dealing.

"To better ascertain and more certainly discharge its duty to the public, the industry sought and obtained the co-operation of some eighty nationally organized welfare movements. A General Committee made up of representatives of these groups with an Executive Committee of twenty and an Executive Secretary have all been brought into an active association of mutual helpfulness. This involves the consultation with them by the producers, the careful consideration of all suggestions and arrangements for the actual preview of the pictures. This plan will, of course, go far toward bringing that understanding of both the public duty and the practical problems involved from which the very best results possible will ensue.

"The pertinency of the effort to endeavor in entertainment pictures always to portray correctly historical incidents, habits, customs, costumes, etc., has been obvious and this effort is being made with renewed earnestness. In addition, the value of the motion picture as a new pedagogic instrument has been given serious consideration. To the National Education Association the offer was made and accepted that the plans of the members of our Association be used for experimentation and that the educators of the country and the producers join in the movement to make certain the production of pictures for classroom work which will be pedagogically, scientifically and psychologically sound. A committee of great educators appointed by the National Education Association, together with the Federal Commissioner of Education and others, is meeting with the members of the Association and plans will be perfected, all to the end that such need as now obtains, shall be met, together with the certain almost limitless demand of the future, and met with pedagogic pictures which measure up to the standards fixed by the educators themselves. This will no doubt result in an invaluable contribution to the pedagogic forces of the country. Along with the development of the classroom film are proceeding the plans for the intelligent, equitable and complete development of the whole non-theatrical field.

"Further, the producers have taken definite steps to make the fullest possible use of the motion picture as an instrument of international amity. They are making certain that all films which are sent abroad, wherever they may go, shall correctly portray American life, ideals and opportunities. We will sell America to the world with motion pictures. American producers furnish the majority of all pictures shown in the world and this correct depicting of the life and habits of our own and foreign people, each to the other, will go far toward bringing the international understanding and appreciation which moves in the direction of a world peace.

"Primarily a source of entertainment, the importance of motion pictures, as such, is measured by the imperative necessity of amusement for our people. And make no mistake about such imperative necessity. Just as you serve the leisure hours of the masses so do you rivet the girders of society. The industry accepted the challenge in the demand of the American people for the highest quality of art, morals and entertainment in motion pictures as the principal amusement of the great majority of all our people and the sole amusement of millions and millions. They recognize that any evil that might be in motion pictures can be removed and the highest standards of art and entertainment attained and a the great advantages of pictures retained a the place where and at the time when the pi tures are made by those who make them an in no other way.

"Beginning a new drive this year for th best possible pictures, measuring up towar what the standard should be and which man pictures already had achieved, earnestly ask ing the public's co-operation and hoping, o course, from every possible standpoint, selfis and unselfish, to move in the right directio they have brought out, and are bringing ou a series of pictures which we are hoping wi attract the public's attention, as the evidenc both of their good faith and their ability t accomplish, and as an augury for still bette things to which their every effort shall b directed. The maintaining of the highes standard is quite as essential as its attainmen and there can be and will be no slipping back ward, nor loss of any improvement that may b accomplished. These pictures are being re ceived in appreciation, and the public will nc be unmindful either of the impossibility o pleasing every one with every picture or th necessity of different types of pictures for th various types of taste and interest. There ar many of these pictures, some already released some soon to be released and some in th making.

"I am very hopeful for the future. It i a large undertaking. It cannot, of course, b finished at once. Indeed, it can never b finished because the service of the motion pic ture like the service of the press depends fo its quality on a constant effort. What I hop to do is to make certain that this effort fo better and still better service by motion pic tures shall be constant and that from the effor will come an accomplishment that will mea the largest possible usefulness."

Brief News Notes from the West Coast by Wire

IT is reported that the Associated First National executive committee arrives in Los Angeles on Nov. 26.

A wire from Douglas Fairbanks announces that he and Mary Pickford will return to Los Angeles about Dec. 1 from Cuba and Mexico. Sets are now being erected for "Monsieur Beaucaire" and "Dorothy Vernon of Haddon Hall," under the supervision of Edward M. Langley. The enclosed stage has been doubled in size.

A Jackie Coogan production titled "Toby Tyler" has been started by Eddie Cline. Players engaged include Barbara Tennant, Russell Simpson, Sam de Grasse, and DeWitt Jennings.

West Coast Theatres have purchased Chotiner's theatre at Eighth and Vermont, Los Angeles, and renamed it the Roosevelt. This is the 57th house controlled by the company.

George A. Levy, president of the Liberty Theatres Corporation, Denver, is here conferring with Sol Lesser and Mike Rosenberg, owners of All Star exchange, San Francisco and Los Angeles, and DeLuxe exchange, Seattle, respectively. Buying of films for 11 western states will be done collectively through the Lesser office for all exchanges.

Frank Lawrence, for 15 years with Vitagraph and the last five years film editor at Universal, has been engaged by M. C. Levee as editing chief for the Allen Holubar and Maurice Tourneur productions.

Admission Rates Justified Says Mandelbaum

Clevelander Contends Entertainment Should Be Furnished that Is Worth Price

AS LONG as operating expenses continue at their present level, exhibitors are justified in maintaining the existing scale. Exhibitors can collect such a price but the public expects entertainment according to the admission paid.

The latest chapter in the admission-reduction-or-retention argument is written by Emmanuel Mandelbaum, First National franchise holder of Cleveland, who has spent two weeks in New York as a member of First National's Rotating Committee. Although the organization in which he holds an interest as the record of having built the first first-class first run house devoted exclusively to motion pictures, and of operating the largest chain of theatres in the Cleveland territory, Mr. Mendelbaum has devoted himself principally to distribution and organization problems, leaving the actual theatre operations to his associates. As a result of this division of duties he has come constantly in contact with exhibitors, so that his opinions represent the consensus of opinion of experienced showmen in the northern Ohio territory.

In a lengthy interview given during his fortnight in New York, Mr. Mandelbaum scored equally the business methods of exhibitors who foist upon the public pictures that are judged by length, rather than quality, and who will not make inquiries about the product they are to show, and producers who foist productions that they know are unworthy upon exhibitors and the public.

He made the interesting prophecy that a time was coming when pictures will be given "tryouts" just the same as legitimate productions.

Parade of Welcome Will Be Given F. P.-L. Delegates

MORE than one hundred exhibitors showing Paramount pictures in the Los Angeles territory will participate in a parade of welcome to be given the delegates to the Famous Players-Lasky convention on Monday through the business streets of Los Angeles and Hollywood.

The studio banquet will be held on Tuesday, instead of Friday as announced last week, and the Ambassador banquet has been changed to Friday.

"The moving picture operator's success," he said, "is assured if he can get the kind of pictures the public wants; and the operator who will be the most discriminating in his selection will also be the most successful.

"To sum up the situation: The exhibiting business has a bright future; but the exhibitor cannot sit back and let his operator run the show. He must be careful what he puts on the screen and how he shows it. He must not take it for granted that a thing is good, but should judge for himself. He should have the courage not to show a picture if, in his judgment, it does not come up to expectation upon personal investigation.

"The producer cannot prosper if the exhibitor is operating at a loss. Exhibitors must not pay, and producers should not demand more than the traffic will stand, as eventually there must be an accounting.

"The exhibitor who will watch his investment has an equal opportunity with any other live business. He must not, however, expect the large and easy profits of the early days, but should content himself with a fair return for his investment and labors. If we persist in the old methods someone who has not acquired extravagant habits will take our place—someone who can adjust himself to conditions that will give our industry its place among the legitimate business enterprises."

Mr. Mandelbaum declares that the 1922-23 outlook is much better than for the previous year. This he attributes to the fact that better pictures are being made. Business has been spasmodic, depending upon the quality of the picture being run, showing again that the public has begun to discriminate and to shop for its entertainment.

Outside of securing good pictures Mr. Mandelbaum declares that the greatest problem facing the exhibitor today is that of proper exploitation. Adequate exploitation of a picture for first runs has a definite box office value for both exhibitors and producers in subsequent runs.

In conclusion Mr. Mandelbaum paid a tribute to the independent producer who, he said, is responsible for the improved standards of picture production.

"As a co-operative organization," he said, "First National has stood the test for over five years. It is now established on a safe footing. Its influence in the industry will be greater as time goes on. Its existence is the safety valve of the industry. It will always stand, as heretofore, for the square deal to the independent producer and exhibitor."

Indiana Exhibitors Plan Fight On Blue Laws

Conference Organizes For Opposition To Restrictive Legislation

SUNDAY blue laws, Censorship and Music Tax were discussed at an autumn conference of more than 100 motion picture exhibitors from all sections of Indiana, held at the Hotel Severin in Indianapolis last week. The conference was called by the Indiana Branch of the Anti Blue Law League of America, Inc., and through this neutral agency, the exhibitors in attendance forgot all past differences and presented a united agree opposed to restrictive legislation.

Plans were made to defeat revision of the Sunday laws in the Indiana legislature in January, as well as censorship. A fight against the Music Tax will be vigorously prosecuted.

F. C. Dailey, Executive Secretary of the Anti Blue Law League of America, Inc., presided at the conference.

Ralph Hayes, first assistant to the President of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors' Association, of New York City, delivered a short address.

A paper, written by Mrs. David W. Ross, President of the National Board of Motion Picture Endorsers, was read by Mrs. Robbins, an officer of the Indiana Endorsers.

The entire plan of how pictures are viewed and then endorsed, or rejected, was explained by Mrs. Ross. Some of Indiana's most prominent women are affiliated with the movement, and the method of working in co-operation with the Parent-Teacher organizations, and through the schools, proved of great interest to the exhibitors present.

Discussion of Sunday closing agitation was led by Billy Link, of Culver; E. W. Swartout, of Aurora; F. G. Heller, Kokomo; J. B. Stine, Clinton; Joseph Hartley, East Chicago; T. A. Walsh, Brazil, and William H. Lipps, of Alexandria, who was the oldest exhibitor in attendance at the meeting. A resolution introduced by Exhibitor Lipps, of Alexandria, to perfect an exhibitors' organization under the auspices of the Anti Blue Law League and have an exhibitor from each county in the state, to work with the Anti Blue Law League of America, Inc., in perfecting its state organization, was adopted.

The discussion on censorship was led by women members of the Indiana Board of Endorsers, and some of the film exchange representatives who were in attendance.

The Music Tax question developed a spirited discussion, which was led by F. J. Rembusch, owner of a chain of theatres, who has his headquarters in Indianapolis. A committee was appointed by Chairman Dailey, of which Mr. Rembusch was named chairman, to go into the music tax problem and endeavor to fight the encroachment of the rights of the exhibitor in this respect. This committee will probably call another meeting of Indiana exhibitors soon to formulate plans to fight the tax from an organized standpoint.

Exhibitors who were present agreed that the meeting was the most successful gathering of Indiana motion picture men that has ever been held here.

Humane Society Protests N. Y. Commission

The American Humane Society, presided over by Dr. William O. Stillman, with headquarters in Albany, N. Y., has filed a protest against the New York State Motion Picture Commission, and particularly against its chairman, George H. Cobb, claiming that the Commission should have eliminated certain scenes from films alleged to show cruelty to animals.

Mr. Cobb has replied to the society and claims that the pictures referred to in the complaint were made before censorship became effective in New York state, and as such were included among the thousands for which permits were issued by the Commission under provisions of the law.

Author Writes Concerning Screen Adaptation

Fiction Must Undergo Certain Changes To Meet Picture Requirements

By Carolyn Shirley Bailey

CLASSICS of olden days must be adapted in their translation into the medium of motion pictures. The stories which have within themselves the romance, adventure and sentiment which make them immortal, the qualities that have made them "best sellers" through the ages, were written for people of a more leisurely period in history and must perforce be edited and brought up to date if they are to be appreciated in this—the photographic—period. "For this is the photographic age, photographic in its literal meaning."

The comprehension of the present-day youth and adult is keyed to understand best that which has been highlighted and the most salient features emphasized.

The writers of the past were too leisurely and too diffuse to gain general appreciation by the motion picture audience in this age of speed and specialization. People know too well nowadays what they want to read, a confusion of many things in order to sift out the sentiment they desire. Some of the greatest fiction of all times was written many years ago, but the authors invariably rambled on for pages in rendering bits of philosophy, and detailed descriptions of scenes lacking in dramatic value. The old classic has a background of customs with which everyone was familiar at the time of the writing—customs, however, which have now become obsolete.

There is another element that enters into the translation of these stories into motion pictures. Nearly the entire beauty and sense of any written word is contained in the mind of the reader. The words form mind pictures and these pictures differ greatly in form in the minds of various readers. The words "a crushing blow on the jaw" draws up a very different picture in the mind of one who has ever experienced one than it does to a person who has always lived a sheltered and retired life. We must dramatize the plot, not words!

Again the average reader brings anything on the written page up to his own time of existence. He forms mental pictures containing only those elements with which he is familiar. Therefore, the motion picture producer has a much more difficult task than has the author of the book. He appeals to the imagination of his audience by the scenes he suggests or leaves out, as well as by those on the screen for a thing once pictured is appreciated much the same by any audience. Then it goes into the mind of the public and there must register as real with the different grades of intelligence with which it comes in contact.

For that reason a motion picture cannot be an exactly literal dramatization of a written novel. Especially is this true of those written farther back than the present age. The truest relationship a motion picture can bear to a classic is that which an operatic overture bears to the opera itself. The overture is a preliminary burst of music calling attention to the themes of the opera. It crashes into short orchestration of the main motif harmonius, and from an overture a true understanding of the opera as a whole may be gleaned.

Such is the position of a motion picture production to the written classic. If it is true to the main themes and the arrangement of the action is such as to emphasize the themes, then it is as truly a classic in itself as is the written book. Motion picture producers are beginning to appreciate this fact and the result is some pictures that are bound to be helpful in an educational as well as an entertainment sense. Douglas Fairbanks' production of "The Three Musketeers" is in this category, and more recently the Thomas H. Ince production of "Lorna Doone," which was directed by Maurice Tourneur. This production has a special appeal to me because I have a peculiar understanding of the difficulties which confronted the men to whom the task of making this delightful story into a motion picture production were confronted—and the successful way in which they accomplished it seems to me most satisfying.

Recently I was requested to edit an abridged edition of this beautiful old novel, and I was delighted at the opportunity because of my appreciation of it. However, it was anything but an easy task. To have one's books adopted by schools and libraries throughout the Union is an honor but it also entails a responsibility that is not light. In adapting Lorna Doone for popular reading, it was possible, without changing a word of the original, to omit the talking about the plot. I finally succeeded in taking out about sixty thousand words and still the story is there with all the character. I have always been interested in motion pictures and because of the difficulties of the abridgement work on Lorna Doone I will admit that I dreaded what would happen to the story when it was announced as a picture, for never have I read a novel that more woefully lacked continuity for the scenario writer.

But when I saw the production I was sincerely pleased.

The plot of this classical work of fiction is truly presented in the picture—love at first sight—the old robber feud—the rescue of his loved one by the hero—a separation through change of fortune—the faith of love—revenge—jealousy—the triumph of honesty over crime and the final triumph of a love that blots out even jealousy.

The real sentiment of "Lorna Doone" in this motion picture production. T themes which made the story live have be concentrated upon by Mr. Tourneur and t necessary action taken out of the original a placed in the photoplay where it will best e phasize the story plot and bring the crash of the themes which makes it most enjoyab

One of the changes in the picture whi will be noted by those who have read the bo is the placing of the uprising of the Door after the wedding instead of before it as M Blackmore had it. This one change, howev emphasizes the necessary treatment of them in the motion picture. They must be plac where they will best light the plot.

The omissions which one will find in t picture version are omissions only of irre vant characters and incidents. They have more place in a motion picture than the pl losophizing to which I have already referre has in a popular edition of the book.

The result which Mr. Tourneur has accom plished leads up to a new kind of interest a classic book. It points out and demo strates the only way in which these classi can be made into popular screen productio It is a true Lorna Doone overture, an artis arrangement of all the vital and beautif themes of the story, and one that cannot he but arouse a desire to read the book in t minds of those who have the leisure for it.

It is the method which will have to be em ployed in translating classics to the scree Very few of them are short enough to be ev skimmed through in the hour and a half the two hours which is allotted to the runnin of a motion picture production and the pr ducer who remains true to the theme an eliminates the non-essentials in order to spe up the telling of his story has accomplished distinct contribution to art as well as fu filling the demands of this the photograph age.

Author Discusses Question of Screen Translations

CAROLYN SHERWIN BAILEY, who contributes the accompanying article, is an author of national prominence and eminently fitted by virture of her experience and study of the problem at issue to write interestingly and authoritatively concerning the subject of screen adaptation of literary classics and popular sellers. Miss Bailey attained special notice during the war by her pamphlets written especially for the purpose of sustaining the morale of the younger generation. Her "Tell Me Another Story," "What to Do for Uncle Sam," and "Broad Stripes and Bright Stars" are particularly noteworthy.

The question of just how closely a screen production should pursue the story and spirit of its original, especially when adapted from a well-known classic or widely read novel, is one that has occasioned considerable dispute in the past. In her present article, Miss Bailey contributes some notable ideas on this much mooted point.

Paramount Opens Two New Branches

TO further facilitate the distribution of Paramount pictures, S. R. Kent, General Manager of Distribution, announces the opening of two new branch exchanges, one in Columbus, O., and the other in Peoria, Ill.

The Columbus exchange is under the management of Harry Dodge. It is already open for business. The Peoria office, which is under the management of M. M. Hirsch, will be opened Monday, November 20.

Viola Dana Inventress in New Picture

Viola Dana is going to turn artist and inventress on the screen. Her new Metro picture will be "A Noise in Newboro," a story by Edgar Franklin.

Harry Beaumont will again direct the little Metro star.

David Butler will enact one of the leading male roles. Allen Forrest has been cast for the other.

Included among the other members of the supporting cast are Eva Novak, Betty Francisco, Alfred Allen, John Standing and Bert Woodruff.

Florence Vidor Selects "Alice Adams" Cast

Word received at Associated Exhibitors offices in New York from the West coast tells of the selection by Florence Vidor of the cast for her forthcoming production of Booth Tarkington's novel, "Alice Adams."

Claude Gillingwater, Margaret McWade. Harold Goodwin, Vernon Steele, Thomas Ricketts and Fay Holderness have been engaged, as a group which the star considers typical and particularly true to the characters as described by the Indian author.

Rowland V. Lee is directing the production.

Equity Selects Second Picture Title

"Something for Nothing" Is Goodman Society Drama for State Right Distribution

EQUITY Pictures this week announces the title of the second Daniel Carson Goodman production to be distributed by them on the State Right market. The title chosen, which is fully protected by copyright against infringement, is "Something for Nothing." The story was written by Mr. Goodman during his recent trip to Europe.

"Something for Nothing" will be a modern society drama. The success of his first Equity production "What's Wrong With the Women," convinced Mr. Goodman that the demand for modern stories built around a strong present-day social problem is still greater than the supply.

"Something for Nothing" will be produced in New York. The cast is now being selected by Mr. Goodman, who will directly supervise production. Available talent, states Mr. Goodman, is greater at the present moment than it has ever been before and it is his intention to equal and if possible exceed the number of popular names which were included in the cast of "What's Wrong With the Women." It is probable that actual filming will start within a fortnight, and with Mr. Goodman working in direct co-operation with the Equity advertising and publicity department the picture will be ready for the independent market at an early date. The advertising and exploitation campaign will be prepared while production is in progress.

Equity Pictures will distribute five productions made by Daniel Carson Goodman during the current season, of which "Something for Nothing" is the second. All of these pictures will be strong society dramas with powerful titles. The title "Something for Nothing" was selected after a five weeks' search by Mr. Goodman and was chosen from a list of seventy titles suggested by Equity officials.

Dugger Heads Goldwyn St. Louis Branch

Goldwyn announces the appointment of J. B. Dugger as manager of its St. Louis branch exchange, succeeding J. Weil, resigned.

Dugger has had long experience in motion pictures. For the past four years he has been manager of Paramount exchanges in Detroit and in Indianapolis. Goldwyn feels that he is e ceptionally well qualified to handle the business of its St. Louis exchange.

Universal to Present Weird Mystery

THE strangest film play in the history of Universal City has entered production. "The Attic of Felix Bavu" is a weird mystery drama founded on the play of that name written and staged by Earl Carroll in the Earl Carroll theatre in New York.

Bavu is really a fiendish character and will be played by Wallace Beery. Forrest Stanley and Estelle Taylor will handle the romantic leading roles. Sylvia Breamer and Martha Mattox will play two important feminine characters.

Nick de Ruiz, Josef Swickard, Harry Carter and Jack Rollens are also in the cast.

Stuart Paton is directing the production from a continuity prepared by Albert G. Kenyon.

"Hearts Aflame" Shown to Trade

Notables Gather at Ritz for Benefit Showing of Louis B. Mayer's Production

"HEARTS AFLAME," Louis B. Mayer's latest film, which Reginald Barker directed and staged, was shown publicly at the Ritz-Carleton grand ballroom, last Sunday night, before an audience that packed the big room and which was composed of society people, journalists, statesmen, film personages and the entire membership of the Canadian Club.

The event was a benefit for the sufferers of the recent terrible forest fires which wiped out almost an entire province in Northern Ontario. The event was under the auspices of the New York Globe.

"Hearts Aflame" is from the book, "Timber," by Harold Titus. Louis B. Mayer and Reginald Barker made the long journey from the coast city to New York to aid in starting the picture. They brought the print with them—a hand-colored affair—two entire reels of which were colored under the direct supervision of Mr. Barker.

S. L. Rothafel of the Capitol theatre staged the entire show for the Globe.

Ex-Governor Alfred Smith headed the list of patrons and patronesses. Others were James Forbes, Will H. Hays, Marcus Loew, Richard Rowland, B. S. Moss, E. F. Albee, Albert Oliver, J. Robert Rubin, Reginald Barker and Louis B. Mayer. The patronesses included Mrs. Jerome Napoleon Bonaparte, Mrs. Charles H. Sabin, Miss Mary Garret Hay, Mrs. Arthur Livermore, Mrs. E. L. Doheny, Miss Helen Varick Boswell, Mrs. Walter J. Salmon and other prominent society women.

Will Rogers, the noted humorist; Duncan Sisters, international theatrical stars; Lenora Sparks, of the Metropolitan Opera House; Bela Kornyei, noted baritone; Evelyn Mac Nevin, a famous concert singer, and Mr. Robert Rudd, Canadian commissioner, were seen during the first half of the show, with "Hearts Aflame" completing the final portion.

Mr. Rothafel staged "Hearts Aflame" in a most ambitious manner, a vivid forest fire effect preceding the picture. The music, a special score assembled by Rothapfel, accentuated the high spots in the film and when the tremendous fire scene was flashed, the audience applauded for five minutes.

The Canadian Club co-operated with the Globe and made an outright purchase of 200 tickets at $5 each. The entire capacity of the ball room was sold at that price. Mildred E. Phillips, assistant to Harry Reichenbach of the Mayer office, handled the news end of the enterprise for the Globe.

More than $1,500 was realized from the sale of tickets, the entire amount of which was forwarded at once to the Canadian sufferers through the Globe.

Hodkinson Organization Undergoes Changes

An announcement comes from the home office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation of several important changes in their organization. C. L. Peavey has been promoted to the position of Branch Sales Manager of their Cleveland Exchange. He succeeds Mr. C. E. Holah who will come to New York to work out of the big city as special representative on "Fun from the Press."

W. F. Marshall, who was booker at the Washington, D. C. Branch, is advanced, because of his knowledge of the territory, to Office Manager, taking the place of H. A. Gillespie, who has been transferred to the home office to do contract work. P. G. Morris has succeeded L. E. Hobson as office manager of the Denver branch. Hobson has been transferred to the Los Angeles sales force.

Two Paramount Features Due Nov. 20th

WILLIAM DE MILLE'S production, "Clarence," with Wallace Reid, Agnes Ayres and May McAvoy, and Alice Brady in "Anna Ascends" are the Paramount feature releases scheduled for November 20.

Clara Beranger wrote the screen adaptation of Booth Tarkington's "Clarence," which was produced on the New York stage in 1919 and enjoyed immense popularity.

The picture is said to be packed with laughs from beginning to end. In the title role Mr. Reid scores a conspicuous success.

"Anna Ascends" is an adaptation by Margaret Turnbull of the stage play by Harry Chapman Ford. The director was Victor Fleming.

Miss Brady is seen in the role of a Syrian girl who has come to the United States to try to realize the ambition with which she is fired, namely, to be a successful author.

Her leading man is Robert Ellis, while David Powell, Nita Naldi and Charles Gerrard are seen in semi-heavy roles. Edward Durand has a difficult character part and others who show to advantage are Florence Dixon, Frederick Burton and Grace Griswold.

Universal Effects Name Change

Organization Will Be Known in Future as Universal Pictures Corporation

UNIVERSAL has changed its name. That company hereafter will be known as Universal Pictures Corporation instead of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company, it has just been announced. The adoption of the new name was brought about by a desire to embody in the incorporate name a true indication of the company's business—the making of motion pictures, rather than the ambiguous title "film manufacturing company" which more truly indicates the manufacture of raw stock.

Universal's change in name does not herald a change in methods or policy. In a statement concerning the new name, Mr. Carl Laemmle, president of the corporation, makes it plain that Universal will continue its present policy.

"We have changed our name, but not our nature," said the Universal chief.

"The law has permitted us to assume the new name. The old one was never an appropriate one, for we were never a 'film manufacturing company.' The new one is appropriate and it advertises the things we produce—pictures, not film.

"For over ten years the old name, even though not exactly appropriate, has stood for something in the moving picture industry throughout the whole world. We have never for one moment in all those years let up in our efforts to make it stand for all that is good and clean in business.

"Universal Pictures Corporation will carry out the policies that the Universal always stood for. There is no change of ownership; not a single share of stock has changed hands; there is no change of management."

Carstensen Made Auditor for Garsson

R. A. Carstensen, it was announced last week by Murray W. Garsson, has been named Auditor for Murray W. Garsson, Inc.

Mr. Carstensen is a veteran in every angle of the film business, his experience dating back to the old Reliance and Majestic companies and Triangle Film Corporation. He has also been associated with Charles Miller, Hobart Henley, S. L. Rothafel and the Hallmark Picture Corporation, of which latter concern he was Assistant Comptroller.

"The Easiest Way" for Theda Bara

Vehicle Is Selected for Selznick Star After Perusal of Numerous Scripts

THE long-awaited announcement of the vehicle to be used for Theda Bara has just been made by David O. Selznick, secretary of Selznick Pictures Corporation, who will personally supervise the production, which is to be the first of a number of Selznick pictures to be made by the company's newly organized eastern producing unit, independent of the Pacific Coast unit, which has been working in Los Angeles for some time under the personal direction of Myron Selznick, president of the company.

Theda Bara

Miss Bara will star in "The Easiest Way," the famous play by Eugene Walter.

Miss Bara's name was affixed to a Selznick contract many weeks ago. Since that time David Selznick and the Selznick scenario department have been combing the market for a play suited to the star's needs at this particular time. Fully a thousand scripts have been examined and many of the stories submitted have been given long and careful consideration. Included in the number were numerous original stories submitted by leading writers for the stage and screen. Others were the scripts of big Broadway successes, which were available. In every case some insurmountable difficulty seemed to present itself—the story failing to fit exactly the requirements of the company.

"During this long period of selection Miss Bara has been in constant consultation with Mr. Selznick in considering various stories and her enthusiasm over the role of Laura Murdock in "The Easiest Way" is unbounded."

Mr. Selznick has already started casting and expects to be able to announce the entire supporting cast within a very short time.

Hobart Bosworth Engaged for "Vanity Fair"

Hugo Ballin announces that he has engaged Hobart Bosworth for the role of the Marquis of Steyne in his production for Goldwyn release of Thackeray's masterpiece, "Vanity Fair," in which he will star his wife, Mabel Ballin. The Marquis of Steyne is one of the most striking and picturesque roles in literature.

Mr. Ballin has also engaged George Walsh for the production. He will signalize his reentry into motion pictures, after a year's absence, by acting the role of Rawdon Crawley, the husband of Becky Sharpe. Other players engaged for "Vanity Fair" are Eleanor Boardman, Willard Louis, Earle Fox, Robert Mack, William Humphrey and Tempe Piggott.

The "shooting" of scenes for "Vanity Fair" will soon begin at the Goldwyn studios under the personal direction of Mr. Ballin.

Thos. Gerety Accepts Berth with Universal

Thomas W. Gerety, assistant advertising manager and art director for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation has been engaged to fill an important position in the advertising department of the Universal Pictures Corporation.

Gerety has been in the motion picture field more than two years, most of the time with Hodkinson.

Center: Scenes from Ralph Ince's special production "Success" just completed for Murray W. Garsson Inc. Brandon Tynan and Mary Astor, two members of the all-star cast which also includes Naomi Childers, Dore Davidson, Stanley Ridges, Lionel Adams, Gay Pendleton and Billy Quirk.

Unusual scenes from "Between Worlds," an Artclass picture, a story of adventure in this world and beyond, enacted by an all-star cast.

Lichtman to Take New Broadway Quarters

The Al Lichtman Corporation which has been temporarily located at 576 Fifth Avenue will move to larger quarters on December 1. Lichtman has leased the entire ninth floor at 1650 Broadway, the new building recently completed by the Bethlehem Engineering Company opposite the Capitol theatre at Fifty-first street.

Sixteen-fifty Broadway which is in the heart of the film districts affords a beter location as well as more space for Litchman's increased activities and augmented personnel. The structure extends through from Broadway to Seventh Avenue. Richard Hildreth, office manager for Al Lichtman Corporation, has secured the services of Bernard Herybrun, prominent architect, to supervise the arrangement of the interior.

An unusually large projection room, spacious reception halls, ample space for each department and private offices for executives and department heads will be among the features of the ideally equipped motion picture quarters.

"Quincy Adams Sawyer" to Have Showing

Following his return to New York last week from the middle west, Herbert Lubin is off on another flying trip in the interests of "Quincy Adams Sawyer," the S-L special which will be released by Metro the early part of December. Lubin will visit some of the leading cities of New England to arrange for the special effort to be placed behind this picture in that territory.

Lubin, at present in Worcester, is arranging for a private screening of this film in that city. This pre-view is due in November.

Trade Showing and Luncheon On "Strongheart" Film

TRADE paper representatives were the guests of Laurence Trimble and Jane Murfin, producers of the "Strongheart" pictures, and of Associated First National Pictures, Inc., at a luncheon at the Hotel Astor, New York, on Friday, Nov. 10, about 50 being present.

The music presented at the luncheon included the rendering of "My Buddy," the ballad which is being featured in connection with "Skin Deep."

Following the luncheon, the gathering adjourned to the projection room of the Cinema-Quipment Company, where "Brawn of the North," the latest production starring "Strongheart," the police dog, was screened.

Mr. Trimble and Miss Murfin were unable to be present, but a message from them was conveyed by C. L. Yearsley of First National. Arrangements for the luncheon were in charge of J. L. Loughborough.

"Brawn of the North" was released on Nov. 13. The cast of players included Irene Rich and Lee Shumway as the leads, and Joseph Barrel, Roger James Manning, Philip Hubbard, Jean Metcalf and Baby Evangeline Bryant.

F. B. O. Names Pre-Holiday Releases

Schedule Includes Society Drama, Melodrama and Old Fashioned Love Story

THE pre-holiday release schedule of the Film Booking Offices of America will include a society drama, a romantic costume melodrama and an old-fashioned love story, all of which will be available to exhibitors between now and the first of the new year. The three forthcoming F. B. O. releases for the current year are "Thelma," a Chester Bennett production starring Jane Novak; "When Love Comes," in which Helen Jerome Eddy is presented by Ray Carroll; and "Captain Fly-by-Night," announced as the most ambitious effort of Johnnie Walker's screen career.

"Thelma," the current F. B. O. release, is a screen adaptation of Marie Corelli's novel of the same name, which has had a wide circulation for the past twenty years and as a stage play has been a consistent favorite among stock companies. It presents Miss Novak as the Norwegian peasant girl whose marriage casts her into the midst of London society. One of the features of the production is a lavish fashion display. Vernon Steele is opposite the star and the supporting cast includes Gordon Mullen, Barbara Tennant, Bert Sprotte, Harvey Clark, June Elvidge, Wedgewood Nowell and Harry Lounsdale. The screen adaptation was made by Thomas Dixon, Jr., and the photography is by Jack Mackenzie.

In "When Love Comes," Helen Jerome Eddy is seen for the first time as a star in her own name. Harrison Ford is opposite the star. William A. Seiter, who directed many past F. B. O. productions, was behind the megaphone. The supporting cast includes Fannie Midgeley, Claire Dubray, Joseph Bell, Gilbert Clayton, Buddy Messenger and Molly Gordon, J. Barrows and Fay McKenzie.

"Captain Fly-by-Night" has been in production for the past three months at the R-C Studios, and was only recently completed. It is a story by Johnston McCulley. Johnnie Walker is cast as a mysterious stranger who appears on the King's highway and is suspected of being the notorious bandit, "Captain Fly-by-Night." Shannon Day is Walker's leading lady.

Work Starts on "Little Red Schoolhouse"

Martin J. Heyl Productions, who are creating the screen version of "The Little Red Schoolhouse," for Arrow release, have thus far engaged the following players: Martha Mansfield, E. K. Lincoln, Edmund Breese, Sheldon Lewis and Rose Coghlan.

These players are at work now at the Tilford Cinema Studios under the direction of John Adolfi.

Pola Negri in "Sappho" an Early Release

GOLDWYN is releasing another motion picture made from one of the world's greatest novels. And this time with a world famous star in the leading role.

The star is Pola Negri.

The picture is "Sappho," made from Alphonse Daudet's most famous novel of the same name.

By arrangement with Export and Import Film Company, Goldwyn has acquired this production for release at an early date.

Pola Negri first sprang into prominence in this country when "Passion" was released. Since then she has appeared in "Gypsy Blood," and a picture version of "Sumurun" called "One Arabian Night."

Distinctive Expands Production

Arthur S. Friend Presides Over Organization Which Enters Wider Field

THE expansion of Distinctive Productions, Inc., into a broader field of production has come about with the official announcement of the change of the corporation's name to Distinctive Pictures Corporation, and the election of Arthur S. Friend to the presidency.

Henry M. Hobart becomes vice president of the enlarged institution, and Richard Whitney, Winthrop W. Aldrich, Arthur S. Friend, Henry M. Hobart and Charles S. Hervey have been elected directors.

Plans for a studio are under executive consideration, and meantime work has commenced on the first special production.

President Friend states: "No production will be too ambitious for Distinctive to attempt. And we will only make outstanding ones."

Arthur S. Friend, president of the corporation, was one of the organizers of the Jesse L. Lasky Feature Play Co. When the Lasky company was merged with the Famous Players Film Company and became the present Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Mr. Friend became treasurer, and with Adolph Zukor was in active charge of the corporation's affairs during its most important formative period.

With Henry M. Hobart, who left the production management of Cosmopolitan Pictures, Mr. Friend formed Distinctive Productions, Inc., in April, 1921. George Arliss was the first star selected by Distinctive Productions, and "Disraeli" the first vehicle, and three productions thus for have been made with Mr. Arless. Director Harmon Weight was the man behind the megaphone on the last two, "The Ruling Passion" and "The Man Who Played God," and assisted in the making of "Disraeli."

But the Distinctive idea called for more than one star series, and a new series of special productions, with notable casts, was Mr. Friend's next plan, which he will realize through the expansion of his company into Distinctive Pictures Corporation. "Backbone," from the story by Clarence Budington Kelland, will be the first of these Distinctive specials, and Director Edward Sloman has been engaged to make it. Charles E. Whittaker is now at work on the continuity.

Forrest Halsey continues with the expanded business as writer and editorial adviser to Mr. Hobart, and is now working on the continuity for the forthcoming George Arliss picture.

Charles S. Hervey has been elected treasurer of Distinctive Pictures Corporation, after loyal service with the original company, since its inception.

H. N. Marin is general manager. Bert Adler is representative of the president. Dorothy V. Cleveland has the publicly desk.

"The Kick Back" F. B. O. Erroneously Listed

That "The Kick Back" is an F. B. O. release is well established, and that it is distributed by the Film Booking Offices of America, is known. Nevertheless, through error, "The Kick Back" was listed in our issues of November 4 and 11, on the page under caption of "What the Big Houses Say," as a Universal picture. This notice will serve as a correction of our error.

Robertson Will Produce "The Bright Shawl"

Director John S. Robertson, who recently signed a contract with Inspiration Pictures, Inc., will produce as his initial production for that company, Joseph Hergesheimer's "The Bright Shawl," starring Richard Barthelmess. Mr. Robertson leaves with Dick Barthelmess and company for Cuba, in a few days, where exteriors will be shot.

Scenes from "Enter Madame," in which Clara Kimball Young appears as star in a Harry Garson production for Metro

Scenes from "Women Men Marry," Edward Dillon's Independent Production to be distributed by Truart.

Patterson Sales Chief of Laboratories

E. G. Patterson has been made sales manager for the Standard Film Laboratories. He is widely known in the film industry, having been assistant to H. O. Davis when the latter was director general at Universal City and at the former Triangle studios. Patterson is cooperating with John M. Nickolaus and S. M. Tompkins of the laboratory organization, in promotional work.

Garrett Graham, local newspaper and publicity man, has been appointed advertising manager for the Standard Laboratories and is making his headquarters in their new building in Hollywood.

Strong Cast Is Named for "Souls for Sale"

GOLDWYN is again giving author-director Rupert Hughes a magnificent cast for his new production, "Souls for Sale," the continuity for which he has prepared himself from his novel of that name dealing with life among the motion picture colonists in Hollywood.

Frank Mayo has been engaged for a feature role. His part will be that of Tom Holby. Richard Dix will impersonate the motion picture director, Folger, who gets the girl.

Claire Windsor has captured the much coveted role of Remember Steddon, the heroine of the story. Lew Cody will play the part of the villain in the Hughes story.

Director Hughes and his staff have just returned from Palm Springs where they picked the desert locations for the picture.

EXHIBITORS' REPORTS ON NEW RELEASES

What the Big Houses Say

EARLY RETURNS FROM WEEK RUN THEATRES

FAMOUS PLAYERS

The Ghost Breaker—

Good entertainment value picture goes big with Wallace Reid's admirers. Did good business. (Middle West.)

Very good picture; pleased the audiences and drew well. (Middle West.)

Clarence—

The papers acclaimed this picture as "everything a picture should be" and my patrons agreed the critics were right. Excellent attendance throughout the week. (Middle West.)

This is the type picture the public clamors for, but had only a fair week. Fine picture and deserved better attendance. (Middle West.)

Well liked and excellent business; out of the ordinary, but drags at times, though not enough to kill. (East.)

Nice People—

Well liked and found interesting. Story average. Good business. (East.)

The Man Who Saw Tomorrow—

Pleased the public and played to an enormous week. (Middle West.)

On the High Seas—

Popular stars and good acting and the sea scenes makes this good box-office picture. Our patrons liked it. (Middle West.)

When Knighthood Was in Flower—

Now showing on the second week and still drawing good crowds. (Middle West.)

A picture that has started old patrons to attending again. It advertised itself, so went strong on second week. (West.)

Cleaned up on this one. Patrons admitted Marion Davies was beyond expectations in leading part. (West.)

Pink Gods—

An unusual Bebe Daniels picture, but a fine one. Audiences comments were great. Played to good business all week. (East.)

The Face in the Fog—

The picture is all right, but the business it drew was all wrong. Don't know what was the matter, but the attraction failed to draw. (Middle West.)

The name "Barrymore" attracted some, but not enough. (West.)

The Old Homestead—

A real box-office attraction. This is the kind of picture that brings all kinds, ages and conditions of people and lots of 'em. Human interest with good acting and splendid cast. Honors go to Theodore Roberts. A very good week. (Middle West.)

Packed my houses constantly. (West.)

My patrons anticipated this picture, so my business was capacity. (East.)

Missing Millions—

Alice Brady not much of a drawing card here, but business was good caused by personal appearance of a well-known screen star. (East.)

The Impossible Mrs. Bellew—

Patrons seemed satisfied. The young girls like Swanson. (West.)

FIRST NATIONAL

The Bond Boy—

Not as convincing a picture as some of Richard Barthelmess' former offerings, but drew capacity business, while most of the credit was due to fact that new organ and organist were introduced to my people. (East.)

East Is West—

Constance Talmadge in fine production put over somewhat of an old story in good shape. (Middle West.)

Brawn of the North—

Since "Strongheart" was seen here in "The Silent Call," everyone has asked when I was going to play his pictures again. Business jumped up as expected. (West.)

Frozen North—

Up to Keaton's usual high standard. Went over better than the feature, "Rose O' the Sea." (Middle West.)

Rose O' the Sea—

The week's attendance with this one was good. (Middle West.)

Kindred of the Dust—

Did good business with this one by playing up cast. (West.)

METRO

The Prisoner of Zenda—

A tremendous success. Heard nothing but praise for it. (Middle West.)

Splendid picture of romantic type. Big business getter. (Middle West.)

Broadway Rose—

Mae Murray is popular here and the picture played to a good attendance for the week. (Middle West.)

The Five Dollar Baby—

Due to unique exploitation and popularity of star, played to good business. (West.)

Forget-Me-Not—

Fair picture and average box-office attraction. (Middle West.)

FOX

My Friend the Devil—

A truly wonderful picture. Drew great. (Middle West.)

Interesting. Sustained plot, well directed and well acted. Better than average business for the week. (Middle West.)

UNITED ARTISTS

Tess of the Storm Country

With Mary Pickford in the second version of a story that made her famous, business was assured. (West.)

UNIVERSAL

Human Hearts—

An entertaining production which held up satisfactorily for seven days.

The Lone Hand—

Satisfactory picture. Business good. (West.)

Wolf Law—

A story of the great out-doors that appeals to men. Only fair attendance all week. (Middle West.)

Under Two Flags—

A ripping success. Fine production. Fine acting. Beautiful settings, and wonderful business. (Middle West.)

GOLDWYN

Sherlock Holmes—

Great picture. Much favorable comment from patrons. (Middle West.)

Good picture. Well acted. Drew well throughout week. (Middle West.)

They said it was more interesting than the book. Well made and played to excellent houses. (East.)

AMERICAN RELEASING

The Sign of the Rose—

Smashed all house records. The biggest sensation of the season. (Middle West.)

STATE RIGHTS

The Man from Hell's River—

Usual northwestern melodrama. Fair attraction. (Middle West.)

AL LICHTMAN

Rich Men's Wives—

This one drew good, the title having much power of attraction. (Middle West.)

A great box-office attraction for houses catering to the middle classes. Packed houses all week. (East.)

F. B. O.

My Dad—

Stiff competition worked against this one, which recorded only fair business.

NEWSY BRIEFS FROM CENTRAL FILM BELT

Chicago and the Mid-West

L. H. MASON, REPRESENTATIVE, 725 S. WABASH AVE.

Around the Exchanges

HARRY DANTO has resigned as manager of Goldwyn Pictures' Chicago exchange, and returned to his old headquarters, New York City. District Manager Hickey will announce the appointment of a successor to Mr. Danto, some time this week.

Salesman C. O. Roberts has been transferred from the country territory, where he has been working, to Chicago, by Manager Steinson, of Vitagraph.

President Carl Laemmle, of Universal, stopped off in Chicago for three days, en route from the coast studios of his company, to his headquarters in New York. It is understood that Mr. Laemmle is pleased with the record being made by the Chicago exchange, whose sales have been growing consistently for the past year, many new and important theatres having been added to the list of Universal picture exhibitors during that period.

Manager Eichenlaub, of United Artists, is continuing to add to his staff of salesmen, the latest recruit being H. Rittenhouse, who has been connected with exchanges in St. Louis territory for some time past, and comes to Chicago highly recommended.

Frank Zambreno, of Progress Pictures, has closed a contract with Arrow, for the release of several of this company's pictures in his territory, including, "The Streets of New York," "Night Life in Hollywood," "Chain Lightning," and "The Innocent Cheater."

The impending departure of Clyde Eckhardt, who leaves for New York next week, to become assistant to General Sales Manager Sheehan, of Fox Film Corporation, has been the signal for a number of luncheons, dinners and other functions in honor of this popular member of the Chicago film colony, all of which attests the unusual esteem and regard he is held in by all branches of the industry in the Windy City, where he has been located for the past five years as exchange manager for Fox. Thursday night a farewell dinner was tendered him by exchange managers and on Monday there was a luncheon at the Blackstone with Schoenstadt Interests as hosts and Mr. Eckhardt was also guest of honor at several private functions. On Tuesday, Mr. Eckhardt was host at a get-acquainted luncheon at the Congress, at which he introduced members of the local daily and trade press to Mr. Meyers, who succeeds him as manager of the Chicago office.

A large party of Paramount officials, headed by Messrs. Zukor, Lasky and Kent, passed through Chicago Friday, en route to the coast, where Paramount's convention opens next week. A number of Paramount officials joined the party at Chicago and made the remainder of the trip in company with the home office executives. Included in the party from Chicago were C. C. Wallace and Otto Bolle, of the Chicago exchange; D. A. Durlan, branch manager of Milwaukee, Herb Given, Detroit manager; Milton M. Hirsch, Peoria; Charles Reagan, Indianapolis, and Joe Reisman, district manager, Minneapolis.

Oscar Morgan, of Cosmopolitan Productions, was in the city this week, arranging for the release of "When Knighthood Was In Flower," which is scheduled to close its long run at the Roosevelt Theatre November 19, after six weeks of continued success.

Among the Trade

AFTER a couple of days' stay in Chicago, following his return from New York, Watterson R. Rothacker left for Los Angeles to remain at the Rothacker-Aller plant until the return of Joe Allen, who sails from South Hampton, December 2.

George Gibson, superintendent of the Chicago laboratory, is spending two weeks at the Hollywood plant.

A $750,000 eight-story hotel and theatre building is to be erected at the northwest corner of Indiana Avenue and 36th Street from plans drawn by Architect B. K. Gibson. The building will be called the Stradford, the principal owner being J. B. Stradford. The structure is being built by negroes with their own money and for the sole use of colored people. The house will have a regulation stage and will seat twelve hundred. Combination vaudeville and films will be the initial policy, it is understood.

Sol J. Abrams, for the last two years manager of the Revelry Theatre, owned by United States Marshal Robert R. Levy, claims to be the youngest grandfather in Chicago, the stork having arrived at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Julia Brooks, this week with a baby girl.

Jack Mason, who is well known in theatrical circles as the producer of all Al Jolson and many of Shubert's Winter Garden shows, has been appointed production manager for Jones, Linick & Schaefer's McVicker's. He has taken charge of this department following the resignation of Managing Director S. Barrett McCormick.

E. T. Peters, of the Geographic Film Company, reports that the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, have arranged for the running of his company's series of fifty-two Bible pictures in theatres throughout the state. These one reelers have caused much favorable comment among church people and others throughout the country and are said to be of considerable entertainment value as well as teaching moral lessons.

The first of the divisional meetings planned by the Ways and Means Committee, of the Illinois Motion Picture Theatre Owners, was held last Wednesday at the Clifton Hotel, Ottawa, and was reported to have been a success in every way. The talks made by the various officers of the state association enlightened downstate exhibitors, present at the dinner, as to the scope and objects of the organization and imbued them with an enthusiasm to go out and get new members, as well as to co-operate more closely with the association. Among those present were: A. B. Workman, Marseilles; J. D. McKeen, Morris; R. C. Williams, Streator; William Bradley, Ottawa; August Bossen, Mendota; Glen Reynolds, and J. C. Condon, De Kalb; Ben Berve, Rochelle; Adam Dernbach, Wheaton; L. M. Rubens, Joliet, and Samuel Abrahams, L. Siegel, J. B. Dibelka, W. J. Sweeney, Julius Lamm, Louis Frank, Sidney Selig, of Chicago.

Frank Schaefer and "Hank" Peters are the genial hosts at the newly opened Adams Restaurant, over the Adams Theatre on Adams Street. The restaurant occupies the quarters formerly occupied by the Chin Chin Club and already is a regular rendezvous for motion picture men.

Attractive advertising used by Loew's State, Boston, when "The Prisoner of Zenda" was about to open.

Richard Kemp is again active in the motion picture industry, having purchased the Owl Theatre at 47th Street and State, from Morry Salkin. Mr. Kemp formerly operated the Century and Old Chicago Avenue Theatres.

Among the visitors at the Rothacker Chicago Laboratory this week was Sidney Chaplin, who spent an afternoon at the plant, en route to New York with a first print of the new Chaplin pictures; Billy Horsely and John Kunsky, First National franchise holder in Michigan.

Prince Sascha, a scion of the ancient House of Thurn and Taxis, and a captain in the Czecho-Slovakian army, stopped off in Chicago en route to Universal City, where he is to assist in making the scenes of "Merry Go Round," and at the same time study production for a month. Prince Sascha hopes to establish a miniature Universal City in Czecho-Slovakia, utilizing American motion picture methods and possibly an American producer and a few actors, in revolutionizing the industry in his own land.

Douglas D. Rothacker is again in the city after a successful eastern trip in the interests of the Rothacker practical picture division. A L. Parker also was in for the week-end from St. Louis, where he is working on a scenario for a feature length film, depicting the history of that city.

A two thousand five hundred seat theatre is planned as part of the one million dollar building project, which, when carried out, will cover the block bounded by Chicago, Monticello, Lawndale and Huron Streets. Architects Dubin and Eisenberg are drawing the sketches for the owners, Samuel Miller, of the Miller Supply and H. Kaplan, of Kaplan & Company, contractors and builders.

The new Eastside Theatre was opened on November 4 by Claude Sigler. It is handsomely decorated and equipped and has eight hundred seats. A fine Hope Jones organ is furnishing the music for this house.

Blue Sundays are scheduled to start in Princeton, Illinois, at an early date, the City Council having voted to close all forms of amusement on the Sabbath, and the only hope of changing this will be a referendum vote. All forms of public entertainment are covered by the Sunday closing ordinance, which carries a fine of from ten to two hundred dollars for violation.

Remarkable "flash" gotten in the lobby of the Strand theatre, Milwaukee, Wis., for the showing of "Under Two Flags." In addition to the cut-outs and painting, British and French flags, wisely supplemented by plenty of American flags, have been used to advantage.

"My Old Kentucky Home" Given Interesting Lobby

Beaumont, Texas.—Manager Tom Clemmons of the Tivoli theatre put his main efforts into his lobby display on "My Old Kentucky Home," utilizing the horse racing angle.

The front of the theatre was inclosed in beaver board, places being cut out for entrance and exit to the theatre, also an opening for the cashier. This front was painted to represent an old fence, duplicating as nearly as possible the entrance to a race track. Across the top of this front was painted the title of the picture, also crude signs painted on this fence to make it look realistic.

The ushers and cashier were dressed in full jockey costumes consisting of leather boots, white trousers and red and white striped shirts with caps to match.

Boxing Angle is Utilized in "World's Champion" Lobby

ABILENE, Texas. — Manager Hugo Plath prepared a special lobby display on "The World's Champion," in which the entire front of the Queen theatre was inclosed with beaverboard, designed to represent the entrance to an athletic club.

Across the top of this front in large red letters appeared the name of the star and the title of the picture. Between the entrance and exit doors of this lobby front stood a miniature display of a boxing ring and the fighters this time were small dolls, which were seen shaking hands with each other and dressed in fighting togs. Just behind this display was a head cut-out of Wallie Reid and Lois Wilson.

Signs on either side of the entrance read as follows: "Ring side seats now on sale."

Novel Throwaway Used to Put "Divorce Coupons" Over

CLEVELAND, Ohio.—The Knickerbocker theatre used a unique card on "Divorce Coupons," on pink cardboard about two by four inches, the copy reading:

DIVORCE COUPON. Attach this to your marriage certificate in the hope that you will never need to use it. As a precaution take your life mate or fiance to The Knickerbocker theatre, Euclid at 83d, Oct. 15, 16, 17, 18, to see Corinne Griffith in "Divorce Coupons." This is the guide to true happiness.

Perfumed Letters Sent Out On "Blood and Sand"

AUSTIN, Tex.—Manager Ray Whitfield of the Majestic theatre sent out 1,000 perfumed letters containing interesting information about picture and star on "Blood and Sand," one week in advance of showing.

A special theatre party was given by the local manager to the Valentine club, composed of "flappers"—all from the best families in town. This club attended in a body and write-ups were given the occasion in both newspapers in the society column. This club endorsed the picture and helped advertise it considerably.

"Remembrance" Petitions Taken Around by Children

Louisville, Ky.—The management of the Alamo theatre recently had most of the children in town boosting "Remembrance" through an inexpensive exploitation stunt.

Petitions were printed, bearing space for 10 signatures, with the following copy:

"Take this paper to ten different adults in your neighborhood—have them read the following and then sign their name, address and telephone number—then bring to the Alamo theatre at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Oct. 7, 1922, and you will be admitted free to a big special show for children."

Below this, above the space for signatures, was the following:

"I have been personally notified that Rupert Hughes' latest masterpiece, 'Remembrance,' will be shown at the Alamo theatre for seven days commencing Sunday, Oct. 8, and I will endeavor to see it."

Special Mother's Matinee Used as "Human Hearts" Stunt

Salt Lake City, Utah.—Marc Lachmann, Universal exploiteer, put over a high pressure campaign on "Human Hearts" for the showing at the Kinema theatre, which included a special mothers' matinee at which every man, woman or child who brought mother to the theatre lobby was admitted free. Five hundred mothers availed themselves of this opportunity, and as a result each and every one proved a great mouth-to-mouth exploiteer.

Front of the Palace theatre, Muskogee, Okla., on "Grandma's Boy," arranged by Manager Ollie Brownlee. The odd-shaped strip about the marquee is worthy of notice

Replica of the Paris Opera House used as window tie-up on "Slim Shoulders" and the Fashion Promenade by the Rialto theatre, San Antonio, Texas, in a leading department store

Electric Light Company Builds "Old Homestead" Lobby

Cleveland, Ohio.—Loew's Stillman theatre and Loew's State both tied up with the Electrical League of Cleveland to good advantage on "The Old Homestead" through the efforts of S. G. Sladdin, Paramount exploiteer.

The company built a lobby display in the state which consisted of model rural houses side by side with a modern dwelling, showing the brightness of electricity compared with oil. It showed a modern electric heater side by side with an old wood stove. This display attracted a lot of attention and kept an interested group of onlookers in the lobby all of the time.

The Electrical League was working with the Representative Realty Company in building electrical homes, completely equipped with electric lights, stoves, etc. When fifty of these houses were built, the Electrical League took a half-page newspaper ad comparing the equipment with Uncle Josh's conveniences in "The Old Homestead," which could be seen at the Stillman theatre.

Particularly artistic use of cut-out from poster on "Her Night of Nights" by Publicity Director Richard A. Addison of the Pickwick theatre, San Diego, Cal., who is here seen beside his handiwork. Beaver board was used throughout, with purple velvet on the steps. Colored spots were trained on it

Dummy Ghosts Put in Lobby as "Ghost Breaker" Display

SAVANNAH, Ga.—Manager J. G. Evins of the Odeon theatre arranged an appropriate lobby display on "The Ghost Breaker," when he supplemented his 24-sheet cut-outs with a pair of fantastic ghosts constructed of dummy clothes forms and white sheets. A large banner was also placed on the marquee, which could be read from both directions.

As the Kiwanis state convention was then on, the lobby was dressed in the Kiwanis colors.

War Atmosphere Utilized When "Skin Deep" Is Exploited

Newark, N. J.—D. J. Shepard, managing director; A. Gordon Reid, production manager, and M. J. Cullen, publicity, worked out a thorough campaign on "Skin Deep," which featured prominently "My Buddy," the song which ties up with the pictures.

At the armory, where a mammoth exposition was on, the Branford theatre took a booth and decorated it with "Skin Deep" posters, and photographs, as well as song copies of "My Buddy." The publisher of the song sent six singers out who were plugging away day and night, with the result that the Branford booth always had an enormous crowd.

Every music store that sold sheet music or records displayed a one-sheet painted card in a conspicuous place in their show window. Tie-ups were also made with dealers of Victor, Brunswick and Aeolian phonographs on the "My Buddy" records.

The United States marine recruiting station was told of the possibility of working up interest at the theatre, and jumped into the military atmosphere. The captain in charge sent eight men to the theatre, and jumped into up a camping outfit, including their colors, flags, tent and guns. This tie-up sent a good deal of army atmosphere to the theatre and caused no end of comment.

Mayor Issues Proclamation on "Remembrance" Week

Long Beach, Cal.—Manager Frank L. Browne of the Liberty theatre put over a strong exploitation stunt when he persuaded the mayor of Long Beach to issue an official proclamation on Remembrance Week, tied up with "Remembrance," as follows:

"To the People of Long Beach—I most heartily approve the sentiment that inspires the 'Remembrance week' celebration being backed by the business men of Long Beach.

"Take time this week to remember those old friends, those loved ones, that you have been neglecting. Send them a message, a remembrance—something to show that the spark of friendship still survives.

"Friendship is the foundation of society, and remembrance is the foundation of friendship."

The letter was published as a news item in the daily press and was prominently displayed in a double-truck newspaper advertising tie-up.

A "big family contest" stunt followed. Ten dollars in gold was offered to the head of the largest family in the city. F. J. Morton, the father of ten children, won the prize.

Showing use of 24-sheet over front of theatre at the Majestic, Jackson, Mich., on "Remembrance"

H. V. Victor, manager of the National theatre, Breckenridge, Texas, built up this bull ring front on "Blood and Sand"

Chain Letter Sent Out on "If You Believe It, It's So"

Macon, Ga.—Manager E. C. Kingman, of the Rialto, opened his campaign on "If You Believe It, It's So" by mailing a chain letter to 500 prospects, mostly members of local clubs, such as the Lions, Civilians, Kiwanis, Chamber of Commerce and Women's club. It read:

"IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO." Perley Poore Sheehan to George Loane Tucker; George Loane Tucker to Adolph Zukor; Adolph Zukor to Jesse L. Lasky; Jesse L. Lasky to Waldemar Young; Waldemar Young to Thomas Meighan; Thomas M. Meighan to Gloria Swanson; Gloria Swanson to Theodore Roberts; Theodore Roberts to E. C. Kingman; E. C. Kingman to YOU—A Rialto Patron. GREETINGS!

Copy this and send it to nine friends whom you wish good luck. Do not break the chain, for if you do bad luck will come to you. And you MUST do it today, or the little Goddess of "Good Luck" will not smile on you.

Then count nine days, and you will have some great good fortune within that time.

Remember, "IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO."

Two thousand heralds were distributed. The herald was a little folded sheet, on the inside of which was the message:

Macon is the best place in Georgia to live; Georgia is the best state in the Union; America is the greatest nation in the world; and the world isn't so bad after all.

"IF YOU BELIEVE IT, IT'S SO."

Gets "Penrod" on High School Reading List

TONAWANDA, N. Y.—When "Penrod" showed at the Flash theatre, an unusual tie-up was obtained through the fact that the principal of the High school saw it and decided that it was such a faithful reproduction of the book that it had real educational value.

The class in English was reading "Penrod" as part of its curriculum but the principal announced that any one who saw the picture would be excused from reading the book.

For any pedagogues who believe in the value of visual education there is a great argument here that the exhibitor can take advantage of.

Manager Uses Varied Campaign on "Smilin' Through"

Anniston, Ala.—An all around campaign, designed to reach everybody, was used by Manager Roy L. Smart of the Noble theatre on "Smilin' Through." In advance of play date he used a lobby display, with a cut-out of Norma Talmadge against a white background, with drapes of deep red plush.

A window tie-up was obtained, and was done in gold and black. One of the cards stated that "Norma Talmadge plays the girl of 1850 and of 1922 in her greatest picture 'Smilin' Through,' at the Noble Wednesday and Thursday," while the other brought out the point of the window, "Modern adaptations of the styles of yesteryear," the dresses shown having the new hoops at the waist.

A front page story—an exploitation bit most rare in Anniston—was an interview with Manager Smart, telling how much better business is in Anniston and all over the country, how everybody had wanted to smile, and preached smiling, and that now is the time to go smiling through to prosperity.

The painting of the streets followed, and Manager Smart used letters six feet high. The first word was followed at twenty feet by the second, and so on, in order that the drivers could get the entire sentence while riding along at the usual rate of speed. One of these was used every six or eight blocks over nearly all of Anniston's paving.

Chicago Covered by Thorough "Remembrance" Campaign

Chicago, Ill.—Every possible exploitation angle was seized upon for the campaign on "Remembrance" for its showing at the Balaban and Katz Chicago theatre.

The national tie-up with the Victor Talking Machine Company was worked for all it was worth in Chicago—and it turned out to be worth a great deal, for window displays, employing the giant Victor record, were made in five of the biggest music stores in the Loop. In connection with the Wurlitzer display, Balaban and Katz arranged with the manager of the store to have a "Remembrance" showing at the Wurlitzer exhibit at the Food Show at the Coliseum. An attractive frame of stills was carried. A "Remembrance" display was obtained in every booth at the Food Show, a tremendous exploitational getaway.

Five men and boys were used for several days distributing the telephone tags, automobile throwaways and the "Pop" Grout business cards. Altogether more than 100,000 were used.

The national tie-up with the United Cigar Stores resulted in displays in the windows of the hundred or more United stores in Chicago.

The newspaper advertising started off with a teaser campaign in which the telephone hanger, "Tie a string around your finger," was reproduced, getting bigger each day until the largest one occupied 400 lines of newspaper space.

Locomotive street ballyhoo, mounted on auto truck, used by the Alhambra theatre, Los Angeles, to exploit "The Fast Mail"

Uncle Josh Says" Used as New Catch-Line in Ads

Rock Island, Ill. — Carl Muller, of the pencer Square theatre, introduced a new note his advertising on "The Old Homestead" rough a rural philosopher appearing in ch ad.

Dan Roche, Paramount exploiteer from Chi- go, drew up the ads. At the top of a display e-column on eleven inches was a thumb-nail he-cut of Theodore Roberts taken from the ess sheet mat.

Underneath was an informal talk in "hick" alect telling the folks that "Uncle Josh says is goin' to get some new rockin' chairs for s friends who have to stand in the lobby until ey can get in, etc."

They made a big hit and Uncle Josh became tablished as a local character.

reet ballyhoo on "Oliver Twist" used in w York for its showing at the New York ark Strand theatre, of which Joseph Plunkett is the managing director

"Travelin' On" Stunt Builds Local Good Will

AUSTIN, Texas. — Manager Ray Whitfield of the Majestic theatre arranged a "bundle matinee" on "Travelin' On." An article appeared in the local papers to the effect that 200 children would not be able to attend school this fall because of lack of clothing. Immediately Mr. Whitfield realized his opportunity so he tied up with the Austin American, a daily paper, to give a "bundle matinee." The day set for this free performance was Saturday morning from 11 until 1; the admission was a bundle of clothing.

As a result of this tie-up, enough bundles were brought to the theatre to make a considerable pile in front of the box office. The newspapers gave the stunt lots of free publicity and it also created goodwill for the theatre from the local citizens.

Novel Catch-Lines Used in Ads for "The Old Homestead"

Jackson, Tenn.—Manager A. R. Lynch, of the Lyric theatre, put over a page of co-operative advertising on "The Old Homestead," with a particularly apt group of catch lines. Some of them were:

A butcher shop: "Would they kill the fatted calf if you were to go back to The Old Homestead tonight?"

The Gas Light Company: "Heat The Old Homestead with gas, the universal fuel."

A shoe repair shop: "WANTED—To know the whereabouts of Reuben Whitcomb from The Old Homestead north of town. Last seen at James' Shoe Hospital having his shoes repaired."

A tent and awning company: "The Old Homestead has already been decorated with one of Hauser's awnings. Now let us decorate your car."

A dry cleaning establishment: "When you go back to The Old Homestead you want your clothes looking neat and trim."

Each of the advertisers on the page was given ten passes to present to their first ten customers on opening day.

Stamped Handkerchiefs Given Away on "Grandma's Boy"

St. Louis, Mo.—Skouras Brothers used an unusual novelty to promote the day and date showing of "Grandma's Boy" at their Lyric, Capitol and New Grand Central houses, a linen handkerchief with the edge stitched in blue and one corner embroidered in colored designs. In the center of the handkerchief is stamped this message: "Bring this with you when you come to see Harold Lloyd in Grandma's Boy' because you will laugh till you cry.

Black and Yellow Lobby Built Up on "One Clear Call"

Seattle, Wash.—Manager C. H. Wooley of the Princess theatre designed and built a striking lobby display and marquee decoration recently on "One Clear Call."

Above the cove of indirect lights which ran around the lobby eight feet above the floor, Mr. Wooley painted a mural fringe of masked riders in silhouette, with the title of the picture in neat, legible letters. The painting was done in a color scheme of black and yellow canary.

Around the lobby the picture frames were of spattered gold and yellow and the side panels of black cloth and yellow.

H. Somerville, who is now manager of the Paris theatre, Durham, N. C., has built these two lobbies recently. The one at the left is on "The Loves of Pharaoh," and consists of compo board columns and pyramid. The hay-loft effect at the right was used on "The Old Homestead"

"Manslaughter" Herald Used as Insert in House Organ

Anniston, Ala.—Manager Roy L. Smart added a great deal of distinction to "The Noblette," the house organ issued monthly by the Noble theatre, recently when he used the stock four-color herald on "Manslaughter" as an insert on the picture, binding it in the center of the book.

As the herald was almost exactly the size of the house organ, it gave a touch of "class" to the publication that was very pleasing.

Exhibitor Makes Dance After Show Regular Feature

Jamaica, L. I.—The Rialto theatre is now giving a dance in its foyer after the last show Monday night, as a result of Manager Fred V. Greene, Jr.'s, experience with a Hallowe'en dance.

On Hallowe'en night, after the last showing of "Burning Sands," he moved his orchestra into the foyer and let his patrons dance until 2 a. m.

The next day he received twenty-five letters requesting that the dance be made a permanent feature, so from now on Monday night will be dance night at the Rialto.

Window tie-up, with effective use of large and small cut-outs, effected by Louis McDermott of the Granada theatre, San Francisco, for "Under Two Flags"

"Name of the Law" Hooked Up With Safety Campaign

GRAND RAPIDS, Ohio—Wide distribution on "The Midnight Star" herald on "In the Name of the Law" was gotten by Harold Wendt, F. B. O. exploiteer, when he arranged to have it inserted in 3,000 copies of the Grand Rapids Saturday Night, when the picture ran at the Isis theatre.

In this way the newspaper was assured of circulation and a reading by the greatest number. The stunt was part of the "Safety First Campaign" arranged with the Grand Rapids Safety First Council. A special trailer on this campaign, which advertised the picture as well, was carried for a week in the Isis, and all streets and sidewalks in the business district were painted with safety first slogans, tieing up with "In the Name of the Law."

"Brothers Under the Skin" Is Given Unique Publicity

New York, N. Y.—Through an unusual publicity stunt, "Brothers Under the Skin" received a remarkable amount of free space in the New York newspapers just prior to the opening of the picture at the Capitol theatre.

Here is what happened:

On Thursday morning every newspaper in New York carried at least a column story telling of the formation of the "Association of Brothers Under the Skin"—a League for married men who refused longer to be henpecked. Papers of incorporation had been filed in a local court. The newspapers listed the rules and regulations of the new order.

The chiefs of the Society were announced as Edward Bonns, William R. Ferguson (another Goldwynite) and Hugh J. Connelly. Supreme Court Justice Robert McC. Marsh was asked to approve the organization's certificate of incorporation. There was one of those "leaks" by which carefully guarded court stories get into the hands of an inquisitive reporter and—well, the evening newspapers picked up the story, and all of the sob sisters interviewed Bonns. The Daily News ran a picture of Bonns and Ferguson mopping and dusting, as good husbands should do. The Mail, the Telegram, the Telegraph and other papers carried a second day story on the stunt.

On Sunday the Goldwynites advertised their picture, "Brothers Under the Skin," at the Capitol and tied up all the big clippings which had been received.

Motor Cycle Cops Carry Cards on "Manslaughter"

Orlando, Fla.—Manager M. F. Estes of the Beachman theatre got invaluable advertising space on "Manslaughter" when he sold the police department on the idea of co-operating with him. He succeeded in getting all of the motorcycle cops to carry signs on the rear of their machines reading, "What Is 'MANSLAUGHTER'?"

Book store tie-ups were made with three dealers, all of which carried good window displays. The lobby display consisted of an automobile and motorcycle, with wax dummies of the girl and the motorcycle cop, posed in the "manslaughter" scene.

Extensive Campaign Put Over on "In the Name of the Law"

Evansville, Ind.—Manager Sweeton of the Majestic theatre put on an extensive advertising campaign for "In the Name of the Law."

Besides newspaper ads, Manager Sweeton distributed a circular to every home in the city. It was in the form of a lock with the warning, "Lock up your doors," and carried the name of the picture, the theatre and the dates.

Compoboard semaphores were placed on all corners where there are traffic officers and created much attention. The semaphores bore the words, "Stop and See 'In the Name of the Law!'"

Showing use of cut-outs against back-ground above entrance of Grand theatre, Middletown, Conn., on "Crossroads of New York"

The Main theatre, Uniontown, Pa., made plentiful use of hearts of all sizes and descriptions when "Human Hearts" was showing, as seen here

Newspaper Woman Poses in "Eternal Flame" Gown

Milwaukee, Wis.—An exploitation stunt on "The Eternal Flame" was put over for its showing at Manager Weisfeldt's Strand theatre in connection with Downie Downer, Milwaukee's enterprising newspaper woman, in which a gown worn by Norma Talmadge in the picture figured prominently.

It exploited the gown from three different angles. One was the fact that it was insured for $3,000. The second was the window tie-up in the Boston Store. The third was the posing by Downie Downer in this gown for news and film reel photographers. All three angles resulted in big newspaper space, particularly in the Wisconsin News, by which Miss Downer is employed to tackle a different job every day and write her experiences. Getting into Norma Talmadge's gown wasn't a hard job for her but it was tough getting out again and giving up this piece of finery.

Miniature lobby display prepared by A. H. Cobb, Jr., manager of the Alamo theatre, Griffin, Ga., on "The Loves of Pharaoh"

Diamonds Worth $500,000 Are "Pink Gods" Display

TORONTO, Ont.—Clarence Robson, manager of the Regent theatre, and George Smith, Paramount exploiteer, arranged a $500,000 display of diamonds as a tie-up with the showing of "Pink Gods" at that theatre.

A tieup was made with Ryrie Brothers, jewelers, known as the "Tiffany's of Canada," in which their principal window was secured.

In the foreground of the display were photographs of the famous stones of history—The Great Mogul, The Cullinan, The Hope, The Kohinoor, and The Star of the South.

The window also contained shots of scenes in the African mines, with a card saying that "similar scenes are in the Paramount Picture 'Pink Gods' playing at the Regent theatre."

There were also two stills of Bebe Daniels and James Kirkwood.

The window was completed with a collection of diamonds valued at $500,000, samples of blue clay in which the diamonds are found, and a complete set of tools used in cutting and polishing.

Happiest Recollection Contest Tied Up with "Remembrance"

Brockton, Mass.—The management of the Colonial theatre tied up with the Brockton Times on a Happiest Recollection contest, which resulted in liberal newspaper space on the showing of "Remembrance," with which the contest was hooked up.

Prizes were offered of $20 first prize, $10 second prize, $5 third prize, five prizes of $1 each and fifty pairs of tickets to "Remembrance." The Happiest Recollection essays, which were to be sent to the newspaper, were limited to 300 words. The paper ran many of them, and gave the articles three-column heads.

Effective Street Ballyhoo Is Used on "The Storm"

Philadelphia, Pa.—The manager of the Karlton theatre, in conjunction with Jack Staub, Universal exploiteer, tied up on "The Storm" with a cross country automobile tourist, and turned out an effective street ballyhoo.

The tourist had constructed a little house on a motor chassis, complete with gable, doors, windows, clapboards, and interior furnishings for a trans-continental trip, including bed, table, stove and radio set.

During the week preceding his departure for the west coast and just prior to the showing of the picture, he was induced to put large signs on the sides, back and roof of his auto-house announcing the coming of "The Storm."

The auto-house was parked around principal Philadelphia streets days and nights. A wind machine concealed inside gave a "storm" effect, which added greatly to the attention drawing power of the ballyhoo.

A large log was painted on one side with a "Kindred of the Dust" sign, and was hung in the lobby of the Rex theatre, Eugene, Ore., as shown above

Attractive lobby display on "Slim Shoulders" and the Irene Castle Fashion Promenade arranged by the management of the Nemo theatre, Johnstown, Pa.

Animated Display in Lobby Is "Fast Mail" Booster

Griffin, Ga.—Manager A. H. Cobb, Jr., of the Alamo theatre, was prevented by circumstances from carrying out his ideas for a street ballyhoo on "The Fast Mail," so he concentrated his efforts on a miniature animated display in his lobby.

On a table built of planks ten feet long and three feet wide, a miniature rural display was constructed, with an electric train operating the entire length.

The display consisted of grass, trees, houses, a pond nestling at the foot of the hills, with ducks swimming on the surface, a stream running to the pond, a pasture fenced in with old-fashioned rail fence, cows, goats, sheep, chickens and everything to make up a complete display. Through the rocky hillsides a tunnel was constructed, under which the train passed.

Hairpin Attached to Herald On "The Dictator"

ABILENE, Texas. — One week in advance of the showing of "The Dictator," Manager Hugo Plath, of of the Queen theatre, selected the names of 500 women from his mailing list, whom he considered would be interested in Wallace Reid. A neat herald, printed locally, had a hairpin attached to it, and carried this copy:

"Save this hairpin—you will need it to keep your hair in order when you see Wallie Reid in 'The Dictator' at your Queen theatre."

Tuxedo Suits for Ushers Used on "Tailor Made Man"

WENATCHEE, Wash.—The management of the Liberty theatre materially aided the run of "A Tailor-Made Man" through the stunt of having the young women ushers and other theatre attaches attired in neat Tuxedos during the run of the picture.

This theatre is one of the Jensen and von Herberg chain and is managed by W. L. Doudlah, who put on this exploitation stunt.

Ideal Man Contest Stimulate Interest in "Bond Boy"

OMAHA, Neb.—A new contest angle on "The Bond Boy" was employed by the Strand theatre recently in exploiting that picture. It started a campaign to find Omaha's best proportioned man.

The campaign was sponsored by the Omaha sporting section, although stories were given on the front page with a jump to the sporting section, and was endorsed by N. J. Weston, director of physical culture at the U. C. C. A. and Dennis Ryan, physical director at the Omaha Athletic club. These experienced athletes acted as judges and took measurements of candidates who modestly admitted that they were in line for physical perfection.

The only cost involved in the stunt was that of printing handbills. The newspaper advertised it through the news columns and the U. M. C. A. and Athletic club were only too glad to give the use of their gymnasiums for taking measurements because of the publicity involved.

Firemen Aid Campaign at Utic on "Name of the Law"

Utica, N. Y.—When "In the Name of t Law," played at the Alhambra theatre, Jes Weil, F. B. O. exploiteer, induced the loc fire department as well as the police depar ment to co-operate in exploiting the pictu

As a result a demonstration of fire rescu work and wall-scaling was announced in th daily papers, to be held on a prominent stre during the noon hour. A hook and ladd company, with full apparatus, took part the demonstration. The apparatus carried banner, "'In the Name of the Law' Mal Every Day Fire Prevention Day." Advan publicity on the forthcoming F. B. O. fi picture, "The Third Alarm," was also o tained by completing the banner with the le tering, "Watch for the Big Fire Picture, 'Th Third Alarm.'"

The newspaper publicity brought a crow of thousands to witness the demonstratio The ladders were raised up the side of th building and the firemen gave an exhibition wall scaling. The climax was a seventy fo jump made from a window by a fireman. H was caught in a rescue net held by the mem bers of the company.

Manager Charles H. Amos of the Strand theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., devised this attractive lobby display on "The Delicious Little Devil"

The front of Manager D. S. Chandler's Criterion Theatre, Enid, Okla., was decorated in this manner for "Grandma's Boy." A section of the sidewalk was fenced off to resemble a farmyard, with a n old well, and cut-outs of Lloyd. It was prepared by Kenton Franklin, exploitation man for the house

"Manslaughter" Campaign at Psychological Moment

Madison, Wis.—Manager Louis St. Pierre's campaign on "Manslaughter" came right upon the heels of two convictions of motorists for running down pedestrians, and he was able to get unusually strong eo-operation from the police on his reckless driving campaign on the pieture.

Three days before the announcement of "Manslaughter," placards were posted at all important crossings in the city, 200 in all, bearing the following warning:

"It May Mean 'MANSLAUGHTER' if a Person Is Run Down Through Reekless Driving. Drive Right! Walk Right! Thos. Shaughnessy, Chief of Police."

The 200 Madison policemeu were guests, in uniform, at the Sunday matinee of the show. Three days after the signs appeared, the advertisements of the show appeared in the papers, along with news stories of the signs and the invitation of the police to the matinee.

It will amaze us if it does not amaze you
Sea sensations to gasp at!

Attractive shadow box cut-out on "Hurricane's Gal" prepared by Manager Paul E. Noble, Liberty theatre, Portland

"Silent Call" Hooked Up With Clean Up Campaign

OMAHA, Neb. — Manager Harry Goldberg of the Sun theatre made good use of the waste paper containers placed on every street corner during a "clean up" campaign recently, when attention was centered on these containers. He sniped space by tacking or tying his advertising cards on the cans. The picture was "The Silent Call."

In reciprocity for this co-operation from the Clean Up committee, Manager Goldberg helped their campaign through the facilities offered by the theatre.

The run of "The Silent Call" came while Ben Turpin and Kathryn McGuire were making a personal appearance in vaudeville at another house, and the fact that Miss McGuire was the leading woman in the picture was emphasized in the newspaper advertising.

"Speed" 24-Sheet Made to Work for 13 Theatres

San Francisco, Cal.—W. W. Kofeldt, loeal Pathe manager, got effective use from the 24-sheet stands about the city on "Speed" reeently. They were put up for the first runs, and two weeks later, a snipe was pasted over one end reading:

"Acme, Alta, Broadway, Clement, Empress, Excelsior, Lincoln, Palace, Palmer, Regent Sunset, Victoria, York. At your neighborhood theatre soon!"

In this way thirteen neighborhood houses got the full value from the billboard campaign.

Scene Staged in Window Serves as "Masquerader" Teaser

Hartford, Conn.—Manager Harry Needles of the Princess theatre conceived the idea of staging a little "heart interest" story in a department store window as a tie-up on "The Masquerader."

A silk hat, supposed to be the one worn by Guy Bates Post, and a pair of gloves furnished the material for complieations. The two wax women in the window apparently didn't mind the intrusion of male attire; but the card in the window was curiosity fodder for those who lined up in front of it.

It read: "These were left by 'The Masquerader.' You'll understand why when you see the picture at the Princess."

"Way Down East" Exploited by Sixteen-Year-Old Boy

D'lo, Miss.—James F. Thames, Jr., a sixteen-year-old schoolboy, exploited "Way Down East" in thorough-going fashion recently when the advertising material was late in arriving for the showing of the picture at the Y. M. C. A. theatre.

He plaeed ads in the leading county paper, and then put over window displays and street corner cards reading, "Let's all go—'Way Down East,' Y. M. C. A., August 14-15." At a baseball game two weeks before the showing every player of the D'lo club appeared on the diamond with a "Way Down East" announcement on the back of his shirt.

"The advertising matter was so late in arriving," writes James, "that with show eard colors I managed to turn out a few window cards with portraits of Mr. Griffith, Richard Barthelmess and Lillian Gish. Then I put big empty boxes at different places around town with the signs on the outside reading 'Please do not look in.' When the curious individual had looked in he saw this sign. But since you HAVE looked, see "Way Down East," etc. Personal post eards and signs over barber chairs helped along also; heralds were mailed to all nearby towns.

"I arranged for a window display with a dealer in school supplies. He had a lot of slates he wanted to sell. We arranged these, and on them were written the title, theatre and show date, with catch lines. In the eenter of the slate display was a big eard reading, SLATES carry a written message. "Way Down East" carries a living message of good cheer to all those who see this wonderful entertainment."

Bookstore tie-up on "Sherlock Holmes" obtained by the Hippodrome theatre, Reading, Pa.

Lobby for "The Queen of the Moulin Rouge" at the Strand theatre, Montreal, designed by E. H. Marcoux. The blades of the wind-mill carried red, white and blue lights, and rotated slowly

Elaborate Window Display is Given "Knighthood"

Los Angeles, Cal.—One of the principal features of Sid Grauman's campaign on "When Knighthood Was in Flower," at his Rialto theatre, is a fascinating display in a huge window adjoining the theatre, where a court scene of Henry VIII has been reproduced.

Through a latticed window, circled with English ivy, the king and queen are seen seated on their massive golden throne chairs. Ancient candelabra blaze with waxen candles and other specially devised lighting effects give a note of reality.

Eight elaborately gowned ladies-in-waiting are in attendance on the queen, together with pages in colorful costumes. Against a rich background of tapestry and velvet, the court costumes sparkle and glitter.

To increase the interest, Sid Grauman is offering a reward of $3,000 to anyone who can prove there is no living person in the window and crowds stand for hours watching these wax figures waiting to see a finger move, an eye-lid quiver, or a slight tremor shake the body.

Manager Charles H. Amos of the Strand theatre, Spartanburg, S. C., arranged this lobby with two cut-outs on "Just Tony"

Dress Up Week is Put Over on "Slim Shoulders"

SAN ANTONIO, Texas.—Managing Director Santikas of the Rialto theatre, and Milton Crandall, put over a Castle Dress-Up Week in connection with "Slim Shoulders" and the Fashion Promenade that made local exploitation history.

Practically every department store, women's specialty shops, and other merchants catering to women, supported Mr. Crandall in his co-operative store tie-up and his idea for a "Castle Dress-up Week."

The Sunday preceding the showing of the production, the two newspapers of the town came out strong with 10 pages of advertising from the various merchants, all tying up "Slim Shoulders" and the Fashion Promenade with the goods they had to offer for sale in their stores.

The window displays provided one of the most artistic bits. A large back drop, deep set and beautifully colored to represent the Paris Opera House was used in the Wolf Marks store with life-size manikins standing about demonstrating the style shown in the Castle Promenade.

"Lorna Doone" Campaign Wins Numerous Tie-Ups

Pittsburgh, Pa.—The management of the Grand and Regent theatres staged a campaign on "Lorna Doone" in which they obtained a considerable number of window tie-ups.

The star window display was a stationery and book store which featured the photoplay edition of the novel with photographs of Madge Bellamy and a message from the leading woman proclaiming it as "My Own Edition," the publishers having dedicated it to her.

The music of "Lorna Doone" and phonograph records of the song proved effective mediums for other window tie ups.

Patrons Admitted by Auto Load As Ford Day Stunt

La Crosse, Wis.—The Majestic theatre, operated by the La Crosse theatres company, participated in La Crosse's Ford day in several ways. A special matinee of "A Tale of Two Worlds" was put on at 75 cents per auto load. The driver was taxed the admission fee, and the remainder of his party, however many, were admitted free.

The Majestic and the Rivoli, operated by the same company, took part in the parade of the day with a clever float. A huge drum was constructed on wheels and into the interior were packed chorus and principals from Martin's "Footlight Follies," appearing at the Majestic in connection with the showing of "A Tale of Two Worlds," together with Raymond Baird, twelve-year-old conductor of the Thomas Sacco band, and members of the organization which was winding up a two weeks' engagement at the Rivoli.

ITEMS CONCERNING NEW PRODUCTIONS

"Why Worry" First of West Series Finished

BILLY WEST has completed his comedy "Why Worry-!-!-" and those who have seen the picture in the cutting room say that it is the best work of his career on the screen. The story is said to give Mr. West every opportunity to display his ability as a comedian.

The tentative title of the second release will be "It's Going to be a Coal Winter." This, however, will be changed on completion of the picture.

A. E. Gillstrom who directed the first picture will have charge of the Studio activities on the second.

Company Organized to Make Short Comedies

A screen novelty is said to be in the offing, with the forming of a new producing organization which will concentrate upon material of a comedy nature for short subject users.

The names of the officials of this organization have not yet been disclosed, but prominent among them is Harry G. Mason, who has become identified with producing novel screen subjects of various natures.

Experiments have already proven successful in the first of a series of comedy subjects, entitled "Dictionary Dreams." When prints of the first two issues of the series were shown to men prominent in the industry, they were hailed as something entirely new to the silver-sheet and something distinctly individual. Well-known players appear in the series, and included in the cast are trained animals. More definite plans of the new producing organization will be disclosed following the release announcement of the first of the novelty series.

Ena Gregory Renews Century Contract

Ena Gregory, 18 year old leading lady of Century Comedies, has had her contract renewed by Julius Stern.

Ena is an Australian girl who is said to have considerable dramatic experience playing juvenile roles in first class English companies.

When Miss Gregory's contract expired, she played with R-C pictures, but was offered special inducements by Mr. Stern to renew her contract with Century. Her first appearance since supporting Moran in "Hello Judge" will be in "A Mischievous Pup," directed by Herman Raymaker.

Pathe Has Fine List For Nov. 26

Eleven Short Subjects Are On Schedule for Immediate Release

PATHE'S list of short subjects scheduled for release for the week of November 26th is widely varied and contains a number of real novelties. The total number of releases is eleven, and includes Pathe News Nos. 96 and 97 and Topics of the Day No. 48.

The Pathe serial, "Speed," with Charles Hutchinson, reaches its sixth episode, which is titled "Panic."

This program also presents another of the two-reel "Our Gang" comedies, called "Young Sherlocks," in which the Hal Roach kiddies and animals are mixed up in "tracking crime to its lair," while involving themselves in some soul-shaking possible consequences. All of the "Our Gang" prime favorites are represented.

"His Enemy's Friend," with Leo Maloney in the Range Rider Series, gives the star an opportunity—which he makes the most of—to bring to a happy ending an ancient family feud in isolated mountain regions. An "enemy" small boy whom the hero rescues from a perilous situation has been taught to "hate the Carters," but also "never to lie." When he tells the truth the conspiracy against the hero is frustrated, and the old feud is wiped out by arrangements for a wedding—but not before the rival clans have done much hard riding and fighting.

In the one-reel Hal Roach Comedy featuring Paul Parrott, called "The Flivver," little that the liveliest imagination can picture as happening to flivvers or their drivers seems to be overlooked. The heroine—Jobyna Ralston—agrees to go driving with the one of two hated rivals who appears first on the scene with his machine. The hero finally makes it with bare running gear.

The Harold Lloyd re-issue in this list is "Don't Shove," remembered for the failure of everybody in the cast to pay any attention to that request—much to the hero's disturbance of mind and body, until Bebe Daniels gives him the idea of how to enforce it.

"The Fortune Hunters" is the Aesop's Film Fables release for Nov. 26. Henry Cat and Milton Mouse figure largely, breaking out of prison for wild adventures in pursuit of a phony legacy, and ending up where they started from—pounding the rock pile.

Pathe Review No. 183, shows the scenes of framed paintings dissolve themselves into life—and back again. "Grandpa Longlegs," is an intimate view of giraffes in the New York Zoological Park. The Pathecolor example shows "The Giants' Playground" on the coast of Brittany.

TEN motion pictures from Educational's Fall program of Short Subjects are recommended in the latest bulletin of "Pictures for Selected Programs," issued as a Photoplay Guide by the National Committee for Better Films of the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures.

The selected list, recommending this unusual number of pictures from one company, covers pictures reviewed in advance of release during the month of October.

The Educational Pictures recommended are:

"Baron Bragg and the Ogling Ogre."—Tony Sarg's Almanac.

"The Devilish Dragon."—Tony Sarg's Almanac.

"The First Fliver."—Tony Sarg's Almanac.

"Fresh Fish."—Earl Hurd Comedy.

"Man vs. Beast."—Educational Pictures Special, made by expedition into the heart of darkest Africa.

"The Policeman and the Baby."—Selig-Rork Photoplay.

"The Red-Headed League."—The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

"The Solitary Cyclist."—The Adventures of Sherlock Holmes.

"The Skipper's Sermon."—Toonerville Comedies by Fontaine Fox.

"The Split Outfit."—Wilderness Tales by Robert C. Bruce.

Planning Distribution for "Between Worlds"

Alfred Weiss, newly elected President of Artclass Pictures Corporation, is actively engaged at the present moment with distribution plans for "Between Worlds," the special feature sponsored by this organization.

Film and Stage Folk in "Starland" Revue

Starland Revue No. 15 is compiled with a view to giving movie fans glimpses of such celebrities whose names often appear in newspaper columns, in addition to such stars as have won a following.

Will Hays, the "overlord of the films" is seen in the subject, as is John Golden, a successful producer who believes that dramatic students should have the same opportunity for learning the technic of their trade as has the student of medicine and surgery, so he opens a dramatic clinic, and invites several hundred of the theatre to witness the first dress rehearsal of his new play, "Spite Corner."

Will Hays, Augustus Thomas, Chancellor Brown, Frank Craven and John Golden were all there to make the embryo actors feel at home. In the same reel will be found George M. Cohan, Marcus Loew, Al Herman, the assassin of grief and remorse, Little Ann Pennington and her dimpled knees, Don Marquis's new hit, "The Old Soak," with Harry Beresford in the leading role. Dances from the Pinwheel Revue, produced by Michio Itow makes this issue one of the outstanding numbers among the fourteen which have gone before. Released by Film Booking Office of America.

New Comedienne for Mermaid Comedies

It is often said that real comediennes are very few and far between, but Jack White, producer-director of Mermaid Comedies for Educational, claims a "find"—in Peg O'Neill.

Miss O'Neill is a "born comedienne," according to Mr. White, although she has never worked in comedies before. She is an odd "discovery," for her training has been that of a college woman and dramatic actress.

Born in Iowa, Miss O'Neill was educated at the Stanford University and at the Cumnock School of Arts at Northwestern University.

Before Jack White discovered her comedy ability she had attracted attention playing unusual "bits" with William Russell in "Mixed Faces" and with Gladys Walton in "The Top o' The Morning." She has two hobbies—being a good housewife and raising fancy Pomeranian dogs.

Miss O'Neill makes her comedy debut in "High Power," supporting Lige Conley, and will also be seen in the following Educational-Mermaid Comedy, which will be called "Casey Jones, Jr."

"Birth of Aviation" Ready

Mirror No. 3 Novelty Reel Current Universal Release

THE International News Reel Corporation has produced another novelty reel. It is called "The Birth of Aviation," and will be released by Universal as The Mirror No. 3, or the third in the series of one reel features assembled by International from film taken a decade or more ago and showing historical events of the past.

"The Birth of Aviation" shows the first fledgling hops in 1908 of the Wright Brothers, Glenn Curtis, and other pioneer bird-men. It shows the flimsy aeroplanes of the early days and compares them in flight with their modern counterparts. It is a picturization, in one reel of the growth of aviation, a scientific industry which is practically a twin of the motion picture industry. Both jumped into prominence in the early days of this century and both have progressed with the same incomprehensible rapidity.

The reel also contains pictures of many freak machines turned out in the early days of aviation as well as the machines of Bleriot and Farman, two famous French air pioneers.

In strange contrast to these scenes are shots taken during the war, showing hundreds of planes in battle formation, and later shots of the huge bombing planes and passenger carrying planes that now wing their way across continents.

When the Mirror No. 3 was shown at a select audience of aero experts at the recent aeronautical meet at Detroit, it drew great praise.

Major H. M. Hickman, Chief of the Information Group, U. S. Air Service, said, "It requires something like your film on "The Birth of Aviation" to impress everyone, even those engaged in aeronautical development, to realize what wonderful progress has been made."

Wing Commander Stedman, of the Canadian Air Force, said: "It is only by comparison of photographic records of the early flights with similar records of flights carried out at the present day that we are able to see that actual progress has been made in aviation. This progress is very clearly indicated in your film 'The Mirror' or 'The Birth of Aviation'."

Others who saw the reel were equally as enthusiastic.

Hodkinson Ready with Comedies

"Faint Heart" for Release Dec. 3 "The Four Orphans" to Follow

IN order to inject comedy in their short subject program, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that beginning December 3d they will release the All Star Comedies once a month. It is understood that these two-reel comedies made by the Affiliated Distributors, Inc., will materially increase the value of the Hodkinson short program.

There will be a series of thirteen All Star Comedies personally supervised by Chas. C. Burr, and directed by Gregory La Gava.

The first two productions entitled "Faint Heart" and "The Four Orphans" have been shown to the Home Office of the Hodkinson Corporation. It is said that the executives are very enthusiastic over them; they will undoubtedly achieve great popularity as their laugh-creating qualities are realized.

The cast for these productions will be headed by Charles Murray and Raymond McKee and Mary Anderson, all of whom have made remarkable success in other productions and are well known to the trade and the motion picture public.

The addition of clean, up to the minute comedy will, in the estimation of the Hodkinson Corporation blend in with other short subjects which they have to offer.

Alterations in Century Staff

Changes Occasion New Contracts and Engagement of Added Talent

WITH the return of president Julius Stern to Hollywood many important changes and additions were made to the staff at the Century Comedy studios.

Herman C. Raymaker has been signed as a comedy director, promises well for the crop of pictures for the coming year. Raymaker has been associated with Hal Roach, Sennett, Fox and the Hall Room boys.

The full staff of Century directors at present is as follows: Alf Goulding, Harry Edwards, Herman Raymaker, Al Herman, Bert Sternbach, David Smith and Zion Myers. A staff of capable "gagmen" are writing continually under the supervision of Sig Neufeld.

Among the better known men and women who support Baby Peggy, Brownie the Wonder Dog, Lee Moran, Queenie and Buddy Messenger—Century's latest featured player are the following: Betty May, Ena Gregory, Lillian Hackett, Blanche Payson, Inez McDonnell, Marjorie Marcel, Lois Boyd, Jeanne Hope, Max Asher, Joe Moore, Joe Bonner, Jack Earle, Buddy Williams, Jack Cooper, Tad Ross, John Ralesco, Thomas Wonder, Charles Brown, Gus Leonard, Jack Henderson, Jackie Morgan, Fred Spencer and Pete Morrison.

This is a strong aggregation of talent to be assembled under one banner for comedies, and unusual results are expected.

Evacuation of Thrace Seen in Kinograms

THE current issue of Kinograms, Educational's news reel No. 2187, contains what is claimed as the first and exclusive pictures of the evacuation of Thrace by the Greeks. These scenes, showing the heavy guns being removed from the fortifications at Adrianople; the Greek soldiers on the march and in their trenches; stretcher bearers at work, and fleeing refugees, are reminiscent of the World War.

Another subject in this reel is "Lest We Forget," showing significant events and persons that have figured in the big news of the Allied nations since that memorable day. November 11, 1918. Many striking reminders are brought forth in this Armistice subject.

More Territories Sold on Abramson Feature

The sale of "Wildness of Youth" to Sam Grand of Federated Film Exchange, Boston, Massachusetts, was announced from offices of the Graphic Productions, Inc., this week as another unit in the recent rapid progress made by Ivan Abramson in disposing of the territorial rights to his latest feature.

Included in the more recent territorial sales of "Wildness of Youth" is the disposition of the South American right of the picture including Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay, Chile, Peru, Bolivia. The contract is with the Sociedad General Cinematographic Co.

Frank Zambrino of Progress Pictures Co., Chicago, has the production for Northern Illinois and Indiana. Richards and Flynn Film Co. of Kansas City, Missouri, have the rights for Western Missouri and Kansas. Eastern Pennsylvania, Southern New Jersey and Delaware rights have been disposed of to Donohue and Gill of the Imperial Pictures, Philadelphia, Pa.

Apollo Enlarges Staff for High Features

The Apollo Exchange, N. Y., local distributors for Will Nigh's photo-drama, "Notoriety," and the three following Nigh features which are being produced and distributed by L. Lawrence Weber and Bobby North, will have a special staff of seven to handle the bookings on these features for New York exhibitors.

The salesmen will not only take care of the bookings, but will also extend active co-operation all along the line. Special publicity and exploitation service will be included in every contract and the utmost co-operation in putting the Will Nigh series over for the exhibitors will be extended.

The salesmen will be under the personal supervision of Ben Schwartz, sales manager of the Apollo Exchange and veteran film man of his territory.

Pearson Studies Growing Market

Pathe Executive Believes Short Subjects of Great Importance

IN view of the rapidly increasing vogue of short subjects with picture patrons all over the United States owing to the specializing tendency in that direction on the part of exhibitors, Elmer Pearson, General Manager and head of Pathe, was interviewed on the special points involved.

"The next big development of the motion picture industry, which is now fairly launched," said Mr. Pearson, "is almost certain to be in the short subject field. Both exhibitor and public are beginning to realize the intrinsic value of the short subject and before long will recognize its true worth.

"As in all other classes of picture production, it will be a case of the survival of the fittest. The public will impel the exhibitor to draw a clearer line of demarcation between the good and the bad.

"The moment when the exhibitor makes a proper and substantial price distinction between good short subjects and mere program fillers, from that moment the good short subjects will show attractive producer profits. The result will be a tremendous improvement in the quality and entertainment value of short subject profit.

"Today an exhibitor thinks nothing of paying ten times more for one five-reeler than he does for another, yet very few will recognize a 3 to 14 comparison in the value of news reels. It is also very rarely and reluctantly that he pays on the basis of a 4 to 1 comparison in the case of two-reel comedies.

"In the single-reel field, the producer and distributor have met with even greater discouragement, in that no matter how good or expensive your effort, unless you want to rent it at a given maximum at the average theatre, you can keep it.

"Naturally the short subjects got into a rut, and it took genuine financial courage and hard work even to make a start in getting it out. But persistence in any direction will not be denied; and a start having been accomplished, it is fair to assume that more rapid progress can now be looked for.

"The process has been laborious and obviously slow, and proceeds about as follows:

"First, you start making a product just a little better. After that has had its opportunity for recognition, it is necessary to increase the rentals a little, and the number of customers by a few. Then you increase the production budget and the production's excellence and try for a little higher rentals again, with the addition of a little broader distribution, etc., etc. But, of course, no one has yet progressed very far because of the so-called limit most exhibitors have set on what they will pay for any short subject.

"During the last three years exhibitors have been converted to the better short subject idea. Little by little these have raised their maximums to procure what they have taught their patrons to demand as part of a satisfactory entertainment.

"While the industry has some distance to go to realize upon such a business-building variety, it is indeed on the way, and Pathe may be depended on to keep a full step or two ahead of such encouragement as our customers extend us."

Elmer Pearson, General Manager, Pathe Exchanges, Inc.

New Novelty on Sawing Girl in Half

In order to further the novelty possibilities of the Film Exposé of Sawing A Lady In Half, Weiss Brothers, Clarion Photoplays, Inc., have devised a unique lobby display for exhibitors who present this two-reel film.

This display consists of life size figures of two men sawing through a young girl. These figures are in the form of a poster cut-out, attached to which is a contrivance which causes the saw in the hands of the two men to move up and down on the figure of the girl, creating the effect of her body being sawed in two.

Since the settlement of the litigation concerning this film between Horace Goldin and Weiss Brothers renewed interest has been evinced on the part of independent exchanges and exhibitors.

Prologue Arranged for "Notoriety"

L. Lawrence Weber, Broadway producer, has brought his dramatic experience into play by arranging a realistic prologue for "Notoriety," the independent feature which he and Bobby North are releasing. It was directed by Will Nigh.

The prologue does not duplicate any scene in the picture. It plays up the vital importance of notoriety as the great human ambition and weakness of the day. It is symbolic in treatment, and consists of four short episodes, each five minutes in length.

Real Life Settings for Norma Talmadge Films

"Within the Law," Norma Talmadge's next starring attraction to be released by First National will have all the trimmings of realism. The exacting prison scenes made memorable in the stage play will be duplicated from real life for the Talmadge picture.

Frank Lloyd, director and Tony Gaudio, cameraman, are starting cast from Hollywood November 20 for the express purpose of filming these scenes in the natural settings of Auburn prison, the Tombs and the New York subway.

"Rolling Down to Rio"

With Secretary of State Chas. E. Hughes

(Navy Department—Two Reels)

A HIGHLY picturesque journey on the bounding deep is offered in "Rolling Down to Rio," authorized by and made in conjunction with the United States Navy. It not only gives the landlubber a close-up of life as it is lived aboard the U. S. S. Maryland, one of Uncle Sam's battleships, but takes him on a colorful cruise to the capital of Brazil, where the International Exposition is held.

We board the warship and are given a treat in deck-scrubbing—we catch an eye-full of the sailors at mess. The skipper is introduced and we are taken below decks to see something of the technical equipment. Up on deck we notice the crew manning the guns. Then we cross the equator and are given a humorous sight of the initiation into Neptune's lodge. The officers and sailors who are crossing for the first time are placed in the ducking chairs and tilted over into the pool, while Neptune and his court pass out the hokus-pocus.

The good ship Maryland anchors in the beautiful harbor of Rio and resting easily on the waves are warships from Britain, Japan and other countries. The sailors stretch their legs and Secretary Hughes, who was transferred to the Maryland from a commercial vessel during the voyage, steps ashore to present his credentials in line with the dignitaries from Europe and the Orient. A parade is participated in by the tars of the ships at anchor, and Mr. Hughes and the other guests are in the reviewing stand. His visit over he steps aboard the Maryland and is brought back to New York. It is an inspiring sight leaving and entering New York harbor.

The picture is not propaganda. But it serves in stimulating interest in the way our sailors live. We are seeing a bit of the world with them. "Rolling Down to Rio" is deserving of patronage everywhere. Accompanied by a prologue or presented by itself there is no question that it will win highly commendable praise wherever shown—LAURENCE REID.

"Young Sherlocks"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

ONE of "Our Gang" Series, with the whole "gang" present. Chiefly, among these are "Sunshine Sammy" and his tiny black companion. The two colored children start on a "gold hunting" adventure, the baby girl being carried along in an improvised vehicle which uses "Sammy" as a human motor. But they get hungry and being without funds, are tempted sorely to rebel at their fates, when they see the little rich girl buy and feed big red apples to her pony. But the rich girl gives "Sammy" an idea, so that when he accidentally falls in with a den of juvenile "Jesse James" impersonators he is able to tell how he bravely rescued the child of the rich from a band of kidnappers. Most convincing is his tale, and he is about to join the order of "Young Sherlocks," when along comes "Sammy's" mother, who rushes the children back to reality, and ends an otherwise perfect day for the youthful desperadoes. Granting that there are always a great many exteriors in these comedies, which benefit by natural lighting, it must be said that the photography is unusually clear, the direction splendid and the "kiddie" players a credit to the producer.—LILLIAN GALE.

"His Enemy's Friend"

(Pathe—Two Reels)

IT is commonly believed that it is a difficult matter to maintain a standard of production, especially on short subject "westerns." The Range Rider Series, starring Leo Maloney, however, keep an even pace, one with the other, and there is no decided difference in them except that every story embraces some unique play. They are consistently entertaining.

The "feud" idea, for instance, is not new, but the way in which it is handled in "His Enemy's Friend," makes a splendid offering, and shows not only the star, but the cast, to advantage. If typically "western," this two reeler is deserving of praise, since it is full of action, good riding, pleasing background and presented with a "finish" not always identified with this class of picture.

In this one a "feud" of many years standing is ended by showing how a hated "Carter," administered to a son of his enemy, "Cartwright," and won for his reward by showing fearless kindness, the elder "Cartwright's" esteem and the hand of his pretty daughter.—LILLIAN GALE.

"Beyond the Jordan"

(Geographic-American Releasing—Two Reels)

THIS release, one of the series made by Geographic Films, Inc., and to be distributed by American Releasing, seems to us to be one of the most satisfactory Biblical subjects yet shown.

The picture opens with an animated map, giving the exact location of the scenes which follow. We are then led through a series of beautiful pictorial scenes, each the spot on which some Biblical happening of importance occurred. There are no actors, no pretense at reproducing the actual happenings, and the imagination is given full play to visualize the happenings to its own taste.

Added beauty is given the release through a series of Prizma color reproductions of pastel drawings of appropriate Biblical scenes, done by Paleologue. The subtitles are largely direct quotations from the Old Testament, with occasional explanatory titles in modern phraseology. —L. C. MOEN.

"The Mystery Box"

(Hodkinson—One Reel)

THIS is an entertaining bit of comedy, although the main idea is to inform spectators regarding the many angles and things to know about radio. In this instance, a little boy, passing a window decorated with radio equipment, stops to look. The window is honored with the presence of a seemingly intelligent insect, which proves to be a "radio bug." The insect lights upon the top of the boy's head, finds a good place and injects enough venom of desire to invest in radio equipment to infect the boy and ultimately the entire family. However, while the family are busily engaged in learning the wonders of radio, the scientific side of the proposition is shown, so that it is an informative subject as well as one that will lend to strengthen a program.

These is sufficient continuity to hold the interest. The reel ha sbeen well directed by J. A. Norling.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Big Scoop"

(J. K. McDonald-Pathe—Two Reels)

THE most popular songs ever written we those with words that awoke memori stirred one's sentiment and reminded one childhood days. Which has nothing to do wi a two reel comedy other than that the seri starring Johnny Jones and Gertrude Messeng have a similar effect. Everyone would like to a boy or a girl again, for a moment, during tho periods when they played "house" or "stor

"The Big Scoop" relates the earnest endea ors of two clever children and several "pla mates," who are engaged in running a new publication known to the Indiana village as "T Whisper." Johnny Jones assumes the pen nar of "Eddie Torial," and Gertrude Messeng covers "events." The making up of the paper was apt to be neglected if the "swimmin was good. However, after big sister's be illustrated the meaning of "scoop," by descri ing himself as a full-fledged newspaper ma the children decided it was time to "scoop" f "The Whisper." The way they do it embrac a clever little plot that holds the inter throughout, provoking many broad smiles a not a few laughs. Grown ups among playe might learn a good deal from the simplicity a natural poise assumed by these youngste which are as well directed, photographed a produced as worthy features. The only peo who would not enjoy these juvenile frolics a those who are afraid to laugh—a safe bet f any audience.—LILLIAN GALE.

"The Resident Patient"

(Educational—Two Reels)

THIS is the first of the Conan Doyle stori featuring the detective role of "Sherlo Holmes," that has had a tendency to be gru some. Nevertheless, it contains some drama moments and is especially well done. But t subject is more or less disconcerting.

It tells of a young physician, who was t poor to "hang out his shingle" upon receivi his diploma, but who was approached by man who offered to finance the doctor, if might be accepted as a permanent resident.

After strange happenings, involving a mu der, the physician appealed to Sherlock Holm to solve the mystery. It developed the mu dered man was one of a trio of criminals, w turned "King's Evidence," and was allowed go free, while his two partners in crime we to jail. Upon their dismissal, they sought o the traitor with intent to "get even." A interesting story, if a bit blood-curdling. LILLIAN GALE.

"The Flivver"

(Pathe—One Reel)

THE wide publicity given the "flivver," a thentically known as the "Ford," has e tended into pictures again, but this time in o reel of many laughs and exaggerated fun.

A comedy hero, played by Paul Parrott, h ordered a "flivver"—"knocked down C. O. D —and it arrives, accompanied by directions to how to put it together.

There is a girl in the case and unless t "flivver" is together in time to beat a man wi a more expensive car to her house on the d of the picnic, Paul faces chagrin. So the fi is all about how he does it, and the laughs con in rapid succession.—LILLIAN GALE.

Star Comedies Are Essential, Says Moses

By Vivian M. Moses

STAR comedies are the well seasoned and zestful salad of the motion picture theatre bill-of-fare. No screen mixed program is complete without them. They add a relish to the entire entertainment.

A crucial moment in "My Hero," a Lupino Lane star comedy, distributed by Fox.

It is worthy of comment that the first of the motion pictures that attempted to tell a connected story were of a comedy nature; and from the earliest days of the silent stage the pictures devoted to the God of Laughter have improved steadily in scope and entertaining qualities. When the writers on screen topics allude to the remarkable advance of the art of the motion picture they, consciously or unconsciously, are speaking in praise of the one and two reel productions that prove a welcome relief to even the best and most convincing of screen dramas that have been planned for the sole purpose of touching the deeper springs of human nature and causing the tears of an audience to flow.

Years ago there was a minstrel performer named McNish who did an act called "Silence and Fun." During the entire act not one word was spoken, but it was always the hit of the bill wherever it appeared. The actor was obliged to appeal only to the eyes of his audience and to follow one piece of business with another in rapid succession. Comedians of the silver sheet work along the same lines. The eyes of their audiences watch their every movement, and each phrase of their silent fun must be pointed with the keenest sense of humor and constructive skill.

No silent act on the spoken stage can "get by" unless it is constantly entertaining. The rule holds good on the screen. No series of comedies has ever succeeded in maintaining its grip on the motion picture public that did not offer a quick and generous stream of humorous incidents that were enjoyed alike by a wide range of taste and intelligence.

Of all classes of screen comedies the series of one and two reelers of a humorous nature that can boast of a star at the head of its cast takes first place. In practically every instance the star performers in these short subjects possess that combination of surprising physical agility and grasp of the art of comic pantomime that makes the spectator hold his breath with apprehension and wrinkle his face with smiles at one and the same time. To watch a ludicrous looking young gentleman climb the sides of a building with the ease of a monkey, balance himself in an extremely perilous position or take a fall that threatens to dislocate all his bones without losing his air of calm confidence or look of comic surprise, and to have these antics occur in a "rapid-fire" comedy in which the fun is clean and clever, is to share in a species of mental relaxation that is a priceless tonic to the average man and woman in this bustling world.

Fox Film Corporation, pioneers in this branch of picture production, can boast of three series of Star Comedies that are constantly growing in favor with the screen public. The trio of laugh makers starring in these pictures consists of Lupino Lane, Clyde Cook and Al St. John. All three are distinctly different in their methods of fun making, and exactly alike in their ability to "put over" the comic incidents in each one of their respective releases. Representing, as they do, long and thorough training in the several branches of dancing, pantomime and acrobatic skill, the three started their careers at widely separated points of the compass. Lupino Lane is a product of the London stage and has played all over the world. Clyde Cook is an Australian, and was a leading performer at the Hippodrome, New York, when engaged by William Fox. Al St. John is a true son of the land that has developed the motion picture to its present high standing, and received his training under the stars and stripes.

"The Reporter," the first of the Lupino Lane comedies, demonstrated the wisdom of William Fox in prevailing upon this astonishingly agile and always humorous comedian to join the ranks of comic entertainers of the screen. Lupino has taken to his new branch of entertainment with the greatest enthusiasm and the happiest results. Other pictures to follow "The Reporter" are "The Pirate" and "My Hero."

Clyde Cook, whose comedy, "The Eskimo," revealed humorous possibilities within the Arctic Circle never dreamt of before, and whose previous releases have attested to his steadily increasing reputation as a comic actor of the first rank, is to follow his adventures among the bears and seals and two-legged inhabitants of the frozen North with "Lazy Bones" and "The Cyclist," two Fox comedies for which a hearty welcome is promised.

Al St. John, whose last two releases, "All Wet" and "The City Chap," guarantee the quality of his brand of Star Comedies, will be succeeded by "Out of Place" and "The Alarm."

With such a list of Star Comedies and Star Comedians, Fox Film Corporation need have no fear of not holding its present enviable position in this particular branch of motion picture production.

"Truxton King" Gilbert's First for Fox

George Barr McCutcheon's novel, "Truxton King," will be the first starring vehicle for John Gilbert under his new contract with William Fox, which was signed a few days ago, according to announcement by Fox Film Corporation. The picture will be directed by Jerome Storm. "St. Elmo," Augusta Evans' novel, recently was completed at the Fox Western studios.

The negative of "The Boss of Camp Four," Charles Jones' latest starring production for Fox, has reached the New York offices. Jones has started work on "The Footlight Ranger," his next production.

Fox's Educational Entertainments Pleas

By Herbert E. Hancock
Supervising Director Fox Educational Division

SOON after the first six Fox Educational Entertainments were released, theatre owners who played them saw the stamp of public approval fixed firmly on this sort of film. Audiences everywhere were quick to appreciate the novelty of the reels. People who had condemned motion pictures before changed their opinions and declared themselves in favor of this different kind of entertainment. In New York first, then quickly following in Chicago and Detroit, leading theatres benefited by the ready acceptance that Fox Educational subjects found with the motion picture public. Then through the Middle West the new film effort won instant popularity.

Hitting the high spots in the Alps, from "Bits of Europe," a Fox Educational entertainment.

Now come the second six of these unusual entertainments. "Old Spain" brings to the American screen the unaccustomed scenes of a country whose grandeur and glamor have been glowingly described in books for centuries. They need no longer be mind pictures, for they are actual happenings, vivid, pulsing with life. The film shows their reality, their form and color. Cities that were built a thousand years ago still exist and the people living in them now seem to retain many customs of their ancestors. But new ideas will creep in. Many Spanish beauties prove that although woman's charm may be old as Eve, it is still as new and fresh as tomorrow's bouquet of roses for the leading lady of a musical comedy. The prize winner of the national beauty contest clinches the proof with her smile. "Old Spain" is a full reel in length.

If you are interested in ducks, particularly for your Thanksgiving or Christmas dinner, "Pekin Ducks" will make a timely topic. This half-reel shows a duck farm and the methods of raising the fowl.

Everybody wants to know how other people live. A swift sketch is contained in the reel called "Bits of Europe." London is pictured, with its old streets and new buildings, and also some of the historic ones. The Tower of London is an outstanding "shot." Then the cameraman takes the audience with him "Unter den Linden" in Berlin and on through the places of the city that have been mentioned innumerable times by world travelers. On further to Monte Carlo, where many fortunes have been lost, but very few have been gained. The tinsel splendor of the pleasure resort reminds one of the kings of Europe who placed their countries and their peoples in pawn for the satisfaction of outward show. All the money ever won at Monte Carlo could not pay the cost of lives and nations destroyed to gratify the vainglory of an emperor who loved pompous display.

While we muse on the crimes of kings the camera lens brings Venice into focus. Here motley gondolas are poled along winding canals. Being the only means of transportation in the city, they are aptly termed "the floating taxicabs of Venice." The scene changes to Versailles, where French monarch held court, where nobility danced and royalty paid the utmost penalty for their extravagances. The beauty of the Versailles gardens is world famous. This former playground of the crested families of France contains fifty-one fountains of extremely artistic design. Their splendor makes this screen creation a distinctly attractive novelty, which rises to a climax with a pulse-beating climb up the Alps.

"Camphor" is a half-reel describing the manufacture of camphor from a tree found very extensively on the island of Formosa in the China Sea. The cameraman who made the film risked his life among a savage tribe of headhunters and his camp was protected by a high tension electric wire that carried alternating current.

"Bird Life" is a reel showing various feathered creatures in their natural surroundings. They were filmed as they built nests and fed their young. Because of the instinct to protect themselves and their offspring, it was necessary to build blinds from which to operate the camera. Several attempts to photograph birds were fruitless due to their wariness. This reel includes the official film of the National Audubon Societies, photographed by Herbert K. Job, a noted bird authority. Any exhibitor who plays this reel can get the co-operation of the local society in his community by telling the organization head about the official film. This subject also contains a scene wherein a professor of the University of Washington hangs perilously off the edge of a cliff to gather rare specimens of eggs.

The last of the set is a reel entitled "The Runaway Dog." It has all the action of a dramatic feature. The actors in this reel are a mother dog and two puppies, a mother cat and her kittens and a hen and her chicks. The unusual part of this miniature photodrama is that no human beings appear in the picture. After seeing this screen offering, an exhibitor won't be satisfied until he plays it. Then his patrons will be satisfied when they see it.

Although "The Runaway Dog" has no people in its cast, it will probably hold the spectator's interest as closely as any dramatic subject. The director used painstaking care to make the characters go through their parts naturally. Nowhere is the effort of human beings allowed to creep through to spoil the realism of the story. Nowhere is the supervision of the guiding mind permitted to beco apparent.

A puppy wanders from his sle ing mother to steal milk set in pan for some kittens. He is d covered by Mother Tabby, forci him to seek adventure in oth fields. Coming to a hen and so chicks, the pup attempts to pl with them. The hen's fierce attac draw several yelps from the m chief maker. His mother, wakir breaks her leash and comes to r trieve her wicked son. But t young rascal scampers off. T mother, following, catches her tra ing leash between the lathes of t chicken coop. The puppy falls ir a stream. His mother continu in the wake of her errant o spring, dragging the coop, h chicks and all, into the water. T hen with the chicks on her ba succeeds in climbing to the top the coop to keep her brood d The leash comes loose in mi stream; the pup is brought asho Then comes the part of the sto that makes it an outstandi achievement.

The coop with its feathered bu den floats down near a waterfa The mother dog goes into the wat again, pulls the coop safely to lan and the "Featherball" family is o of danger. As the dog takes h troublesome son homeward across foot-bridge, the little scallyw clumsily tumbles into the strea again. The mother drags him o after a long swim. Man's only pa in this film is taking the scenes a writing interpretative titles, whi add to the entertaining element the picture.

Whether a heart beats benea silks or rags, fur or feathers, t mother instinct is the same; its a peal to all humans is as strong.

Fox News Increases Its Foreign Service

THE price of success in the News Reel field is eternal vigilance.

Now in its fourth year and getting better and bigger every year, Fox News' latest indication that it is on the job to give exhibitors the very best obtainable in news reels is the establishment of a foreign desk from which activities outside of the United States will be directed.

Editorial staff of Fox News. Standing, left to right—George Casey, secretary; William Lowrence, assistant cutter; George H. K. Mitford, Canadian news editor; James Sinclair, librarian; Ben Lowrence, head cutter; M. H. Becerra, Spanish and Portugese editor. Sitting, left to right—George H. Fleming, title editor; Phil R. Shorey, news editor; Don Hancock, direcor-in-chief; Gordon Stiles, foreign editor; William A. White, associate news editor; Helen Fox and Tess Green, stenographers.

Starting with a comprehensive plan of action, the co-operation of workers of other departments, and a large list of staff cameramen and field representatives, Fox News has steadily increased its service until today its camera force numbers 1,008. This list of cameramen is constantly being increased and at the present time Fox News controls 70 per cent. of the best cameramen of the world. Practically every city in the United States of over 25,000 population, has a Fox man on the job, and during the last year 78 were added to the role.

New York staff cameramen, highly trained, are frequently sent abroad to film events and novel features of world-wide interest or importance. Staff cameramen throughout the globe are continually in touch with their executives. Free lance cameramen, of whom there are nearly 1,000, all carry Fox News credentials, and they are pledged to send to this news reel at least four subjects monthly. This gives us a continual flow of negative and enables the director-in-chief, who is responsible for the make-up of the reel to view each week between 40,000 and 60,000 feet of negative from which to select two news reels.

Men are not employed in this capacity merely because they can "grind" a camera. Before an operator is accepted even as a field representative, he must submit to Fox News a sample subject to be passed upon. Quality in negative, clean-cut work and an intelligent idea of how to take a picture are prime requisites. Without these, a cameraman cannot hope to be a member of the "big family."

Every important point in the world is covered by Fox News. What the Foreign Desk will do is to cover these points to better advantage. For this purpose John Parkerson, editor of the Fox News in Paris, has been called to America for a conference, and with him will come Frederick Fesneau, Fox News cameraman from the Far East, who has been covering the Turko-Grecian war.

Fesneau, by the way, comes back a conquering hero, for he has just obtained a smashing "beat" in securing exclusive and intimate pictures of Mustapha Kemal and his staff at the Turkish Dictator's headquarters at Brousse, Asia Minor. This is the first time the Turkish leader has been photographed since the uprising, and the fact that Fesneau obtained the picture is just another indication of the initiative and ingenuity used by the Fox cameramen.

Every other cameraman in the Far East had camped for months on Kemal's trail, but he consistently refused to be photographed. The regular avenues of approach were closed, so the cameraman put his brains to work. First of all he packed his outfit in a brand new trunk on the outside of which he lettered the name of Mustapha Kemal and his official address. Thus fortified he made an impressive arrival by motor to the wharf in Mudania, the port of Brousse. He demanded loudly to be taken at once to the Turkish chieftain.

Waving his official looking papers in the faces of the authorities he so impressed them that he was finally taken before Kemal where he explained frankly what he wanted. The Turkish chieftain's good natured streak came to the surface, and he and his staff had a good laugh over the incident.

Then they adjourned to the gardens where Kemal took orders from the nervy interloper. And that is why Fox is releasing this week exclusive pictures of the spectacular Turk whose doings are splashed over every newspaper in the world.

During the last six weeks Fox has secured the exclusive services of competent and reliable cameramen in Kovno, Lithuania, Prague, Czecho-Slovakia, Bucharest, Roumania, Stettin, Germany, Breslau, Silesia, Caracas, S. A.; Edinburgh, Scotland; Helsingfors Finland, and others are pending.

Pledges of increased efficiency, more good subjects, more features and exclusives, and continued devotion to work are being received daily from Fox News representatives from all over the world.

Fox is in an impregnable position and confidently expects to see the output for 1923 surpass all previous records.

Fox Sunshine Comedies Popular

THE ever-increasing popularity of the famous Fox series of Sunshine Comedies, is evident in the numerous reports that find their way each day into the New York offices of the organization.

Exhibitors throughout the United States, Canada, Europe, South America and the Far East have constantly written their praise for the noted two-reel fun-makers as a reflection of the comment spoken by the motion picture going public in their sections. Scarcely a month goes by without the receipt of several hundred testimonials from fans in various parts of the world listing the Sunshine Comedy program as one of the finest of the laugh-provokers on the screen.

As an indication of what it is doing to uphold the high standard set for these comedies, and as an earnest that it will continue to provide exhibitors with a fine line of such subjects, Fox Film Corporation calls special attention to the Sunshine brand now ready for booking which will be released during the remainder of this year and the early part of 1923. Of the next ten productions, release dates have been set for seven, according to a statement from Fox Film Corporation offices in New York. These seven promise to make new records wherever they are shown.

"The Haunted House," the first to be ready for distribution, is set for November 29; "The Ranch Romeo," November 12; "Cupid's Elephant," November 26; "The Fresh Heir," December 10; "A Poor Fish," December 24; "Rides and Slides," January 7; and "The Wise Cracker," January 21.

The height of versatility of subject has been reached in these seven two-reel pictures. Each represents the ultimate effort of a group of experts whose time is devoted entirely to the confecting of comedy situations and laugh-making stories.

Fox Plans for 26 "Mutt & Jeff's"

THE exhibitors' reports on the new "Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons" show clearly that the new policy of issuing twenty-six a year has been vindicated. The new method allows double the time to be devoted to each release, with the result that the celebrated pair of comedians are funnier than ever before.

One of the interesting things about the Mutt and Jeff Cartoons is that Bud Fisher's creations appeal just as strongly in Simsbury, Kansas, as they do in New York, N. Y. The village and the metropolis, old folk and young, lowbrow, highbrow, and medium brow—all greet with delight these two typical American characterizations.

Several factors enter into the popularity of the pictures besides the fact that they are different in every way from any other comedy release. In the first place, Bud Fisher's cartoons are syndicated throughout this country and Canada. Hardly a town where the names Mutt and Jeff were not by-words even before the famous pair made their debut in the movies. Several books made up of Fisher's cartoons have reached a tremendous sale, and various road shows have popularized the adventures of the tall skinny man and his small, bald-headed partner. All these things have helped tremendously in preparing the way for the screening of Mutt and Jeff.

That explanation is interesting, though, after all, for the exhibitor the main point is that his patrons do like the cartoons. Why is not so important. But he does realize that the Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons of Bud Fisher help to give the necessary lightness to his program. They are the dessert of the picture banquet he serves the patrons. And very often, as he knows, a good dessert can help to make one forget that the rest of the meal has not been up to par.

"Ridin' Wild"

Universal—4166 Feet

(Reviewed by Laurence Reid)

ED (HOOT) GIBSON has another interesting little western in "Ridin' Wild," which plays him in the role of a Quaker cowboy. One may imagine the humorous possibilities of the story with the star just "rarin' to go" yet at the same time restrained from doing so through the pacifist tendencies of his religion. It is the characterization here which is especially interesting—the plot carrying a familiar outline of a hero who musters enough courage to stamp out the villainy which has placed his father in jail on a trumped-up charge of murder. The Quaker is loath to return a blow for a blow. In fact he turns the other cheek. Yet he has a bitter conflict with himself because his mother is constantly warning him that he is not a good Quaker.
